But when I had collected the materials for proceeding with my task and had compared several Irish manuscript copies of the originals both with printed translations and with one another, I found that I should have done a work of very questionable utility, were I to content myself with giving a mere bald translation of my author, omitting to give notes explanatory of traditions and usages now forgotten by the vast majority of Irishmen. I deemed that had I done this, I might just as well have left Keating still untranslated by me, for he would have continued, nevertheless, incomprehensible to a great portion of those of my exiled countrymen, for whose more special use and information I have undertaken to interpret him. To present them with such a version, I considered to be little better than making use of the venerated name of Dr. Keating in order to make money thereby, at small cost either in labor or study. Now, whatever others may think upon the subject, I do not hold it legitimate to traffic upon the patriotism of my countrymen, by presenting them with a literary clap-trap of no possible utility to them. I, therefore, have set about elucidating the text of my author both with notes of my own and with historic quotations explanatory of his meaning and allusions wherever I thought they required it. This has nearly trebled my labor, and has added greatly to the bulk of the book. In addition to this, the collating of various readings and the consulting of authorities confirmatory of my version of doubtful passages, has consumed nearly as much of my time as either annotating or translating. Both you and the Irish public of America may then, I trust, well excuse my having disappointed you both by a few months, as to the exact time of the work's appearance. In the end, I trust, you will feel pleased that I have done so, and that I have not hurried it through the press, adding errors of my own to those already made by Dr. Keating's transcribers and one translator. I am then wading slowly through my Mss., assuring myself in every instance, to the best of my judgment, that I have mastered their proper meaning. You are aware that this has occupied my undivided and continuous attention for months past. Let those that intend to purchase the book know it likewise. It could not have been hurried on any faster without laying irreverent hands upon our old historian. That would not do, however impatient our good public might get.

You have told me, also, that I am swelling the work to a larger size, and that I am expending more time and labor upon it than its probable profit to myself may warrant. But this is not in my eyes so very frightful a contingency. I am most anxious, it is true, that it should clear the expenses of printing and publishing. That, at least, if report speaks correctly, it is certain to do. For myself, I shall not feel much chagrined, and shall feel not at all disappointed at finding it to do no more. It will be but some months of my life spent without worldly profit to myself at a work that may not be entirely useless or uninteresting to the scattered sons of the Clanna Gaedhail.

As the greater and more difficult part of the translation is now in type, our Irish friends and subscribers may well bear with me a little longer, until I shall have finished the whole, after my own fashion. It may be, that some will deem me to have wasted time and labor upon unnecessary, and perhaps valueless notes, but then it is my own time and labor that I waste.

I remain very sincerely yours,

JOHN O'MAHONY.

P. M. HAVERTY, Esq., 110 Fulton street.

P. S. You are at liberty to use this letter as you may think advisable J. O'M.

BARRY BANQUET AND TESTIMONIAL.

EDITOR IRISH NEWS:

Dear Sir—Will you do me the favor to publish the following account and vote of thanks:—

RECEIPTS.

Robert McCafferty, $17 25; Adjutant C. Murphy, $15; Thos. F. Meagher, $10; Col. Doheny, $5; Judge Emmet, $3; Felix Ingoldsby, $10; Downs & Son, $3; Alderman J. Steers, $10; Alderman Doherty, $5; Charles Mulcahy, $15; R. W. Jones, $12; Thos. Costelloe, $17 50; John Ahern, $3; Michael O'Conner, $3; John Connell, $1; Hugh Barron, $3; Lieut. Green, $4; Mr. Campbell, $4; Capt. Lyons, $1; D. Twohig, $1; Frank Ashe, $18; Lizzie M. Atkinson, $3; H. Greeley, $2; Col. Butler, $4; Col. Ryan, $3; Col. Hagerty, $3; Major Barry, $6; Lieut. T. Clarke, $3; Mrs. Donovan, $1; Mr. Donovan, $5; Patrick Murphy, $1; J. H. McBride, $1; Richard B. Connelly, $5; Judge O'Connor, $6; John O'Mahony, $5; Michael Creedon, $5; John O'Keeffe, $5; R. J. Lalor, $1; Captain Flaherty, $1; John Enright, $1; Nicholas H. Drew, $5; Dudley Persse, $2; Edward Wall, $2; Mr. Haverty, $5; Mr. Monks, $4; Denny Lyons, $3; Mr. Flahnery, $3; James Walsh, 2; J. Crowley, $1; Mr. Felix, $5; — McGurk, $1; Martin H. Murphy, $2; Mr. McSorley, $4; Martin Walsh, $1; P. O'Dea, $1; P. Delaney, $4; Dan Draddy, $1; Mr. Colter, $2; Mrs. Himes, $1; John Geoghegan, $1; for Tickets at the Door, $8; Cash, in small sums, $2 75.

EXPENSES.

To Oliver, ½ ream Notices	$2 50
"Citizen," ½ do. Collector's Circulars	3 25
Oliver, Notices	1 25
Military Hall, four meetings	5 00
Oliver, 300 Tickets and Circulars	5 00
Do. for Invitation Circulars	1 50
Postage paid by Walsh	0 00
Advertising in Herald three times	2 00
Blank Tickets and paper on dinner eve	1 00
Loan of plank for seats	1 50
Boys in hat room	1 50
Music	5 00
Jacob Day $72 for dinner; by cash	45 00
	$74 50
Maurice Walsh Dr. to J. Day	27 00
Total expense	$101 50
Gross amount collected	282 50
	181 00
Cash handed to Mr. Barry	170 00
On hand	$11 00

VOTE OF THANKS.

The thanks of the Committee are hereby tendered to the Editors of the IRISH NEWS and Irish American, for their gratuitous publication of everything concerning this affair; to Mrs. Luby, for her Academy, free of charge, and also to all the generous hearts who so freely contributed to this good object.

MAURICE WALSH, Chair'n of Com.

FATHER MATTHEW.

The late very Reverend Theobald Mathew, though generally identified with Cork, was not a native of that city, having been born on the estate of his father, Mr. James Matthew, at Rathcloheen, Thomastown, in the county Tipperary, on the 10th of October, 1790. His family was of very high respectability, both as regards antiquity and position. The peerage of Llandaff is held by one branch of the Matthews. Left an orphan at a very early age, Theobald was taken by Lady Elizabeth Matthew, sister to Lord Llandaff, to her own house, and there reared and educated. Arriving at the proper age, a Catholic tuition was provided for him, and the bent of his religious feelings was in no way interrupted by his relations. The desire to become a clergyman was manifested at a very early period, and he resolved to become a member of the Capuchin order.

At nineteen years of age he entered the Catholic college of Kilkenny, and his studies were completed partly in Spain and partly in Maynooth. In the Easter of 1814 (not yet twenty-four years old) Archbishop Murray, of Dublin, conferred upon him the distinguished office of which he became so illustrious a representative. His first mission was to Kilkenny, where he remained but for a brief period, after which he was transferred to the house of the Capuchins in Cork. The scene of his labors was a little chapel in an obscure lane off Sullivan's quay, founded by the celebrated Father Arthur O'Leary. Here the pecculiar virtues of his character almost immediately produced their effect; and soon "Blackamoor-lane Chapel," as the friary was called, became one of the most frequented in the city. His whole days almost were passed in the confessional. To his feet thronged the humble and the lowly, the wealthy and the gay. At five in the morning he might be seen at his pious task, which the absence of penitents alone brought to a close at night. Loved and revered, the fame of his piety and benevolence had gone far beyond the county before the young priest was twenty-six. Not content with his ordinary labors, he hired an old store next his chapel and converted it into schools for female children; and experienced the delight of witnessing 500 children at once attending them. During the year of the cholera, 1832, he was to be seen at all hours penetrating the most miserable lanes of the most wretched parts of the city. His love for doing good ever took a practical turn. The burial fees were at this time a great grievance on the poor. To remedy the evil, Father Matthew founded a cemetery, a large portion of which was devoted gratuitously to the poor, irrespective of their religious faith. His next idea was the erection of the Church of the Holy Trinity, which, owing to his financial embarrassments, remains unfinished.

About this period what may be called the public career of Father Matthew commenced. A society for the suppression of intoxication, founded in the year 1830, by some Protestant Presbyterian and Quaker gentlemen, had in vain struggled to counteract the vice which had spread to a fearful extent. At length, in April, 1838, Father Matthew lent it his aid. Thousands flocked to his feet, and soon an enthusiasm was evoked that spread over the whole country. Father Matthew was hailed everywhere with delight, and his progress was a continued ovation from place to place.

The authorities unbent their dignignity to do him honor, and the people followed and crowded around him with adoration. He administered the pledge to thousands at a time; at Nenagh to twenty thousand in one day; at Galway a hundred thousand in two days; between Galway and Loughrea to nearly two hundred thousand. From Ireland he went up to England and Scotland.

The Cork Examiner states that at one period the list of teetotallers in Ireland contained the names of no less than three millions.

In the famine years 1846 and 1847, Father Matthew received a flattering invitation to visit the eternal city. But during the existence of the terrible ordeal through which his countrymen were passing, he felt it his place to be amongst them. In the year 1849 he was prevailed upon to proceed to the United States, to gratify the wishes of the millions of Irish who have made it their home. On his arrival at New-York, however, the demonstration which awaited him was not that of a section, but was of a national character. He was received by the Mayor and Common Council of the city, waited upon by an aid de camp, sent especially by the President, and he was welcomed by hundreds of thousands of American citizens. Addresses from all quarters poured upon him; deputations from all the great cities of the States pressed to his presence, and he was feted as an honored guest in the White House. He was, in fact, in a perpetual whirl of excitement during his stay in this country. He was obliged continually fo give receptions, hold levees, and receive demonstrations, the mingled fatigues and excitement of which brought upon him two attacks of a disease from which he had suffered once before—paralysis. After recovering partially from the effects of the latter of these, he was advised to try the medicinal springs in the back-woods of Arkansas, and accordingly he spent the month of September in a log hut in that remote locality, eight miles distant from any other human habitation. From the time of Father Matthew's return from America he never recovered his health. He sought the more congenial atmosphere of Madeira, but in vain. For four years he lingered on, suffering under the malady which preyed upon his vital strength, but still unchanged in mind. Though weak and ill, says the Cork Examiner, he preserved the same winning sweetness of manner and the same thoughtful kindness for his friends. It seemed as if he never forgot a face, and those who went to visit him in his illness were divided between grief for the physical wreck which they saw before them, and admiration for the magnanimity of disposition which could preserve its sweetness amidst physical suffering and the failure of its highest and dearest hopes. Even in the retirement of his brother's home at Lehena, his gate was surrounded with poor applicants for the reception of the pledge, for alms, or spiritual aid. These he still received with the same kindness as when in the plentitude of his health and strength. Towards the close of the summer he went to reside in Qteenstown, where he continued gradually failing in health, until on Thursday, the 2nd December, he was attacked with a sixth paralytic stroke. He lingered on, quite conscious of his approaching end, until Monday, the feast of the Immaculate Conception, when, at half-past two o'clock, he breathed his last. He preserved the full powers of his mind until the very moment before his death. He died, apparently without suffering. He breathed heavily for a while, and then the pure spirit had winged its way from the trials suffering, and disappointments of this world. During his last fatal illness his bedside was anxiously and tenderly watched by the Sisters of Mercy and the clergy of Queenstown.

A correspondent of the Dundalk Democrat writing from Cootehill, county Cavan, in reference to the hail storm which visited Ireland last August says :—"A most disastrous calamity of this kind befel the inhabitants of some townlands in the neighborhood of this town on that occasion. These lands occupy a space of three miles in length, by about two in breadth ; and over this area there fell successive showers of hailstone of enormous size, and with the most destructive velocity. This dreadful storm continued, with very slight intervals, for nearly two hours ; and, so great was the quantity of hail which fell on this devoted district, that (though the weather was then very warm), large heaps remained in some places until next day. It is needless to add that the effect was truly calamitous. Those who witnessed it declare that they had never before seen, or even heard of, any such destruction of property in so short a time. All the standing crops, which were then in their most luxurious stage of growth, were completely ruined. Beans and peas appeared as if threshed out of the pods, and even cabbages were riddled as if they had received a discharge of heavy shot. But the oat crop, which is the chief dependence of the small farmers here, was almost entirely destroyed.—Even the little that escaped the pelting, pitiless storm, did not ripen as usual, and therefore remained out in the fields until the heavy rains, which fell in September following, completed its destruction. It is a fact, that the produce of an ordinary stack of oats may be carried in a small bag to market, where few can be found willing to purchase it"

Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, the eminent novelist, has just been elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University. He succeeds the Duke of Argyle, the present Postmaster-General. He was opposed by Lord Stanley, eldest son of the Earl of Derby, but elected by a considerable majority.

A Florence paper speaks in terms of praise of the productions of Mr. Barbee, the Virginia Sculptor, now pursuing his profession in Italy. His last work, "The Fisher Girl," is said to be a fine specimen of the sculptor's genius.

The South is hailing the appearance of a "Reply to Dred," in a novel entitled "Tit for Tat," by a lady of New-Orleans.

OBITUARY.

In St. Louis, Mo., on the 19th of December, of Consumption, Mr. James J. Lyons, late of the city of Cork, Ireland, in his 32d year.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

Nov. 12, in Belfast, Henry Allsop Ward, of Chester, late Captain in the 18th Royal Irish regiment, to Mary Robinson, of Wellington-place, Belfast.

Nov. 13, at Rathkenny Chapel, Bridget Blake, of Ladyrath, county Meath, to Michael Cavanagh, of Rathland, Harold's-cross.

Nov. 12, at Castlebridge, John Manning Norton, of Ballinaclash, county Wexford, to Louise, daughter of the late Rev. A. Stevenson, rector of Castle-Ellis.

In London, Henry John Brown, late of the Rifle Brigade, to Ellen Maria, daughter of the late H. L. Orton, of Reading, Berkshire.

Dec. 2, at St. Mary's Church, New Ross, Henry Carr, of Arnestown Cottage, New Ross, to Charlotte Shaw, daughter of Richard Lett, of New Ross.

In London, Charles Hall Chambers, to Lillah Annabella, daughter of John MacLeod, Stipendiary Magistrate, Demerara.

In London, Daniel Cullimore, Barrister-at-law, of Ballyanne, county Wexford, to Eliza, relict of Robert Smith, of Ballinderry, county Antrim.

Nov. 29, at the Metropolitan Church, Marlborough-street, Michael Cunningham, of Drumlease, county Leitrim, to Catharine Cunningham, of Fawnlion.

Nov. 29, at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Marlborough-street, William Ellard, of Limerick, to Anna Maria, daughter of Henry Joseph Dolphin, of Summerhill, Loughrea.

Nov. 27, in Belfast, William Fulton, of Lisburn, to Sophia Matilda, daughter of the late John Bolton, Linen Merchant, and sister of Captain Bolton, R.N., of Lisburn.

Nov. 27, at Templemore, George Gough Gubbins, eldest son of Jos. L. Gubbins, of Ballincolbo House, county Limerick, to Elizabeth, daughter of J. Bennett, of Templemore.

Dec. 2, Daniel Edward Heffernan, C. E., Charleville-road, Rathmines, to Mary Anne, daughter of the late George Beatty, of H. M's. Prerogative Court.

On the 3d ult., P. Western Joyce, of Glenosheen, county Limerick, to Caroline Jessie, daughter of the late Lieutenant John Waters, of Her Majesty's 21st Fusiliers.

At St. George's Church, St. Vincent, Garrett Kilkelly, of Barbadoes, to Victoria Polson, daughter of Anthony H. Hobson, Provost Marshal of St. Vincent.

Nov. 27, Frederick Lindsay, of Mountloy-square, to Charlotte, daughter of H. Charles Boyle MacMurrough Murphy, late of Hume-st.

Nov. 27, in the Catholic Church of Rathmines, Charles M'Cullow, of Balmarina Cottage, Albert-road, Sandycove, to Hannah Elizabeth M'Dermott, daughter of the late Michael M'Dermott, Ballymahon, Moy House, Longford.

At Doon, county Limerick, T. O'Regan, of Mount Earl, county Limerick, to Anne, daughter of D. Kilbride, of Cappawhite, county Tipperary.

Nov 27, Ernest John Ryder, of Ballynahinch, county Wicklow, to Jane, daughter of the late J. Keoghe, Esq., of Ballyclare.

Dec. 1, in St. Peter's Church, Sir James Marcus Stewart, of Balligawley House, county Tyrone, to Annie Coote, eldest daughter of George Powell Houghton, of Kilmannock House, county Wexford.

At 27 Gloucester-gardens, Hyde-park, Wm. Young, to Frances Wallace, only daughter of the late George Galbraith, of Nuriga, New South Wales.

IRISH DEATHS.

At Bunderan, Donegal, Mary, relict of James Aiken, of Pettigo.

At Youngstown, county Kildare, Charlotte, relict of William Ashe, of Narraghmore.

On the 30th Nov., at No. 12 Mespil parade, Miss Barnes.

Nov. 30, Anne Jane, relict of Michael Bennett, of Dame-street.

Nov. 26, in Queenstown, John Callaghan.

At 2 Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, Frederick Church, aged 58. 23 years of H. M's. Customs.

On the 24th Nov., in Drogheda, aeed 78 years, John Conroy.

Oct. 15, at Tabreez, of Asiatic cholera, Richard Cormick.

Nov. 28, at 15 Upper Grosvenor-street, General Sir Henry John Cumming, K. C. H., Colonel of the 12th Royal Lancers.

Dec. 1, at 11 Mountjoy-street, Maryanne Margaret, daughter of Stephen P. Curtis, Barrister-at-law.

At West Brompton, Catherine, relict of Lieut. Col. Dales, of the 4th King's Own Regt.

Nov. 23, at Plymouth, Isabella Adelaide, daughter of the late Gen. Dillon, of Lacken, county Westmeath.

In London, Ellenor Anne Flanagan, late of Bath, daughter of Michael Flanagan.

Nov. 29, at Howth-view, Booterstown, Lucinda, relict of Captain Chs. Frederick, who was killed in the Walcheron expedition in 1809.

Dec. 2, at Arran quay, in the 35th year of his age, Francis Gardiner.

Nov. 29, at Irishtown, James Glenville, aged 29.

In Liverpool, Francis Henry, born at Draperstown, county Londonderry. He was the founder of the Third Hibernian Mechanics' Society, and was President for 20 years—a society whose object was a provision in time of sickness or death, for its members or their families.

At Hamilton, Bermuda, of yellow fever, Lieut. George Hogarth, of the 26th Cameronians.

At Carton, county Roscommon, aged 56, Gilbert Hogg, J.P.

Nov. 22, aged 85 years, Rev. Walter M'Evelly, for forty years Parish priest of Moore.

At 12 Blackhall-st., Sarah, relict of James Miller, late of Thomas-st.

At 42 Porchester-square, Hyde Park, Major General Stephen Moody, H.E.I.C.S.

Nov. 21, Wm. Moore, of Moore-hill, Waterford.

June 24, at Lake George, New South Wales, J. F. Murray, M.D., eldest son of the late T. Murray, Paymaster of the 48th Regt., formerly of Limerick.

Dec. 3, at the North-strand, Dublin, Wm. Murray, aged 79. The decoased was the faithful domestic of the late Colonel Martyn, of Ballinahinch Castle, county Galway, for upwards of 30 years, and attended the gallant Colonel in all his continental tours.

At Kewmount, Lucan, aged 17, Lindsay, son of the late Lindsay O'Farrell, and grandson of the late Capt. John Armstrong, King's Co.

At Errew Lodge, John J. O'Flaherty, aged 84.

Nov. 30, aged 56 years, Isabella, relict of W. W. Simpson.

On the 29th Nov., Robert Steele, in his 82d year.

Oct. 20, at the village of Sanan, when journeying to Trebizond, Regina, wife of Richard White Stevens, H.B M.'s Consulate, Teheran.

At Queenstown, James Martin Sullivan, formerly of the 34th and 19th Regiments.

Dec. 2, at Nelson-st., Belfast, Mary, daughter of David Thoburn.

At 45 Marlborough-street, Sarah, relict of Thomas Warburton, King's county.

Dec. 2, at Clontarf, Eugenie Mary, daughter of Wm. White, of 8 Lower Abbey-street.

At the Willows, Upper Tooting, George Augustus, 3d son of the late Robert Williams, M.D., of Bedford-place, Russell-square.

Nov. 21, at Paris, suddenly, in the 43d year of her age, Mary, wife of John Winter, formerly of Rathgar, county Dublin.

A FIRST-CLASS NEWSPAPER.

HARPER'S WEEKLY,

A Journal of Civilization.

Neither labor nor expense will be spared to make it the best Family newspaper in the world—one whose cheerful and genial character will render it a welcome visitor to every household, while its constant devotion to the principles of Right and Justice shall win the approbation of the wise and the good. Its object will be to set forth sound views on Political, Social and Moral questions ; to diffuse useful information ; and to cultivate the graces and amenities of life.

Harber's Weekly will contain a full and impartial Summary of the Political, Social, Religious, Commercial, and Literary News of the day. It will chronicle the leading movements of the age, record the inventions of genius, the discoveries of science, and the creations of art. It will, in a word, aim to present an accurate and complete picture of the age in which we live.

It will also give a due share of attention to the taste, the imagination, and the feelings. Its regular contents will embrace Tales, Incidents of Travel and Adventure, Sketches of Character and Social Life, and Essays up on Art and Morals.

The Publishers have made arrangements with the best American writers, who will contribute to the various Departments of the paper. The large space at their disposal will enable the Conductors to avail themselves of ample selections from the best and most healthful literature of the Old World. The first Number will contain the commencement of Mr. THACKERAY'S New Serial Tale, the publication of which, from early sheets purchased of the Author, will be continued from week to week until its conclusion. In addition to this they will keep a vigilant eye upon the issues of the English, French, and German Periodical press, the best productions of which will be transferred to the paper under their charge.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is not intended in any way to supersede or take the place of HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE. Each Periodical will confine itself to its own proper sphere ; and no portion of the contents of the one will appear in the other.

HARPER'S WEEKLY will contain Sixteen pages of the size of the London Illustrated News, each Number comprising as much matter as an ordinary duodecimo volume. It will be printed in a form and upon paper suitable for binding ; and as the pages will be electrotyped, the back Numbers can always be supplied, so that Subscribers will be able at any time to complete their files. At the close of each volume, neat and appropriate Covers will be prepared for the convenience of those who wish to bind the paper.

Terms.

HARPER'S WEEKLY will appear every SATURDAY MORNING, and will be sold at FIVE CENTS a Copy. It will be mailed to Subscribers at the following rates, payment being invariably required in advance :

One Copy for Twenty Weeks	$1 00.
One Copy for One Year	2 50.
One Copy for Two Years	4 00.
Five Copies for One Year	9 00.
Twelve Copies for One Year	20 00.
Twenty-five Copies for One Year	40 00.

HARPER & BROTHERS,
FRANKLIN SQUARE, N. Y.

jan3 1t

CARNIVAL HATS.

Manufacturers of the Gentlemen's Dress Silk Hats, which we offer the public for their approval and purchase. We withhold all comments on their style, relying upon the discrimination of our patrons who have for years liberally sustained us in our Quarterly Issues, and in the original idea of an Intermediate Style, expressly adapted to the "AMERICAN CARNIVAL," or New-Year Season. LEARY & Co.,

Leaders and Introducers of Fashions for Gentlemen's HATS, Astor House, Broadway.

d27 2t

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

☞ Post Office, New-York, Dec. 27, 1856.—There being a dispute as to the circulation of papers claiming the advertisement by this office of uncalled-for letters, notice is hereby given that the Postmaster will receive evidence and decide upon the fact under and pursuant to the regulations of the Post Office Department. A printed statement for the information of persons desiring to compete for the advertisement, fixing and defining the limits and boundaries of the territory deemed by the Postmaster to be embraced within the range of the delivery of this office, the time within which evidence must be submitted, and the particulars of the evidence required, and blank affidavits in which every detail to be shown, is properly and definitely embraced, will be furnished on application at this office.

j3 1t I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Merry Christmas and Happy New-Year!

LADIES, IF YOU WISH TO MAKE PRESENTS FOR THE HOLIDAYS, you will find at MILLER'S, in Canal street, White Silver and Kid Gaiter Boots, Slippers and Cloth Button Boots, beautiful Embroidered Toilet Slippers for gentlemen. Also, Ladies' and Misses' Gaiter Boots and Shoes of all kinds, with Boys' and Youths' Patent Leather Boots, Congress Gaiters, &c. Forming useful and appropriate gifts for the Holidays.

dec13, 4t. J. B. Miller & Co., 134 Canal street.

P. P. P. Patent Porous Plasters.—Sore chests, weak backs pains in the side, deep-seated rhematic and nervous affections, soon benefited. Counter irritant, but so mild as to create no inconvenience. Sold by al medicine venders. The fresh made now ready, at principal office, 43 Canal street. Twenty-five cents each plaster.

4t T. ALLCOCK & CO.

Holloway's Ointment.—The healing and cooling effect of this Balsamic Ointment upon burns, scalds, running sores, irritation of the skin, scrofulous ulcers, salt rheum, erysipelas, and all external inflammation is a miracle in surgery. Sold at Manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London ; and by all Druggists at 25c., 62 1-2c., and $1 per pot or box.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,
OFFICE,
423 Broome st.,
tf6dec New-York.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any orders left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. Steamer BALTIC, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 3d day of January, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

ja3 ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, &c., per U. S. steamer ILLINOIS, will close at this office on MONDAY, the 5th day of January, at one o'clock, P. M.

j3 I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

A Book for the Holidays.

SAVAGE'S '98 AND '48.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

12mo., cloth, $1.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of '98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices, &c. &c.

The third edition has been very usefully improved. Forty pages have been added, embracing an Appendix and a copious Index, containing nearly twelve hundred references to political facts, military movements, and personal allusions to the text. The Appendix is peculiarly valuable to the historical student, in giving the original addresses issued by the national bodies in Ireland during the revolutionary months of '48, including those issued by the Irish Confederation, the Protestant Repeal Association, the Trades and Citizens of Dublin, the Students, etc., to the French Republic, to the People of Ireland, to the Protestants of Ulster, to the Political Clubs on Trial by Jury, and against Lord Clarendon. They form a chapter of the European History of that eventful year to which every future writer on the subject must refer ; and as they can be found in no other publication, their presence here must greatly enhance the historical value of this work.

J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, New-York.

OPINIONS OF THE CRITICS.

Here is a volume worth reading.—Troy Budget.

A decided book.—Newark Daily Advertiser.

One of the most valuable contributions to the literature of the day that has fallen under our notice.—Orleans Republican.

We owe to Mr. Savage—himself an exile, and one into whose soul the iron of British tyranny has deeply entered—our sincere acknowledgments for the errors of which he has disabused our judgment ; our sincerest thanks for the sad and yet resplendent pageant which he has caused to pass before our eyes. We welcome his history of the modern politics and literature of Ireland as the fulfilment of a long-felt need ; it enables us to understand a thousand things which seemed before incomprehensible enigmas ; it bears the authoritative stamp of one who has been behind the scenes, and himself a participant in the drama ; it is candid and analytical in its criticsm, alike of friends and foes ; and to sum up all its merits in the most important, it seems to be fearlessly and vehemently true.—U. S. Democratic Review.

One half of this book is valuable ; the other moiety is invaluable, and treats of the political agitation during the reign of O'Connell, and more particularly of the public men who asserted the nationality of Ireland from 1843 to 1848. * * * He has written with intimate knowledge of his subject, with earnest enthusiasm, and with graphic force. As might be expected, the best portion is that devoted to the more recent events in Irish history, when Davis, and Mitchel, and Meagher, endeavored to raise Ireland from a province to a nation. The comparison between Tone and Grattan is a brilliant chapter, glittering with antithesis ; the narrative of the campaigns of 1798 is full of interest ; the account of the United Irishmen condenses volumes of biography into a single chapter ; the sketch of Lord Plunket will strike on account of its honest and scornful indignation, but the engressing interest of the volume properly commences with the comparison, elaborate but never tedious, between O'Connell and Mitchel. In this chapter, and in another relating to the late Thomas Devin Reilly, will be found the most complete, vivid and truthful account yet published of the latter days of O'Connell's reign, and of the whole struggle in act and thought, by word and deed, of the "Young Ireland" patriots of our own time.—N. Y. Daily Times.

The author is a man of ardent poetic temperament, of strong national feeling, and of enthusiastic attachment to the cause in which he bore a prominent part at an early age. * * * His narrative is always lively and frequently graphic, and presents an interesting view of the past career of several of our well-known adopted countrymen.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. Savage could not have chosen a theme more attractive or better suited to his brilliant pen. * * To the composition of his volume he has brought an enthusiasm, ever quickened by an intense love of his native land, and a sleepless, avenging memory of her sufferings, combined with a peculiar genius for his work and a critically tempered judgement, that has forbidden him to sacrifice aught of truth and soberness to impulses inspired by personal sympathies.—N. Y. Evening Mirror.

The book is not only of deep interest but truly national and ably written. * * The host of great and popular names given, and the events with which they are entertwined, afforded our ingenious friend broad and rare scope for observation and research, of which he has most industriously taken advantage.—Irish American.

Mr. Savage seeks to give us principles as well as facts. He philosophises while he narrates. His book is suggestive as well as instructing ; it awakens thought as well as emotion.—Christian Herald, Cincinnatti.

Will be endorsed by the real friends of the Irish.—City Item.

A thoroughly Irish book, written in the interest of the Young Ireland party, who would, if they could, have renewed in 1848, the bloody struggle which resulted so disastrously for the United Irishmen in 1798.—Daily British Whig, Kingston, Canada.

Mr. Savage is a man of considerable talent. * * * Well read in the history of his country, he was also intimately acquainted with all the leaders of the popular cause in the last movement, and his work is consequently full of information and interest.—Boston Traveller.

Mr. Savage wields an able pen, and his acquirements and opportunities render him well fitted to do justice to the theme. * * * He has acquited himself nobly.—Daily Mail, Boston.

Mr. Savage writes in a bold and vigorous style, giving evidence of high intellectual ability, and, though inclined to view the past events which he describes with a partial eye, he is entitled to much credit for the interesting subject matter of his history and the elegant dress of diction in which he has clothed it.—Evening Pilot, Montreal.

Tells some home truths of the demagogues who have sported and traded upon the wrongs of his country.—Savannah Republican.

We can safely commend this book.—Vicksburg Whig.

The style in which the work before us is written, is admirable.—Boston Trumpet.

The volume concludes with a fine sketch of Devin Reilly.—Hartford Evening Press.

The characters of O'Connell, Mitchel, O'Brien, Doheny and Meagher are ably presented and analyzed.—Boston Daily Times.

The fair land of Erin could not be in better hands than those of John Savage, and in the volume before us, we think his pen has dealt justly by such men as Wolfe Tone, Henry Grattan, Mitchel, O'Brien, Reilly and others.—Boston Intelligencer.

Written with a spirit of enthusiasm and a power of delineation worthy of the pen of John Savage. * * * In a word, he gives us a most graphic picture of all that both Protestants and Catholics can obtain of Ireland during the last half century.—Spectator, Albany.

It is impossible, in a mere paragraph, en passant, to give any correct notion of the variety of material, in History, Biography, Lliterature, and Society, which is contained in this single volume. Mr. Savage is a bold, free, unaffected writer—earnest, eager, impetuous.—Charleston Courier.

With O'Connell the writer has but little sympathy ; he maintains that his whole career was a "brilliant error."—Ch'n. Sec'y. Hartford.

Ought to find a place in the library of every reader.—Constitution, Boston.

An exceedingly well written history of the Irish Revolution.—Phila. Evening Mail.

Those who desire in a compact and convenient form all that is known of the United Irishmen, will find in this book a clear and accurate history.—Phila. Despatch.

Brady's Gallery.—No. 359 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS.

In anticipation of the demand for Portraits during the ensuing Holidays, Mr. Brady has enlarged his facilities for the production of the

AMBROTYPE.

The most perfect of pictures taken in an instant, durable, inexpensive, and elegant ; the

MELAINOTYPE,

An entirely new style of miniature, equal to those on ivory, first introduced at Brady's Gallery ; the

VIGNETTE PHOTOGRAPH,

Made at no other establishment in the world, are all executed promptly and in superior style.

COPIES

of old Daguerreotypes, Portraits, Crayons, Engravings, &c., produced by the Photograph, of any desired size, and in any number. A hundred, or a thousand Photographs produced from a single sitting. m1d20

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS ? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 31 Park Row,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

Publications.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.]]

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: SECOND SERIES.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

CELTIC UNION PULICATIONS!

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 87½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

SPIRIT OF THE NATION, with the music, $4 00.

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 5 thick vols., $14 00.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,

nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Special Notices.

TAILORING—1856-7.

George P. Fox has removed to his recently purchased store, house and lot, No. 47 Amity street, near Broadway, thereby freeing himself from the exactions and unenviable trammels of a Broadway landlord, at a saving in favor of his customers at the rate of $5000 to $6000 per annum. The general arrangements, particularly the cutting and sewing departments, are admitted by those who have already patronized his new establishment, to be decidedly superior to any of his former stores, Nos. 821, 333, 581 Broadway.

3m27dec

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 3ms. 186 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellectual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes.....50 cents. | Pit.....12½ cents.
Gallery.....12½ cents. | Orchestra Stalls.....50 cents.
Private Boxes.....Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7¾.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.

NEW HALL, 585 BROADWAY,

Opposite Niblo's Garden,

Houses crowded to witness the Grand Fairy Opera of Cinderella.

In four acts, new scenery, dresses, transformations, &c., and the following powerful cast—

Cinderella, (first time,".....Miss C. Hiffert
Dandini.....G. S. Buckley
Baron.....W. Percival
Pedro.....R. B. Buckley
Allidora.....J. A. Basquin
Prince.....T. S. Wadelton
Chole.....J. J. Mullen

Preceding which

NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

On Thursday (Christmas Day) a grand afternoon concert, commencing at half-past two o'clock.

☞ Doors open at 7 o'clock. Concert at 7 1-2 o'clock. Admission 25 cents: Orchestra seats 50 cents.

On Friday evening, January 9, Benefit of Sames Buckley.

THIRD ANNUAL BALL

OF THE

Young Men's Association,

FOR THE

BENEFIT OF THE

Roman Catholic Orphans,

TO BE HELD

AT NIBLO'S SALOON,

On Tuesday Evening, January 6, 1856.

SHELTON'S FULL BAND ENGAGED.

Tickets to admit a gentleman and two ladies, $3.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Andrew L. Byrne. | Michael J. D. McGlynn. | Oliver K. Mooney.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Theodore P. Kelly	Edward F. Mullen,	Peter Lynch
James A. Carolin,	Edmund F. Kelly	John A. McSorley
John E. McMenomy	Charles Hussey	Philip J. Cozans
Hugh Gaynor	John A. McLoughlin	Wm. H. Irwin
John M. Cooney	John Kelly	Richard Dalton
James Lynch	Peter Meehan	John McCartin
John A. Boyle,	Augustus O'Neil	Thomas Hussey
Edward C. Byrne	William J. Kane	Wm. Abearn
Daniel Lalor	Oliver Sadlier	Wm. Fitzpatrick
Edward I. Murray	Thomas Fay	Philip Clark
John Higgins	Nicholas Hussey, jr.	Michael Carr
John W. Kice	Andrew J. Smith	John J. Kelly
C. Watters	Daniel Sweeny, jr.

WM. LALOR, President.

JAMES LYNCH, Treasurer.
JAMES T. DUNIGAN, Secretary

OSCAR SPENCE, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN W. MCKINLEY, 2d Vice-President.

8t20d CHARLES WRIGHT, Floor Manager.

Eighth Annual Civic and Military Ball of the Guyon Cadets.

(Company D, Ninth Regiment N. Y. S. M.)

At the City Assembly Rooms, 446 Broadway, on Wednesday Evening, January 7th, 1857.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Lieut. Peter Halpin, | Serg't. John Broderick,
" Laurence Glynn, | Private Thomas Dempsey.

CAPT. THOS. MURPHY, Chairman.

J. CULLEN, Secretary.

Tickets one dollar, admitting a gentleman and ladies.

Shelton's celebrated Cornet and Quadrille Band have been engaged for the the occasion. j3 1t

MONTGOMERY GUARDS.

The Twentieth Annual Ball of this Company, will take place at NIBLO'S SALOON, on Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857.

Tickets—Two Dollars Each—may be had of any of the members, or of the Committee of Arrangements.

Henry Brenner, 71 Wall-st., | Chas. Leary, 345 Second Avenue,
Mathew Riordan, 94 Wall-st., | M. Maher, 188 Water, cor. Pine,
John Moore, 75 Oliver, | John Campble, 321 Water,
M. Reynolds, 45 Scamell.

HENRY BRENNER, Chairman.

CHAS. LEARY, Secretary. j3 4t

"T. F. MEAGHER CLUB."

This body will celebrate the Fifth Anniversary of the bold and honorable Escape from bondage of their distinguished countryman and patron, Thomas Francis Meagher, by a Grand Ball, to be given at Tammany Hall, on Monday evening, January 12th, 1857. The members have resolved to spare no pains or expense in rendering the entertainment worthy of the important event which it commemorates. Tickets, admitting a gentleman and ladies, one dollar: can be obtained at the door on the night of the Ball.

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 889 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.

JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man,

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 186 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

REV. DR. MANAHAN,

Will lecture before CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AT HOPE CHAPEL, 720 Broadway, on Monday Evening, January 5, 1857, at 8 o'clock.

SUBJECT: ————.

Tickets 25 cents, to be had at the Reading Room of the Association, 889 Broadway; at Dunnigan's and O'Shea's Bookstores, and at the office of this paper. dec27

A LECTURE

Will be delivered by Capt. JAMES HUSTON, at Hope Chapel, 720 Broacway, on Monday evening, 12th Januaary, 1857.

SUBJECT:—Sectarianism---Its Evil Influences, and the best Remedy for those Influences.

Committee of Arrangements:—William O'Donnell, M. D.; George Powell, James F. Markey, Henry Hughes, Councilman; Daniel Moran, John Foley, Hugh Donnelly, William Parr, John Healy.

Tickets 25 cents, to be had of the following General Committe:

Captains Michael Phelan, 16 East 11th st., Thos. McGuire, 7th st. and 1st avenue, J. Kenedy, cor. 35th st. and Broadway, M. J. Daly, 116 Chambers st., W. F. Lyons, Citizen Office, Felix Duffy, 22 White st., T. Murphy, 9th Regt., 192 East 25th st., Jas. F. Markey, 25 City Hall Place, Edward Kearns, Cherry st.; Major Richard Barry, 488 Pearl st., Adjt. John McCartin, 27 Perry st.; Lieut. John O'Donohue, 71 Chatham st., C. C. Keating, 26 City Hall Place, Jas. S. Lyons, 120 Chambers st., John Ward, 24th st. and 2nd avenue, C. Doris, 628 Hudson st., J. Cooney, cor. of Reed and Washington sts., Daniel Lusk, 230 Mulberry st., Jas. Cassidy, West Broadway, Solomon S. Reilly, 218 Canal st.; Wm. O'Donnell, M. D., Madison st., Henry Hughes, Councilman, 478 Pearl st., Joan Carroll, 498 Pearl st., William Cloary, 11 Jacob st., Andre Froment, cor. of Division and Catherine sts., Chas. McChesney, cor. of 26th st. and 1st avenue, John Foley, 202 Bowery, Thos. H. Hurley, 10 Centre st., Hugh Collender, 53 Ann st., Wm. Buck, 140 West st., George Powell, West Washington Market, Daniel Moran, cor. 23rd st. and 1st avenue, John Martin, 26 City Hall Place, Geo. D. Dowling, 98 Cedar st., Andrew Byrne, cor. of Centre and Grand sts., Thos. D. Conroy, 491 Pearl st, Martin Doyle, Centre st., John Healey, 3 James st., Hugh Donely, 14 Franklin square, M. Fitzpatrick, 67 Centre st., William Parr, 484 Pearl st., Charles Neary, 28 City Hall Place, John Sweeny, 133 Read street, John O'Dwyer, cor. of Grand and Centre sts., Arthur Dougherty, 493 Pearl st., John Shields, 148 West 17th street, Peter Conroy, 433 Pearl st., John O'Toole, 227 East 19th st., Joseph Markey, 84 Cherry st., Michael Sulliuan, cor. of 15th st. and 1st avenue, Edward McGuire, cor. of Stanton and Willett sts., Patrick McMahon, Washington Market, James Sommers, 283 10th avenue, John J. Kenny, 187 Allen st., John Cunningham, 2 Essex Market, Matthew McCaughern, cor. of 33d st. and 10th avenue, Daniel McCabe, 843 Pearl st., John Brown, Pearl st., Patrick Connor, cor. of Christy and Delancy sts., John Morriarty, 173 Chatham st.

WILLIAM O'DONNELL, M. D., Chairman.

JOHN HEALY, Treasurer.
JAMES F. MARKEY, Secretary. dec27

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings:—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hehir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's. j3tf

Official Notices.

Office of the Receiver of Taxes, New Court-House, No. 32 Chambers street.—NOTICE.—In conformity with an act for the collection of taxes, passed April 18, 1843, I hereby give notice to all tax-payers who have omitted to pay their taxes for the year 1856, that unless the same is paid to me at my office, on or before the first day of January, I shall proceed to collect the same, by an addition of interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum calculated from the 16th day of last September to the day of payment.

m1dec13 HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver of Taxes.

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,

Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines, Books, &c. dec6 3mos

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete process (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y. JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Monday Evening at corner of 11th st. and First Ave. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J. OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey. WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITOH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport. y21jane

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Daguerreotypes.

Mark the Facts!—J. GURNEY'S establishment, No. 349 Broadway, corner of Leonard street, is the oldest and most extensive in the United States. GURNEY was the first to introduce the Art of Photography in this city. GURNEY has recently made important alterations and improvements in his establishment. GURNEY has now greater facilities for producing finer work in every branch than has heretofore been produced in this country. GURNEY has still in his employ the best of his old artists. GURNEY has recently added to the above a talented corps of American, French, and German artists. GURNEY'S colored Photographs of all sizes need only to be seen to be appreciated; they speak for themselves. GURNEY'S plain, unretouched Photographs were never equaled—so say artists and the best judges. GURNEY'S Daguerreotypes are universally pronounced superior productions. GURNEY has received more testimonials for his skill than any other artist in the profession. GURNEY received the only medal for Photographic productions at the late Paris Exposition—consequently, GURNEY stands at the head of the world in the Photographic Art. GURNEY has not removed any branch of his business to any part of the city. GURNEY has no connection with any other establishment in any part of the city. GURNEY attends personally to his patrons and friends, and has done so for the last sixteen years. GURNEY will be most happy to continue that attention, and will still endeavor to please all who may favor him with a visit to his Photographic Palace of Art. J. GURNEY, oct4 3mos No. 349 Broadway, corner of Leonard street.

FACTS

THAT NEED NO MARKING.

Progression.

From Humphrey's Photographic Journal of Sept. 1856.

We do not approve of the plan of puffiing the members of the Photographic profession by way of personals. This may do very well when one is trying to bring his works into favor with such as are susceptible to flattery, and measure out their support according to the amount of editorial ink used as bait. We feel confident that those who best know will agree with us as that it is no puffing, when we can say with so much truth, that the Photographic Art this day owes, in no small degree, its position in this country to Mr. C. D. FREDRICKS, a gentleman who was the first to introduce the Photographic process upon an extensive scale in America. Previous to his establishing himself here, he visited Europe, and, with an enterprise worthy of imitation, he was not satisfied with first securing what knowledge he could himself gain, but also engaged the services of several of the most eminent Parisian Artists. He then, in connection with Mr. GURNEY, opened an establishment on a plan unequaled in the world.

After succeesfully following his profession, in connection with Mr. G., for some time, he has opened a "Temple of Art" in this City, under his own professorship and supervision. We have honestly and candidly presented the foregoing, feeling that is justly due to a fellow-laborer.

CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, &c., No. 585 Broadway, opposite Metropolitan Hotel.

FACTS WHICH ARE KNOWN.—PHOTOGRAPHS DAGUERREOTYPES, AMBROTYPES, &c.—The undersigned having removed the Photograph department and his Parisian artists from his old place of business, No. 349 Broadway, to his new and magnificent establishment, No. 585 Broadway, would call the attention of public to the fact that his Galleries, and the pictures made in them, are superior to anything before exhiited. Those desiring Photograps, Daguerreotypes, or Ambrotypes, executed by artists of refined taste, would do well to call and judge for themselves. Reception Rooms on the first floor, and are open from 8 A. M., to 10 P. M. CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, oct11 3mos opposite the Metropolitan Hotel.

Late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, No. 585 Broadway

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 58 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN; Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARES," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Special Notices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c, made by

J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street,

sept27 8mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring, by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfaction be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York. Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 81 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

☞ Removal.—DR. J. M. CARNOCHAN, has removed his office to No. 45 Lafayette Place, near Astor Place. oct18 4t

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicines.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtaincd. Price $1 per bottle. dec18 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENEUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bouud, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

For THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issued in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston. oct18 tf

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING eurered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

---

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 18 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHS,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 23½ Spruce street, New-York, between William and Gold streets.

ap26tf

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

Wm. Irwin,

MANUFACTURER AND DEALER IN BOOTS & SHOES,

No. 174 Bowery, opposite Delancey street, New-York.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. oc11m3

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.

my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	3s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 3s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

CARPETINGS FROM AUCTION.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW-YORK AND VICINITY.

STEPHEN LEAHY,

93 SIXTH AVENUE, between Waverly and Clinton Place,

BEGS to call the attention of the ladies to his large and varied stock of Carpeting and Oil Cloth. The collection comprises goods of every grade and style, from the richest and most beautiful of foreign manufacture to the lowest price domestic.

All who are acquainted with the Carpet trade, and have visited our New Store, acknowledge our stock the most varied assortment and best selected on exhibition in the city. The facilities we enjoy for purchasing cheap, and an experience of many years in connection with the largest houses in the country, enables us to present to our lady friends and the public, the cheapest and most select stock of goods in the city.

sept27 3mos STEPHEN LEAHY, 93 Sixth Avenue.

CHEAP FALL DRY GOODS!

Rich dress Silks, Broche and Woollen Shawls, French and English Merinos, Woollen Plaids, Poplins, Valencias, Mous. de Laines, Alpacas, French and English Prints, Ginghams, Domestics, Irish Linens, Flannels, Hosiery, Gloves, Embroideries, Laces, &c., &c. Also—Fashionable Cloaks and Mantillas of plain and fancy cloths, rich black and colored Silk Velvets, &c.

And at the Grand Street Store,

Royal Velvet, Brussels, Tapestry, Ingrain, Three-ply, and every variety of low-priced Carpetings, Rugs, Mats, Oil Cloths, Curtain materials, Cornices, Shades, &c.

ALL AT VERY ECONOMICAL PRICES!

Lord & Taylor, 255, 257, 259 and 261 Grand street, oct4 3mos and new numbers 47 and 49 Catharine street.

Men's Furnishing Goods.

84 William Street, corner of Maiden Lane, New-York.

GEORGE M. TRACY,

HAS now on hand a choice stock of FALL AND WINTER GOODS, nearly all of which are made under his own inspection, of the choicest fabrics and newest styles. Merchants will find this a desirable place to make their selections. Annexed is a catalogue of some of the articles:

Hosiery and Gloves	Improved Napoleon Ties
Silk Beaufort Ties	Stocks, in great variety
Linen Collars	Silk and Linen Handkerchiefs
Silk Albert Ties	Dressing Robes
Fine Shirts	Travelling Shawls
Cravats and Stocks	Silk Under Shirts and Drawers
Suspenders	Silk and Gingham Umbrellas

His shirts are of superior make and quality, and warranted to fit. Persons wishing goods for their own use will be served at retail as well as wholesale, at the lowest prices. oc4m2

READY-MADE CLOTHING

And Furnishing Establishment.

390 BOWERY,

WEST SIDE, OPPOSITE THE HAY MARKET.

HUGH DOLAN

TAKES leave to apprise his friends and the public generally that he has the above concern with a

New and Select Stock of Goods,

Which will compare favorably with any in the market, and which he offers to his customers at prices which he is confident cannot be beaten in the city. Gentlemen's furnishing goods of every description at the lowest rates.

N. B. Particular attention paid to the making up of custom work. A good fit warranted in all cases.

Remember 390 Bowery, opposite the Hay Market. 3m4oc

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 85 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.

dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

Wines and Liquors.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 138 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY STREET,

3m18dec New-York.

ELIZABETHAN ALE.

MEDICAL men now very generally recommend the occasional use of pure ale to those who are in need of nourishment; and it is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage for general use that can be found. This is not a new idea. In Queen Elizabeth's time our ancestors universally consumed it—from Elizabeth herself, in her palace, to the farmer in the field. In those days, adulterated wines and fiery liquors may be said to have been unknown, and very heavy penalties were enacted against using anything except malt and hops in brewing. It is not at all extravagant to assert, that the average duration of the life of a large portion of our race is a third less than it was two or three huudred years ago, and this is chiefly attributable to what we eat and what we drink. Even now the heartiest people that can be found are from the rural districts of England, who yet follow the old fashioned diet.

All who use ale, whether as a beverage or for the purpose of nourishment, will find the Elizabethan Ale most excellent. Being made on the Scotch plan, it is as pure and wholesome, (if not equal in flavor) as the imported, while its cost is but little more than a common article. Families and retailers supplied at 120 WATER STREET, one door above Wall. oc4m3

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. y1aug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, ont of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 306 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. yjly26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on libberal terms. jly5 y

---

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 13, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

Special Notices.

Information wanted of Margaret Ustice and Jane Crowley, who came passengers by the Isaac Wright, on her last trip from Liverpool, by Richard Tracey, 11 Jay street, Brooklyn, in care of Mr. Owen Gilligan, or at this office. no22

☞ Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

HO FOR NICARAGUA!

ALL Persons desirous of emigrating to that beautiful and productive country, to become settlers there in accordance with its colonization laws, may obtain a free passage and a farm of eighty acres, by applying at the Nicaragua Colonization Office, No. 347 Broadway, room No. 2 (up stairs.)

d27 3t ALEX. C. LAWRENCE, Agent.

TO BOOK, FANCY AND TOY DEALERS.—Your attention is directed to

A NEW ARTICLE

FOR THE HOLIDAYS,

"CHESS, CHECKER AND BACKGAMMON BOARD FOR THE MILLION," being a new invention, whereby the above three games can be obtained at a cost not equal to the expense of purchasing the ordinary men alone for playing the game of chess. The article is gotten up in three styles, forming a neat and convenient ornament for the parlor.

Call and examine or send orders to dec27 A. RANNEY, Publisher, No. 195 Broadway, N. Y.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR. JAMES ROCHE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES SIX CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1857. NO. 40

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XXXX.

Editorial.

MEMORIES OF THE DAY—THE 8TH OF JANUARY.

ANGLO-SAXONISM—NATIVE-AMERICANISM—FRAUDS UPON THE CELT.

DEATH OF MRS. LYNCH.

RECEPTION OF THE RESOLUTE IN ENGLAND.

NOTICE TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS—Pat Costello with some of the old folks at home—Pierce Mahony, Purcell O'Gorman, Major Talbot and Conway of the Castle—a Dinner at Salt-Hill.

Essay on Irish Intellect, by Thomas Davis—Lit. and Art Items, &c.

Poetry.

The British Constitution, by "Old Sam"—Winter Thoughts, by John Savage—Father Matthew—The Guards of our hearts, by "Woodside."

Miscellaneous.

Military Resources of Ireland, No. 2—Tom Sheridan out Shooting—Antiquity of Ireland—Devin Reilly—Nicaraguan letters—Local Facts—Old New-York, No. 3—Irish news from all quarters—European news—News from California—American—City news, &c.

Answers to Correspondents.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payment in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the firs No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. MADDEN, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 37½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

A Book for the Holidays.

SAVAGE'S '98 AND '48.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

12mo., cloth, $1.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of '98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices, &c. &c.

The third edition has been very usefully improved. Forty pages have been added, embracing an Appendix and a copious Index, containing nearly twelve hundred references to political facts, military movements, and personal allusions to the text. The Appendix is peculiarly valuable to the historical student, in giving the original addresses issued by the national bodies in Ireland during the revolutionary months of '48, including those issued by the Irish Confederation, the Protestant Repeal Association, the Trades and Citizens of Dublin, the Students, etc., to the French Republic, to the People of Ireland, to the Protestants of Ulster, to the Political Clubs on Trial by Jury, and against Lord Clarendon. They form a chapter of the European History of that eventful year to which every future writer on the subject must refer; and as they can be found in no other publication, their presence here must greatly enhance the historical value of this work.

J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, New-York.

OPINIONS OF THE CRITICS.

Here is a volume worth reading.—Troy Budget.

A decided book.—Newark Daily Advertiser.

One of the most valuable contributions to the literature of the day that has fallen under our notice.—Orleans Republican.

We owe to Mr Savage—himself an exile, and one into whose soul the iron of British tyranny has deeply entered—our sincere acknowledgments for the errors of which he has disabused our judgment; our sincerest thanks for the sad and yet resplendent pageant which he has caused to pass before our eyes. We welcome his history of the modern politics and literature of Ireland as the fulfilment of a long-felt need; it enables us to understand a thousand things which seemed before incomprehensible enigmas; it bears the authoritative stamp of one who has been behind the scenes, and himself a participant in the drama; it is candid and analytical in its criticsm, alike of friends and foes; and to sum up all its merits in the most important, it seems to be fearlessly and vehemently true.—U. S. Democratic Review.

One half of this book is valuable; the other moiety is invaluable, and treats of the political agitation during the reign of O'Connell, and more particularly of the public men who asserted the nationality of Ireland from 1843 to 1848. * * * He has written with intimate knowledge of his subject, with earnest enthusiasm, and with graphic force. As might be expected, the best portion is that devoted to the more recent events in Irish history, when Davis, and Mitchel, and Meagher, endeavored to raise Ireland from a province to a nation. The comparison between Tone and Grattan is a brilliant chapter, glittering with antithesis; the narrative of the campaigns of 1798 is full of interest; the account of the United Irishmen condenses volumes of biography into a single chapter; the sketch of Lord Plunket will strike on account of its honest and scornful indignation, but the engrossing interest of the volume properly commences with the comparison, elaborate but never tedious, between O'Connell and Mitchel. In this chapter, and in another relating to the late Thomas Devin Reilly, will be found the most complete, vivid and truthful account yet published of the latter days of O'Connell's reign, and of the whole struggle in act and thought, by word and deed, of the "Young Ireland" patriots of our own time.—N. Y. Daily Times.

The author is a man of ardent poetic temperament, of strong national feeling, and of enthusiastic attachment to the cause in which he bore a prominent part at an early age. * * * His narrative is always lively and frequently graphic, and presents an interesting view of the past career of several of our well-known adopted countrymen.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. Savage could not have chosen a theme more attractive or better suited to his brilliant pen. * * To the composition of his volume he has brought an enthusiasm, ever quickened by an intense love of his native land, and a sleepless, avenging memory of her sufferings, combined with a peculiar genius for his work and a critically tempered judgement, that has forbidden him to sacrifice aught of truth and soberness to impulses inspired by personal sympathies.—N. Y. Evening Mirror.

The book is not only of deep interest but truly national and ably written. * * The host of great and popular names given, and the events with which they are entertwined, afforded our ingenious friend broad and rare scope for observation and research, of which he has most industriously taken advantage.—Irish American.

Mr. Savage seeks to give us principles as well as facts. He philosophises while he narrates. His book is suggestive as well as instructing; it awakens thought as well as emotion.—Christian Herald, Cincinnatti.

Will be endorsed by the real friends of the Irish.—City Item.

A thoroughly Irish book, written in the interest of the Young Ireland party, who would, if they could, have renewed in 1848, the bloody struggle which resulted so disastrously for the United Irishmen in 1798.—Daily British Whig, Kingston, Canada.

Mr. Savage is a man of considerable talent. * * * Well read in the history of his country, he was also intimately acquainted with all the leaders of the popular cause in the last movement, and his work is consequently full of information and interest.—Boston Traveller.

Mr. Savage wields an able pen, and his acquirements and opportunities render him well fitted to do justice to the theme. * * * He has acquited himself nobly.—Daily Mail, Boston.

Mr. Savage writes in a bold and vigorous style, giving evidence of high intellectual ability, and, though inclined to view the past events which he describes with a partial eye, he is entitled to much credit for the interesting subject matter of his history and the elegant dress of diction in which he has clothed it.—Evening Pilot, Montreal.

Tells some home truths of the demagogues who have sported and traded upon the wrongs of his country.—Savannah Republican.

We can safely commend this book.—Vicksburg Whig.

The style in which the work before us is written, is admirable.—Boston Trumpet.

The volume concludes with a fine sketch of Devin Reilly.—Hartford Evening Press.

The characters of O'Connell, Mitchel, O'Brien, Doheny and Meagher are ably presented and analyzed.—Boston Daily Times.

The fair land of Erin could not be in better hands than those of John Savage, and in the volume before us, we think his pen has dealt justly by such men as Wolfe Tone, Henry Grattan, Mitchel, O'Brien, Reilly and others.—Boston Intelligencer.

Written with a spirit of enthusiasm and a power of delineation worthy of the pen of John Savage. * * * In a word, he gives us a most graphic picture of all that both Protestants and Catholics can obtain of Ireland during the last half century.—Spectator, Albany.

It is impossible, in a mere paragraph, en passant, to give any correct notion of the variety of material, in History, Biography, Lliterature, and Society, which is contained in this single volume. Mr. Savage is a bold, free, unaffected writer—earnest, eager, impetuous.—Charleston Courier.

With O'Connell the writer has but little sympathy; he maintains that his whole career was a "brilliant error."—Ch'n. Sec'y. Hartford.

Ought to find a place in the library of every reader.—Constitution, Boston.

An exceedingly well written history of the Irish Revolution.—Phila. Evening Mail.

Those who desire in a compact and convenient form all that is known of the United Irishmen, will find in this book a clear and accurate history.—Phila. Despatch.

Post Office, New-York, January 2, 1847.—In consequence of the large number of affidavits required in the competition for the advertisement of the list of uncalled for letters, the time for receiving evidence as to the circulation during the four weeks ending January 3, 1857, of papers claiming the same, has been extended until 12 o'clock, on Monday, the 12th day of January, inst. Evidence in contradiction of that presented in support of any claim will be received until 12 o'clock on Thursday, the 22d day of January.

I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c.—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

PAGES OF ITS HISTORY—By HENRY DE COURCY, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by JOHN GILMARY SHEA.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McCloskey, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844 "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $180; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL — Every alternate Wednesday.
FROM PHILADELPHIA — Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $80; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19ly Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS' BANK.

NEW-YORK, December 22, 1856.

Dividend Notice.—Depositors are hereby notified that a semi-annual Dividend, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, on all sums of $500 and under, and five per cent per annum on all sums of over $500, that shall have been deposited at least Three Months on the 1st of January next, will be paid to Depositors on and after Monday, Jan. 21. Interest not called for will be carried to the credit of Depositors, as Principal. The Bank is open for business daily from 10 A. M. to 2 P.M. and from 5 to 7 P. M., at No. 51 Chambers st., East of Broadway.

JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. [2t dec27] JOSEPH STUART, Pres't.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 652 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap19ly Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.

☞ All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 13 tf

A Lady, M. D., Oculist and Aurist, Restores Blindness, Amaurosis and Sore Eyes, of any standing; Removing Cataracts, Scums, Films, &c., without operation or pain. Persons wearing spectacles prematurely, enabled to do without them by recovering the natural tone of the eye. That the worst of cases are cured by her.

May be seen at the Infirmary from 10 A. M., to 2 P. M., No. 679 Sixth Avenue. The poor attended to on Fridays. oct18 3mos

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 31 Park Row,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.

Give him a call by all means. my31 1y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 139 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York, Aug. 18, 1856.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the following ordinance, relative to express wagons, carts, cartmen, &c., &c., having been adopted, its provisions will hereafter be enforced.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

AN ORDINANCE

To amend an Ordinanae entitled "An Ordinance for the licensing, and otherwise regulating the use and employment of express wagons, carts and cartmen, &c., &c., approved by the Mayor June 2, 1851."

The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, in Common Council convened, do ordain as follows:

That section 2 of said Ordinance, relating to carts and cartmen, be amended, so as to read as follows:

SECTION 2.—The Mayor shall from time to time license and appoint so many and such persons as he may think proper, to set up and keep public carts in said city, Provided, that no one person shall be so licensed to keep more than three such public carts.

And he shall also license so many and such persons as he may think proper, to be public cartmen of said city, and he may revoke or suspend any or all such licenses at his pleasure. All persons licensed as foresaid, to keep public carts, shall be deemed to be public cartmen, within the meaning of this Ordinance; but it shall not be lawful for any person to receive or to hold a license to keep public carts, or to be a public cartman, unless he be a citizen of the United States, and resident within the State of New-York, and is the actual owner of the cart or carts, with good horses therefor, so licensed to be kept as public carts; and the Mayor may examine, under oath, all persons applying for or holding any such license, or the renewal thereof, touching their qualifications as aforesaid, and all licences other than to persons so qualified shall be void.

Adopted by the Board of Councilmen, May 9, 1856.
Adopted by the Board of Aldermen, July 15, 1856.
Approved by the Mayor July 30, 1856.

European News.

The Fulton has brought European dates to the 17th ult.

An accident to her machinery had compelled the return to Southampton of the United States mail steamer Hermann, which left that port for New-York, with the English, French, and German mails, on the 3d December. The Hermann encountered the most terrific weather in the Atlantic; the wind blowing a perfect hurricane for most part of the time, and the seas running mountain high. When about 900 or 1,000 miles from Southampton, the vessel laboring heavily, and but just able to make headway against the gale, the centre shaft carrying the side levers of one of the engines broke, and the shock damaged the position of the port engine, entirely disabling it. The ship was thus made completely dependent upon the power of the remaining engine.

It is a most providential circumstance that the perfect discipline prevailing on board the Hermann, and in the engine department, caused this serious disaster to be of no injury to the vessel. The slightest delay in ungearing and stopping the machinery would probably have broken the other engine, and the Hermann would then have been left to the mercy of the waves. As it was, the wreck of the broken machine was quickly disengaged, and the head of the ship put about for Southampton, steaming with one engine driving both paddle-wheels. The Hermann arrived at Southampton on the evening of the 14th ult. The passengers have signed a testimonial to Captain Higgins, expressive of their admiration of the great seamanlike skill, courage and praiseworthy conduct displayed by him throughout the whole of this trying period. The Hermann's mails and passengers were forwarded to their destination by the Fulton; and the valuable cargo, after being surveyed, would be re-shipped by the agents, Messrs. Croskey & Co., with every practicable speed.

Several other mail steamers from Liverpool and Southampton had put back to port damaged during the late violent westerly and southwesterly gales, which had been very destructive in their results.

The controversy respecting the extraordinary story anent "Railways and Revolvers in Georgia," is continued in the London Times, which published the narrative. In that journal of the 13th December, another letter appears from Mr. Arrowsmith, in which he stoutly persists that "the whole of my narrative is substantially true, and that the scenes therein described were but too real." He says:

"Never thinking to publish an account of these scenes, I did not provide myself (as I might have done on the spot) with any evidence; nor did I inquire nor learn the name and address of any of my co-passengers, so as to obtain evidence afterwards; therefore, my assertion stands unsupported."

The old Arctic discovery ship Resolute—recovered by an American whaling ship and presented to the British nation by the United States Congress—arrived at Spithead on the 12th of December, under the command of Capt. Hartstein, of the United States Navy. She was under American colors, but on letting go her anchors the British ensign was run up alongside the American; and on the following day, exchange salutes being fired, the Resolute changed her colors to British. On the morning of the 13th Capt. Hartstein landed at Portsmouth, and paid official visits to Chevalier Papalardo, the United States Vice-Consul, and the military and civil authorities. An invitation to a banquet from the Corporation and inhabitants of Portsmouth has been accepted by the captain and officers, but the day is not yet fixed and every mark of respect has been paid to the American officers.

The Resolute was towed up to Cowes on Monday, the Queen having intimated her wish to pay a visit to the vessel, and the steamship Retribution was also sent up to salute on the occasion, and several gun-boats and other ships were stationed in the roads. The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by some of the royal children, paid their visit about ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, the 16th, the English and American flags flying at the peak of the Resolute, and the royal standard was hoisted at the main as soon as her Majesty stepped on board. Capt. Hartstein received the royal party, the officers being grouped on either side in full uniform.

The following gentlemen assisted in the reception of her Majesty: Mr. T. R. Croskey, United States Consul; Chevalier Vincen Pappalardo, Vice-Consul; Mr. Harding, Vice-Consul for the United States at Cowes; Capt. Higgins, of the United States mail steamer Hermann; and Mr. Cornelius Grinnell, son of the projector of the American Arctic Expedition. Her Majesty, having received a cordial welcome, inspected the vessel, and retired amidst much cheering. An elegant dejeuner was afterwards served in the wardroom, when Capt. Hartstein proposed "The Queen and Royal family," and next, "The President of the United States," which were both drunk with much applause. "The British and American Navies and Armies" were toasted, and Capt. Hartstein's health was drank with loud cheers "The American Consul, Mr. Croskey, and his excellent Vice-Consuls," was responded to by Mr. Croskey in his usual felicitous style, and he concluded by proposing "The Union-Jack and Star-spangled banner," with an appropriate sentiment. Subsequently, Mr. Croskey proposed the health of Mr. Cornelius Grinnell, which that gentleman acknowledged in an eloquent speech. "The future success of the Resolute, and may she be again employed in prosecuting the search of Sir. John Franklin and his comrades," was proposed by Capt. Higgins, and seconded by Mr. Grinnell, and evoked cordial applause. The authorities of Southampton furnished a special steamer for the occasion. Capt. Hartstein was invited to dine and sleep at Osborne, and all the officers were invited to visit the royal grounds—a privilege of which they all availed themselves. The Resolute returned to Portsmouth on the following day.

The Niagara from Liverpool to Halifax on the 20th, brings three days later news than that already received by the Fulton to this port.

It was still supposed that the Congress of Paris would assemsemble before the new year, but nothing official had been stated. Count Walewski, it is said, proposes that some compensation should be given to Russia for the loss of Bolgrad; and Russia proposes to accept a piece of land between the River Tulpuk and one of its tributaries. A Paris despatch says that Austria is the only power that has not yet named a representative to the Congress, but Baron Hubner will probably represent Austria and Baron Bruno Russia.

Transports are being taken up in England for reinforcements to the Indian expedition against Persia. Eight regiments have orders to be in readiness.

Captain Horstein and the officers and crew of the Resolute are to return home in a British ship. From want of time they had to decline invitations to dine with the Geographical Society and other public bodies. Three thousand persons visited the Resolute after the Queen left. The Queen sent £100 to be distributed among the crew.

A great meeting had been held at Birmingham to protest against the continuance of the war income tax. Resolutions were passed that the law in its present form is unjust, oppressive, degrading, and not to be tolerated by a free people.

THE ANGLO-PERSIAN DIFFICULTY.—The following private telegraphic despatches have been received by the London Times:

MARSEILLES, December 10.

"The Journal de Constantinople of the 8th gives the following under the head of 'Serious News:'

"'On the 22nd of November, the Russian General Philipson, retook Soujah Kaleh, and drove out the Circassians after an obstinate resistance. On the following day the same General captured a Turkish brig and eighteen boats, under pretence that their papers were not regular. Some other boats escaped and got into Trebizonde, where the Consuls drew up reports of the affair. A proclamation by Persia accepts the war declared against her by England.

"The English," says the Journal de Constantinople, "have already taken possession of the islands of Ormutz and Karrack. Russian troops are concentrated on the Araxes. The friendly mediation of France is expected.

"TEHERAN, November 7.—There had been great rejoicings on the occasion of the capture of Herat. They were, however, rendered dull by the death of the Prince, presumptive heir to the throne, six years of age. The Shah is profoundly affected by his loss, although he has still two sons.

The Correspondance Havas publishes a curious plan of campaign in case of an intervention by Russia in favor of Persia against England. It is given in a letter from St. Petersburg, of the 7th:

Reports have reached the Minister of War from several of the Generals who command the different detached corps in Asia. It is stated that General Chruleff, who commands the most advanced position has submitted to the Minister a plan of campaign which could be successfully carried out by the troops under his orders. He was waiting, before moving, for the arrival of Prince Baryatinski, who was still occupied in inspecting the new Asiatic frontiers.

"The New Governor-General of all the Caucasian possessions has extended his tour of inspection on the eastern coast of the Caspian Sea, where Russian Generals had already commenced, in the time of the Emperor Nicholas, to erect four or five fortified stations, which will secure to Russia the possesion of that coast.

"All the war-steamers are now fully manned by the arrival of a large body of seamen from the naval ports. This squadron may at any time be used for the conveyance of provisions and military stores and troops stationed at Khiva, and to those who have taken possession of different islands in the Caspian Sea, and who are thus placed in the immediate neighborhood of the Persian port of Asterabad.

"According to the opinion of staff officers who have served in that country, all the military arrangements there have been made with so much order and regularity that the Russian columns may, at the first signal, enter Persia at three points at the same time. The first corps, composed of two divisions of infantry, with artillery and light cavalry, may without difficulty penetrate from Nachitscheran to Choi and Tabriz; the second corps in moving from Bakou, may proceed along the western coast of the Caspian Sea as far as Asterabad, where, supported by the Russian squadron, it would readily cross the fertile plain as far as Herat. The third corps may penetrate the Khorassan and into Khiva. These strategic combinations have been prepared from the first moment that information was received at St. Petersburg of the project of England on Persia.

On the other hand, a letter from St. Petersburg, of the same date, in the Borsenhalle, of Hamburg, says:

"The statement made by several foreign journals of a convention having been concluded between Persia and Russia, by which the latter is bound to assist the former, is completely unfounded. Neither is it true that there are Russian officers in the service of Persia.

"The two officers, MM. Duhamel, stated by the journals to be with the Persian army before Herat, are now in this capital, one in the Senate, and the other unemployed. The military movements made by Russia are solely confined to placing a corps of observation on the Persian frontier.

The Corriere Mercantile, of Genoa, has the following extract of a private letter from Messina, dated November 29:—"It is generally believed here that the movement has not been suppressed, but that, on the contrary, it is spreading through the districts of the interior. An expected insurrection is talked of at Castro Giovanni, a central point in the island. It is also said that several regiments of soldiery have joined the insurgents in the neighborhood of Cattoni Setta. Revolutionary proclamations have been placarded at Catania."

A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Konigsberg Journal states that it is understood in St. Petersburg that Gen. Birjuloff, who commands the troops on the Russo-Persian frontier, has received orders to enter Persia with 50,000 men at the first requisition made to him by the Shah of Persia. At the same time it is said that two corps d'armee have been set in motion towards the Austrian frontier. The correspondent then says, as a comment of his own on this statement, that Russia cannot look on as a passive spectator of the bold steps the British Government is taking towards Persia, or on the tergiversations of Austria; and that it will not be Russia's fault if new warlike complications arise. The conviction that the Anglo-Gallic alliance is at its last extremities gains, he says, additional strength from observing the trouble the English press takes to be friendly with Austria; as a military power on land is necessary for England to fall back on to enable her to act boldly in the East, she is now seeking on the Danube what she has lost on the Seine.

The Augsburger Allgemeine Zeitung contains a communication, dated from the Polish frontier, which in some degree corroborates the statement of the movement of the Russian forces southward and eastward. It states, that the entire Russian army, which has hitherto been stationed in the south, is not only to remain there during the Winter, but also a considerable portion of it is to be moved further southward to the frontier of Bessarabia and the coast of the Black Sea. There is also a considerable movement of troops going on across the Don, for the purposes of strengthening the corps d'armee in Orenburg, which, it is generally understood, is destined to cross the Caspian Sea to Persia, for the purpose of protecting the Shah against European as well as Asiatic foes. Travelers coming from Astrakhan mention that the flotilla of the Caspian Sea is so numerous and so well appointed that it could, in a very short space of time, transport a whole corps d'armee to the close vicinity of Teheran.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In consequence of the statements made by Sir Robert Peel at a dinner at Stafford, Sir Charles Napier wrote to Lord Plamerston requesting a formal investigation. This was declined, but a friendly letter was sent him, expressing regret at the Admiral's epistolary and oratorical indiscretion. Lord Palmerston acquiesced in his judgment as to the inadvisability of attacking Cronstradt in 1854. A letter from the Grand Duke Constantine is also published, stating that he never uttered a word about Cronstadt to Sir Robert Peel.

From the end of the last month Gretna-green marriages and border marriages will be prevented. By an act of last session, it is provided that after the 31st of December no irregular marriage contracts in Scotland by declaration, acknowledgement, or ceremony, shall be valid unless one of the parties had at the date thereof his or her usual place of residence there, or had lived in Scotland for twenty-one days next preceding such marriage.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy, who had been training a set of young men in London for electric telegraph purposes, takes out to India, it is said, twenty-four such assistants at salaries ranging between £300 and £400 a year. Twenty were appointed—four more are wanted.

The Directors of the Royal Bank have given, as a recognition of the efficient services of their deputy manager, Mr. John North, an increase of salary of £200 a year. The salary of Mr. North is now £500 per annum.

The India mail brings news of the proclamation of war against Persia. The last division of the British fleet left Bombay on the 15th November. 5,000 troops were to occupy Karrack and Bushiro. The whole of India was profoundly tranquil.

The Congress of Paris, with the second Plenipotentiaries was to meet between the 20th and 25th of December. It was believed that everything would be arranged beforehand on the Bolgrad and Isle of Serpents questions.

From Constantinople, under date of Dec. 8, we learn that the Persian government had issued a proclamation recognizing the English proclamation of the declaration of war. The British have taken the Islands of Ormutz and Karrack.

Cholera has re-appeared in Scotland, on the banks of the North Canal, exactly as it did in 1832, by importation from Hamburgh, where it now prevails.

The idea for fortifying Sebastopol is again renewed, and Gen. Totdleben is mentioned as the officer who will be entrusted with the drawing up of the plans.

Many coach-builders in Paris are now busily employed in preparing sledges, which, it would appear, are to be the fashion this winter, provided there is snow enough to render them available.

A telegraphic despatch from Corfu states that the Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands had dissolved the Parliament.

Berlin letters assert that the marriage of Prince Frederick William of Prussia is to take place on the 21st of November next, the day on which the Princess Royal of England completes her seventeenth year.

The Duke of Ossuna, charged with a diplomatic mission extraordinary from Spain, arrived at St. Petersburgh on the 9th of December.

The London Times has an article on President Pierce's message, which it considers, on the whole, as "conciliatory both in matter and manner."

At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society of London, on the 15th December, Dr. Livingstone was presented with the Society's gold medal for his discoveries in Central Africa.

The quarrel between the Spanish government and the King of Prussia is said to have gone so far that the next step, unless prevented by powerful intervention, can only be actual hostility.

"Baron Nathan," the celebrated Master of the Ceremonies, at Rosherville Gardens, is dead.

Harrison, the Leeds Wizard, has been sentenced to four years' penal servitude, for bigamy.

The murderer of Cope, in London, Robert Marley, was hung at the Old Bailey on the 15th of December.

The new Turkish Ministry had been constituted, with Reschid Pacha as Grand Vizier.

Great severities are said to be practised on the political prisoners at Neufchatel.

Milano, the soldier who attempted to assassinate the King of Naples, was hanged on the morning of the 13th December.

The Russian general, Philipson, has re-taken Soujouk Kaleh from the Circassians, after a gallant defence.

The English Parliament is to meet for business on the 3d of February next.

It is stated that Mr. Gladstone will supersede Mr. Disraeli in the leadership of the opposition in the House of Commons.

Mr. George Holden, favorably known to the musical world, died at Liverpool on the 8th ult.

Mr. Andrews, the Mayor of Southampton, and candidate for the borough, is dangerously ill.

The appeal of Archdeadon Denison has been registered in the Arches Court.

The price of wheat in Spain continues to advance in spite of the efforts to keep it down.

Mr. R. H. Horne, author of "Orion," is a candidate for a seat in the Legislative Chamber of Victoria.

The navigation of the Baltic was re-opened on the 14th Dec., and several ships released from the ice.

The Debats announces the death of M. de Salvany.

As Mr. William Quinn, farmer, of Tinlough, near Granny Castle, was proceeding homewards from the fair of Waterford on the 1st ult., with a servant boy driving three cows, he was waylaid by a man who jumped over the demesne wall of Mullinabro', near Newrath, and felled him. The man was robbed of a Bank Cheque for £73—£18 in silver and notes escaped. As the servant boy returned from driving the cows to the scene of the attack, the robber decamped, and Quin, who died on the Thursday following was helped home by the boy and some friends.

The action for libel brought by Dr. Pierce of Newcastle, against R. Ellis, Esq., of Abbeyfeal will be tried at the county Limerick assizes.

American News.

Governors of the States and Territories.

FOR THE YEAR 1857.

States.	Governors.	Term Exp's.	Sal's.
Alabama	John A. Winston	Dec., 1857	$2,500
Arkansas	Elias N. Conway	Nov., 1858	1,800
California	J. Neely Johnson	Dec., 1857	10,000
Connecticut	Wm. T. Minor	May, 1857	1,100
Delaware	Peter F. Clausey	Jan., 1858	1,333
Florida	M. S. Perry	Oct., 1858	1,500
Georgia	Herschel V. Johnson	Nov., 1857	3,000
Illinois	Wm. H. Bissell	Jan., 1859	1,500
Indiana	A. P. Willard	Jan., 1859	1,400
Iowa	James W. Grimes	Dec., 1857	1,000
Kentucky	Charles S. Morehead	Aug., 1857	2,500
Louisiana	R. C. Wickliffe	Jan., 1858	6,000
Maine	Samuel Wells	Jan., 1858	1,500
Maryland	T. Watkins Ligon	Jan., 1858	3,600
Massachusetts	Henry J. Gardner	Jan., 1858	3,500
Michigan	K. S. Bingham	Jan., 1859	1,500
Mississippi	John J. McRea	Jan., 1858	3,000
Missouri	Trusten Polk	Dec., 1858	2,000
New Hampshire	Ralph Metcalf	June, 1857	1,000
New Jersey	Wm. A. Newell	Jan., 1859	1,800
New-York	John A. King	Jan., 1859	4,000
North Carolina	Thomas Bragg	Jan., 1859	2,000
Ohio	Salmon P. Chase	Jan., 1858	1,800
Pennsylvania	James Pollock	Jan., 1858	3,000
Rhode Island	Wm. W. Heppin	May, 1857	1,000
South Carolina	R. F. W. Alison	Dec., 1858	3,500
Tennessee	Andrew Johnson	Oct., 1857	2,000
Texas	E. M. Pease	Dec., 1857	3,000
Vermont	Ryland Fletcher	Oct., 1857	750
Virginia	Henry A. Wise	Jan., 1860	5,000
Wisconsin	Coles Bashford	Dec., 1857	1,250
Territories.
Oregon	William L. Currie	Term expires with a change of administration.	3,000
Minnesota	Willis A. Gorman		2,500
New Mexico	David Merriwether		2,500
Utah	Brigham Young		2,500
Washington	Isaac J. Stevens		2,500
Nebraska	Mark W. Izard		2,600
Kansas	John W. Geary		2,500

The inauguration of the new State officers took place in the hall of the capitol, at 10 o'clock, on New Year's morning. The State government is as follows :—

Names.	Salary.
John A. King, Governor, Jamaica, Queen's county	$4,000
Henry R. Selden, Lt. Gov., Rochester, Monroe county, per day	—
Joel T. Headley, Secretary of State	2,500
Lorenzo Burrows, Comptroller,	2,500
Stephen Clark, Treasurer	2,500
Stephen B. Cushing, Attorney General	2,000
Victor M. Rice, Superintendent Public Instruction	2,500
Silas Seymour, Surveyor and Engineer	2,500
James M. Cook, Superintendent Bank Department	2,500
Nathaniel S. Benton, Canal Auditor	2,500
Henry Fitzhugh, Canal Commissioner	2,000
Samuel S. Wallon, Canal Commissioner	2,000
Charles B. Sherrill, Canal Commissioner	2,000
Norwood Bowne, State Prison Inspector	1,600
William A. Russell, State Prison Inspector	1,600
Wesley R. Blaisdell, State Prison Inspector	1,600
Ashbel B. Parmelee, Canal Appraiser	$4 per day and 5c. per mile for travel.
Henry H. Hull, Canal Appraiser
William Wasson, Canal Appraiser
N. P. Stanton, Jr., Deputy Secretary of State	$1,500
Philip Phelps, Deputy Comptroller	1,500
E. Peshine Smith, Deputy Sup. of Public Instruction	1,500
L. L. Doty, Deputy Treasurer	1,500
Alfred B. Street, State Librarian	1,000
Silas Seymour, Railroad Commissioner	—
William J. McAlpine, Railroad Commissioner	—
James B. Swain, Railroad Commissioner	—

The former being State Engineer and Surveyor is allowed $500 per year travelling expenses; Mr. McAlpine is elected by the Railroad Commissioners, and Mr. Swain appointed by the Governor and Senate; each of the two latter receive $2,500 salary and $500 for travelling expenses, paid by the Railroad Companies.

The Santa Fe mail arrived at Independence on the 20th inst. Mining operations in New Mexico were progressing favorably. Heavy snows were experienced on the Plains. Bent's Fort was attacked by the Kiowa Indians, and but for the interference of the Cheyennes would have been destroyed. The Kiowas gave the mail train much trouble. Captain Dodge, Agent of the Navajos, had been taken prisoner by the Apaches. Many Indian depredations are reported.

The total receipts of flour, wheat and corn at the port of Oswego, for 1856, have been: Flour, 184,143 barrels; wheat, 3,437,927 bushels; corn, 3,543,521 bushels. The total receipts of grain and flour, reduced to wheat, foot up, 13,612,497 bushels, which is an increase of 3,030,106 bushels over last year, and 7,183,739 bushels over the year 1854.

On the 30th ult. the Senate confirmed the nomination of General Persifer F. Smith to the Brigadiership created originally for General Shields. On the same day the House passed the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill, having previously struck out the item of twenty-five thousand dollars for the education of consular pupils.

Bishop Doane, of New Jersey, has instituted a shorter service in addition to the usual evening and morning prayer, which Service includes the magnificat and the Nunc Dimittis; the former, the Song of the Virgin Mary as given by St. Luke, and the latter the song of Simeon, as also given by St. Luke.

William Shimmin, Esq., a gentleman long known in Boston as a merchant of the old school, died suddenly on the afternoon of Dec. 20, at his residence in Beacon street, at the age of 79. He came to Boston sixty years ago. He engaged in the China trade in connection with the late David Sears.

Oregon dates are to the 26th of November. There is scarcely an item of moment. Leschi, a noted Indian warrior, had been captured in Washington Territory. There had been considerable rain in the Territory of Oregon.

A man named Berry, was arrested in Paterson last week, and fined five dollars for cursing and swearing. He has appealed to the County Court, giving bonds of security for the prosecution of the case.

Hon. Francis C. Gray, a distinguished citizen of Boston, died at his residence in Park street on the 29th ult.

NICARAGUA.

The N. Y. Herald of the 31st ult., publishes the following interesting matter:

SAN JUAN, Nov. 18, 1856.

The last time I wrote to you I stated that the war was over in this State and that we would have to go to other States to get a fight. Since then I have had occasion to change my mind. For some time we had constant rumors of the enemy beng about to attack us; and when the last passengers arrived Gen. Walker sent about 200 soldiers down to protect them. But everything passed off quietly and we had become careless when the following communication was handed to me:

VANGUARD DIVISION OF THE ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC OF COSTA RICA.

To the Commander of the force, if any, or to the authorities of San Juan del Sud, November 7th, 1856, 4 o'clock, P. M.

"SIR—Within twenty minutes this division will occupy that post. Yourself and your command will be protected, and likewise the inhabitants, provided not one single shot be fired against my troops. If you allow any shot to be fired against me, I will not give protection to anybody. Your obedient servant,

"JOSE M. CANAS."

To the above I paid no farther attention than to bring my broadside to bear on the beach, when about half an hour later I received the following communication from Geo. H. Rozit, commercial agent United States, Nicaragua:

"SIR—I have just returned from Gen. Canas and Col. Bosquet. They have between 500 and 600 men, with artillery, and are now in possession of the Plaza. They wish me to communicate with you to the effect that if you surrender the schooner without firing a shot, the citizens will be protected, if not, they cannot answer for the result."

To this I replied:

"SIR—You may say to Canas and Bosquet that if they had come to the lower part of the town I would have fought them. But as I have not the prospect of driving them from the town, and as they promise protection if I do not fire upon them, I will leave the port. As to the surrender of the schooner, General Walker placed her in my hands, and I will surrender her to none but him. Your obedient servant,

"C. Y. FAYSSOUX."

Having waited until night set in, and having taken a number of citizens on board, and hearing nothing further from on shore, I let go my moorings and drifted out of the harbor. At 2 P. M., the 8th inst., being in the mouth of the harbor, I received the following note accompanied by a proclamation from the enemy, to the effect that all citizens who gave up their arms should be protected:

"DEAR SIR—We have assurance from high authority that the citizens of this place will be protected in the event of your not coming into the harbor. For the sake of humanity I pray you to keep off, or else we may perish. Your obedient servant,

"GEORGE H. ROZIT.

"N. B.—All have given up their arms."

To this I replied, that not having the power to protect them, I would not come in; but requested it to be stated to the commanding officer, that I would hold no communication with him.

On the morning of the 10th inst., I was close enough to see the enemy sending a large number of men out of town. I have since learned that Gen. Hornsby marched against their barracks on the Transit road that same morning, and had a little brush with them. On the morning of the 11th I ran into the mouth of the harbor, and caused, as usual, great confusion among the enemy. They several times hoisted a white flag, which I answered first with my colors and then with a white flag: but they would not send a boat off. Two or three times I was in reach of them; but would not fire first, for fear of compromising the citizens. The Consul told me that they asked him to haul down the American flag and hoist up the white to induce me to come in—saying, they wanted to fool the Yankees. But when I came within reach, they were ready enough to run away. On the morning of the 12th, we issued our last bread for breakfast. About 11 o'clock I perceived signs of confusion on shore, and headed in. The wind was too light to make much headway, and before I could get within reach, I saw the rascals running from the bushes in every direction and forming on the beach. If a little breeze had sprung up I could have had something more to say. When they had formed, they filed off through a small trail, and were not all gone when Walker's mounted men were after them, but could not overtake them. As near as I could estimate, there were about 400, who fled before Walker with but 250 men, through mountain passes which, in their natural state, could have been defended by 100 American schoolboys against a thousand soldiers.

Gen. Walker's reception of me was kind, and his approval of my entire conduct, in his mild, calm manner, was truly gratifying. I am rather proud to say he has in all instances, treated me with consideration, and seems to place confidence in me.

The Costa Ricans are the most civilized and honorable men in Central America. When they received my answer to the demand to surrender the schooner, they said they regretted my not surrendering, as three large vessels of theirs, well armed, and filled with troops and provisions, were on their way up, who would certainly not spare me. I also received several messages to look out for them, but they are not yet in sight. Having had the foremast of my schooner shattered by lightning, I had just succeeded in taking it out and repairing it when the enemy arrived at San Juan.

SAN JUAN, Nov. 26, 1856.

On Sunday last, the 23d, I saw a sail outside the harbor; at 4 P. M., directly after having seen her, I hove up my anchor, hoisted my flag and stood out for her. At 5,45 she hoisted Costa Rican colors; at 6, being within four hundred yards of her, she fired round shot and musketry at me; I kept the weather guage of her during the fight, with the exception of once for about ten minutes, when in raking her I fell to leeward. The result will prove to you that I beat him at the guns as well as in the management of my vessel. The greater part of the time his guns were useless from the position that I kept. It was as close and pretty a fight as could well take place—my little craft, officers and men, doing as well as any could do. We were 28 all told. The "Little Beauty," 84 tons, guns two six-pounders; the enemy's brig was about 250 tons, crew 114 men, with four nine-pounders. It was a glorious sight to see her flying through the air, but most horrible to see and hear the poor fellows struggling and crying to Gen. Walker to save them. We had but one small boat, with which we saved the captain and forty of the crew which were all we could pick up. Every attention was paid to them.

Lieut Vanslycke, who boarded the wreck 20 minutes before she sunk, and looked into her hold; said it was a horrible sight to see the wounded and burned lying there without the power to save them; she floated for one hour after she blew up and was burning nearly all the time. The boat could bring but one load from her—the captain and four men—the others were all taken from the water. Seventy-three were killed and drowned. I lost but one man killed and eight wounded—one of whom has since died, the rest are all right. My sails and rigging were cut up a little, but the hull was not injured. Some of the men who had been in the most desperate fights on shore said that they had never heard so many balls flying about. We appeared to have charmed lives. It was certainly most singular that so few were hit. The enemy say that nearly all our shot hit them, and that they were cut to pieces and sinking. The captain says it being night that he did not know how to surrender, or he would have done so. Five of the enemy have since died; three or four more will die, so at least eighty will have been killed by my little crew.

LA VIRGIN, Nov. 24, 1856.

CAPTAIN—Your despatch is just received. You have the thanks of the whole army for the gallant manner in which you have acted. In consequence of the action you are promoted Captain. Your commission to date from yesterday.

The wounded prisoners you will put ashore under the care of Dr. Flin, at the expense of Nicaragua. I will send over a detachment this afternoon or to-night to receive the other prisoners. If you have any recommendations for promotions send them to me. As for more men, you had better come over and make your own selections.

Your obedient servant.

WM. WALKER.

Yesterday I went over; the General came out to meet me in the street, and said to me that the whole army thanked me, that I had done more for the state than any other officer in it. He invited me to dine with him. At table he offered me wine, I refused; he made no remark at that time, but some time after he rose and said:—Gentlemen, as the Captain does not drink, I propose that we drink his health for his late gallant action.

GENERAL ORDER.

1st. In the name of the republic of Nicaragua, the Commander-in-Chief returns thanks to Capt. Cal. J. Faysouxs, Nicaragua Navy, for his gallant conduct on the 23d November—and the President, in the name of the republic, bestows on him the estate of "Rosario" in acknowledgement of his important services. By command of WILLIAM WALKER, General Commanding in Chief.

By the same order James Hersey was promoted Captain; Ewing Morgan, 2d Lieutenant; Samuel Rosseau as Corporal.

The citizens of San Juan had a restless night; they saw us engage and fight; then night set in, they could see the firing, but but could not tell which was getting worsted. When she blew up they were nearly frantic, for they had heard me say that I never would let her be taken, that if I was whipped that I would blow her up. Early in the evening they sent to General Walker to say we were engaged; from that time until daylight couriers were frequently sent back and forth, bets were offered freely on me, although the Governadore, a weak man, had sent over at one o'clock at night there could be no doubt of it being my vessel that had blown up. In saying that the Bowleys stuck by me I say everything; he tried to get to me at night, but could not, but was the first man on board in the morning. She had breakfast and comforts for us all. I wish you knew them; none of the people of '76 were greater patriots than they both are—willing to sacrifice life and property. If I had been whipped every person admits the cause would have met a great check, none see it more clearly than the General; all supplies and communication with California cut off. General Canas had expressed a determination to seize the steamer. Should the brig have done so it would have been awful. The citizens were all getting ready to leave the place expecting the brig to come in and blow the town down I believe that I am generally liked both here and in the army. The brig will be a great loss to the enemy; and had money, ammunition, provisions, &c., for the army. At the close of the action I had left nine round shot, five canister, four chain shot—eighteen in in all; pretty, close was it not? I saw my shot diminishing very fast, took care not to throw away one; I came to the conclusion to use my ballast when they were all gone, but fortunately I had enough.

R. J. Downer, in the fight acted nobly: he sighted the gun that blew up the enemy; he is slightly wounded, a minie ball hit him on the leg; he will be on duty in two or three days; say that his general conduct has been good since he has been with me, that his father may be proud of his bravery. My estate is valued at $14,000, in this country a fortune. General Hornsby will take these letters to you; he has been a warm friend to me since I came to this country; he can tell you all many little particulars that I cannot write. I hope that you may get acquainted with him; he has many great and good points that require intimacy to bring out. I have many friends here that rejoice at my great success, but I know that none do half as much as my own dear mother.

The Sydney Freeman's Journal, referring to the return of Smith O'Brien to Ireland, says:—"The last mail brought us glad tidings! Our distinguished and patriotic countryman, Wm. Smith O'Brien, is about to be restored to his native land and beloved family. This act of imperial jnstice, although performed at the eleventh hour and with very little imperial grace, will, nevertheless, give very great satisfaction to every liberal and enlightened man, not only throughout the British empire, but in every part of the civilized world. Although Smith O'Brien did not see the bright dream of his life realised—his country free: although Erin still lies under the gloom of the old dark cloud; we cannot do him the injustice of ignoring his high and holy purposes—his glorious bold attempt—his remarkable honesty, honor, and consistency. He will return to old Ireland again; he will return, and his native land will receive him as the truest and the noblest of all the martyrs—Robert Emmet alone excepted—that have in the first half of the nineteenth century suffered in her glorious cause; he will return, and may God's blessing and his country's welcome; Heaven's protection and his country's enduring gratitude await and reward him! Would Smith O'Brien exchange his niche in the temple of history for that of his traitor Honor Judge Keogh? Would he? The right answer to this questions—uch a one as we should give—conveys an excellent lesson.

Lord Hawarden, Lieut. Col. Tipperary, L. I., has presented sergeant-major Martin Ryan, of that regiment, with a handsome gold watch, valued at 25*l*., and acting sergeant-major William McMahon, of the same corps, with a beautiful silver teapot, worth 15*l*., as a token of the esteem and regard in which they were held by the officers, all of whom, from the Lieut. Colonel down to the junior Ensign, subscribed towards the purchase of those articles.

Irish News.

A respectable farmer, named Rody M'Grath, says the Tipperary Free Press, entered the office of John Luther, Esq., J. P., and used exceedingly violent language towards that gentleman, who is land agent to Col. Hamerton, under whom M'Grath holds his farm. Mr. Luther having a farm to set at Clover Hill, M'Grath's brother tendered for it, but a gentleman from this town became the tenant, in consequence of which, prior to M'Grath's visit to his office, Mr. Luther had received three letters, threatening him with the vengeance of the writers, and vowing to shoot him in the open day. M'Grath was bound to the peace next morning, and in consequence of his conduct a search was instituted in his house, and such discoveries made as led to the arrest of his son, a young man holding a situation in the Excise, who was committed for trial to the next assizes, on a charge of being the writer of the letters, which bore respectively the signatures of "James Burke," "A real friend," and "A poor widow." Bail was tendered and accepted for his appearance, and he was forthwith liberated.

The statistical returns of Irish agriculture, as published by Government, show the breadth of land under flax in Ireland in 1856, as 106,826 acres, against 97,192 in 1855, being an increase of 9,684 acres, or ten per cent. The produce of fibre from this year's crop may be calculated at 27,000 tons, value £1,350,000 exclusive of the seed. The crop has been generally productive, and the fibre long and strong, with but a small proportion of the finer qualities. The period at which the treaty of peace was ratified was so far advanced in the season, that many farmers had already devoted land to different crops, which might otherwise have been sown with flax. The high prices for grain, which had prevailed throughout the war, did not immediately give way to such an extent as to induce farmers to diminish the breadth of their cultivation of the cereals. But for these two causes, the increase in the flax cultivation this year would, there can be but little doubt, have been more considerable.

On Thursday, (the 4th ult.), says the Cork Constitution, an order came down from Dublin, directing the re-embodiment of the Royal Cork City Artillery. The order for the re-embodiment of the North Cork Rifles arrived some days since. Placards have been extensively circulated calling on young men to join the ranks of the two regiments. Recruiting has been actively going on for the past few days. Each recruit is to receive £6 bounty, of which 10s. will be handed to him on attestation, and any party bringing a recruit, receives 5s. if the recruit is approved of. The standard for the North Cork Rifles is 5 feet 5 inches, and no recruit can be received under 18 years of age. The number of men required to make up the complement, is 350 for the North Cork Rifles, and 150 for the Royal Cork City Artillery.

Colonel Herbert, M.P., Lieutenant of this county, says the Kerry Post, has received instructions from the government to take immediate steps for completing the Kerry Regiment to its full establishment, of 1,232 men of all ranks. From the prestige obtained by our county corps during its recent embodiment, and the high character it won for itself both in this and the sister island, we have no doubt but that volunteers will now be forthcoming to fill up its ranks. Between the 17th November, 1854, and the period of its embodiment on the 15th of August, 1856, the Kerry Regiment enrolled 1,037 volunteers; of those 378 transferred their services to the line; thirty-six were discharged as unfit for service, and nine died, leaving the strength of the corps when disembodied, 560 men. It now requires 672 volunteers to make up its established quota of 1,232 men.

Whether well-founded or otherwise, rumors are very prevalent at this side of the channel to the effect that, in consequence of some ministerial "movements" now all but matured, an important change is about to be made in the Irish government. The report is, that the Earl of Carlisle and Lord Granville are to change places, and that Mr. Horsman will vacate the chief secretaryship for Ireland, and be succeeded by Viscount Castlerosse, M.P. for the county of Kerry, who moved the address in answer to the Queen's Speech at the opening of the session of 1854. However qualified the representative of England at the late coronation of the Czar may be for the office of Viceroy of Ireland, the removal of Lord Carlisle would be regarded with much disfavor by all classes and parties in the country, and very justly so.

The marble monument subscribed by his fellow-citizens to the memory of this gallant young officer, Mr. Kidd, says the Armagh Guardian, has just been fixed in Armagh Cathedral. The design is very chaste, being confined to the simple incident of the day on which he lost his life. It will be remembered that he had passed through the terrific fire of the Redan, brought half his company back to the trenches, the remainder being left under the walls; that after he had returned to the trenches, he saw a comrade lying in an open space, ran to bring him in, and when in the act of stooping over him, fell a victim to a Russian bullet. It is in this act and attitude Mr. Kidd is represented on the monument, the effect being well preserved by the sculptor.

Colonel Wynne, Government Railway Inspector, has inspected minutely the locality of the Dunkitt "sliding," where the recent accident occurred. What his report to the Government on the subject will be is, of course, not known. Meantime, Hunter, the efficient and intrepid engine driver, whose jaw was broken, has so far recovered the shock which he sustained, as to be in a condition to bear removal home to Kilkenny. There can be no doubt that the passengers by the mail train on the day of the fatal collision owe the preservation of their lives to the coolness and energetic exertions of this brave fellow.

Colonel Doyle, Inspector-General of the militia staff in Ireland, inspected the permanent staff of the Cavan militia, under the command of the Adjutant, Casselin, at the county barracks, Cavan, on the 3d ult., and having made a minute inspection, individually, of its members, expressed himself highly gratified with the thoroughly efficient state in which he found it, together with the extremely neat and orderly manner the stores of the regiment were arranged and kept.

During the last week of November, a shooting party at Besborough Park, Piltown, consisting of the Earl of Besborough, his lordship's brothers, Lords Frederick and Walter Ponsonby and Henry W. Briscoe, Esq., Tinvane-house, had excellent sport over the earl's extensive preserves; they bagged an unusually large number of pheasants. Lord Walter one evening got four otters in a main drain at Gurtarush.

It is intended to keep the troops encamped at the Curragh during the winter-months, and orders have been given to make the huts perfectly watertight, and coat the asphalted roofs with tar, &c.

Sir William Brooke O'Shaughnessy, says the Dublin Freeman, our distinguished countryman, on whom her Majesty has just conferred the honor of knighthood, is a native of Limerick, and obtained the appointment of Assistant Surgeon in the East India Company's Service in 1830, nearly at the same time he became physician to Sir Charles (afterwards Lord) Metcalf, Governor of Agra. A medical college having been established in Calcutta for the education of natives, he was appointed its professor of chemistry. His taste and genius being directed to scientific pursuits, he acquired a distinction that at once pointed him out as the fittest person to superintend the laying down the electric telegraph, when it was decided to extend to India the advantages of that discovery. Accordingly, in 1850, a line was laid under his directions from Calcutta to Diamond Harbor, at the mouth of the Ganges, from which the mercantile body of that city derived so much benefit that they presented him with a sum of £2,000, and, as he was then proceeding to London, requested he would sit for his portrait to one of the first artists at their expense—it is now in their council chamber. Under the direction of the Governor General, he has since completed telegraph lines from the seat of government to all the Presidencies. It is curious to observe, notwithstanding the taunts of the English press, how quickly Celtic energy and genius are re-occupying the position from which they were hurled by oppressive and penal laws, now that they can enter the list with any other race on a clear stage, whether at home, in the East, or in the West. Sir Wm. Brooke O'Shaughnessy is an instance of this. He is a descendant of one of the most ancient and illustrious of the old Irish families, who possessed a large territory in the counties of Clare and Galway up to the time of William the Third, but were held to have forfeited them in consequence of their fidelity to King James. Sir Roger O'Shaughnessy, who held a commission in the army of James, and whose portrait is exhibited amongst their family portraits in the gallery of the Ormonds at Kilkenny, was the last possessor of the Loughcooter estates near Gort, having left Ireland for France after the treaty of Limerick, with the army of James, and died there. The estates were held by the crown for some years, until an occasion arose on which it was necessary to bestow a suitable reward. There was a conspiracy to assassinate William at Kensington, called the Kensington Plot, which was discovered, and, perhaps, William's life saved, by a Mr. Prendergast, whom Macaulay describes to be a Roman Catholic gentleman of good family in the south of England. He was rewarded with a grant of the O'Shaughnessy estates. His son, who was created a baronet, Sir Thomas Prendergast, having died without male issue, they descended to Lord Gort through the female line. These estates have recently passed from that family through the Incumbered Estates Court to Lord Gough. We understand Sir William is now engaged in carrying out, by directions of the East India Company, a direct line of communication from London to Calcutta.

On the 4th ult. seven individuals were lodged by the constabulary in the Bridewell of Ballinasloe, charged with the homicide of a peaceable and inoffensive man, named Patrick Smith, a small farmer residing at a place called Addergoole, contiguous to the river Suck, and near Daly's Grove. It appears that the deceased, accompanied by a young man, an acquaintance, left the fair of Ahascreagh on Monday evening about eight o'clock, and on arriving at the demesne of Castlegar they were attacked by seven men, five of them named M'Dermott, and two named Mitchell. Smith and his companion bravely withstood this assault for some time, until they were joined by some other friends leaving the fair, by whose aid they succeeded in giving the M'Dermott faction the worst of it. Smith was still a mile from home, and to avoid further altercation he took refuge in the house of his father-in-law, which was close at hand, and remained there until after 12 o'clock, and he was here joined by his wife, who felt anxious at his lengthened absence. Thinking the coast clear the party left, but before they had proceeded far the M'Dermotts, who had been lying in ambush, rushed out and inflicted a fearful beating, with bludgeons and stones, on Smith and his wife. The poor woman who is near her confinement, in attempting to protect and assist her husband, was fearfully abused, and severely injured. One of the assaulting party at length exclaimed, "not to kill the man out," and having raised him from the ground carried him to an adjoining house, but as he entered a blow from a heavy weapon fractured his skull, and he lingered only until the next day, when death terminated his sufferings.

Immense supplies of sprats, herrings, haak, cod, &c., says the Waterford News, have been sold during the past fortnight at our Fish Market and Quays, at exceedingly low prices. Great quantities of the same are shipped daily by steamers to England. This unexpected take of fish on our coast is a great source of profit to our hardy and industrious fishermen and families, as well as to the consumers.

The Dublin Freeman says that the mortal remains of the late John Bagnall were conveyed on Sunday from his town residence, Mary's Abbey, to the family burial place at Celbride, and were there interred in the presence of a large assemblage of clergy, members of the corporation, poor law boards, and public and private friends of the deceased.

John Aloysius Blake, Esq., is unanimously elected Mayor of Waterford for 1857—the third year in succession of his holding the office. The annals of the mayoralty of Waterford, extending over five hundred years, present only one other instance of a similar occurrence. It took place in 1692, Doctor Kane has been elected Mayor of Limerck. A resolution adopting the rotatory system has been agreed to, so that both political branches of the corporation will be alternately represented in the civic chair.

John M'Gowan, Esq., has been re-elected Mayor of Sligo.

Captain Edmond Power Lalor, of Longorchard, has been appointed High Sheriff of the county Tipperary.

The Lord Chancellor has been pleased to appoint O'Connell Fitzsimon, Esq., Glancullen, to the commission of the peace for the county Dublin.

Captain Shawe Taylor, Sir T. Burke, M. P., and T. Burke, Esq., of Annagh, are the purchasers of the Gregory estate, sold by private contract.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant has appointed Captain Fitzgerald Higgins, of Westport, to the shrievalty of Mayo.

Alderman D. Smithwick has been elected Mayor of Kilkenny for the ensuing year.

Dr. John Coghlan has been unanimously elected Mayor of Wexford for the ensuing year.

Edmond Casey, Esq, has been appointed a deputy Lieutenant for the county Dublin.

Mr. Keirnan, who died at Kingstown, has left large sums to several Catholic institutions at Dublin and Kingstown.

Sir Fitzroy Kelly, it is announced, has been already retained for the petitioners in the appeal to the House of Lords against the judgment of Chancellor Brady in the Tipperary Bank case of "O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell." Great faith is placed in the soundness of the decision of the late Sir Michael O'Loghlin in the no less celebrated case of "Fawcett v. Hodges" (the Agricultural Bank), and counsel for the creditors of the Tipperary Bank appear to be tolerably certain that the highest legal tribunal will agree in the construction of the law as laid down by Sir Michael O'Loghlin.

Adjutant Lowe, Royal County Limerick Militia, has received instruction that an order will issue to enlist recruits to make up the regiment to the full establishment complement of 1200. When disembodied, the County Limerick Militia, under Lieut. Colonel Dickson, numbered 970, leaving only 250 to be added.

The Galway papers report that five or six laborers from Dunmore, who had been employed at the harvest in England, on their return home, when within three miles of Dunmore, commenced quarrelling, owing to the effects of intoxication. One of the party, a young man named McCormack, was left behind on the road, and has not since been found.

Captain W. H. Carroll, J. P., of Tullow House, county Tipperary, has given to the pastor of Silvermines, the Rev. Jos. McGrath, P.P., a commodious house for a national school, with some land attached to it, rent free; and he has also subscribed £5 towards the fund to sustain it, and meet the necessary expenses.

Mr. Michael J. Riordan, forage contractor, county Cork, who had been formerly connected with Limerick transacting business for the Commissariat department, received, through the Rev. H. Malone, of the Franciscan Convent, Limerick, the sum of £40 restitution money.

Mr. Jeremiah Gorman, Limerick, is engaged in the construction of two carved Tabernacles in gold in the Roman style of art, with carved candlesticks and crucifixes, for the Chapels of Tulla and Bradford, to correspond with those he has already erected in Killaloe.

At a recent meeting of the Ballymena Railway Company a dividend was declared of 7 per cent., and a sum of £1,600 was placed at the rest fund. This is one of the largest dividends yet paid by any railway company in Ireland of the same length of line.

A new and commodious Roman Catholic chapel, is about to be erected at Tiernevir, near Gort, on the property of Capt. S. Taylor, the old chapel being dilapidated.

A conditional order is granted against Dr. Rogers of Youghal, for not complying with the order of the Insolvent Court, which demanded a transfer of a portion of his property for payment of his debts.

Mrs. Coffey, wife of a respectable boot and shoe maker, in Waterford, committed suicide by cutting her throat with a razor. No cause is assigned for the rash act.

Joseph Kenny, Esq., has been re-elected Mayor of Clonmel for the ensuing year. He was proposed by Alderman C. Bianconi.

Adjutant Phillips, City of Limerick Militia, is enrolling recruits for that corps, at his office, Frederick-street, pursuant to the order recently received.

A strolling beggar named Patrick Walsh, from Dunkitt, in the county Kilkenny, died of starvation in New-Ross, on the 21st of November.

Michael Dwyer, a private of the 50th Regiment, was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment at Belfast Police Court, for assaulting two of the Constabulary.

At the late pig fair of Ardagh, 800 were sent out by a special train from Rathkeale to Limerick.

Sir Chas. O'Donnell, has been unanimously elected a member of the Royal Dublin Society.

A number of laborers are at present employed by Mr. Dargan on the Limerick and Ennis Railway, near Sixmile Bridge.

The marriage of Colonel Caulfield, M. P., to Miss Somerville, will take place on the 18th inst., in Dublin.

Sir William Fitzgibbon has been re-elected Mayor of Cork.

MR. DISRAELI IN PARIS.

From the North Whig, Ireland.

The family which, to distinguish itself from all other families, announced itself as "D'Israeli"—which is as if Jones were to advertise that, in future he desired to be called "Mr. English"—has always had a tendency to travel. They were at the emigration and at the flight; at the Waters of Strife, and in the Land of Promise. They were in Babylon, and in Rome, and in Bagdad. Certainly, the present Mr. Disraeli has declined to give their names, or even their address, previous to the fourteenth century; but we know that they are a very old family, always of the Jewish aristocracy; and we also know that, when Mr. O'Connell denounced the author of "Vivian Grey" as the descendant of the *im*penitent thief, who died beside our Saviour on the Cross, the passionate objection made by Mr. Disraeli was not to the date but to the character of the lineage. These pure Sephardim started from Syria with the heirs of the Prophet and the heads of the Faithful—having taken to the fashionable Mahomedanism of that day, as their present representative adopts as a convenience Anglican Protestantism; and from Africa they got into Spain. There they were good Moors and bad Catholics, according to the province they passed through in their wanderings. In the shade of the Red House (which it is painful to translate into its immemorial romance as "The Alhambra") they were the pets of Abul Hassan, and in Madrid they were the counsellors of Alfonso. The Inquisition could neither catch nor detect them. As Mesina Sidonias they went to Mass, made money, and flourished; and, by their general conduct, doubtless suggested Jesuitism to Ignatius Loyola ere he left his fatherland. But the old leaven was in these anti-Levites. They could not stay where they were prosperous. A dead lock occurred in politics, the peninsula became dull, and the Disraeli of the time went to Genoa, where first they of Israel assumed the name of Disraeli. They did well in Genoa, and then at Venice. But they could not long be quiet. In about the middle of the eighteenth century they went to England. They have done very well there. The first English Disraeli made a fortune. The second Disraeli made a literary fame. The third Disraeli married a rich wife, and became Chancellor of the Exchequer. Thus they have pretty nearly exhausted the country, and the tradition is, that, every hundred years, the tent of the Homeless One shall be struck.

It is with some apprehension, then, we read the announcement that "Mr. Disraeli is in Paris." This is not like the recess scamper of the ordinary man. Lord John Russell has gone to Florence, and might go to Jerusalem, and nobody but his courier would pay any attention. Lord Palmerston went to Paris, about eighteen months ago, and no one wondered. Lord Stanley is most likely to go to Australia when the fast steamers are put on, and the world will take it as a matter of course enterprise. If Queen Victoria took a tour from Calcutta to Cabul, and a detour to Candia, looking in at Jamaica, it would be but a day's news. But Mr. Disraeli has been for many years a fixture in England, as curious, but as compact, as Stoneheague, the Wellington equestrian statue, or the Scotch. He "did creation" in his youth, the Desert, the Colosseum, the Parthenon, and the Baden gaming tables. But since 1828, we think he has been in England, eating his hot suppers and catching his colds with the exemplary regularity of a tide-waiter of domestic habits. When expelled from office in 1852, his health was greatly broken, and Lord Derby (disinterested) and his eminent physicians entreated him to neglect the British Constitution in favor of his own, and travel. But he refused; he would die in Pall-mall. Eighteen-hundred-and-fifty-six is departing, and Mr. Disraeli remains alive; yet not in England. The coming man has gone to Paris. This can scarcely be for his health; for Paris in December, is not nearly so healthy as London in December. It cannot be for amusement; for Disraeli never seeks amusement. He should have gone to Italy for health, or to Spain for amusement, just now—with the recreation, in both places, of finding out the tombs of his unknown ancestors. He goes to Paris at the moment when the government of Lord Palmerston and the government of Louis Napoleon are (according to the press) at loggerheads, and when the press of Paris and the press of Great Britain are quarrelling; and it might be suggested that he therefore make the acquaintance of the French capital, in order to cram himself with data for the sarcasm due from a leader of the Opposition. But there is no Opposition; or, if there be an Opposition, Mr. Disraeli is not the leader of it. We are driven to the surmise that Mr. Disraeli has gone to Paris as the runaway railway-director said he went to Boulogne, "to stay." The precedent of distinguished foreigners settling in Paris, are numerous. Mr. Disraeli cannot have gone with the designs of Cagliostro, or of Tom Paine. He cannot be seeking French citizenship, as Lord Brougham unsuccessfully sought it, to enjoy at the same time the rights of a British subject. Charles Fox went to Paris, as leader of opposition, to make the acquaintance of a great man, the First Napoleon, and to spite Pitt; but though there is some analogy, there is no parallel to this, in the visit of Lord Palmerston's competitor to the Third Napoleon. Mr. Disraeli seems to us to have gone to Paris, as Count Schomberg went to London—as the only place. England must have become insupportably dreary to him. He reached the highest point of success, four years ago, was then unequal to the opportunity, and has been going down ever since. He must feel that he is in the way. He sneered down and into disrepute all the public men—Peel, Russell, Graham, Clarendon, Grey, Wood; and it came at last that people saw that he was merely a critic who could create nothing; and the world as soon wearies of an Aristides being called the Unjust as the Just. He knows that the Tories want to put him on one side for Mr. Gladstone. He knows that he is too cosmopolitan, and too un-British, ever to obtain the confidence of any other party. A new House of Commons, which forgot, or never knew of his grand intellectual displays against Peel and against free trade, would probably jeer and be restive at the periphrastic analytical oratory of the used-up jester. In a word, Mr. Disraeli must feel that, in British politics, he has been an intriguer only; that among statesmen he has been solely a pedant about statescraft; and that the blunder traceable to race, religion, and idiosyncracy, is, by this time, irreparable. How natural, therefore, that he should leave us. A new country is a new career. His own maxim in "Coningsby" is, "Adventures are to the adventurous."

The Emperor of the French is his friend. In their youths they lent one another their red velvet waistcoats, and backed one another's bills of exchange. Each unertook to conquer a nation. Mr. Disraeli has failed with the English; but if he were Autocrat of all the British, Prince Napoleon an exile from France, might have relied upon perpetual help, and occasional secret-service money in Downing street. In character, they bear a close resemblance to one another. Each is at once cautious and audacious;—patient, furtive, feline—terrible in the spring when the time comes. The Emperor wants a good Minister, and Mr. Disraeli needs a large theatre. He probably cannot speak French like the Queen, nor write it like Count Hamilton; but, in a despotic system, a Burleigh is the man for Minister—a man careful as to his tongue, and profound at a nod. Louis Napoleon has been bidding right and left for ability of late. M. Thiers is, consequently, going to try to get into the Senate, and M. Emile Girardin has been disposing of his great journal. Mr. Disraeli may have heard of the market being opened, and may have thought himself a prize—carrying with him, as he would, a masterly knowledge of the British public, and much of the official traditions of the British policy. Essentially of an eastern or Italian genius, he might, well placed, obtain a fame not inferior to that of Machiavelli or of Mazarin. As there is, according to government organs, a perfectly cordial alliance, and every certainty of prolonged peace between the two countries, what injury could accrue from France and England now and then exchanging statesmen? At all events it would be a novelty, and we require news. But it would be awkward for Mr. Disraeli and for us if the government organs are unreliable.

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

Hence we see that the superficial features of the theatre of battle, not only decide the plan of strategy and the tactics to be adopted, but peremptorily dictate the very nature of the armament of the soldiers themselves. Military authors are not only unanimous in differing in opinion, but they also delight in revelling in long puzzling disquisitions, defining the nature of, and difference between strategy and tactics, which any person after reading would, at least, be just as wise as before he read them at all. However, the following brief definition of mine, will, I apprehend, suffice for every useful purpose. The selection of position, placing of ambuscades, choosing of places of arms, and points d'appue, or strong points on which to rest the flanks of an army, and determining the arms to be employed, and judging the lines of advance or retreat in front of an enemy, are comprehended in the science of strategy, together with the selection of places for outposts. The distribution and maneuvering of troops on the base of operations, the order of march and detail of encampment, charging in column or line, firings, and the establishment of outposts and picquets, are comprised in the science of tactics. I have introduced this sketch of strategy and tactics, with the view of being more intelligible to the reader in proceeding to show the natural military impregnability of Ireland. Owing to the insular position of this island, she is naturally fortified round by her external extremities. It is a disputed point between military engineers, whether a dry ditch or a wet ditch is the better in fortification. Whether or no, Ireland is environed by a wet ditch of great magnitude, if I may designate the imprisoning ocean by that term; and this encircling aquatic ditch, or natural fortification, is equally defensible on every point, and is accessible only by the one medium, a navy. In the attack of any other kind of fortification, or in the invasion of any continental state, an army and its requisites would suffice, but in the invasion and attack of our island fortress, not only an army but a navy is absolutely indispensable; and all the advantages arising from this material circumstance are not ephemeral, but are as immutable as the island itself. It is true, there are scarcely any artificial fortifications erected round our coast; but that is of no consequence, because, to be effective, the whole coast should be so fortified, a thing out of the question; and earthen strand batteries, erected on the spur of the moment, are as fully effective, if not more so, for the time being, and even this would be only necessary to protect our seaport towns, or the mouths of rivers. At any other point, it would be more prudent to let the enemy quietly disembark, and if possible, by a feint opposition, lure him a bit into the interior, when, by a well combined and directed attack, we might not only succeed in driving him back upon his fleet, but also capture his whole army, because, if closely and fiercely pressed, it would be impossible for him to embark.

But, before I proceed further, I feel it necessary to give a brief description of the method of disembarking an army in presence of an enemy. A point having been selected on our coast, the enemy's fleet sails to this point; the ships of war advance on the right and left, under the protection of whose fire the transports move as near shore as the depth of water will permit; the boats of the squadron being in readiness, each man, furnished with three days' cooked provisions, gets into the boats, who, with their arms and ammunition, are rowed forward; and as soon as there is only about two feet of water, on a signal being given, the men spring from the boats, rush forward, and form on the beach. The boats return for reinforcements, and when they establish a position on shore they then land their stores. It is evident that it would be most difficult for them to effect a landing were we, even without the aid of strand batteries, to oppose them, availing ourselves of the accidents of ground at that point. But it would be our policy to offer them but slight resistance, taking care though to kill a good number of them by our rifle marksmen, and retire slowly into the interior, drawing the enemy after us until they arrive at a certain point when, under cover, all our light troops are to halt and fall upon the enemy's flanks and rear in extended order, encircling them in a girth of deadly fire, while lines of pikes in position, one in rear of the other, will quietly await the advance of the foe, drive back his vanguard on his main body, and, by successive charges, drive him back upon the fleet, compel him to surrender, or perish beneath the crimsoned waves. I give this outline of coast operations here, in order to give an idea of the value of our insular position as a military resource; enhanced as it is by the fact of the outline of points of attack being extended to the disadvantage or weakness of the invader, while the inline, or points of defence, are compressed to our advantage and strength.

A great part of Ireland is covered with mountains, affording impediments more or less insurmountable to the forces of the invader, and offering to the inhabitants a considerable defence and security against the former. In such places cavalry is useless and artillery impracticable; and when the heights are occupied by riflemen, and the passes defended by pikemen, mountain regions may be said to be impregnable. It is said, very often, that the nature of the ground is as good for the one party as the other. This may be the case when two regular and disciplined armies are opposed to each other; but when a disciplined or foreign army is opposed to the natives, the advantages are all on the side of the latter, because they know the passes, and can take the first possession of them, of which the former must be ignorant; besides, the armament of disciplined armies, as at present, are not adapted for mountain warfare, while that of the natives are as if intended by nature for that specific purpose. Rivers always present important strategetical features for the consideration of military men, and there are many rivers and canals in Ireland which can be turned to advantage. They are natural lines of defence; they also serve to cover the flank of a position, or of an army on the march, or to arrest pursuit in case of retreat, and serve to inundate the country in cases of necessity before an invading force. Even a small rivulet will serve to cover the front and flank of a position, by placing a dam before the stream. The bridges and fords should be taken possession of, and the important ones defended by tetes duponts. Marshes, some of which are in Ireland, oppose insurmountable obstacles to the advance of armies, they being utterly impassable to every arm of military service, and serve to retard and harass regular armies, as the roads leading through them, if any, can be rendered impassable by the labor of a few hours. Bogs differ from marshes in being in some parts passable for infantry. Ireland is covered to the extent of more than a tenth of its whole surface with bogs, a circumstance of the most serious importance, as affording the people asylums of retreat of infallible impregnability. Breastworks of bog earth are easily thrown up, and, as proved in the late Danish war in Scleswick Holstein, by being made thicker than ordinary, are as proof against cannon shot as breastworks composed of upland earth; and shells falling in bogs sink into the earth, and, owing to the moisture, are smothered without bursting. And it is a fact that a bog affords a wholesome site for encampment, the atmosphere being cool and astringent in consequence of the great quantity of turpentine always existing in that sort of soil. Some of the hardiest men in Ireland live in bogs. Hence I look upon bogs as a native military resource of paramount importance. There are, properly speaking, no forests in Ireland, yet there is scarcely any county more beautifully wooded (serving as a cover for native troops) or more streaked with hedge rows, the timber of which will serve for field fortification, for hutting, and for fuel.

Another important superficial feature of Ireland is presented in the ditches and hedges. In no country are the dykes so deep, or the ditches so thick and so numerous as in Ireland. Every field is surrounded by a ditch, sometimes fringed with hedges and large timber, rendering the flattest plain a series of irregular field fortification of no mean strength, and affording to the people a resource in war of invaluable importance. As Corporal Trim said of France: "Ireland is a nation of ditches and hedges;" and from the manner in which they intersect each other, the parallel ditches become excellent successive place de arms for native troops, and the lateral ditches not only supply flank defences, but covered lines of advance and retreat. Farm houses and villages, serving as defensive posts, lend additional strength to these natural fortifications.

Cities and large towns, if properly defended by the inhabitants, are capable of opposing an insurmountable resistance to disciplined troops. In city fighting every sort of weapon can be used with effect, and all the inhabitants, men, women, and children, can be usefully employed against the foe. Every street becomes a defile, where every window, from base to garret, that bears upon the approach of the enemy is a secure position for a marksman, and the exterior of every roof screened by its own parapet is a little fortress; and, even if only garrisoned by women and children, is capable of disordering the best troops. Every brick chimney affords a decent magazine of ammunition. A brick, when administered from the top of a house, provided it hits his noddle, is an infallible remedy applied to a mercenary soldier's headache; no regimental doctor could ever doctor him half so well. And burly paving-stones are a cheap and serviceable specie of ammunition, only costing the labor of bringing them from the streets to the housetops. There is no pill in the regimental doctor's shop more calculated to change the effects of his debauched line of living, and to electrify a field officer's sensibilities, than a burly paving-stone scientifically applied to his person from a housetop. The person so applying this pill should not hit the field officer's horse, it being cruel and unfeeling to cause the poor animal unnecessary pain, but should feel that blended motives of humanity and state policy demand that the gift be exclusively bestowed upon the body of the imp of the devil on the horse's back; and if one paving stone has not the desired effect, another can be applied. But there is no use in paying more respectful attention to any individual than the circumstances of the case require; because, if a person was to put himself to the inconvenience of flinging all the paving-stones in the city at any one of those field officers, the ungrateful fellow perhaps would not, in the least, feel thankful after all. In addition to these, a system of barricades, properly arranged, defended by the rifle and supported by the pike, render a city absolutely impregnable against every foe. The high roads, their nature, and whether they pass through towns, woods, bogs, mountain passes and defiles, or over bridges, ferries, or fords, and the roads that run parallel with them, form important items in the consideration of every general, and also the nature of the country on every side of them; as on the line of march many considerations render it necessary that a large body of troops should not follow the same but parallel lines. Hence they become isolated and disjointed, and if the roads be blocked up, and the intervening space between the parallel roads occupied by guerillas, the divisions can be destroyed in detail and their baggage captured.

A regular army is never so defenceless as when unexpectedly attacked on the line of march, particularly when spaces of enclosed country lie between the advancing divisions. Railroads can, in time of war, be of no service to us, and to prevent the enemy using them they should be rendered useless for the time being. There are no fortresses of moment in Ireland, but that is of no consequence. At the time of the invasion of the Peninsula by the French, Spain was crowded with strong fortified places, and the defences made were in most instances obstinate, but in the end they were overpowered, and these fortified towns, which only retarded the conquest, subsequently made it more sure, and served as the means of maintaining and prolonging forcible possession of the country. In like manner, the late war with Russia may be termed the siege of Sevastopol, in the defence of which Russia put forth all her strength; whereas, if there was no Sevastopol, the resources of Russia, instead of being wasted in defending that fortress, would have been applied in defending the interior, against which the resources of the allies instead would have been wasted in vain.

TO BE CONTINUED.

MITCHEL AND DEVIN REILLY.

From the Daily News, Dec. 30.

The lecture delivered last evening by John Mitchel, upon the life and character of Thomas Devin Reilly, we venture to say, was one of the most acceptable to the audience, as we know it was one of the most brilliant and pungent in style, of any delivered this season.

The Tabernacle was well filled above and below; and when Mr. Mitchel made his appearance at 8 o'clock, accompanied by Thos. F. Meagher, John Savage, Capt. W. F. Lyons, and other friends of the lamented Reilly, and several other distinguished gentlemen, the applause was deafening. And when, after a few pertinent remarks, Gen. Ward B. Burnett introduced the lecturer, the enthusiasm was again uproarious.

But at length, having gained an opportunity to be heard, Mr. Mitchel requested the reporters not to report the lecture, as it was the intention of the Committee to publish it for the benefit of Mrs. Reilly and her only child—and proceeded to the delivery of one of the most accomplished biographical and historical addresses to which we have ever listened. Through all its historical portion the lecturer was continually, and sometimes almost wildly applauded.

And after hearing such a discourse from such a man, concerning such a man, and in behalf the amiable wife and infant daughter, who survive the hero of the common and sacred cause of such a people; and after witnessing the effect of that discourse upon a sundered fragment of that people, it becomes suddenly easy for one "to the manor born" to understand how the Irish patriots continue to struggle against misfortune, and hope in the midst of despair, and so remain ever ready to strike once more for country, kindred, liberty and life.

The dead Reilly, the heroic descendant from a long line of heroes; he who created revolution and inaugurated rebellion at home by his scathing pen, and by the same pen defended justice and Democracy in the leading journal of the land of his adoption, leaves to his few surviving relatives no halting or small-souled friend in the living Mitchel. Of this the lecture last evening was abundant evidence. And to those who did not hear it, we are free to commend it when it shall come from the handn of the printer. We commend it for its subject; we commend it for its object, and we commend it for itself—for its force, its beauty and its history.

From the New York Sun, Dec. 30.

A very good audience was present last evening, at the Tabernacle, to hear a lecture by Mr. John Mitchel, on the "Life and Character of the late Thomas Devin Reilly," the proceeds being for the benefit of the family of the deceased. Mr. Mitchel depicted the ardent, patriotic youth, hanging with delight on the inspired sentiments of O'Connell, when in the agitation for Emancipation, and the after effort to obtain freedom for his country, he moved the mighty masses of his native land. When the cloud came, and the prospect looked dark and lowering, young Reilly repaired to Dublin, and was engaged as a writer on the Dublin Nation, and subsequently became attached, in the same capacity, to The United Irishman, a journal which was distributed by its friends to every portion of the land. The lecturer read extracts from a file of that paper, written at the time by Mr. Reilly, one on the revolution of Sicily, the other on that of France, when Louis Philippe was compelled to fly, and which were coupled with remarks in relation to Ireland. It was this latter article for which the editor and proprietor of the paper was arrested and tried, and "who was happy," said Mr. M., "to assume all the responsibility, political, personal, and moral." Mr. Mitchel was himself the proprietor alluded to, and the reference to the United Irishman and the cause, elicited great applause. The consequences are known; Mr. Reilly also became the object of attack from the government, but escaped its power, and found an asylum in New-York. The orator presented a brilliant picture of the patriotism and high character of the deceased. The lecture, it is unnecessary to say, was truly well received.

ANTIQUITY OF IRELAND.

The following is an abridgment of two most interesting lectures, delivered by Martin A. O'Brennan, in Dublin, for the benefit of the "Irish Speakers' Society":—

The Carthaginians and the Irish are descended from one common parent country. Now we know to a certainty that the Carthaginians were descended from the Phœnicians, and I have shown already from Greek authorities that the Phœnicians must have had very early intercourse with this island. Is there then a reasonable man upon earth who will not rather believe that the Irish were a colony from Phœnicia than from Carthage, and that they must have been a colony from either the one or the other, the identity of their language has proved?

It being then established whence the Irish emigrated, the next point to be determined is, when it emigrated. And this, I think, may be pretty nearly determined by the Pagan worship of the Irish at the time of the introduction of Christianity into the island; I mean by such facts of their worship as remain undisputed. That the Pagan Irish worshipped the sun and moon, and ancient deities of the Phœnicians, and indeed of most nations, and that these were their principal deities, all writers are agreed; also that they did not worship images. Now, of this we may be certain, that the period when Christianity was introduced into Ireland, they worshipped all the Pagan deities that had been worshipped by their Phœnician ancestors at the time of their emigration. For though a people in that state of primitive civilization in which they were might have added to the number of their deities, we cannot suppose that they diminished their number; for this would be utterly inconsistent with their dark and superstitious state. Neither, for this reason, can we suppose that if the Phœnicians had worshipped images before the emigration of the Irish colony, that the Irish would not have continued to do so. I shall not, however, attempt to determine the precise instant when those Egyptian and Syrian deities, unknown to the Pagan Irish, were adopted by the Phœnicians, or when precisely the Phœnician worship of them commenced; but merely state that all the writers are agreed that it was at a very early period, when the Phœnician history is in great obscurity, and therefore without spending any more time about it, I shall apply to the Irish the observations of the learned authors of the "Ancient Universal History," in their account of the Numidians. They say, speaking of the sun and moon, as being the principal deities of the Numidians, "this is a convincing proof of their high antiquity, as clearly evincing that the emigration of the first colony which peopled this country preceded the introduction of image worship into the Pagan world."

This is assuredly the most reliable testimony in favor of the very early peopling of Ireland after the Flood. Nothing can be clearer than the Pagans who first came here would have brought with them their idols if such they had. Their not having done so places beyond all manner of doubt the fact that Ireland was colonized before the Milesian invasion, because, whether that era was 1,300 years before Christ, or later, history tells us that Greece, Troy and other eastern nations had their deities, and consequently the children of Golamh would have introduced their idols. It is true they worshipped divinities, such as the sun, moon, &c., but not graven images. If they did, we have no account of them until 1144 B.C., in the reign of Tighermas, whose idol was the same as that of Zoroaster of Bactria, or Crom Cruad, to whom altars were erected in a plain in Brefney, and had votaries until the days of St. Patrick. The theory that Ireland was not peopled until the time of Rome, is refuted by the very fact that the Milesians had not images. Therefore they too must have arrived here before image worship, unless we agree with Doctor Parsons, of London—already alluded to—who holds that the first inhabitants of Ireland worshipped the true God. He states that the offspring of Ham began to adore their ancestors as gods, when they abandoned the true God—but that the Clanna Phœnius adored the God of Heber. He adds that they introduced the true religion into the island, but afterwards the people were perverted: his work is deeply interesting.

Now, I maintain that in addition to the above passage, we have this matter-of-fact proof of the early migration of the Irish colony:—All, or most of their war instruments and weapons were of brass; there can be no attempt to deny this fact, as many of them are to be found in our country this very day; weapons of exactly the same shape and substance, found at Cannæ, supposed to be Carthaginian, are to be seen in the British Museum. This circumstance, Parsons concludes, places the migration about the time of Cadmus, but certainly anterior to the Trojan war. If it had been after, he states, the colonists could have brought with them more arts—would have introduced deities and image worship, which all scholars admit to have been in great vigor about the period of the seige of Troy. I need not refer to the penates, nor the images of the gods which the Trojan women worshipped and embraced on the night Troy was on fire. Nor is it necessary to direct your attention to Æneas, bringing with him his gods to Latium. Idolatry was widespread throughout Greece and Asia Minor fully 1200 years before. Wherefore it is clear that Ireland must have been peopled long anterior to that period. For history tells us that Golamh resided in those places, and no doubt would have brought with him image worship if he arrived later than 1200 B.C.

From such premises I draw these conclusions:—That Ireland was at a very early period known to the Phœnicians—what Dr. Parsons call Clanna Fenius—that it was colonized by them before the Trojan war—that they introduced here such arts as they knew—that letters, for which they were famous, were among those arts; they could not, Parsons adds, without the use of letters have preserved, for so many ages, their language uncorrupted, and retaining such a close conformity to the original. Besides, we all know that the invaders have ever brought their own language into the country conquered by them: the English did it here—the Normans and Saxons in England. Camden writes "The Anglo-Saxons flocked to Ireland as to the market of refined letters, and thence they seemed to have received the system of forming letters whereas they have clearly used the same character that is in use amongst the Irish." Wormins says that the Icelanders call one of their alphabets "Ireletur," or the "Irish letter." Doctor Parsons alleges that "from a thorough investigation of the subject, it will be probable that all the neighboring nations got their alphabets from Ireland; and that laws, fashions, and war, the sword, could never entirely destroy the ancient language of Ireland." Now in this place Parsons might have gone a little further and said, that this fact puts beyond all doubt, that the Irish language is an original one. He says there was no one like it but the Lybian or Carthaginian; and he in another place shows it could not be that. It therefore follows that we have in Ireland our alphabet from Gadelas or Gael of Scythia, 700 years before the wolf suckled Romulus, before a wall was drawn round the Eternal City of the Seven Hills. I am therefore no enthusiast when I believe that in our language there is something divine—that it can never be uprooted from the old soil. Pliny states, that Cadmus introduced into Greece sixteen letters, whilst others say the number was eighteen. Herodotus tells us that arts, sciences and letters issued out of Babylon. Now this, according to Moses, is most probable, and accords exactly with our own old writers as to what they relate with respect to Fenius Farsa, as I told you. Some learned men say that the Hebrew letters were anciently only seventeen, which is the number of the Irish—I cannot now be certain what was the precise form of the original Irish alphabet, as letters may change, though not the language.

Plutarch relates that when the tomb of Alcemena was destroyed by Agesilaus, the Greek of that day could not read the inscription on it. Lord Ross mentions that Greece and Carthage, being in a manner subdued by the Romans, adopted for a time the Roman characters, but afterwards took up their own, which was certainly Phœnician. It is stated that the Irish ancient numerals are identical with some of those of Phœnicia. This is only reasonable. For no matter what length of time or extent of seas and lands intervene, the language of all colonists will be identical with, or at least have a great affinity to that of the parent, whence they migrated. The posterity of the Irish soldiers who remained at the Alps after the death of Dathi, in the fourth century, retain yet a pure dialect of our vernacular. Mr. Beaufort says, "By (the Irish alphabet) we are empowered to assert that the Irish Druids had the method of communicating their doctrine and learning in writing. That the letters made of for this purpose bear a great affinity to those of the ancient Phœnicians, Carthaginians, and Egyptians; in many cases they are exactly the same." The Druids of Ireland taught their pupils in groves, and imposed on the letters or characters they invented the names of trees, which possessed medicinal properties, thus teaching letters, and the science of medicine by one and the same act. We are told that St. Patrick gave us our letters!!! This is an egregious error, contrary to fact and history. It is most positive that we had our alphabet centuries before Rome was built; we had learning and letters fully at least 1300 years before St. Patrick was born in "Holy Tower, a Roman fort, not far from Calais, in France, where his father was with the Roman army." I will be able to prove my position from the evidence of facts before I have closed this lecture. It is true that St. Patrick gave the Roman alphabet to his pupil Fiagh, that thereby he might the sooner prepare him for holy orders. Not that the Roman characters were easier than the Irish, but the Roman missioner wished to establish an uniformity in the mode of instruction for his pupils and converts, especially for those intended for the Church, that himself and they might pray in the same language, composed in the same characters. There is an incident worth notice, that in fifteen days Fiagh could read and understand the Latin psalms. This could not be so unless he was thoroughly a proficient in the knowledge of some characters before that. You can all clearly see that it would be impossible for a man, wholly unacquainted with letters, to make such rapid progress in a language so learned and so difficult of attainment as the Latin is admitted to be. But Fiagh, afterwards St. Fiagh, Bishop of Sletty, was a graceful adept in the old Irish. Let us see what our own native writers tell us, and what no man ever has denied. We are told by them that when St. Patrick was crossing the country from the north to classic Mayo to celebrate the Lent and the Easter at Cnoc Aichle (Eagle Hill) called to visit Dubtagh, the Druid, and the great poet laureate of King O'Leary, and who was the first convert. During his visit he inquired if the distinguished convert could recommend any person for the mission. He was told that he had a comely youth, who was also a convert, but who was now gone to the north of Mayo, with a present of poems to the chieftain of that county; that when he had returned he would introduce him.

Now, I ask, how could Fiagh have poems to be given as a present, and of his own composition, if he was not a proficient in the use of letters, able to mould them into any shape. The hypothesis is quite absurd. Again, if Ireland had not the alphabet before the great apostle, it is very strange that the Roman characters were not continued in general use. I would be glad to learn who gave us the Celtic letters, what age, in what monarch's time?—the when, the where, the manner how he obtained them, would be an interesting piece of information. Our historians give no record of these things. The annals are silent on the point. And it therefore remains that they came to us as has been sufficiently shown by me. Parsons states that there is no alphabet like ours but the Lybian, and he shows that was Phœnician, not Roman. In the next place, the Roman alphabet has twenty-six letters, we have seventeen. How comes it that we lost nine of the number? The letters of the two alphabets have different names; that would not be if Rome gave us our letters. St. Fiagh wrote a life of St. Patrick in the Irish language. Hence it is clear that that was the language with which he was better acquainted. This in itself proves that he had letters before the apostle gave them to him. St. Seachnall, bishop of Dunshaughlin, another disciple of Patrick's, wrote a hymn in praise of his great master, and he used the Irish characters, though the language was Roman or Latin, through which Seachnall obtained his education and mission in Rome. He preached in Ireland for nine years, when he died and was buried in Dunshaughlin. These two latter incidents would be quite sufficient to establish a refutation of the calumny that we had no alphabet until St. Patrick gave it to us. I should have said that if the apostle introduced the alphabet, it would contain the same number of letters, the same order of letters, the same character of letters, as ours does, but in none of these instances are the Roman and Irish characters similar.

Until lately our alphabet ran thus: Beith, tuis nion, thence called "Beithlius nion," whereas the other is termed alphabet, as commencing with alpha, beta. The form and number are different, the Latin characters being seven more than ours, and more easily written, and for the latter reason also it is clear our ancestors would not give it up for one more difficult of manuscribing, if it were their original mode of writing. I have to apologise for having occupied so much time in refuting such a calumny, but as some parties, not linguists, nor historians, but they whose words written or spoken, because of their position, might mislead the unthinking, I deemed it my solemn duty to give the real state of the case in as plain a point of view as I could. I am rejoiced that this question can be handled as a purely literary one, having no reference whatever to religion or politics. All parties can hear it and arrive at their own conclusion. In the work entitled "Ancient Ireland," I flatter myself I exhibited this country in her real character, as before every other nation, in the number, brilliancy, and variety of her scholars, even in her renown in arms, and her fame in every accomplishment as regards the fine arts and polite literature of every description. It is objected to us that if our letters were from Phœnicia or the Scythians, our ancestors would have written from right to left as the Greeks, who borrowed their alphabet from the Phœnicians, did. I have to say that in the time of Heredotus the Greeks wrote from left to right. This we learn from his surprise at the Egyptians writing the contrary way (book ii., chap. 36). The Irish might have originally written after the same manner, but changed, as did the Greeks. I understand that inscriptions have been discovered in this country, executed from right to left. The Greeks called this system Boustrophedon, as it resembled the course of the plough; we call it the reaper's path.

TOM SHERIDAN OUT SHOOTING.

Tom Sheridan was staying at Lord Craven's, at Benham (or rather Hampstead), and one day proceeded on a shooting excursion, like Hawthorn, with only "his dog and his gun," on foot, and unattended by companion or keeper; the sport was bad—the birds few and shy—and he walked and walked in search of game, until, unconsciously, he entered the domain of some neighboring squire. A very short time after, he perceived advancing towards him at the top of his speed, a jolly, comfortable gentleman, followed by a servant, armed, as it appeared, for conflict. Tom took up a position, and waited the approach of the enemy. "Hallo! you sir," said the squire, when within half ear shot; "what are you doing here, sir, eh?" "I'm shooting, sir," said Tom. "Do you know where you are, sir?" said the squire. "I'm here, sir," said Tom. "Here, sir," said the squire, growing angry; "and do you know where here is, sir?—these, sir, are my manors; what d'ye think of that, sir, eh?" "Why, sir, as to your manners," said Tom, "I can't say they seem over-agreeable." "I don't want any jokes," said the squire; "I hate jokes. Who are you, sir—what are you?" "Why, sir," said Tom, "my name is Sheridan—I am staying at Lord Craven's—I have come out for some sport—I have not had any, and I am not aware that I am trespassing." "Sheridan!" said the squire, cooling a little, "oh, from Lord Craven's, eh? Well, sir, I could not know that, sir—I—" "No, sir," said Tom, "but you need not have been in a passion." "Not in a passion, Mr. Sheridan!" said the squire; "you don't know, sir, what these preserves have cost me, and the pains and trouble I have been at with them; it's all very well for you to talk; but if you were in my place, I should like to know what you would say upon such an occasion?" "Why, sir," said Tom, "if I were in your place, under all the circumstances, I should say, I am convinced, Mr. Sheridan, you did not mean to annoy me; and as you look a good deal tired, perhaps you'll come up to my house and take some refreshment." The squire was hit hard by this nonchalance, and (as the newspapers say), it is needless to add, acted upon Sheridan's suggestion. "So far," said poor Tom, "the story tells for me, now you shall hear the sequel." After having regaled himself at the squire's house, and having said five hundred more good things than he swallowed; having delighted his host, and more than half won the hearts of his wife and daughters, the sportsman proceeded on his return homewards. In the course of his walk, he passed through a farm-yard; in the front of the farm-house was a green, in the centre of which was a pond, in the pond were ducks innumerable swimming and diving; on its verdant banks a motley group of gallant cocks and pert partlets, picking and feeding; the farmer was leaning over the hatch of the barn, which stood near two cottages on the side of the green. Tom hated to go back with an empty bag; and, having failed at his attempts at higher game, it struck him as a good joke to ridicule the exploits of the day himself, in order to prevent any one else from doing it for him; and he thought that to carry home a certain number of the domestic inhabitants of the pond and its vicinity would serve the purpose admirably. Accordingly, up he goes to the farmer, and accosts him very civilly. "My good friend," says Tom, "I'll make you an offer." "Of what, sur?" says the farmer. "Why," replies Tom, "I've been out all day fagging after birds, and I haven't had a shot. Now, both my barrels are loaded—I should like to take home something; what shall I give you to let me have a shot with each barrel at those ducks and fowls—I standing here—and to have whatever I kill?" "What sort of a shot are you?" said the farmer. "Fairish!" said Tom, "fairish!" "And to have all you kill?" said the farmer, "eh?" "Exactly so," said Tom. "Half a guinea," said the farmer. "That's too much," said Tom. "I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll give you a seven-shilling piece, which happens to be all the money I have in my pocket." "Well," said the man, "hand it over." The payment was made. Tom, true to his bargain, took his post by the barn-door, and let fire with one barrel and then with the other, and such quacking and splashing, and screaming and fluttering, had never been seen in that place before. Away ran Tom, and, delighted at his success, picked up first a hen, then a chicken, then fished out a dying duck or two, and so on, until he numbered eight head of domestic game, with which his bag was nobly distended. "Those were right good shots, sur," said the farmer. "Yes," said Tom, "eight ducks and fowls were more than you bargained for, old fellow—worth more, I suspect, than seven shillings—eh?" "Why, yes," said the man, scratching his head, "I think they be; but what do I care for that? they are none of them mine!" "Here," said Tom, "I was for once in my life beaten, and made off as fast as I could, for fear the right owner of my game might make his appearance, not but that I could have given the fellow that took me in seven times as much as I did, for his cunning and coolness."

Answers to Correspondents.

The following song possesses a natural force, which recommends it to the honors of print:

THE GUARDS OF OUR HEARTHS!

Air—Contented I am!

Come, here's to the Walshes, from Clare to Cloughroe,
Around to Kilkenny and down to Drumboe—
The yeomen of freedom, when roused to the fray,
No foemen dare meet them, so headlong are they;
With glasses o'erflowing and souls high above,
Let's drink to the guards of our hearths and our love.
The brave hardy sons of six centuries gray,
Still young on the heath-hills of many a fray,
In futile commotion they seldom doth share,
For idle ambition so little they care;
But fearless for ever when put to the test—
The guards of our hearths in the gem of the West.

Still, meet one, or either, by Lee or Lough Neagh,
Or off by the Hudson—from home far away—
The store-room of riches you'll find in his breast,
And lockless the lid of its high teeming chest;
Yet jealous as others their rights still to care
Are the guards of our hearths and our girls so fair.
Come, hoist up your banner and call on the brave,
(Who fears now to meet with an honest man's grave,)
For Freedom to fight, while a hope gleams o'erhead,
'Neath the Shamrock and Harp—for the Green o'er the Red.
While Tyrants o'erthrowing wherever they rove,
Success to the guards of our hearts and our love.

Banks of the Lee, December, 1849. WOODSIDE.

"A BOY OF FOURTEEN," hopes we may find time to read his manuscript, which let us state is thirty sheets in length, written on both sides, with blots as numerous as there are spots on a leopard, and the lines being as zig-zag as a Connecticut rail-fence. Add to all this, that it is a poem! on the middle ages, too; and has no doubt neither beginning nor end. We suspect our "Boy of Fourteen" is an old codger of 140. There is evidently a difference of at least twenty years between the ages of the first and last sheets of the paper on which his "labor of love" is written in inks of all hues and colors.

SPA HILL.—The Dr. Sheridan from whom "St. Canice" quoted last week, was grandfather to the celebrated Richard Brinsley Sheridan. He was a clergyman, taught school in Ireland, and was esteemed a man of rare wit. Between him and Dean Swift a warm friendship constantly existed.

☞ PROPOSALS for the composition of the Irish News, will be received and considered, at the publication office, 29 Ann-street.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1857.

MEMORIES OF THE DAY—THE 8th OF JANUARY.

To every dweller in the Republic the memory of this day is associated with feelings not less exciting, proud, patriotic and thankful, than those conjured by, and memorial of, the date made immortal by the deeds at Lexington and Concord.

To Irishmen, as Irishmen, and apart from the just glory they take in the warrior who made the 8th of January an index to English disaster, the day suggests memories of men from whose actions profitable lessons of political forbearance may be adduced.

On the 8th of January, Daniel O'Connell—then commencing his career of agitation and but a short way on that path of renown he afterwards trod so proudly—publicly initiated his "right to differ" with the most famous Irishman of the day, Henry Grattan.

Grattan who had, under peculiar circumstances, inspired the latent energies of a nation and then allowed them to waste for want of proper action—who flung his fiery vehemence into the hearts and arms of the volunteers of '82—who organized a victory and after eighteen years beheld it a defeat—who rocked the cradle of what he thought Irish Independence until it went so dead asleep that he followed it to its grave—who, in fact, was the most powerful man who ever advocated a half-measure, or brought a nullifying sophistry to deny a whole one—he, after all his victories, after being a demi-god in Ireland—the founder and mourner of an Irish Parliament, was, in a state of "languid vitality," as Cloncurry states, a member of the English House of Commons. He still continued to be the friend of Ireland—as much as a member of an English Parliament can be. He continued to be the champion of the Irish Catholics. His past, his present, the memory of his power, his chivalry, his eloquence and the trust reposed in him by the great body of Irish emancipationists made him still the idol of a hopeful people, just emerging from the effects of '98, 1800, and 1803.

With this man, who "remained firm to his duty in the darkest adversity," as O'Connell himself said, and to do justice to whose name "would require an eloquence equal to his own," O'Connell had the temerity to differ.

The difference arose from what is known in the Catholic records of the period as the Veto question, which was then violently agitated, not more by the enemies, than amongst the friends, of Catholic Rights. The Vetoists were in favor of allowing to the Sovereign of Great Britain the right of nominating or appointing, or concurring in the nomination or appointment of the Irish Catholic prelates; their arguments being founded on the position held by Rome in relation to France, then the "chief enemy of British prosperity and the British name." The Anti-Vetoists believed such a clause utterly ruinous to the Catholic Faith; and as making the Sovereign actually head of that Church. Many protestants, friends of Catholic Emancipation, advocated the Veto, and the Catholic Board of Dublin, alarmed at the progress of the Vetoists among the English Catholics, passed a resolution pledging themselves not to act in the matter without the full concurrence of the Catholic prelates. Grattan, a Protestant, an immoveable prop of the British Constitution, an active leveler of "French principles," and who withal had been the leading Parliamentary advocate of the Catholics, refused to continue in communication with the Catholic Board on the terms of its late resolution. Between the parties letters passed which did not harmonize them, and on the 8th of January, 1814, Daniel O'Connell made a speech at the Board which concluded thus:

"Would to God that I could revive in the mind of Mr. Grattan his former feelings for the Catholics of Ireland!—that I could rouse him to that energy with which he formerly advocated our cause.

"What securities did he ever speak of in the Irish Parliament? What apprehension was about him for the Established Church in the year 1793, when he obtained so much for us? Where were his alarms then? and yet that, if ever, was the period in which the Established Church might have been in danger. What is there in the English air to alter the mental vision, so that it shall behold gorgons, and hydras, and chimeras dire, where before it saw nothing but the pleasant prospect of amity, strength and social security?

"Would I could conjure up the ghosts of the illustrious dead who so often aided him in his battle for his then own Ireland; and amid the group I would call up the phantom of departed Ireland herself to remind him of what he was, and what he ought to be, unsophisticated by the delusions of English politics.

"In the sacred names of the mighty dead, I would conjure him to return to the grand and simple principle of the right to perfect liberty of conscience! Whether he succeed or fail in that pursuit his ancient glories will brighten in the rays of these his later honors; and he will singly sustain, in degenerate days, the consistency, as well as the splendor of the first models of Grecian and Roman virtue."

Grattan continued to declare openly and unreservedly for the Veto. O'Connell as openly declared he would ever divide with the men who, "directly or indirectly consented to vetoism of any description." Grattan accused the Board, of which O'Connell was the soul, of an attempt to dictate to him. O'Connell, on the contrary, said, "I desire unanimity—I have endeavored to obtain it; but I now disclaim it for ever if it is not to be had without this concession." And thus was Grattan's decline, and O'Connell's rise, marked by an antagonism respectively based on principle, involving liberty of conscience and the right to differ.

From this episode, Irishmen and others of our day, may take needful instruction. Within a decade its counterpart may be found in Irish political history. Young Ireland differed from old O'Connell, exactly as O'Connell formerly differed with old Grattan. Yet those who are loudest in commendation of O'Connell's right to exercise his judgment in opposition to the great Liberator of '82, are also loudest in denunciation of Young Ireland for having had an opinion contrary to that of the Emancipator of '29. As O'Connell questioned the alarms and "apprehensions" of his primal leader, Young Ireland questioned the insinuations of its former chief. As the one beheld in Grattan's identification with English parties an inability to serve Irish interests, so the other beheld in O'Connell's affiliations with the English whigs a dereliction of Irish Rights. As O'Connell "would call up the phantom of departed Ireland," to show Grattan what he once was; Young Ireland would confront O'Connell with his own early struggles before he was "sophisticated by the delusions of English politics." As Grattan was conjured to return to the principle of liberty of conscience, so was O'Connell conjured to return to those principles on which he based his right to differ. And again, as Grattan accused the Catholic Board of assuming a tone of dictation, O'Connell made the same charge against Young Ireland; and as O'Connell replied to Grattan, so did Young Ireland reply to O'Connell, that its members desired unanimity—that, as is well known, they endeavored to attain it, but would not accept it at the cost of independent thought and speech.

Thus the position of O'Connell in 1814 and Young Ireland in 1846, are historical counterparts; and those who pronounce upon either or both, should be governed by a thorough knowledge of the necessities which provoked opposition, as just in one instance as the other. If the Catholic Board of Jan. 1814 had the right to differ, or even dictate to Grattan, there is no earthly reason why Conciliation Hall of 1846, or the Irish Confederation of January, 1847, should be denied a like privilege respecting O'Connell.

We have dwelt on this episode, suggested by the day, feeling that it is only in a calm comparison of the movements which make history that we can learn to exert that forbearance to others which every man and every party, at some time needs be shown to him and itself.

Whilst Irish Catholics were struggling against Irish fear and English prejudice, English arms were struggling to recover that power in America which had melted away over twenty-five years previous, when the leaden statue of George the Third was run into bullets, to defend the "rebellious" hearths by which they were cast.

On the 8th of January (1815) succeeding that on which O'Connell invoked Henry Grattan to forget English politics, Andrew Jackson, the son of poor Irish emigrant parents, concluded a chapter in the military history of Great Britain, the disasters of which are only equalled by the rugged splendor of him who hurled them on his hereditary foe.

As a child, in the log-house of the Waxsaw settlement, listening to his widowed mother recounting the deeds and sufferings of his grandfather at the siege of Carrickfergus, and the oppression under which her countrymen suffered, Andrew Jackson learned the first duty of a man to be, the expenditure of his life if necessary, in the defence of that freedom England denied to his ancestry.

As a boy of eight years, the echoes of Lexington and Bunker Hill kept the terrible panorama of English turbulence vividly before him. At twelve he passionately panted to follow his eldest brother to the defence of the scattered population of the South against the Royal troops inflamed to mad excesses by their continued discomfiture at the hands of the northern patriots.

The Waxsaw settlement, chiefly composed of Irish, was noted for its republicanism, and aroused the relentless hatred of the British troops. Hugh Jackson fell in the service of his adopted country, at Stono, in June 1779. The grief of his mother struck deep into Andrew's soul. He arose from the ordeal a hero. Was this English power, like a withering malison, to follow his people over the earth? He would give his life to prevent it! And the youth, with his now eldest brother, Robert, volunteered into Captain Davie's corps. His noble Irish mother like the Spartan matron, invoking the blessings of the Gods upon the arms that were to lead them to victory; or bear them as a bier, in death. At his first battle Andrew was thirteen years and nine months old. He participated in the unceasing warfare forced upon the settlement for several months. The brothers were at last captured, and until, owing to the restless and resistless devotion of their mother, they were exchanged, suffered all the inhuman barbarity for which the British became so infamously famous during the war. Robert survived but two days; and the mother, worn down with sorrow, with watching, and the dreadful fever caught in unceasing attendance on her neighbors, prisoners in the British ships in Charleston Harbor, she expired in a few weeks after, just outside the American line at the Neck.

Andrew was spared through war and want and woe, through the disasters of the field, the gnashing fury of captivity, and the more delirious rage of fever, to avenge them—to preserve and consolidate the liberties of a mighty confederacy, by avenging the blood of his dear Irish mother and brothers.

Who can wonder that the Iron had entered into his nature.

Heaven robed his youth in sacrifice to purify him—to make him strong for the mission, which Cobbett admitted he fulfilled when he wrote in 1834—"No man living ever did so much to humble England as Andrew Jackson."

With the memories of his youth about him, it is not to be marvelled at that the presence of his old foes at New-Orleans, in 1814, roused him to a state of almost superhuman energy. He had a great debt to pay. For four days and nights at a time did he resist sleep, to perfect his line of defence. He felt confident he would annihilate the enemy. The presence of the English flung terror among the women of the city. Their cries loaded the air. "Tell them," said Jackson to Livingston, "I am here; the British shall never reach the city!" The hero was desperately exasperated. Riding along the line, he would exclaim, "I will smash them, so help me God!" And God did help him.

When we consider the natural weakness of the place, exposed as it was to approach on all sides; the opposition raised by timid officials and truculent merchants; and the efforts of journalistic traitors to spread dissension among the undisciplined, ill-armed, and badly accoutred troops who were to be pitted against an ably-officered veteran army, the best Great Britain could muster, it must be conceded that no campaign in modern history was more brilliant than that in which Jackson successfully defended New Orleans. On the glorious 8th the English left seven hundred dead and over a thousand wounded on the field. The Americans had seven killed and six wounded.

We have said that the feelings inspired by the day are not less exciting than those suggested by the day of Lexington.

If the 19th of April, 1775, inaugurated the American Revolution, the 8th of January, 1815, set the seal upon American Independence. If Lexington has the honor of beholding the first blood shed for American Freedom, New Orleans was the altar of the last sacrifice in the same sacred cause. The one commenced the first War of Independence, the other closed the second.

Eight colonists fell at Lexington. Their blood, falling on the earth like a fiat from Heaven, called up the colonies to arms.

Seven Americans fell at New Orleans. Only seven, as though Heaven would not mar by a great domestic sorrow the exultant jubilation of a preserved Republic on its humbling a second time "the great enemy of mankind!"

ANGLO-SAXONISM—NATIVE AMERICANISM—FRAUDS UPON THE CELT.

Popular delusions and epidemic absurdities have their origin in that animalism which preachers call human depravity.

It is, certainly, a humiliating fact that each generation of poor Humanity has its own particular bubbles of falsehood, which claim the out-spoken admiration of a day.

We, in the middle of this Nineteenth century, are obliged to witness the progress of a vulgar error, called Anglo-Saxonism, which is not merely false, but fanatical; not merely untrue, but a conspiracy against the peace and unity of American citizens.

The origin of the Anglo-Saxon mania may be traced to the unwearied motherly care of England, who, in promoting and guiding the education of her dear children on this side of the Atlantic, has not forgotten the importance of ethnology. For very obvious reasons, the negro is a man and a brother, and should be placed among the Household Gods; and for other reasons, beneficent as they are British, the Irish are little better than cattle, and should be dealt with accordingly.

The extermination of inferior races and the extension of the Anglo-Saxon race is a new theory, originated in our own day.

It is one of those huge English lies periodically sent forth upon the world; more wide-spread than the plague or potato blight—more destructive than armies and navies—more insidious and malignant than the Bible-cant of Exeter Hall.

Since this Anglo-Saxonism obtained currency, the sufferings of the old Celtic race in the Sacred Isle, and in the Highlands of the Scottish Gael, are without a parallel. The Thundering Liar had no modesty in his abuse, and the British Parliament had no mercy in its laws.

The French conquerors and settlers of England, who, through deep policy, propagate this Anglo-Saxon discord in America, have themselves the utmost contempt for what they used to call Saxon Porkers, and what they now term the Swinish Multitude.

American citizens have been led astray by false English history, to serve the policy of the Norman French Lords. If the truth were told, that the ruling classes and the majority of the people in the United States are Celts, then the feeling of consanguinity might produce international Democratic fraternity. But this would not suit English policy. Hence this Anglo-Saxonism, to alienate Americans from Revolutionary France and rebellious Ireland, and to draw together New England and Old England.

It is only politicians who propogate the idea of an Anglo-Saxon superiority. Every scholar knows it to be false.

What say the latest and best historians and ethnologists? That the oval-headed Celtic type is seen in greatest purity among the North Italians, North Spaniards, Western French, and Belgians. They extend along the coast, more or less, into Norway, where the oval-headed Norse-men contrast with the square and broad-headed Swedes and other Scandinavian Goths.

In the British Isles, the Saxon race overran the whole east and middle of England. There the language and the blood became mixed. The majority of the inhabitants, however, were British.

But the West, and especially the South-west of England, as well as Wales, remained always purely Celtic, speaking their Gælic up to a late date. Ireland and Scotland, especially the North-West, have always been Celtic. Our language—Modern English as it is called—originated and extended only among the Western Celtic population above mentioned. To this day, the Gothic dialects prevail in the Saxonized counties of England and the East Lothians.

At the Reformation, the State-Churchism of Luther was rejected by the Celtic people aforesaid. They became Presbyterians, Puritans, Methodists, &c., or remained Catholic. Hence all these were persecuted and driven out; and hence we find that the early as well as the late immigrants to America were from the West and South of England—from Wales, and Scotland, and Ireland—coming to mingle their blood with the French and Spaniards in the North, West, and South.

The Spaniards, French, South-West British, Welsh, Scotch, and Irish have formed, then, the great tide of American Population. The Saxon and true Gotho-German of North Europe have never equalled the immigration of the Celto-Germans of the Rhine, the Belgians, and we may add, the oval-headed Norwegians or Normans. This small Gothic and Saxon element must, therefore, become absorbed and lost.

America is a combination of the old Celtic Nationalities, while Central and East England—and Central East and North Europe—remain Gothic in their blood and institutions.

Who were the Anglo-Saxons? They were gangs of barbarous marauders that infested the British coast, and ultimately swarmed into the land. They were not a Nation, but the scum of several fair-haired, flat-headed Gothic tribes of North Europe.

The Irish endeavored to Christianize them. They gave them letters, and all the civilization that ever they had. For centuries the Saxons sold themselves to the Irish. When they ceased to be savage pirates, the Saxons became the vilest slaves. Since the Norman conquest they have formed the most brutalised population in Europe—mere animals, without an idea of any God but that of their master, the Norman-French lord—bacon-eating boors in the field, or four-footed beasts of burden in the coal-pits.

What was the origin of this newly discovered Anglo-Saxonism? Did science conceive it? Does charity strengthen it? Does religion maintain it? Does the spirit of liberty propagate it? Or is it an overgrown English falsehood, a nondescript monstrosity that defies classification in natural history? A German, and not a German; an Anglo-Saxon, and yet a Briton; a dark-haired man claiming descent from the flaxen-haired Goth. Is this not a pitiable state of humiliation to which English writers have reduced American citizens, putting them on a level with the very dogs.

We are sorry to be obliged to write thus strongly, but the mischief as well as the insolence of this Anglo-Saxonism is a growing cancer that must be excised by the root. Popular hallucinations are pitiable, but this Anglo-Saxon delusion which English writers have propagated, is disgraceful to the intelligence of American citizens. It puts them in the position of Foundlings.

The London Times office is to Public Opinion, what the Bank of England is to the Commercial World. It manufactures a paper currency of falsehood, which is taken up and circulated by the servile or fanatical press in England and America.

But when deception has done its work, when English policy is accomplished, then no journal can surpass the London Times in the candor and truthfulness of its remarks.

We have preserved the following from the Thunderer, written after the Irish Emigration received a check from the Know-Nothing movement:—

"Nothing indeed is so remarkable as the rapid assimilation of English, Irish, Scotch, German, and even French nationalities, not to speak of some half dozen lesser distinctions of race, in the average American type. It might have been expected that the fact of this continual fusion, would have led the citizens of the Union to assume it as a political condition, to reckon upon it, to promote it, and remove all obstacles, and to hail as second only to those who signed the Declaration of American Independence, any one who should devote himself to the task of conciliating and harmonising the heterogeneous mass of Immigration. There are men who do this great work. There are others who do their best to hinder it. Thanks to the exertions of the latter class, the Irish Immigrant finds, if not actual persecution, at least the treatment of aliens and intruders. He is confronted by cold looks, by invidious rules, by factious demonstrations, and everything short of law and worse than law. No doubt this, as far as it goes, drives the Celt back to his own country. He will not make himself at home where he does not find himself at home."

The Britishers are abler politicians than the calculating race of this country are willing to admit. English policy drove forth the Irish when they were not wanted. The same policy, acting through Orange agents, promoted the Know-Nothing persecution to disgust and send them back.

The Anglo-Saxon doctrine has been the most successful stroke of policy, as it is the falsest theory that ever emanated from British statesmen.

It is the duty of every true American to put down this overgrown English lie.

The American language is Celtic. It differs from the Saxon dialects of England, and originated and spread, up to the present day, only among the Celtic population. The American forms of religion, opposed to the State Church, belonged to the persecuted Celts. The oval-headed, dark American physique is Celtic. The Presidents and greatest statesmen of America, from Washington to Buchanan, have been, with two or three exceptions, Celtic. The free and democratic spirit of America, inherited from France, Wales, Ireland, and the Scottish clans, and deadly opposed to the Gothic feudalism of England and Germany, is Celtic. Therefore let us hear no more of the flunkey Prince-Albert-Saxe-Gotha cant, about German and Anglo-Saxon superiority.

DEATH OF MRS. LYNCH.

No season—the happiest that brightens this earth—is without its shadow. The echoes of the grave are ever audible. No triumph, with its trumpets and chariots, has silenced them. No song of youth, or hope, or love, however thrilling and divine, has stilled those dread Voices of the Night.

And so, in the very dawn of this beauteous New Year, rosy and glowing with so many hopes and good resolves, comes a cloud of sorrow above the house of our friend, Patrick Lynch. And thus, in the midst of the congratulations we offer with a heart full to a crowd of generous natures, it becomes with us a mournful duty to assure him of our sincere sympathy and condolence.

In the adversities that have at times made our path rugged and dark, we have had the hand, heart, and warm words of our friend to cheer us. Now that it has pleased Heaven to visit him with the heaviest sorrow a man can have, he has from us all that a heart, made grateful by his own kind offices and consolations, can offer. He has the full measure of our sympathy. He has the assurance of the respect and admiration with which in life she, who has been taken from him, was ever regarded by us, and with which, now that the snow has fallen on her grave, she must for years be remembered by all who knew her.

RECEPTION OF THE RESOLUTE IN ENGLAND.

The generous and dignified action of our Government in returning to the English authorities the Arctic-ship Resolute, which was picked up by an American whaler, has been made the occasion of great rejoicing both at Cowes and Spithead. She was received not alone with one, but with three Royal salutes, and had the honor of a Royal visit. There was a blending of flags—a commingling of Stars and Stripes with Union Jacks and Royal Standards—and a perfect reciprocity of Royal and Republican amenities. Her Majesty conformed to the simple usages of this country, by dispensing with those appendages of Monarchy which are calculated to beget irreverence and ridicule. With the exception of two Royal Grooms, riding down to the Government dock to announce that her Majesty would be punctual to her appointment, the buffoonery usual upon such occasions was dispensed with. The Queen was received at the gangway of the Resolute, by Captain Harstein and his officers, with a bearing at once independent, dignified and genial. The Captain then delivered the following address:—"Will your Majesty allow me to welcome you on board the Resolute, and in accordance with the wishes of my countrymen, and in obedience to my instructions from the President of the United States to return her to your Majesty, not only as an expression of friendly feeling to your sovereignty, but as a token of love, admiration, and respect for your Majesty's person."

The customary introductions then took place, and her Majesty, having inspected the vessel, and condescended to remain on board about an hour, took her departure.

This little episode in the history of Royal receptions in England cannot fail to convey a useful lesson to the people of that country, who have been accustomed to see only loyal masquerades, and burlesques upon freedom and dignity of action. It must certainly convey to them a proper notion of the institutions and and sovereignty of American citizens. There was respect without cringing, and courtly demeanor without fawning.

This event also reminds our people of the rapid growth of the United States in national strength and commercial greatness. Seventy-nine years ago, the first American flag was first seen in British waters. The Stars and Stripes flew from the mast-head of the Ranger—Paul Jones swept the English Channel, from Whitehaven to Carrickfergus, carrying terror into the ports and harbors of the three kingdoms. The only Royal salute he received was from the broadsides of the Drake, which he captured in Belfast Lough.

Indeed, the whole proceedings were fruitful of pleasing reminiscences. Her Majesty and attendants might have been reminded, when they saw the Stars and Stripes displayed from the peak of the Resolute, "in graceful harmony with the Red Cross of St. George," that it was not the first time the American colors graced an English vessel. For the frigate Macedonian, captured in the war of 1812, was despatched to Cork, by this Government in 1847, with provisions and clothing for her Majesty's starving subjects of Ireland. There were no salutes fired upon that occasion, nor did Osborne cross over to Cove with Royal greetings to that messenger of charity and love!

The parade at Cowes and the thundering salutes at Spithead were state tricks got up to make capital with a generous and impressionable people. A storm is gathering in Europe, another war is impending, and England has not in that hemisphere a single reliable ally. Should the crafty ministers of Queen Victoria succeed in bringing the United States into an offensive and defensive alliance with Great Britain, she might be able to maintain her influence somewhat longer in the councils of Europe, and retard the establishment of republican institutions in those countries where pretended sympathy caused her to be regarded as a friend instead of the most inveterate and formidable enemy the advocates of European progress could encounter.

Why has not her Majesty appointed an ambassador to the vacant post at Washington? Is such studied insult a work of respect for the government and people of America. Because, after all, that is a question which obtrudes itself amid those courtly congratulations, aristocratic festivities, scientific reunions, turtle feeds at Portsmouth, and popular rejoicings at Cowes and Brighton.

NOTICE TO OUR COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.—A friend whose knowledge and avocations peculiarly qualify him for the task, has kindly undertaken to carefully revise, every week, the wholesale prices of all the items of country produce disposed of in the New-York market for us. It often occurs in the hurry incident upon the publication of a daily paper that slight errors happen, in regard to figures, which may considerably affect country producers. We therefore intend to keep our country readers correctly posted in such matters.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

PAT COSTELLO WITH SOME OF THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME—PIERCE MAHONY—PURCELL O'GORMAN—MAJOR TALBOT AND CONWAY OF THE CASTLE—A DINNER AT SALT-HILL.

Those who have been made at-all familiar with the incidents of the great prosecution, instituted against O'Connell, in the autumn of 1843, by the Government of Sir Robert Peel, will quickly recognise the name of Mr. Pierce Mahony in connection with them. Of the formidable defence in that case, he was the sustaining spirit. The forts and trenches, behind which the towering Tribune of Derrynane enthroned himself, were the work of this eminent attorney from Kerry. He was the Todleben of the siege which Conciliation Hall bore the hot brunt of for months. Shiel, Whiteside, Fitzgibbon were the conspicuous officers in the field. Mahony, the engineer, whose glory was half concealed by the huge mounds—the volcanic masses of earth, and stone, and timber—which rolled back the tide of war. The evening the special steamboat from Liverpool brought the news that the House of Lords had reversed the sentence of the Queen's Bench, Mr. Pierce Mahony might have been descried from the Kingstown jetty, standing on the paddle box, as the boat swept under the light-house, into the noble basin of which it is the sleepless sentinel. His burly figure was unmistakeable. The decorations he exhibited, fixed the public eye upon him. The observed of all observers, he carried a tall white wand in his right hand, and wore a broad white ribbon round his hat. Were it not pretty well understood that the boat was freighted with good news, Mr. Pierce Mahony might have been mistaken for a mute. A broad sheet of paste-board, inserted into a slit, surmounted the wand. It bore in black Romans the joyful intelligence of the Liberator's liberation.

A few years previous to this, the same gentleman had acquired a considerable celebrity as the author of the Leinster Declaration—a pompous repudiation of Repeal, signed by a crowd of titled and estated provincialists, headed by Ireland's only Duke. Frequently referred to by O'Connell with mimickry and scorn, it had associated Mr. Pierce Mahony in the popular judgment with the enemies of Ireland. Deep were the groans with which his name was frequently received at the meetings which preceded the tumult and catastrophe of 1843. Indeed, the pervading idea amongst the people attributed to Mr. Mahony the credit of indefatigably cultivating the acquaintanceship and patronage of every noodle who had a coronet on his carriage, or was born with a dozen silver spoons in his mouth. Were this the truth, Mr. Mahony was no exception to the general tendency of the profession he adorned. Paul Rooney, perpetually entertaining the officers of the garison, and every knight, baronet, or peer he chanced to fall in with, in his searches after title in Dublin, until in the Hotel de Kilmainham he broke down with his Cruskeen Lawn before the Emperor of Russia, is hardly an exaggeration of the Irish attorney, who, in plentiful practice, makes the most of his clients.

Towards the close of the struggle for Catholic Emancipation, Mr. Pierce Mahony was one of a deputation to London. Shiel, O'Gorman Mahon, Jack Lawless, Wyse, and other celebrities, were on it. A consultation with Mr. Brougham, Earl Grey, the Duke of Sussex, and the more illustrious champions of the Catholic claims, was the purpose of the deputation. During their stay in London, they experienced in the highest quarters the most brilliant courtesy. The hospitality extended to them was profuse. Shiel, if I recollect right, says it was prodigal. Entertained at a public dinner in the Freemasons' Tavern, with a Prince of the Blood in the chair, they were bewildered with invitations to the houses of the more liberal Nobility. The Duke of Norfolk gave a banquet in their honor, the splendor of which it would take the pen of the author of the Epicurean to commemorate. Pierce Mahony was in his glory. He never before appeared to such advantage. Meeting him in the Stephen's Green Club, at Burton Bindon's, or any place else, on his return to Dublin after this visit to London, his friends used to say—

"Why, Pierce, you've grown enormous!"

Pierce would cuckle over this. It was his cue to a personal narrative of dinners, luncheons, suppers, balls, and private interviews at great houses, which was only cut short by an invitation to him to finish it that evening over a good bottle of wine. From his own account, it would appear that Mr. Pierce Mahony was the most distinguished member of the Catholic delegation to London. He had compliments—compliments the most gracious—paid him. Compliments, he said, which, some-how or other it happened, were paid to none of the rest. Beside the great banquet given the deputies at Norfolk House, at which he assisted with the rest of the popular embassy, Mr. Pierce Mahony was specially invited to take fish with his Grace the last Friday previous to his starting for Dublin. His Grace being a Catholic, not only had fish for himself on a Friday, but provided it for those who concurred with him in religious belief. Mr. Mahony regarded this as a wonderful instance of condescension and thoughtfulness. He spoke of it loudly. His eloquence on the subject was a treat by itself. It was positively luxurious. No mock turtle was ever more luscious. To Pat Costello, however, it soon grew to be distasteful. Worse than distasteful. For Pat used to complain it gave him the night-mare.

"I'll spoil that fish dinner on him, as sure as he lives," says Pat.

Not long after this, the jovial old blade of Kilkenny met Mr. Pierce Mahony in the coffee-room of the Salt-hill hotel. It was a very bleak day. The remains of the winter's snow was on the ground. From the windows of the hotel the waves looked cold and wild. An angry breeze broke the white crests, flinging them in showers of foam against the storm-wall which defends the railway on the sea-side, and far over the railway itself. Out to sea, not a sail was visible. A solitary gull, sweeping down towards the strand at Sandymount, was the only living thing to be seen above the waters. The trees about the hotel were the very pictures of misery. They were thin, naked, starved. They were enough—the very sight of them—to give one the shivers. It was just such a day as to bring gentlemen of convivial natures into cosy groups about a fire-place. It was just such a day as to provoke an appetite for the best of dishes and decanters. It was just such a day as stimulates wit, prodigious good fellowship, and a love for all other good things.

Mr. Pierce Mahony and Mr. Pat Costello were the pioneers of a large party who had made arrangements to celebrate some political event—I believe the Whig majority on a late division in Parliament—by a dinner at Salt-hill—by making a regular night of it, in fact. Shortly after they came on the ground, old Fred Conway, of the Evening Post, appeared in his spectacles. Nicholas Purcell O'Gorman followed the Post. He wore a plentiful blue dress-coat—the broadest of skirts and brass buttons—an exuberance of shirt-frill and a bulwark of shirt-collar—and in his plump right hand grasped a fur cap and the ivory knob of a ponderous hazel.

He looked the lord of the house. The same masterly cartoon of good-health, consequence, ancient chivalry and hospitable cheer, as in strong outline and shadow he loomed up before me, a dozen years subsequently, in the front row of the dress-circle, in Hawkin's street Theatre, in the city of Dublin. It was a Command-night. The Earl of Clarendon occupied the Vice-regal box. Sir Edward Blakeney, the Commander of the Forces, glowed in crimson and gold in the box opposite. Uniforms of Hussar, Fuzileer, Rifle and Heavy Dragoon officers relieved the sombre monotony of black coats in the lower part of the house. Merrion Square, Stephen's Green, Fitzwilliam street, and all the other aristocratic regions of the city, had poured in their streams of perfumed finery above the Pit. The Gods had assembled in tumultuous force, and from the balcony of their dusky Olympus—close under the eaves of the frescoed roof—flashed their wit, and at intervals their humorsome ribaldry, on the minor, but more pretentious divinities below them. It was an Attic night. Helen Faucit trod the stage as Antigone in the sublime tragedy of Sophocles. The chorus, with their peals of song; the burning tripod; the chaste accessories of Corinthian column, vase, and curtain; the plenitude of the drapery in which the Grecian forms were clad; the loftiness of the sentiment which renewed the patriotism, the religion and the heroic poetry of the land of Homer Miltiades, the priests of the Parthenon, and the orators of the Arcopagus; the artistic excellence, physical power, enthusiasm and genius with which all was rendered, restored to an inferior day the full grandeur of the epoch. The magnificent anthem—God Save the Queen—with the ebb and flow of the ocean at midnight—sustained the illusion.

As was customary, Patrick's Day followed. The enchantment was dispelled. The Gods returned with a bound to Irish soil. Olympus, transformed into a Rath, shook with roars of delight. The Pit rose to a man. It was a sudden intoxication which seized the House. One portion of it alone escaped. One portion of it, alone preserved its coldness, imperturbability, and dull decorum. One portion of it alone was impervious to the national enthusiasm which that dashing, rollicking air inspired. The Dress-circle subsided into a pale stagnation. The military gentlemen pouted, sneered, twisted their moustachees, lisped, hemmed and hawed, and kept their cushioned seats. Their admirers did the same. It was not genteel for ladies, who received officers of the English army at their houses, to give way to any feeling when Patrick's Day was played. It would have lost them the patronage of the garrison—of Portobello and the Beggar's Bush—had they pretended to recognise the vulgar composition. Without the red millinery and epaulettes, what would the drawing-rooms of the Belgravia—the Faubourg St. Germain of Dublin—do? Without the blessed dragon-flies, with their glittering scales, what could the peach-skinned and gauze-winged moths and butterflies of the gardens and conservatories of the Squares, on either side the limpid Liffey, do? How could an Irish girl, who had the run of the Castle, marry any one but an English servant?

But the honest democracy overflowing the Theatre, cared nothing for the conceits and incivilities of the Dress-circle. They cheered as though there were no Dress-circle. They cheered as though no insipid Viceroy were present, or within miles. They cheered as if the House were their own. Absolutely cheered as if the island, from sea to sea, was theirs at last. And as the fiddles and drums finished off Patrick's Day with a crash, above the cheers and music the voice of Nicholas Purcell O'Gorman was heard, as if issuing from the ton of Hidelberg, calling upon the orchestra to give them Garryowen—

"Give us Garryowen!" he roared.

Nicholas Purcell O'Gorman was the same that night—that Attic night—as he was, a dozen years before, in the coffee-room of the Salt-hill hotel, waiting for his dinner.

The Assistant-barrister of the County Kilkenny had not been many seconds in the room, before my friend, Major Talbot entered. The Major blew very hard as he took off his hat, and wished the company good evening. For several years he had been on half-pay, and had lost his military waist. It would have no longer looked well in tight regimentals. An aldermanic gown was better adapted to the girth it had gained. The Major was loosely attired. Big coat, big shoes with drab gaiters, big waistcoat—a blazing plaid waistcoat—broad-leafed black hat, and a slovenly large wig of a deep purple tint—made up his dining, and, in fact, his every-day costume. Like most military characters belonging to the old school—the old Peninsular school, as he used to say with an emphasis—he was a stern conservative. His indisposition to everything like change, affected his toilette. It might be said literally to have affected his purse. But it was no empty boast, that he belonged to the old Peninsular school. The Major served gallantly with his regiment, the 27th Foot, all through the campaign under Wellington, in Portugal and Spain. At the siege of Badajoz, three ladders broke under him. Two balls in his left arm were continually quoted as evidence of his courage at Pampeluna. The balls were never extracted. It was with some difficulty, therefore, he managed to play on the flute. Constant practice, however, overcame the awkwardness his wounds inflicted, and at the time I became acquainted with him, he performed on his favorite instrument with facility and grace. His rooms, at the top of an old house in Aungier-street, two or three nights in the year echoed with hilarious anecdotes, the jingling of glasses, the sweetest of music. Whenever the conversation flagged, or a dispute arose, the Major, dilating at the head of his table, made it a point to interpose his flute. It had a magical effect. I chanced to be present one night when a discussion occurred between two elderly gentlemen, both very sensitive, pertinacious, and hot. The one, a retired Captain of the Bombay Artillery. The other, an incapable old Lieutenant of the old Dublin Militia. A passage in Napier's history of the Peninsular War, provoked the dispute. The controversialists warmed and stormed, looked daggers and threatened each other with coffee and pistols until the argument verged upon blows. The Major demanded silence, and pouring his soul through his cocoa-wood flute, after a few bars of Di Tanti Palpiti, succeeded in restoring the smiles of the feast.

Most of the company having arrived, the merriest talk was on foot. Conway had his quick quaint sayings à propos to the political events of the day, and the pretensions and blunders of his political opponents. O'Gorman had his reminiscences of the Catholic Association—of heroic times long antecedent to that—and the more degenerate times which found him presiding in the Kilkenny Court of Quarter-Sessions.

"The most ungracious—I might add, the most ignoble duty I have had ever to perform"—so he spoke.

"You may say that," said Costello; "for when you threatened the attorneys of the Court one day to apply for a translation to another County, Mick Hyland, you know, got up and assured your Worship there wasn't an attorney in Court who wouldn't back the humble petition."

The Major intervened here. He had a delicate little morsel of scandal to give them. Breakfasting at the Richmond barracks that morning, he had picked it up, pocketed it for the company that evening, but thought they might as well have it before they moved in to dinner. It would serve as a pickle.

Then, somehow or other, the conversation turned upon Shiel. Conway introduced the topic. He referred to the speech Shiel had just made upon Lord Stanley's Registration Bill. A glorious speech! Everyone there said so. Pat Costello vowed it beat his speech upon the adultery and death of the Duke of York. The Major swore it reminded him of a charge of bayonets in the Peninsula. Purcell O'Gorman decided it was excellent in its way—the time and place of its delivery considered—but was of opinion that Shiels' Catholic Association speeches had never been excelled by those he delivered in Parliament.

"What is there," he asked, "at all, to equal his speech on the King's visit?"

"Or his speech defending Father Brady at the Quarter Sessions of Cavan?" Mr. Costello suggested.

"Don't forget his speech on the meeting of the Elect in the Rotunda," said Conway, "where he described the sweet-spirited lispers of the Gospel, who taught the rigid doctrines of Calvin with the impassioned tenderness of Abelard."

"Pooh! Pooh!" exclaimed Purcell O'Gorman, "it's nothing to what he said about the Protestant Burial Bill, as it was called. Lord Rossmore was in the chair of the Association the day Shiel spoke of it."

"Give it to us," the Major cried out, pulling down his blazing red waistcoat, and stiffening his collar.

"By that Bill, my Lord, we are permitted to rot by the side of our Protestant brethren. Henceforth the honorable dust of a Protestant gentleman will be blended with and profaned by an ignominious commixture with Popish carrion, and the centipedes that revel on the sumptuous banquet provided by a Protestant prelate in the grave will sometimes turn, for the sake of a cadaverous variety, to the more slim repast supplied by a Popish curate."

"Well done, Purcell!" was Pierce Mahony's exclamation, as the quotation was finished. "But even that was nothing to what he let off in the Freemason's Tavern the time I was on the deputation with him to London."

"That's the time you dined with the Duke of Norkfolk," says Costello, winking to Conway, and nudging the Major.

"The very time," Mr. Mahony quickly replied.

And Mr. Mahony, who had been somewhat dull all this time, having had his special chord struck, went off with a volume of sound and deafened the company. The old story of the deputation to London was told over anew. With Mr. Pierce Mahony, it was the Old Hundreth psalm. The dinner at Mr. Brougham's house, where Daniel O'Connell sat between the Dukes of Devonshire and Leinster; the famous scene in the House of Commons between Peel and Brougham, when the patriotism, the misfortunes, and gray hairs of Hamilton Rowan were dragged into debate by the former, and were rescued, with such a terrible retaliation on Peel, by the heart, memory, and genius of the latter; the banquet at Norfolk House, in the room where George the Third was born, and where, besides those already mentioned, the Irish agitators met and hob-nobbed with Lords Fitzwilliam, Shrewsbury, Donoughmore, Stourton, Clifford and Arundel, Sir Francis Burdett, Messrs. Abercrombie and Denman; these, and several other incidents, were related by Mr. Pierce Mahony, as though it were the first time he told them.

"But what"—Mr. Costello put the question—"what about the fish dinner you had at the Duke's house?"

Nothing could be more gracious, more condescending, more thoughtful, more bounteous. It was Friday, and he had enough fish to do him for Lent.

"Blood-an-ouns!" says Pat, "and so, Pierce, they left you enough from the Parlor!"

ENGLISH APPROPRIATION OF IRISH INTELLECT.

BY THOMAS DAVIS.

At this season of rejoicing, it is well that Irishmen should renew those memories which shed lustre on their country. The following essay, written in 1842, by Thomas Davis, outlines in a very suggestive manner a theme upon which Irishmen can dwell with much benefit to themselves. This paper is not included in the only volume yet collected of Davis's Essays; and, therefore, has a freshness (although many of the persons mentioned therein are now dead) quite in keeping with its bright epigrammatic style:

The late Allan Cunningham, in his "History of the British Literature of the last Fifty Years," says, "That with all her eloquence, feeling, and fancy, Ireland contributes little, at least less than she ought, to the literature of the empire; for what she pleases to send us we are thankful, the quality is good."

To the latter portion of the Scotch critic's sentence we assent, as completely as we dissent from its commencement. We admit that the quality of intellectual wares which Ireland contributes to the imperial literature is good; but we assert also that its quantity is great.

Irish Usher, Boyle, and Berkley, Swift, Sterne, and Goldsmith, Lucas, Burke, and O'Leary, Flood, Grattan, and Curran, are not without Irish successors.

What has Ireland lately contributed—what does she at present contribute to the mind-monopoly, and mind robbery of England?

The first dramatic writer of the day—writing in the English language—is James Sheridan Knowles; and he is first, merely because the grave has closed upon his countryman Griffin, the author of the best—far the best of modern tragedies—Gysippus. It cannot be for a moment contended that Talfourd or Bulwer can, as dramatists, be placed in the same rank as Knowles. The best performance of the first—his Ion—can scarcely be said to keep the stage. Its composition cost some fourteen years; less than half that period has been sufficient to consign it to oblivion. The Athenian Captive, and another drama, the Massacre of Glencoe, are no more. The comparison would indeed be odious were we to compare William Tell and The Lady of Lyons, Virginius and Richelieu, The Wife and the Sea Captain. The two most successful comedies, since the production of Sheridan's School for Scandal, viz., London Assurance (Convent Garden, 1841), and Marriage (Haymarket, 1841), are both the works of Irishmen.

In Poetry we contribute Moore.

In Oratory, we contribute—no! we are wrong—O'Connell is too Irish—too completely national to be confounded with anything English; we give them Sheil.

In Fiction, we have, or rather lately had, Maturin, Banim and Griffin; we still have Miss Edgeworth, the first of female writers; Lady Morgan, Colley Grattan, and though last, far indeed from least, Carleton. Patronage, The Collegians, Tales of the O'Hara Family, and The Convicts of Lisnamona are worth all the Pelhams, Peter Simples, et hoc genus omne, ever published. Boz is, indeed, an honor to England; and so justly appreciated is he by the English, that a considerable portion of their press prefer to Pickwick, Nickleby, and The Clock, the amusingly told stories of Lorrequer—de gustibus non disputandum.

In History, it is true, we are as yet deficient—I say as yet, for M'Cullagh and O'Callaghan have done much to create a thirsting in the Irish people for historical information; and ere long we shall begin to perceive the fruits of their labors. Still; a little time, and we shall have Irish historical writers, and, what will be infinitely more valuable, Irish histories of Ireland.

In Criticism, with the single exception—but it is a great one—of John Wilson Croker, we are also wanting. Croker was one of the principal contributors to the Quarterly. He was long the rival of the editor, and that editor was William Gifford. Croker was, moreover, an orator and a poet, and eminent in both capacities.

Among the most brilliant contributors to the periodical press of England are to be found Irishmen. Fraser's Magazine, so long at the head of the English monthlies, was never so popular as during the publication of the "Prout Papers," written by the Irish editor. There is scarcely a periodical in England which does not number some one or two of our countrymen among its contributors. Bating its very bad politics, our own University is equal to any, and superior to most, of the English periodicals of the same class.

It is an ascertained fact, that the overwhelming majority of the gentlemen connected with the London newspaper press are Irish.

In Science, we boast such names as Hamilton, M'Cullagh, Lloyd—men whose great scientific attainments are beyond question, and the first of whom has long enjoyed a European reputation.

In Cambridge, the science University of England, the Irish have eminently distinguished themselves, particularly of late years: we may find some mere Irish, with mere Milesian names, among the fellows and tutors.

There is a man who holds a high rank—the highest in the English army—but, although we might, we claim him not.

Turn we now to other matters, and we will find Irishmen occupying the highest position as musicians, painters, sculptors, and architects.

In Music, Balfe and Rooke (the original name of the latter was Rourke, but to satisfy the anti-Irish prejudices of the English, he was forced literally to "jump Jim Crow," and become Rooke) are the first in England. The operas of the former are numerous, and were on their production most successful; and if the second had produced nothing but his Amelie, or the Love Test, his fame as a composer would be fully established. The Morning Post says, that the celebrated "English" composer, Balfe, is now writing for the Opera Français and the Opera Comique at Paris. We hope that French ears will distinguish, and French hearts re-echo the music of our country—we have an idea that a grand medley might be composed of the Ca ira and the Shan Van Vocht, the Marseillaise and Garryowen.

In Painting, the President of the Royal Academy of Painting, Sir Martin A. Shee, is a Corkman (par parenthese); the President of the Academy of Painting of New-York is also a countryman of ours. But honor to America! the country which has ever generously afforded an asylum to our exiled patriots—which honors them while living, and erects monuments to them when dead—the country which sympathises with us in our sufferings, cheers us and aids us in our endeavors to redress them, is worthy of all we can bestow. We will only rejoice the more in the glory of America, if we know we have in any degree contributed to its increase. In addition to these, there is Maclise, who, in his department, stands without a rival.

In Portrait Painting, a department of the art which the English have particularly cultivated, Rothwell is in the very first rank. In Water Color Painting, Burton is first. Sam. Lover, too, holds a high place in this branch. Lover is, indeed, what a Lover should be—a musician, a painter, a poet, and moreover, a novelist. H. B., the celebrated political caricaturist, a great satirist, and in his line, an unequalled artist, is an Irishman, his real name is Doyle.

In Sculpture, we have Hogan, Moore, and Turnerelli. Here there can be no competition on the part of England.

We may here express a hope that the day is not far distant when the pencil of the Irish painter, and the chisel of the Irish sculptor, will be employed on Irish subjects for an Irish Pantheon. Doyle, and Curran, and O'Connell already breathe in the marble of Hogan, Moore, and Turnerelli. Soon may we have a Pantheon for all the illustrious of Ireland, with the inscription from the French, "Aux grands nommes la patrie reconnaissante," translated into any language but the English, and within its walls the honored remains of our Tones, Fitzgeralds, Emmets, and MacNevins. And we will have it—and that before long—before the foot of the Saxon can have worn the inscription from the stones which in Westminster Abbey covers our Grattans, our Burkes, and our Sheridans—"A toutes les glories de l'Irlande!

In Architecture, who can doubt our taste and talent? Our deserted, yet queenly city is a demonstration. Look at the buildings which during the short space of Ireland's life time sprung up on all sides. We should mention the architect of the new houses of parliament—Barry (a name dear to the arts), is a native of Ireland.

All the names which we have mentioned belong to Ireland; they are appropriated by England; this should not endure, nor be endured. Ireland for the Irish, and the Irish for Ireland! Give unto Cæsar what belongs unto Cæsar, but let us give him more. Draw a line—a deep one, as deep as the channel between the nations. They are our superiors in nothing; in many things we are theirs. Their people are ignorant, boorish, besotted, immoral, swinish—aye, and cowardly. We have been speaking of mind. Some one has said that he should judge of a people by their amusements. What would such an observer think were the manager of a metropolitan theatre, in a Christian country, to produce as an attraction, not an old established favorite actress, but a woman whose only merit was the fact of being, an admitted, and known prostitute, and suspected——Oh! our masters!

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.

A DOGGEREL, DEDICATED TO THE IRISH TENANT LEAGUE.

To guard their homes and liberty
Our fathers had to fight,
But lordly law protects us now,
We've got our Tenant Right,
The privilege of flight.

Chorus.—Then let us sing God save the Queen,
Without her we should perish.
The bayonet, bishops and the lords,
For evermore we'll cherish,
For evermore we'll cherish.

We shall maintain the right divine
Of consecrated noodles,
Though pauper babes in hunger pine,
While nurses 'tend to poodles,
The happy, happy poodles.

Chorus.

The lord is born the law to form,
And take the lion's share;
While we all fret and toil and sweat,
Or live upon the air,
And fatten on the air.

Chorus.

When famine sweeps the farmer's home,
And peace and joy forsake it,
When not a penny's to be had,
His lordship will not take it,
'Twould break his heart to take it.

Chorus.

The law is kind, the law is strong,
To punish, or to save.
The worker old gets his reward—
The Poorhouse or the grave,
The shelter of the grave.

Chorus.

While cruel acts of noble lords
Bring grief and destitution,
We can, for comfort, look upon
The British Constitution,
"Our glorious Constitution."

Chorus.—Then let us sing God save the Queen.
Without her we should perish,
The bayonet, bishops and the lords
For evermore we'll cherish,
For evermore we'll cherish.

Old Sam.

WINTER THOUGHTS.

NO. 1—THE DEAD YEAR.

I.

Yet another chief is carried
From life's battle on his spears,
To the great Valhalla cloisters
Of the ever-living years.

II.

Yet another year—the mummy
Of a warlike giant, vast—
Is nich'd within the pyramid
Of the ever-growing past.

III.

Years roll through the palm of Ages,
As the dropping ros'ry speeds
Through the cold and passive fingers
Of a hermit at his beads.

IV.

One year falls and ends its penance,
One arises with its needs,
And 'tis ever thus prays Nature,
Only telling years for beads.

V.

Years, like acorns from the branches
Of the giant oak of Time,
Fill the earth with healthy seedlings
For a future more sublime.

NO. 2—A FROSTY NIGHT.

I.

As one that worketh miracles, the Moon
Transfigures all the silence into light;
And filagreed with frost the hill-sides white,
And sloping uplands flecked with drifted snow,
Seem through their statued chill to whine a low
And plaintive croon.

II.

The groves that were in summer-time all song,
Profuse in clear soprano tones of glee,
Now hoarsely dull, like voice-cracked choirs dree
Their shivering existences, and make Night mournful, as the dirges slowly take Their woes along.

III.

The mountain gorges, that like arteries ran
With June-breath, hot as blood, are weirdly numb,
And here and there the trickling streamlets come
And break the frost in many a wild device,
Struggling athrough thin barricades of ice
That all the gullies span.

IV.

The lonely trees, scant-robed in crispy snow,
Stretching their bare arms upward to the sky,
Seem like poor buried souls, who did not die,
That waking, burst their sepulchres, and strive
With piteous plaints, to prove themselves alive
To their mad woe.

V.

As o'er the ghostly landscape peers the sight,
The moonlight teaming an unbroken flood—
The stars that in their planet coteries brood
Over earth's solitude—the distant trackless sea—
Roll to Thought's shore the ebbless tide—Eternity,
This vast, pale night.

John Savage.

WIFE vs LADY.

A writer in the Evening Post well says that the word lady, as a substitute for wife, is one of the most snobbish cockneyisms or flunkeyisms of the day—yet the instinct of imitation leads many men, who ought to know better, to recognise "lady" as the synonym of wife.

The author of this innovation is not positively known; but it is certain that he was the lord of a hotel—aglice, landlord—who very properly held his lady—anglice, landlady—to be "first among women;" and who, therefore, considered it the tiptoppery of grace to his newly arriving guests to receive them with, "How do you do, Mr. Spriggins? How is your lady?" Or, if the "lady" aforesaid arrived in company with her aforesaid lord, he, the land-lord, would direct his clerk to record in the register of arrivals, "S. Peterkin Spriggins, Esq., and lady." So much for the origin of the cockneyism.

The word "wife," as Cæsar says of the polar star, "has no fellow in the firmament;" it has neither synonym nor substitute; and any attempt to supply either, is a sort of philological affront to the original.

Lady, on the other hand, is to a certain extent interchangeable with woman. As a descriptive term, it serves to discriminate between the orders of society, and so far forth indicates position, cultivation, refinement. Yet it is by no means universally the superior word. For example:

"Oh, woman, in our hours of ease."

And, in Portia's reply to Brutus:

Brutus—You are my true and honorable wife;
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit this sad heart.

Portia—If this were true, then I should know this secret.
I grant I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant I am a woman;
A woman well reputed—Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so fathered and so husbanded?

In cases like these, lady would make but a sorry figure. And then, again, in the case of the other Portia, where Bassanio says:

"Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had Ran in my veins. I was a gentleman;
And then I told you true; and yet, dear lady,

Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I am a braggart,"— woman would fare quite as indifferently.

"Lady," in a personal address, as in Bassanio's instance, is the indispensable word; and so, also, as a descriptive and discriminating term; but as the synonym of wife it is an unwarrantable and depreciating vulgarism, quite worthy of an illiterate source, and quite unbecoming well-bred men.

Literary and Artistic News.

Francis C. Gray, who was known as one of the early contributors to the North American Review, and as an able writer on Prison Discipline, and who has filled several important civil stations in Massachusetts, died at Boston, on the 29th ult., in the 66th year of his age. He was a son of William Gray, known in his time as one of the most eminent, enterprising and wealthiest merchants of the United States. The Boston Daily Advertiser says of him:—"He was born in Salem the 10th September, 1790. He graduated at Harvard College in 1809, with the second honors of his class. After leaving College, he went through a course of legal studies in the office of Hon. William Prescott, and was admitted to the bar, but he did not pursue the profession for a considerable time. Possessing ample wealth, he became a man of letters, and devoted his powerful and well-cultivated mind to the pursuits of literature. He was private secretary of Hon. John Quincy Adams when he was Minister in Russia. He was one of the most brilliant and accomplished writers among us, and was an early contributor to the North American Review. He was the author of that valuable paper entitled "Remarks on the Early Laws of Massachusetts Bay; with the Code adopted in 1641, and called the Body of Liberties," which is replete with important historical information. The paper was published in the eighth volume of the series of the Collection of the Massachusetts Historical Society. In August, 1816, he delivered an oration before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Harvard College, which was published in the North American Review for September of that year, and in August, 1840, he delivered the annual poem before the same society, which wes highly commended by the North American for January, 1841. In 1845 he published a pamphlet entitled "Prison Discipline in America," in which he made a powerful argument against the separate system of imprisonment or solitary confinement of prisoners. This pamphlet was noticed in strong terms of commendation in an able article in the Christian Examiner for March, 1848."

On the last visit of Jullien's band to Dublin he was accompanied a group of trumpeters of the far-famed 2nd Reg't of Zouaves—a corps whose deeds of daring and reckless bravery both in Algeria and in the more recent campaigns in the Crimea have made them not alone the subjects of popular curiosity, but also of that species of regard which dauntless heroism in the face of the enemy always produces amongst the people. The dress of the Zouave trumpeters besides, half oriental in its character, added not a little to the effect which their bronzed and strongly marked features and bold demeanor create, as they passed through the streets of the city. The arrangement for these concerts was made in the Rotundo Gardens, and was exceedingly well carried out. In the centre of the lawn was erected a light but substantial structure partaking of the character of a Turkish kiosk or pavilion. The interior lined with pink draperies, and illumined by a row of gas jets, traversed its entire circle at the back, whilst in front a pair of gas chandeliers shed their light on the performers. The concerts were, of course, most effective and successful.

Signor Felice Orsini, the celebrated Italian exile whose escape from an Austrian dungeon at Mantua, supplies one of the most exciting stories of prison-breaking on record, has been lecturing in London on Austrian and Papal tyranny. He is said to be the Kossuth of Italy. Orsini is about five-and-forty years of age, of middle stature, carries a black moustache and luxuriant beard, and is of gentlemanly appearance and manners. His handsome Italian countenance wears an expression at once manly, subtle, and resolute. He confesses with pride that he spent his whole life in conspiring and combating in behalf of Italian liberty and independence. He has been loaded with chains and lodged in a dozen prisons in Italy, and still devotes himself to labor and suffer for his native land.

The London journals are all rejoicing over a victory won by the Daily News over the Earl of Lucan, in a Court of Law. The News, it seems, very severely censured the Earl's conduct in the Crimea, for which he demanded a full retraction and apology. The Editor of the Daily News refused to retract, but offered to publish any letter which the Earl might see fit to write in reply. This offer was refused, and the Earl sued the News for libel. Upon the trial the defence called no witness, but contented itself with a cross-examination of the Earl himself, and submitted the case to the Jury as one in which there had clearly been nothing more than such an expression of opinion upon a matter of public interest as duty required. The Jury rendered a verdict of acquittal.

Professor Agassiz says that more than a lifetime would be necessary to enumerate the various species of insects and describe their appearance. Meiger, a German, collected and described 600 species of flies, which he collected in a district of ten miles in circumference. There have been collected in Europe 20,000 species of insects preying on wheat. In Berlin, two Professors are engaged collecting, observing and describing insects and their habits, and already have they published five large volumes upon the insects which attack forest trees

We learn from the Dublin papers that a succession of crowded audiences have assembled to witness the truly clever performances of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams. As a personator of Irish character—says the Nation—the former has at present very few (if any, superiors; and we are happy to say that his acting up to the present, has been well received and appreciated by the Dublin public. Mrs. Williams has become exceedingly popular with the frequenters of the theatre, and her comic representations of American character and mannerism, continue to be received with the applause which they richly deserve.

Mrs. Siddons, when looking over the statues of Lord Lansdowne's gallery, told him that one mode of expressing intensity of feeling, was suggested to her by the position of some of the Egyptian statues with the arms close down at the sides and the hand clenched. This is curious—says Mrs. Jameson—for attitude in the Egyptian gods, is intended to express repose. As the expression of intense passion self-controlled, it might be appropriate to some characters and not to others. Rachel, as I recollect, uses it in the Phedre—Madame Rettich uses it in the Medea. It would not be characteristic in Constance.

Of Mrs. Pritchard, who preceded Mrs. Siddons in the part of Lady Macbeth, it was well known that she had never read the play—she merely studied her own part as written out by the stage-copyist; of the other parts she knew nothing but the cues.

A recent book, justifying Slavery on Scriptural grounds, announced as having been written by Hon. Howell Cobb, of the House of Representatives, is said to be the production of another gentleman of the same name.

Burke's was a complete failure, when he flung the dagger on the floor of the House of Commons, and produced nothing but a smothered laugh, and a joke from Sheridan:—"The gentleman has brought us the knife, but where is the fork?

Two young ladies dwell at St. Ives,
And each a-churching goes;
Emma goes there to close her eyes,
And Jane to eye her clothes.

We understand that Messrs. Derby & Jackson lost by the late fire in William-street, two thousand copies of the Court of Napoleon, which were awaiting the arrival of the portraits from Paris.

Sixty thousand silver roubles have been subscribed in St. Petersburgh, towards erecting a monument to the Russian officers and soldiers killed in Sebastopol.

Australian lecturing is a stage in advance of that "at home." In Sydney, the Governor-General himself, Sir W. Denison, has taken to the platform.

The house of Schiller at Goblis, was purchased on the last anniversary of the birth-day of the great poet, for 2100 thalers, by the association which bears his name.

Poetry is not only one of the best safeguards of youth, but its brightest ornament.

A Young Mens' Magazine is soon to be started. Mr. R. C. McCormick, Jr., author of "A Visit to the Camp before Sebastopol," is to be the editor.

Judge Halliburton, author of Sam Slick, on the 16th ult. delivered the first of a course of lectures before the members of the Manchester Athenæum.

Mr. Sheepshanks, an Englishman of fortune and distinction, has recently presented his collection of paintings to the British nation. This collection, valued at $300,000, includes some of the best productions of modern English artists.

Beranger and Lamartine are suffering from indisposition. It is said that the former has finished his autobiography.

A statue has just been placed in Trafalgar-square to the memory of Sir C. J. Napier.

LOCAL CHANGES AND LOCAL FACTS

OF OLD NEW-YORK.

BY JOHN F. WATSON,

Author of the Annals of Philadelphia.

NO. III.

David Grim, in his very interesting topographical draft of the city as it was in 1742–4, (done by him when seventy-six years of age, in the year 1813,) is a highly useful relic and gift of the olden time. His generous attention to posterity in that gift to the Historical Society is beyond all praise, as a work in itself sui generis, and not to be replaced by any other data. He was a chronicle, who lived to be eighty-nine, and to wonder at the advancements and changes around him! I here mark some of his facts:

He marks the "Governor's Garden," near the fort, as ranging along the line of Whitehall-street, next the fort, and there turning an angle of the fort and enclosing westward to the river. This also agrees with the report of others, who told me of seeing deer kept by the governor in front of the fort on the ground of the Water-Battery.

Mr. Grim marks the line of a narrow canal or channel in Broad-street, as open above the present Pearl-street, and there covered by the bridge or Exchange-house, or both.

He marks the localities of public wells in the middle of the streets.

He marks Rutger's farm as lying north-west of the Collect, and Winthorn's farm as south-east of the same.

At the foot of Courtlandt-street he marks the then only wharf. We know it was built there for the king's purposes, having thereon an arsenal reaching up to Dey-street.

Mr. David Grim told his daughter of there having been a market once held at the head of Broad-street. This agrees with what G. N. Bleecker, Esq., told me—as from his grandmother—who spoke of a market at Grand-street, which was in effect the same place.

In Bakewell's City Portrait of 1747, a fine perspective marks the great dock at the foot of Broad-street, as having a long dividing wharf projecting into it from Broad-street, and set on piles, which leads me to the idea of "the bridge," so often named there. It was probably the landing-place for the unloaded goods from vessels in the east and west mole on both sides of it.

A low market-house on arches, having a large dial-plate on its roof in front, is set at the foot of Broad-street.

The city corporation grants to Trinity church, in 1703, as I saw of record in Mr. Bleecker's office, the grounds there "for a burying-place for the inhabitants of the city forever; and upon any of the inhabitants of said city paying therefor to the Rector, &c., 3s for each corpse above twelve years of age, and 1s. 6d. for any under twelve years of age, and no more." This last emphatic word may seem peculiar when we reflect how very special and exclusively those grounds have been so long occupied.

In the minutes of council of 1696, I saw that a sewer of 1,100 feet length was recommended to be made in the Broad-street.

I saw in the city commissioner's office, that the population of New-York, in 1730, was only 8628; and in 1825, it was 166,-086.

David Grim told Mr. Lydigg that he had seen the river-water over Chatham-street and Pearl-street, and extending from the East to the North river; along the line of the Collect as I presume.

Mr. Brower and others have explained to me, that all along the present Grand-street, as it approaches to Corlear's Hook, were formerly very high hills, covered with apple and peach-trees. Much too of the present level of Harman-street, leading into Grand-street, was formerly hills of sixty feet height. The materials of these hills so cut down, furnished excellent gravel for new streets, and especially the means of extending their grounds out into the rivers.

Hudson's Square is a beautiful embellishment of New-York, redeemed from a former waste—once a sand-beach. The large growth of the trees and the abundance of grateful shade, make it, in connexion with the superiority of the uniform houses which surround it, a place of imposing grandeur. The continuous long lines of iron palisades, both round the square and before the areas of every house, and up the several door-steps, give a peculiar aspect of European style and magnificence.

The residences of Col. Rutgers and Col. Willet, though originally located far out of town, on the East River side, have been surrounded by the encroaching population; but as the encroachments have not been permitted to close very close upon them, they are still enabled to retain some grounds around them of rural appearance. Col Willet's house was formerly on a knoll situated on the margin of Stuyvesant swamp. Soon all such recollections will be obliterated by the entire different face of things now beginning to appear there.

David Grim said he remembered when carmen first took about the tea-water; it was about one-third of present prices. The water, formerly, was good at the wells and some of the street pumps.

He remembered when only one lamp was used in the street—say at the corner of Wall and William streets.

Mr. Brower told me street lamps came into use about ten years before. The carts at that time were not allowed to take any tire on their wheels.

The carriage of the mail between New-York and Philadelphia, even since the Revolution, was a very small matter; it was hardly an affair to be robbed, for a boy without any means of defence, took the whole in saddle-bags on horseback. Then they wondered to see it enlarged, and took it on a sulky; and by and by "the wonder grew," that it should still more enlarge, and they took off the body and run it in a large bag on the platform set on the wheels. It was then long deemed as at its "ne plus ultra;" whereas now it is a load of itself for a four horse stage! At that time the post always went to and fro from the "Blazing Star," vis a vis Staten Island, now unknown as a great thoroughfare.

General Washington's residence in New-York was at the house now the Franklin Bank. To that house he once went in procession. The house was kept by Osgood, and was then No. 1 in pre-eminence.

The house No. 176 Water street, was the first in New-York to change leaden sashes for wooden ones; leaden ones were general. Even Trinity Church had its leaden panes put in after the fire of 1778.

Dr. Hosack's map, showing the grounds of New-York as invaded by water from the rivers, marks Rutger's Swamp as united to the East River by a little creek to the eastward of Rutger's Slip.

At Corlear's Hook he also marks much marsh ground, uniting to the river by a small creek.

Beekman's Swamp is also united to the East River by a little creek next south-west of Peck's Slip.

Governor's Island, originally called Nutting Island, because of the the quantity of hazel and other nuts growing there, and furnishing the winter supply to the citizens. In later times, says Kickerbocker, it was cultivated in gardens for the colonial governors—"once a smiling garden of the sovereigns of the province."

It was originally a part of Long Island, however it may now appear to the eye on beholding so wide a separation of deep water. This widening and deepening of the Buttermilk Channel has been caused by the filling up of the south side of the city.

An old gentleman is now alive who remembered that as late as 1786, the Buttermilk Channel was then deemed unsafe even for boats to pass through it, because of the numerous rocks there. It was, however, so used for a boat channel, through which boats with milk and buttermilk, going to New-York market from Long Island, usually made their passage. My mother has told me that when she first entered New-York harbor, then a girl, she was surprised to see all the market boats traversing the East River rowed by robust women without hats or bonnets—their heads fitted with close caps—two rowers on each.

The same gentleman who told of the channel as he noticed it in 1786, had his attention called to it then by a Mr. Van Alstine. upwards of eighty years of age, who remembered when Governor's Island was separated from Long Island only by a narrow creek, which was crossed upon a log raised above the high tide, and having staked logs for a footway through the marsh then there on each side of the creek.

William Richards, of Philadelphia, famous there for pickling sturgeon, went on to New-York before the revolution, to plant lobsters in the neighborhood of New-York; before which time they chiefly imported them from Rhode Island. He had a vote of thanks of the Assembly many years afterwards. Lobsters after this probably became naturalized about Harlem.

In 1756 the first stage is started between Philadelphia and New-York, by Mr. Butler; three days through.

In 1765 a second stage is announced to travel between New-York and Philadelphia, to go through in three days, being a covered Jersey wagon, at 2d. a mile—owned in Philadelphia.

In 1766 another stage, called the "Flying Machine," to go through in two days, "in good wagons and seats on springs," at 3d. a mile or 20s. through. This also was owned in Philadelphia.

In 1756 the first British "Packet boats" commenced from New-York to Falmouth; each letter to pay four penny-weights of silver.

All newspapers went free of postage before the year 1758. It was then ordered that by reason of their great increase, they should pay 9d. a year for fifty miles, and 1s. 6d. for one hundred miles.

In 1755 the mail was changed from once a fortnight to once a week.

Mr. M'Cormick, of Wall street remembered when "Burnets Key" extended from Wall street up to Maiden Lane, in one entire line of front, and projecting out from Water street, beyond any other line of wharves. It was the bathing place of the city boys and of himself.

In 1702 New-York was visited with a very mortal sickness. Isaac Norris' MSS. letter says, "the great sickness—Barbadoes Distemper or Yellow Fever—as we had it in Philadelphia 3 yrs. before. Some hundred died there, and many left the town; so that as we passed it, it was almost desolate."

In 1743 a yellow fever, as it was called, visited New-York—"not imported;" but like it was in Philadelphia three years before; they had black vomit and spots. Vide R. Peters' MSS.

In digging for a lamp post, at the north-east corner of Reed street and Broadway, they were surprised to get up several human bones, and thus leading to the recollection of the former fact, that between that place and Chambers street was once the area of the negroes' burying-ground; it was on a descending hill, inclining northward.

In Lyne's Survey of New-York, he marks a lane called "Old Windmill Lane," lying between present Courtlandt and Liberty streets, extending from Broadway to present Greenwich street, and thence north-westward towards the river side, where the Windmill must have stood. It was then the most northern street on the western side of Broadway; all beyond was the king's farm.

The same survey fills up the head of present Broadway, with a long rope-walk, and a long line of trees, reaching from present Barclay street as high as the hospital.

At that time there was at the foot of the present Chamber street, on North river, a distinguished public garden and Bowling Green.

Among the names of street changed, are these:—Present Pine street was called King street; Pearl street was Queen street; Cedar street now, was Little Queen street; Liberty street was Crown street, importing the Crown supplanted by our self-rule since. The western end of Garden street, was a hill called Flatten barrack—a celebrated place for the boys in winter to sled down hill. Present Beaver street, east of Broad street, was Princess street; present Stone street, east of Broad street, was Duke street; John street now, east of William street, was called Golden Hill. The hill once there at its intersection with Cliff street, gave rise to the name of that along the Cliff. William street, at its southern end, was called South street—say from Maiden lane to the East river.

There was, until a few years ago, a very large and notable wide-spreading tree at the Hall, at the corner of Wall and Broad streets. Under its shade was once a very clamorous public meeting, in the year 1794, to oppose Jay's treaty. It had in earlier years been a grateful rendezvous for holiday negroes. A gentleman and correspondent, who saw it cut down to make place for a rum vault, says, I could not but wish a curse on every rum cask which should ever usurp its place, wishing they might burst and scald the worms instead of the livers of men. There, says he, I had thirty years before listened to the stories of those Dutch worthies, Doct. Anthon, C. Ham, and J. Nichie, smoking their pipes in a summer evening under its shade, and bringing back the days and the tales of the negro plot and the Indian wars, &c.

In the year 1735, animosity ran pretty high between the military governor and his council on the one part, and the mayor and council on the other part. On this occasion, Zanger, the printer, took the part of the latter, which was considered vox populi, also; the consequence was, he was put under arrest and trial. The popular excitement was strong, and feelings extended even to Philadelphia. Andrew Hamilton, there a celebrated lawyer and civilian, volunteered to aid Zanger, and went on to New-York, and their effected his deliverance with great triumph. Grateful for this, the corporation of the city voted him "a gold snuff-box with many classical inscriptions, and within they enclosed the freedom of the city." The box might now be a curiosity to see.

I was shown the locality of an incident which has had more readers than any other popular tale of modern times. No 24 on Bowery road, is a low wooden house, the same from which the heroine of "Charlotte Temple" was seduced by a British officer. The facts were stated to me and the place shown by Dr. F.

In 1769 was a time of fierce and contentious election for Assemblymen; the poll was kept open for four days; no expense was spared by the candidates; the friends of each party kept open houses in every ward, where all regaled and partook to the full; all citizens left off their usual business; there were only 1515 electors, of which 917 were freeholders; all non-resident voters were sought for earnestly and brought to the city polls. John Cruger, James Delancey, Jacob Walton, and John Jauncey were the successful candidates by majorities generally of 250 to 270 votes.

On an occasion of election, Mr. Alexander M'Dougal, afterwards Gen. M'D.) was the author of an address "to the public" signed "Legion," wherein he invoked the public assembling of the people at the fields near De la Montagne's, (which is in modern parlance in the Park, near Peale's Museum) "in order effectually to avert the evil of the late base, inglorious conduct of our general assembly, who, in opposition to the loud and general call of their constituents, and of sound policy, and to the glorious struggle for our birthrights, have dared to vote supplies to the troops without a shadow of pretext. Therefore, let every friend to his country then appear."

For this stirring appeal, M'Dougal was taken under arrest by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Assembly, who placed him in the county gaol. While he was there confined, forty five persons, "Sons of Liberty," (for "forty-five" was a talismanic number then) went to visit him in prison, to salute and cheer him. Not long after "forty-five" female "Sons of Liberty," headed by Mrs. Malcomb, (wife of the General) made their visit also to cheer the state prisoner, and to applaud "his noble conduct in the cause of liberty." It was this leaven that was carrying on the fermentation thus early for the revolution.

The gaining of the election caused the New-Yorkers in 1770, to recede from their non-importation covenants, and the Whigs of Philadelphia resolved to buy nothing of them "while governed by a faction."

The winter of 1750 was so peculiarly mild, that the navigation of the North River kept open all the season. Mr. David Grim saw, from that cause, Sir Peter Hackett's and Col. Dunbar's regiment go up the river to Albany in that winter.

The winter of 1779–80, on the other hand, was the extreme of cold, producing "the hard winter." Two great cakes of ice closed up the North River from Paulus Hook to Courtlandt street. Hundreds then crossed daily. Artillery, and sleds of provisions, were readily passed over; and even heavy artillery, was borne over the frozen bridge to Staten Island.

My friend, James Bogert, then a small lad, was with his uncle, the first person ever known to cross the East River, at or near Hell Gate.

The winters of 1740–1, 1764–5, 1779–80, and 1820–1, formed the four severest winters in 100 years, and were the only winters in which the North River could be crossed on the ice. The cold on the 25th Jan., 1821, was seven degrees below zero; being one degree lower than any former record. The cold in January 1765, was at six degree below zero.

> "Then the parching air burnt frore,
> And cold performed the effect of fire!"

I saw in the Historical Society Library, something very rare to be found in this country: the sixteen volumes folio of MSS. Journals of the House of Commons, in Cromwell's reign, say from 1650 to 1675, said to have been presented through the family of the late Governor Livingston. I suspect, however, they came through the family of Governor Williamson, because a great part of Col. De Hart's library went by will to De Hart Williamson in 1801. Mrs. D. Logan had before told me of having seen those volumes in the possession of Col. De Hart of Morristown, N. J., about the year 1800. She could not learn how they came into this country, although she found it was believed they were abducted by some of Cromwell's friends (who went out first to New England, and afterwards settled near Morristown) to prevent their use against those who might remain in England. Their ample margins had been partially used by a commanding officer of our army there, when paper was scarce, to write his orders!

Captain Kidd, the celebrated pirate, was once married and settled at New-York. As the trial of Kidd, which I have seen and preserved, states on the authority of Colonel Livingston, that he had a wife and child then in New-York, my inquiring mind has sometimes, looking among the multitude, said, Who knows, but some of these are Kidd's descendants? I observe, however, that the name is not in the New-York directory; Col. Livingston recommended him to the crown officers "as a bold and honest man." He had probably been a privateersman afore time out of New-York, as we find the records there stating that he paid his fees (in 1691) to the governor and to the king. Another record also states some process against one of his seamen, as deserted from him.

In 1695 he arrived at New-York from England with the king's commission, and soon after began and continued his piracies for four years. In 1699 he again arrived within the Long Island Sound, and made several deposits on the shore of that island. Being decoyed to Boston, he was arrested, sent to England, and executed at Execution Dock, on the 23d March, 1701.

To this day it is the traditionary report that the family of J———— at Oyster Bay, and of C———— at Huntington, are enriched by Kidd's spoils, they having been in his service, by force it is presumed, and made their escape at Long Island at Eaton-neck, which gave them the power afterwards of attaining "the deposits" above referred to. Both J———— and C———— became strangely rich.

The records of Philadelphia show that contemporaneous with this time, "one Shelly from New-York, has greatly infested our navigation with Kidd's pirates."

In 1712 a pirate brigantine appeared off Long Island, commanded by one Lowe, a Bostonian; he was a successful fellow, had captured Honduras. About the same time one Evans also comes on the coast.

The next year two pirates looked into Perth Amboy and New-York itself.

Lowe commanded the "Merry Christmas," of 330 tons, and his consort was commended by one Harris. [Another pirate, Capt. Sprigg, called his vessel the "Bachelor's Delight."] They bore a black flag; while off the Hook, they were engaged by the Greyhound of his Majesty's navy. He captured the least of them, having on board as prisoners thirty-seven whites and six blacks; all of whom were tried and executed at Rhode Island, and all bearing our common English names. Capt. Solgard, who thus conquered, was presented with the freedom of the city in a gold snuff-box. Lowe, in indignation, afterwards became cruel to Englishmen, cutting and slitting their noses. He had on board during the fight, as the prisoners told, £150,000 in silver and gold.

The gazettes of this period teem with their adventures. In that time the public mind was engrossed with the dread of them, and they had accomplices often on shore to aid them and divide the spoil.

In 1724 William Bradford, in New-York, published the general history, including two women, Mary Reed and Anne Bonny. We should like now to see that work.

City News.

The following are the names of the heads of departments of the city government for 1857. Democrats in Roman; Republicans in italics; Know Nothings in SMALL CAPS:

Fernando Wood.....Mayor.
Azariah C. Flagg.....Comptroller.
JOSEPH S. TAYLOR.....Commissioner of Streets.
Nathaniel S. Selah.....Comm'r of Rep and Supplies.
Jos. E. EBLING.....Comm'r of Streets and Lamps.
GEO. W. MORTON.....City Inspector.
Richard Busteed.....Counsel to Corporation.
Richard B. Connolly.....County Clerk.
Jas. C. Willett.....Sheriff.
John J. Doane.....Register.
A. W. BRADFORD.....Surrogate.
A. Oakey Hall.....District Attorney.
A. D. Russell.....City Judge.
Jas. M. Smith.....Recorder.
Myndert Van Schaick.....Pres't Croton Water Board.

By a comparison of the deaths which occurred in the last 12 months with the mortality of 1855, it will be seen that there is a decrease of 1,779 in favor of 1856. The most fatal diseases were consumption, convulsions, dropsy, fever, inflammation, marasmus, and cholera infantum. The number of deaths by yellow fever, or any of the various forms of fever, is not given by the City Inspector. Judging from the tables published, the general health of New-York is constantly improving, whether we regard the number of deaths from old age, or the diminution in the aggregate mortality compared with former years. The deaths in each month were as follows:

January	1,524	July	2,413
February	1,594	Aug.	2,630
March	1,769	Sept.	1,945
April	1,664	Oct.	1,650
May	1,466	Nov.	1,660
June	1,487	Dec.	1,458
Total			21,263

The District Attorney, on an application made to bail Lewis Baker, Patrick McLaughlin, James Turner, John Hyler, and Cornelius Linn, consented to the sum of $5,000 each. Mr. Jas. McCrea, of Seventh avenue, became bail for Baker in the amount of $5,000. Turner and McLaughlin had not procured bondsmen at the rising of the Court, but even if they had they would not have been set at liberty, as the District Attorney had another charge against them arising out of another case.

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Revised every Week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 6, 1857.

FLOUR—Com'n to Extra State	per barrel	$6.15	a $6.75
Common to Fancy Western	do.	6.30	a 6.75
Extra Western	do.	6.70	a 8.75
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do.	6.80	a 7 —
Mixed to Extra Southern	do.	7 —	a 8.75
RYE FLOUR—Fine and Super	do.	3.50	a 5.25
CORN MEAL	do.	3.25	a 3.75
WHEAT—Canada White	per bushel	1.70	a 1.80
Western White	do.	1.68	a 1.80
Southern White	do.	1.70	a 1.80
All kinds of Red	do.	1.38	a 1.60
CORN—Mixed	do.	— 68	a — 71
Yellow	do.	— 71	a — 75
White	do.	— 71	a — 75
OATS—State and Western	do.	— 46	a — 50
Jersey	do.	— 44	a — 46
Southern	do.	— 39	a — 44
Rye	do.	— 88	a — 90
Barley	do.	1 —	a 1.80
White Beans	do.	2 —	a — —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels		— —	a 4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb		— 13	a — 13¼
Fair		— 13	a — 14¼
Rice, per 100 lbs		3 50	a 4 50
Hops, per lb		— 7	a — 10
Pork—Mess per bbl		13.50	a 20.25
Prime, per bbl		16.75	a 17,12½
Beef—Country Mess		10.50	a 12.25
Prime		9 —	a 10 —
Dressed Hogs, per lb		— 8	a — 8¼
Lard, in bbls. per lb		— 12½	a — 13
Butter—Western, per lb		— 15	a — 20
State, per lb		— 20	a — 25
Orange County, per lb		— 20	a — 25
Cheese, per lb		— 26	a — 30
Potatoes—Carters, per bbl		— 9	a — 10½
Mercers, per bbl		3 —	a 4
Onions—Reds, per bbl		2.50	a 3.25
White, per bbl		1.62½	a 1.75
Apples, per bbl		3.50	a — —
Eggs, fresh per dozen		2.50	a 6 —
Limed, per dozen		— 26	a — 28
Feathers, Live Geese per lb		— 24	a — 25
Seed—Clover, per lb		— 50	a — 55
Flax, per bushel		— 12	a — 12½
Timothy, mowed, per bushel		2 —	a — —
Timothy, reaped, per bushel		2.25	a 2.37½
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb		3 —	a — —
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl		— 9	a — 11
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb		— —	a — 80
Seed Leaf, per lb		— 7	a — 16
Wool—Domestic fleece, per lb		— 10	a — 32
Domestic, pulled, per lb		— 34	a — 60
Hemp—Undr'd Amer'n per ton		— 34	a — 50
Dressed American, per ton		210 —	a 215—
Flax—Jersey per lb		240 —	a 260—
Hay, per 100 lbs		— 7	a — 11
Tallow, per lb		— 95	a 1.12½
		— 11¼	a — 11½

OBITUARY.

Died, in this city, on the 27th of December, 1856, MARY, the beloved wife of James Sheridan, and the daughter of Daniel McGrath, of Lismore, county Waterford, Ireland.

Mrs. Sheridan was aged sixty-two years and ten months.

May she rest in peace. Amen!

'Tis lonely to wander a stranger from home,
'Tis lonely indeed to be far from one's own;
But lonelier far is the heart-trying hour,
When shadows of Death o'er our path-way lower.

N. B.—Irish, Canada and Ohio papers please copy.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

Dec. 4, John Wall, of Waterford, son of the late Captain Wall, of the 89th regiment, to Fanny, daughter of the late James Dickey, of Belfast.

Dec. 4, James Barlow, son of John Barlow, of North Great George's-street, to Julia, child of the late Arthur Knox, barrister-at-law.

Dec. 6, James, son of the late James Hunt, of Liverpool, to Charlotte, daughter of Segrave M'Cormick, barrister-at-law.

Dec. 4, Leslie Hugh Lawton, of Ballinlough, county Cork, to Fanny, daughter of G. Fontaine, Brigadier-General in the Belgian Service.

Dec. 10, at the residence of Mrs. E. O'Grady, Merrion-square, Sir Edward Fitzgerald, Bart., of Carrigoran, county Clare, to Julia A. Rose, daughter of the late E. O'Grady, Esq., and niece to Standish, Viscount Guillamore.

Dec. 11, Thomas Bradley, Ruby Lodge, Blackrock, to Charlotte, widow of James Waller, Upper Leeson-st.

Nov. 29, at Bassano, in Venetian Lombardy, John Ball, son of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice Ball, to Eliza, daughter of the Count Parolini, of Bassano, Groom in Waiting to his Majesty the Emperor of Austria.

Dec. 4, Frederick G. Benson, of Stephen's Green, to Jane Isabel, daughter of Francis Malone, Dunlavin, county Wicklow.

Dec. 4, in Limerick, William son of W. Gabbett, of Mount-Minnet, to Eliza, daughter of Dr. Richardson, of Savannah, U. S.

Dec. 3, at Richhill, Samuel Corrigan, of Fairlawn, to Constantia, daughter of Wm. Jenkinson, Mountpleasant, county Armagh.

Nov. 27, at Kilfinan, James O'Grady, of Upper William-street, Limerick, to Margaret, daughter Jeremiah M'Carthy.

Nov. 27, at Moynalty, county Meath, H. Foley, of College-Green, Dublin, to Kate, daughter of F. Kearney, Rosteen, county Meath.

Nov. 29, in Doon, Thaddeus O'Regan, Esq., of Mountcarl, county Limerick, to Anne, daughter Denis Kilbride, of Cappawhite county Tipperary.

Nov. 20, in Kilkeel, James Curragh, to Jane, eldest daughter of John Reid, M. D.

Dec. 9, at Quin, county Clare, John Copley, son of Hugh Singleton, of Hazlewood, county Clare, to Lizzie, daughter of the late Burton Bindon, of Clooney.

Dec. 1, in London, Thomas Fitzgerald, of Ballinapark, county Waterford, to Catharine, daughter E. Odell, of Carriglea.

At St. James's Cathedral, Melbourne, John A. Corbett, to Mary Anne Claringbold, of London.

In Kilkenny, J. R. Crawford, to Jane Jemima, daughter of Henry Hatton, Wexford.

At Melbourne, George Evans, of Geelong, to Anna Eliza, daughter of the late Rbt. Large.

At Rathmines, Mr. Frew, to Agnes, daughter of Joseph Fraser.

IRISH DEATHS.

At 141 Lower Baggot-street, Dublin, Margaret Anderson, formerly of Stephen-street.

Dec. 4, at 15 Church-street, Dublin, Mary, daughter of the late James Scally.

Dec. 3, at Mearescourt, Catherine Devonshire, relict of the Rev. F. A. Potter, of Clavendish-row.

Dec. 3, at Clontarf, aged 78 years, Elizabeth, relict of John Woods, of Abbey-street.

Dec. 6, at 10 Summer-hill, Mary, wife of Charles South.

Dec. 5, at Rostrevor, Anne Elizabeth, daughter of the late Wm. Rambaut, of Upper Dorset-st.

Dec. 7, at Ballygehen-avenue, Patrick Kiernan, Clerk of the Crown, county Leitrim, aged 68.

At Terenure-terrace, Roundtown, Wm. H. Luscombe, aged 81 years, son of the late Commissary-General Luscombe.

At Gortnamoyagh House, county Derry, aged 78, Martin Cathcart, M.D., formerly Surgeon of the 7th Dragoon Guards.

Dec. 7, at Ballickmoyler, Mary, wife of Patrick Kinsella.

At St. Mullins, county Carlow, Mary, sister of the Rev. Daniel Maher, parish prist of St. Mullins.

Dec. 3, at Maryborough, Sarah, daughter of the Rev. Ths. Harper.

In Carrickfergus, Eliza, wife of Robert Alexander.

In Cork, aged 70 years, Thomas Neligan, Lieutenant on half-pay of the 83d regiment.

In Bath, Henrietta Jane, daughter of the late George Bradshaw, of Pegsborough, Tipperary.

In London, Jane, wife G. H. G. Tarleton, daughter of the late Mrs. Mackay, of Armagh.

At Jamaica, Lieutenant Callaghan, brother of Mrs. E. W. Maunsell, of Limerick.

At Auckland, New Zealand, Wm. Davies, M.D., Colonial Surgeon, late of Kilcoady House, Cork.

At Alica Lodge, Dalkey, Timothy Byrne, late of 82 Grafton-st., Dublin, aged 63 years.

At Bray, county Wicklow, Michael Byrne, in the 61st year of his age.

In the 47th year of his age, William Burke, late of Cronovone, near Borrisoleagh.

At Michaelstown, Mary, wife of Thomas Alleyn.

At Carraroe, near Tuam, Francis Blake.

Mark Byrne, of Bettyville, county Dublin, aged 77.

Alice, wife of John Cahill, Wilkinstown, co. Meath.

At Seapoint Terrace, Monkstown, Mary, wife of Geo. S. Carlton.

At Blackhall-place, Henry Courtney.

Catherine Devenish, relict of the Rev. F. A. Potter.

Brady's Gallery.—No. 359 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS.

In anticipation of the demand for Portraits during the ensuing Holidays, Mr. Brady has enlarged his facilities for the production of the

AMBROTYPE.

The most perfect of pictures taken in an instant, durable, inexpensive, and elegant; the

MELAINOTYPE,

An entirely new style of miniature, equal to those on ivory, first introduced at Brady's Gallery; the

VIGNETTE PHOTOGRAPH,

Made at no other establishment in the world, are all executed promptly and in superior style.

COPIES

of old Daguerreotypes, Portraits, Crayons, Engravings, &c., produced by the Photograph, of any desired size, and in any number. A hundred, or a thousand Photographs produced from a single sitting. m1d20

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furnishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
y10jan GERALD GRAY.

Holloway's Pills.—ABERNETHY'S INSIDIOUS REMEDY, Blue Pill, pervades the system with a mineral poison, while Holloway's great medicine, composed exclusively of vegetable extracts, regulates every internal function, and leaves no sting behind. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New-York, and No. 244 Strand, London; and by all druggists, at 25c., 62 1-2c., and $1 per box. j10

Information wanted of Margaret Ustice and Jane Crowley, who came passengers by the Isaac Wright, on her last trip from Liverpool, by Richard Tracey, 11 Jay street, Brooklyn, in care of Mr. Owen Gilligan, or at this office. no22

Publications.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: SECOND SERIES.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

Special Notices.

TAILORING—1856-7.

George P. Fox has removed to his recently purchased store, house and lot, No. 47 Amity street, near Broadway, thereby freeing himself from the exactions and unenviable trammels of a Broadway landlord, at a saving in favor of his customers at the rate of $5000 to $6000 per annum. The general arrangements, particularly the cutting and sewing departments, are admitted by those who have already patronized his new establishment, to be decidedly superior to any of his former stores, Nos. 321, 333, 581 Broadway.

3m27dec

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 3ms. 188 Pearl Street, N. Y.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 81 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellec ual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes.....50 cents. | Pit.....12½ cents.
Gallery.....12½ cents. | Orchestra Stalls.....50 cents.
Private Boxes.....Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7½.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.

NEW HALL, 585 BROADWAY,

Opposite Niblo's Garden,

ETHIOPIAN OPERA TRIUMPHANT.

By request, grand revival of the glorious burlesque opera, in three acts, of

LA SONNAMBULA,

which will be given on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings, Jan. 5, 6, and 7, with the whole of the original music.

Preceding which

NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

On Thursday (Christmas Day) a grand afternoon concert, commencing at half-past two o'clock.

☞ Doors open at 7 o'clock. Concert at 7 1-2 o'clock. Admission 25 cents: Orchestra seats 50 cents.

THIRD ANNUAL BALL

OF THE

Young Men's Association,

FOR THE

BENEFIT OF THE

Roman Catholic Orphans,

TO BE HELD

AT NIBLO'S SALOON,

On Tuesday Evening, January 6, 1856.

SHELTON'S FULL BAND ENGAGED.

Tickets to admit a gentleman and two ladies, $3.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Andrew L. Byrne. | Michael J. D. McGlynn. | Oliver K. Mooney.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Theodore P. Kelly	Edward F. Mullen,	Peter Lynch
James A. Carolin,	Edmund F. Kelly	John A McSorley
John E. McMenomy	Charles Hussey	Philip J. Cozans
Hugh Gaynor	John A. McLoughlin	Wm. H. Irwin
John M. Cooney	John Kelly	Richard Dalton
James Lynch	Peter Meehan	John McCartin
John A. Boyle,	Augustus O'Neil	Thomas Hussey
Edward C. Byrne	William J. Kane	Wm. Ahearn
Daniel Lalor	Oliver Sadlier	Wm Fitzpatrick
Edward I. Murray	Thomas Fay	Michael Clark
John Higgins	Nicholas Hussey, jr.	Philip Carr
John W. Rice	Andrew J. Smith	John J. Kelly
C. Watters	Daniel Sweeny, jr.

WM. LALOR, President.

JAMES LYNCH, Treasurer.
JAMES T. DUNIGAN, Secretary

OSCAR SPENCE, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN W. MCKINLEY, 2d Vice-President.

8t20d CHARLES WRIGHT, Floor Manager.

Eighth Annual Civic and Military Ball of the Guyon Cadets.

(Company D, Ninth Regiment N. Y. S. M.)

At the City Assembly Rooms, 446 Broadway, on Wednesday Evening, January 7th, 1857.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Lieut. Peter Halpin, | Serg't. John Broderick,
" Laurence Glynn, | Private Thomas Dempsey.

CAPT. THOS. MURPHY, Chairman.

J. CULLEN, Secretary.

Tickets one dollar, admitting a gentleman and ladies.

Shelton's celebrated Cornet and Quadrille Band have been engaged for the occasion. j3 1t

MONTGOMERY GUARDS.

The Twentieth Annual Ball of this Company, will take place at NIBLO'S SALOON, on Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857.

Tickets—Two Dollars Each—may be had of any of the members, or of the Committee of Arrangements.

Henry Brenner, 71 Wall-st., | Chas. Leary, 345 Second Avenue,
Mathew Riordan, 94 Wall-st., | M. Maher, 188 Water, cor. Pine,
John Moore, 75 Oliver, | John Campble, 321 Water,
M. Reynolds, 45 Scamell.

HENRY BRENNER, Chairman.

CHAS. LEARY, Secretary. j3 4t

"T. F. MEAGHER CLUB."

Th's body will celebrate the Fifth Anniversary of the bold and honora bl Escape from bondage of their distinguished countryman and patron, Thomas Francis Meagher, by a Grand Ball, to be given at Tammany Hall, on Monday evening, January 12th, 1857. The members have resolved to spare no pains or expense in rendering the enter ainment worthy of the important event which it commemorates. Tickets, admitting a gentleman and ladies, one dollar: can be obtained at the door on the night of the Ball.

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 839 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.

JAMES O'C. TABE, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man.

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 186 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

A LECTURE

Will be delivered by Capt. JAMES HUSTON, at Hope Chapel, 720 Broacway, on Monday evening, 12th Jauuary, 1857.

SUBJECT:—Sectarianism---Its Evil Influences, and the best Remedy for those Influences.

Committee of Arrangements:—William O'Donnell, M. D.; George Powell, James F. Markey, Henry Hughes, Councilman; Daniel Moran, John Foley, Hugh Donnelly, William Parr, John Healy.

Tickets 25 cents, to be had of the following General Committe:

Captains Michael Phelan, 16 East 11th st., Thos. McGuire, 7th st. and 1st avenue, J. Kenedy, cor. 35th st. and Broadway, M. J. Daly, 116 Chambers st., W. F. Lyons, Citizen Office, Felix Duffy, 22 White st., T. Murphy, 9th Regt., 192 East 25th st., Jas. F. Markey, 2 City Hall Place, Edward Kearns, Cherry st.; Major Richard Barry, 488 Pearl st., Adjt. John McCartin, 27 Perry st.; Lieut. John O'Donohue, 71 Chatham st., C. C. Keating, 26 City Hall Place, Jas. S. Lyons, 120 Chambers st., John Ward, 24th st. and 2nd avenue, C. Doris, 628 Hudson st., J. Cooney, cor. of Reed and Washington sts, Daniel Lusk, 280 Mulberry st., Jas. Cassidy, West Broadway, Solomon S. Reilly, 218 Canal st.; Wm. O'Donnell, M. D, Madison st., Henry Hughes, Councilman, 478 Pearl st., John Carroll, 498 Pearl st., William Cleary, 11 Jacob st., Andre Froment, cor. of Division and Catherine sts., Chas. McChesney, cor. of 26th st. and 1st avenue, John Foley, 202 Bowery, Thos. H. Hurley, 10 Centre st., Hugh Collender, 53 Ann st., Wm. Buck, 140 West st., George Powell, West Washington Market, Daniel Moran, cor. 23rd st. and 1st avenue, John Martin, 26 City Hall Place, Geo. D. Dowling, 98 Cedar st., Andrew Byrne, cor. of Centre and Grand sts, Thos. D. Conroy, 491 Pearl st, Martin Doyle, Centre st., John Healey, 3 James st., Hugh Donely, 14 Franklin square, M. Fitzpatrick, 67 Centre st., William Parr, 484 Pearl st., Charles Neary, 28 City Hall Place, John Sweeny, 138 Read street, John O'Dwyer, cor. of Grand and Centre sts., Arthur Dougherty, 493 Pearl st., John Shields 148 West 17th street, Peter Conroy, 483 Pearl st., John O'Toole, 227 East 19th st., Joseph Markey, 84 Cherry st., Michael Sullivan cor. of 15th st. and 1st avenue, Edward McGuire, cor. of Stanton and Willett sts., Patrick McMahon, Washington Market, James Sommers, 238 10th avenue, John J. Kenny, 187 Allen st., John Cunningham, 2 Essex Market, Matthew McCaughern, cor. of 33d st and 10th avenue, Daniel McCabe, 243 Pearl st., John Brown, Pearl st., Patrick Connor, cor. of Christy and Delancy sts., John Morriarty, 173 Chatham st.

WILLIAM O'DONNELL, M. D., Chairman.

JOHN HEALY, Treasurer.
JAMES F. MARKEY, Secretary. dec27

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings:—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hebir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's. j3tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Doloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION OF THE FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,

Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines, Books, &c. dec6 3ms

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete process (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on receipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

☞ Post Office, New-York, Dec. 27, 1856.—There being a dispute as to the circulation of papers claiming the advertisement by this office of uncalled-for letters, notice is hereby given that the Postmaster will receive evidence and decide upon the fact under and pursuant to the regulations of the Post Office Department. A printed statement for the information of persons desiring to compete for the advertisement, fixing and defining the limits and boundaries of the territory deemed by the Postmaster to be embraced within the range of the delivery of this office, the time within which evidence must be submitted, and the particulars of the evidence required, and blank affidavits in which every detail to be shown, is properly and definitely embraced, will be furnished on application at this office.

j3 1t I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,

423 Broome st.,

New-York.

tf6dec

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any orders left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening.
JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at
—— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y.
JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street.
JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Monday Evening at corner of 11th st. and First Ave. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery.
JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn.
JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y.
MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J.
OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey.
WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C.
EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport.
y2ljune

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Daguerreotypes.

Mark the Facts!—J. GURNEY'S establishment, No. 349 Broadway, corner of Leonard street, is the oldest and most extensive in the United States. GURNEY was the first to introduce the Art of Photography in this city. GURNEY has recently made important alterations and improvements in his establishment. GURNEY has now greater facilities for producing finer work in every branch than has heretofore been produced in this country. GURNEY has still in his employ the best of his old artists. GURNEY has recently added to the above a talented corps of American, French, and German artists. GURNEY'S colored Photographs of all sizes need only to be seen to be appreciated; they speak for themselves. GURNEY'S plain, unretouched Photographs were never equaled—so say artists and the best judges. GURNEY'S Daguerreotypes are universally pronounced superior productions. GURNEY has received more testimonials for his skill than any other artist in the profession. GURNEY received the only medal for Photographic productions at the late Paris Exposition—consequently, GURNEY stands at the head of the world in the Photographic Art. GURNEY has not removed any branch of his business to any part of the city. GURNEY has no connection with any other establishment in any part of the city. GURNEY attends personally to his patrons and friends, and has done so for the last sixteen years. GURNEY will be most happy to continue that attention, and will still endeavor to please all who may favor him with a visit to his Photographic Palace of Art. J. GURNEY, oct4 3mos No. 349 Broadway, corner of Leonard street.

FACTS

THAT NEED NO MARKING.

Progression.

From Humphrey's Photographic Journal of Sept. 1856.

We do not approve of the plan of puffing the members of the Photographic profession by way of personals. This may do very well when one is trying to bring his works into favor with such as are susceptible to flattery, and measure out their support according to the amount of editorial ink used as bait. We feel confident that those who best know will agree with us as that it is no puffing, when we can say with so much truth, that the Photographic Art this day owes, in no small degree, its position in this country to Mr. C. D. FREDRICKS, a gentleman who was the first to introduce the Photographic process upon an extensive scale in America. Previous to his establishing himself here, he visited Europe, and, with an enterprise worthy of imitation, he was not satisfied with first securing what knowledge he could himself gain, but also engaged the services of several of the most eminent Parisian Artists. He then, in connection with Mr. GURNEY, opened an establishment on a plan unequaled in the world.

After successfully following his profession, in connection with Mr. G., for some time, he has opened a "Temple of Art" in this City, under his own professorship and supervision. We have honestly and candidly presented the foregoing, feeling that is justly due to a fellow-laborer.

CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, &c., No. 585 Broadway, opposite Metropolitan Hotel.

FACTS WHICH ARE KNOWN.—PHOTOGRAPHS DAGUERREOTYPES, AMBROTYPES, &c.—The undersigned having removed the Photograph department and his Parisian artists from his old place of business, No. 349 Broadway, to his new and magnificent establishment, No. 585 Broadway, would call the attention of public to the fact that his Galleries, and the pictures made in them, are superior to anything before exhibited. Those desiring Photograps, Daguerreotypes, or Ambrotypes, executed by artists of refined taste, would do well to call and judge for themselves. Reception Rooms on the first floor, and are open from 8 A. M., to 10 P. M. CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, oct11 3mos opposite the Metropolitan Hotel.

Late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, No. 585 Broadway

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 58 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARDS," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Special Notices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by

J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street,

sept27 8mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 882 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfactiofi be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 43 Ferry street, Albany, New-York. Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

P. P. P. Patent Porous Plasters.—Sore chests, weak backs pains in the side, deep-seated rhematic and nervous affections, soon benefited. Counter irritant, but so mild as to create no inconvenience. Sold by al medicine venders. The fresh made now ready, at principal office, 43 Canal street. Twenty-five cents each plaster.

4i T. ALLCOCK & CO.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicines.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 43th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtained. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENÆUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bound, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

For THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issued in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18 tf

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING eurered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

---

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 13 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u128m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 23½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my81y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,.

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

Wm. Irwin,

MANUFACTURER AND DEALER IN BOOTS & SHOES,

No. 174 Bowery, opposite Delancey street, New-York.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. oc11m3

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.

my81y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	3s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 3s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

CARPETINGS FROM AUCTION.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW-YORK AND VICINITY.

STEPHEN LEAHY,

93 SIXTH AVENUE, between Waverly and Clinton Place,

BEGS to call the attention of the ladies to his large and varied stock of Carpeting and Oil Cloth. The collection comprises goods of every grade and style, from the richest and most beautiful of foreign manufacture to the lowest price domestic.

All who are acquainted with the Carpet trade, and have visited our New Store, acknowledge our stock the most varied assortment and best selected on exhibition in the city. The facilities we enjoy for purchasing cheap, and an experience of many years in connection with the largest houses in the country, enables us to present to our lady friends and the public, the cheapest and most select stock of goods in the city.

sept27 3mos STEPHEN LEAHY, 93 Sixth Avenue.

Men's Furnishing Goods.

84 William Street, corner of Maiden Lane, New-York.

GEORGE M. TRACY,

HAS now on hand a choice stock of FALL AND WINTER GOODS, nearly all of which are made under his own inspection, of the choicest fabrics and newest styles. Merchants will find this a desirable place to make their selections. Annexed is a catalogue of some of the articles:

Hosiery and Gloves	Improved Napoleon Ties
Silk Beaufort Ties	Stocks, in great variety
Linen Collars	Silk and Linen Handkerchiefs
Silk Albert Ties	Dressing Robes
Fine Shirts	Travelling Shawls
Cravats and Stocks	Silk Under Shirts and Dr3wers
Suspenders	Silk and Gingham Umbrellas

His shirts are of superior make and quality, and warranted to fit. Persons wishing goods for their own use will be served at retail as well as wholesale, at the lowest prices. oc4m2

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 85 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.

dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

---

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 18, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

Special Notices.

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

HO FOR NICARAGUA!

ALL Persons desirous of emigrating to that beautiful and productive country, to become settlers there in accordance with its colonization laws, may obtain a free passage and a farm of eighty acres, by applying at the Nicaragua Colonization Office, No. 347 Broadway, room No. 2 (up stairs.)

d27 8t ALEX. C. LAWRENCE, Agent.

TO BOOK, FANCY AND TOY DEALERS.—Your attention is directed to

A NEW ARTICLE

FOR THE HOLIDAYS,

"CHESS, CHECKER AND BACKGAMMON BOARD FOR THE MILLION,"

being a new invention, whereby the above three games can be obtained at a cost not equal to the expense of purchasing the ordinary men alone for playing the game of chess. The article is gotten up in three styles, forming a neat and convenient ornament for the parlor.

Call and examine or send orders to

dec27 A. RANNEY, Publisher, No. 195 Broadway, N. Y.

Wines and Liquors.

THOMAS RUSSELL,

269 Fulton Street, between Church and Greenwich streets, and across town at 111 Attorney street, corner of Rivington.

THE subscriber begs leave to imform the public, that he has opened the abovee stahlishment for the sale of

PURE WINES, BRANDIES, &c.,

with an extensive assortment of

CHOICE CORDIALS,

by wholesale and retail, and would call the attention of buyers to his stock, consisting in part of

FINE COGNAC BRANDY.

The celebrated brand of Leger Freres, a superior article for medicinal purposes.

Pinet Castillon, vintage 1823 and 1842.

Otard, Dupuy & Co., vintages 1836 and 1840.

PORT WINE,

(J. & R. Osborn's Importation,)

COLERAINE AND DUBLIN MALT WHISKEY,

Imported by the subscriber, to which he invites the attention of the connoisseur.

HOLLAND GIN,

Meder Swan, and other favorite brands.

Together with a large assortment of

DUBLIN & LONDON PORTER, SCOTCH ALES,

and a seleet supply of genuine Havana Segars, of various brands.

Particular attention given to orders for families, and goods forwarded to any part of the City, Brooklyn, Jersey, &c. Country Orders, with remittance, immediately attended to.

Having engaged the services of Mr. Thomas Dillon, (late with Archdeacon & O'Conner, Wall street) customers can depend on all orders entrusted to his care being promptly and faithfully attended to.

Parties residing up town can procure the above articles of T. & J. Russell, corner 36th street, and 6th Avenue: T. Russell & Co., corner 4th street and 6th avenue, and at the corners of 13th Street, 8th and 10th Avenues.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY1 STREET,

3m13dec New-York.

ELIZABETHAN ALE.

MEDICAL men now very generally recommend the occasional use of pure ale to those who are in need of nourishment; and it is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage for general use that can be found. This is not a new idea. In Queen Elizabeth's time our ancestors universally consumed it—from Elizabeth herself, in her palace, to the farmer in the field. In those days, adulterated wines and fiery liquors may be said to have been unknown, and very heavy penalties were enacted against using anything except malt and hops in brewing. It is not at all extravagant to assert, that the average duration of the life of a large portion of our race is a third less than it was two or three huudred years ago, and this is chiefly attributable to what we eat and what we drink. Even now the heartiest people that can be found are from the rural districts of England, who yet follow the old fashioned diet.

All who use ale, whether as a beverage or for the purpose of nourishment, will find the Elizabethan Ale most excellent. Being made on the Scotch plan, it is as pure and wholesome, (if not equal in flavor) as the imported, while its cost is but little more than a common article. Families and retailers supplied at 120 WATER STREET, one door above Wall. oc4m3

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. ylaug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 806 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. y9jy26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. 1y3au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on libberal terms. jy2

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR. JAMES ROCHE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES SIX CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1857. NO. 41.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLI.

Editorial.

THE OLD WIGWAM ON THE EIGHTH.
STATISTICS OF THE BATTLE.
IMPENDING WAR BETWEEN SWITZERLAND AND PRUSSIA.
MESSAGE OF SMITH O'BRIEN TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND.]

Literature.

Holly and Ivy—Christmas Wreaths from Irish Ruins, by F.—History of Catholic America—American Privateers—Lit. and Art Items.

Poetry.

Winter Thoughts, by John Savage—Inner Life, by Cerva—Garland for the Grave of Father Mathew.

Miscellaneous.

T. F. MEAGHER'S SPEECH AT THE "Meagher Club" Ball—Old New-York—Military Resources of Ireland—Emmet Life Guard Ball—the Election—the N. Y. Tribune—Chemistry of Nature—Ernest Jones versus the English Church—Irish news from all quarters—European news—News from California—American—City news, &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. MADDEN, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 87½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.]

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.]

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: SECOND SERIES.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

JUST PUBLISHED.

BROWNSON'S QUARTERLY REVIEW

For January, 1857.

Commencement of the New Volume.

CONTENTS.

I. BROWNSON ON THE CHURCH AND THE REPUBLIC.
II. E. H. DERBY TO HIS SON.
III. MAREL ON REASON AND REVELATION.
IV. SLAVERY AND THE INCOMING ADMINISTRATION.
V. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES ON THE CATHOLIC PRESS.
VI. LITERARY NOTICES AND CRITICISMS.

Published by EDWARD DUNEGAN & BROTHER,
JAMES B. KIRKER,
ja17 151 Fulton-st, New-York.

Special Notices.

Brady's Gallery.—No. 359 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS.

In anticipation of the demand for Portraits during the ensuing Holidays, Mr. Brady has enlarged his facilities for the production of the

AMBROTYPE.

The most perfect of pictures taken in an instant, durable, inexpensive, and elegant; the

MELAINOTYPE,

An entirely new style of miniature, equal to those on ivory, first introduced at Brady's Gallery; the

VIGNETTE PHOTOGRAPH,

Made at no other establishment in the world, are all executed promptly and in superior style.

COPIES

of old Daguerreotypes, Portraits, Crayons, Engravings, &c., produced by the Photograph, of any desired size, and in any number. A hundred, or a thousand Photographs produced from a single sitting. m1d20

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by
EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

PAGES OF ITS HISTORY—By HENRY DE COURCY, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by JOHN GILMARY SHEA.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McCloskey, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844, "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. t24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball" Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr., | Manhattan,
Great Western, | Neptune,
Harvest Queen, | Columbia,
Isaac Webb, | Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright, | Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my8 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,
BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.
ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS' BANK.

NEW-YORK, December 22, 1856.

Dividend Notice.—Depositors are hereby notified that a semi-annual Dividend, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, on all sums of $500 and under, and five per cent per annum on all sums of over $500, that shall have been deposited at least Three Months on the 1st of January next, will be paid to Depositors on and after Monday, Jan. 21. Interest not called for will be carried to the credit of Depositors, as Principal. The Bank is open for business daily from 10 A. M. to 2 PM. and from 5 to 7 P. M., at No. 51 Chambers st., East of Broadway.

JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. [2t dec27] JOSEPH STUART, Pres't.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.
6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.
ap19 1y Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.

☞ All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 18 tf

A Lady, M. D., Oculist and Aurist, Restores Blindness, Amaurosis and Sore Eyes, of any standing; Removing Cataracts, Scums, Films, &c., without operation or pain. Persons wearing spectacles prematurely, enabled to do without them by recovering the natural tone of the eye. That the worst of cases are cured by her.

May be seen at the Infirmary from 10 A. M., to 2 P. M., No. 679 Sixth Avenue. The poor attended to on Fridays. oct18 3mos

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 31 PARK ROW,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.

Give him a call by all means. my8 1y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES,

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION OF the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued.

SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,
Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines, Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

The news brought by the North America, Royal Mail Steamer, which left Liverpool on the morning of the 24th ult., is more interesting than previous advices by the Niagara. The Persian war and the difficulty between the Swiss Republic and the King of Prussia, form the most exciting topics of the day.

The Congress of Paris.—Contradictory statements respecting the Conference, continued to abound. The principal statement was in a letter from Vienna, dated the 14th December, which intimated that Count Buol had received from Count Walewski an official notification that France could not accept the interpretation of the Belgrade and Isle of Serpents question in the absolute sense determined on by England, Austria and Turkey, and that Count Buol had sent this unexpected announcement in all haste to the Emperor in Italy. The London Globe, the British Government organ, denies that there is any difficulty in the way between France and England. The London Daily News, believes that the difficulty does exist and that it will postpone the meeting of the Congress indefinitely. The Paris Debvts thinks that all hope of adjustment is not lost, and that the Congress may open within the time specified. The Constitntionnel thinks that the Congress will open early in January and that matters will be settled satisfactorily.

Prussia and Switzerland.—Diplomatic relations have been broken off between Prussia and Switzerland, and matters were becoming extremely complicated. No reply had been received to the 16th ult. to the note of the 8th, addressed by Prussia to the great powers on the affair of Neufchatel. It was, however, supposed that Russia and France would approve, while England and Austria, would disapprove of an armed demonstration by Prussia. Meantime, Prussia persists in her forcible measure. Prussia has notified the Germanic Diet that her own troops are sufficient for the exigency; and preparations are being made for the assembling of 30,000 men at Berlin by the 2nd of January under command of Gen. Von Groben, to march on Switzerland. The Swiss are behaving with the greatest gallantry. The population is called to arms and respond with enthusiasm. Twenty thousand men are to be yut under arms without delay, of which 10,000, under General Bourgoise, will defend Basle, and the other half, under General Ziegler, will garrison Scauffhausen. Tqe van and reserve of the army will operate in the field. Unlimited credits for military purposes have been voted. The Federal Diet is convened for the 27th of December.

Great Britain.—The war with Persia is not at present popular. The London Times, usually the Government organ, and the London Press, the Derby organ, both denounce it. Many English and several French journals think it will cause another war between Britain and Russia alone. On the 21st ult., Captain Hartstein, Lieutenants Wells, Stone, Hunter and Davidson, and Drs. Macoun and Otis, of the Resolute, were entertained at the Admiralty House, by Admiral Seymour, Commander-in-Chief. Mr. McCroskey, United States Consul, and Chevalier Pappalardo, Vice Consul at Portsmouth, were also guests, with a circle of naval officers. The officers were afterwards presented to Lady Seymour and family. In the afternoon, the agents of Lloyds, at Portsmouth, delivered a telegraphic message to Capt. Hartsteiu, from the Shipowner's Society of Liverpool, requesting permission to send a deputation from that Society to present an address. A reply was returned, that the deputation would be received on the following Tuesday, on board the Resolute. On Christmas Day the American officers will dine with Lady Franklin. On Sunday the Resolute was visited by some of the officers who set out in the Arctic search, in her and other ships, among them were Capt. Pullen, Capt. Richards, and Lieut. Pym.

On Tuesday, the 23d, a banquet was given to the American officers by the city of Plymouth, being the only public dinner they could attend. The run on the National Bank of Ireland had subsided. Baron Rocheau had been arrested at Liverpool for having come as a passenger in the steamer Persia without paying his passage. There was a decided difference of opinion on the Liverpool 'Change respecting the amount of the cotton crop. Buyers said the crop was large, while holders maintained a contrary opinion. Mr. Stuart's circular, estimating the crop at 3,300,000 bales, was posted on the arrival of the Persia, in the Exchange, but speedily disappeared, and was supposed to have been abstracted by a holder. It was reported on 'Change that the Government is arming all the gun-boats for active service, probably for the East.

France.—The private letters from Paris are not of a desponding character, although the Bourse shows continued weakness. The condition of the Bank of France still improves, and it is expected that the restriction against the discount of bills having more than sixty days to run will be rescinded this week. With regard to the rate of discount no alteration seems to be looked for, even under favorable circumstances, till January. Money is very scarce, especially on the Bourse, but the pressure is partly attributable to operations for the purpose on the part of rival financiers.

Spain.—A Madrid dispach of the 19th ult. reports that a revolutionary club had been discovered in the city. Arrests were made and papers seized.

Italy and Naples.—The principal powder magazine in Naples had exploded, and many soldiers were killed. A Government announcement says that bands of insurgents are still flying about in various parts of Sicily, bnt there is no fear of a general revolutionary movement.

Persia.—The news is far from definite. Advices from Constantinople, of the 13th ult., say that Ferouk Khan, the Persian Minister, continues his negotiations with Lord Stratford de Radcliffe, to adjust the difficulty. Ferouk is about to proceed to Paris. Persia continues her warlike preparations. The Times Paris correspondent states that the Russian army amonnts to 40,000 men complete, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, and is siill in cantonments. The Russian General had, however, sent three officers into the nearest provinces of Persia, to examine the situation of the towns and forts, and to take the plans of the routes by which a passage might be made for an enemy.

Switzerland.—Advices from Berne, on Monday, say that hopes of peace increase in official circles. Four fresh divisions are called out. The students of Zurich have volunteered for the active army. The popular enthusiasm is increasing. The Paris correspondent of the Times states that a letter had been received by the Emperor from Gen. Dufour, mentioning the effect that had been produced in Switzerland by the note in the Moniteur. The inference drawn is, that the Swiss will be obliged under the donble pressure, to grant the required concessions

The Paris correspondent of the Globe telegraphed the following:

Constantinople, Monday, Dec. 15.

The Persian General Murad Mirzah has marched into Cabul and occupied Turrah. The Viceroy of Egypt is expected at Constantinople.

ERNEST JONES VS. THE ENGLISH STATE CHURCH.

At the third political Soiree got up by Ernest Jones, in London, he thus pitched into the political parsons of England:

But the clergy are not even agreed in their own craft.

The one tells you a black garment, the other a white one, becomes them best: forgetting that the garment of honesty would become them best of all.

The one holds the doctrine of baptismal regeneration, the other denies its truth. According to one, sprinkling with water is necessary for an infant's admission into Heaven, according to another, it is not. For my part, I hold the water highly necessary, after the unclean hands of a bishop have been pressed upon its front.

The one says, flowers at the altar are an abomination, the other says they are good, if not too plentiful, as they perfume the Church: but the sweet savor of good works is unsought by both!

The one affirms that lights and choristers are requisite, as though a candle were necessary to find the road to heaven! The other tells you that it shows direct to hell; but both neglect alike the light of common sense and lamp of reason.

Such is the State Church. It is unscriptural in its very foundation. The very division between clergy and laity is such: the dependence on the temporal state; the distinction in rank; the titular and mitred clergy; the political power, and the parliamentary vote; the simony, pluralities, and non-residence; the doctrines of swearing, fighting and hanging; the tax on conscience, and the taint of gold.

I prefer that bill of attainder in the name of humanity, against the Church and its priests.

Christ opened eyes born blind, these blind eyes that God endowed with sight, that they may drag men through the mire of social misery, and plunge them deeper while they say their prayers. Peter reproved Simon Magus for trying once to buy the ministry from an Apostle, these buy it every day from a common auctioneer. The slaveholder is bad enough; he sells our bodies, but these do worse, for these men sell our souls. The Apostles received their call from the Holy Spirit, these receive it from a city alderman or country squire. Christ scourged all those who bought and sold in the Temple, these men buy and sell the very Temple itself. Christ said: "feed my sheep," but these men make the sheep feed them.

Such, brethren, is the Church. The religion of Democracy has been turned into the upholder of despotism, the teacher of fraternity into the warranty for plunder.

If I quote the Gospel against the priest, he tells me its democracy is spiritually meant. If one part is spiritual, the other is spiritual, too. If the promises to the poor are spiritually meant, spiritual, too, shall be the monopolies of the rich. Bid him take spiritual tithes, and spiritual Church-rates, live in spiritual parsonage houses, and hold spiritual pluralities. I wonder how they would like, when going to finger their eleven millions, to be told it was only spiritual money.

They tell us our treasury is in the future: that misery here is good, because it leads to bliss hereafter; that, therefore, we must abstract our minds from things of this world, bear meekly our sufferings, not envy the rich, but pay the parson, and bless the Church. Misery the passport to heaven? I say no; the road to heaven can never lead through hell. I tell them, if we must wait for heaven until we die, then we should wait for hell, too, till we are dead, and yet we live in it. We want our paradise here, as Adam had his, and we will have it.

And now I ask, revelling, as it is in our patrimony, what service is the Church doing at this very hour, to stay the notice of ejectment at our hands?

Ye priests! I summon you before the tribunal of enlightenment. "Come; and let us reason together." "Unprofitable servants!" what do you for your wages?

Do you teach us to understand the Bible? The schoolmaster teaches me to read, and God gives me a brain to understand. It is you, priests, who, since the days of Christ, have made the Bible an unintelligible enigma.

A French writer says, "The Priest takes the infant from the cradle, and accompanies it to the tomb." He does, and makes him pay handsomely for his company. They, indeed, take the child from the cradle, to distort his mind, darken his heart, and embitter his life. I read recently one of the most widely circulated publications of the "Religious Tract Society," the "Child's Companion." It is intended for children between ten and twelve. Every third page gives an account of the flames of Hell, and shadows the young mind with the gloom of eternity. It is a catalogue of death-beds, mostly through consumption. Amongst the rest, they boast of a poor little girl, who "died in the Lord." By their own showing, she clung to life, like a drowning wretch, terrified at hell. What must have been the teaching of the priest? Her last words were, clasping her emaciated hands, and lifting her terrified little face to heaven, "Oh! dear Lord Jesus! You promised me that I should not perish—you did promise me—you know you did!" and so she died, her child's heart trembling with an agony of terror. I denounce this as a murder, worse than the boilings of Elizabeth: a murder of the young innocent mind, a racking of the tender ignorant conscience. Is there no punishment to reach these spiritual assassins?

Then what do they for their wages? Yes! they take us from the cradle to the tomb! They glide before the poor when about to appeal to God against the injustice of man. They rein him back with their mental curb, when about to rush to the goal of Freedom! I think it was Pliny who said, if a religion had not existed, statesmen ought to have invented one, for it was the only thing that kept a people quiet in their misery. It is under the skirt of the priestly gown that the noble, the squire, and the profitmonger, trample on the very heart of industry. The political parsons of a political church tell the poor man he has no business with politics. If he has not, what business has he to pay a political parson? They tell him to despise the gifts of this life, and to look to the future for his reward: but, I say it is blasphemy to scorn God's beautiful world, it is ingratitude to reject his generous gifts, it is deadly sin to turn his Paradise into a hell.

Then what do they for their wages? Yes! they take us from the cradle to the tomb! They get hold of some old maiden aunt, whose soul is wrapped up in her two favorites—the parson and the cat. They make her look upon the earth as a pesthouse, the human race as moral lepers, and life itself as a calamity. But they force her to pay well for her enlightenment. Every week she contributes to some blessed charity—some little Hindoo neophyte, or Kaffir acolyte, or Mandshu proselyte, the parson taking the money and telling her the road to heaven lies through his breeches pocket. They can't let the poor thing even die in peace! for when her intellect is flickering out, her pulse almost stilled, her eye dimmed, and her hearing gone, they ply her thicker and faster with questions, till she gives a last convulsion, and expires. Then all the old maids of the village come together, and tell how good Aunt Elspee died in the Lord, and how that dear, good, tall, slender, pale, young, sentimental, evangelical clergyman assured them that she had gone straight to the very lap of Abraham! but a month's time discovers to her starving nephews that all her property is left to charity, and that the dear young parson has the care of it.

Let him take a spade and dig! he'll be more healthy himself, and more beneficial to his neighbors, than by feeding on the mental corruption of a maudlin civilization.

Then what do they for their wages? Oh, they distribute our charities. Ah, we have seen that, were it not for their twelve millions, no charity would be required. We boast of our charitable institutions: they are our national disgrace! they are the evidence of our mismanagement, and proofs of our people's poverty. Out upon their charities! Having stolen all, they return a farthing in the pound, and ask us to be grateful. Out upon their charities! as though we should take a crumb from the Churchman's table, when his whole feast is a robbery from the poor! Out upon their charities! In nine cases out of ten, they are the nests where the rich pension the used-up tools that have pandered for a life-long to their vices! Charities? Charity is a word that insults humanity itself!

Then what do they for their wages? Oh! they propitiate heaven when plagues and famines visit us. I remember your fasts and cholera prayers. It would have been better had you opened your money-chests to feed the poor, and ventilate their houses. That would have been the fast, of which Israel speaks, acceptable to God. They tell us God sent the cholera: it was not God who sent the cholera, it was despotism that sent it, God permitting. Whence did it come? From the East, from the countries where Tyranny keeps the people in misery, filth and hunger. Do you ever hear of its beginning in North America or Switzerland, Belgium or Norway? Bad laws sent it, misery and hunger invited it, and poverty suffered it. It raged among the poor of Poplar, but little did it rage among the magnates of Mayfair! Did the parsons stop it? Nay! It was their very existence, their robbery of eleven millions' worth of comfort from the poor, that increased the fury of the cholera among the dupes they had impoverished.

Then what do they for their wages? Oh! they build new churches, and though Christ said, "I came to preach the gospel to the poor," they say, "you shan't hear it unless you pay me two guineas for a pew." Ecclesiastical tradesmen living on their Gospel-shops.

Then what do they for their wages? Oh! they distribute bibles and improve the morals of the people. What! when crime, in proportion to population has increased, as six so one; and Rigby Wason tells us has multiplied by 400 per cent. the last 40 years? Yet they distribute bibles by steam, and build stone churches like mushrooms. Then, why don't they succeed? I'll tell them; because they begin their education at the wrong end. A starving and an oppressed people can never be a religious or a moral one. They try to build the roof before they lay the foundation. First educate the belly and then you will be better able to educate the brain. First give the loaf and then bestow the book. First wipe the tears of hunger from the poor man's eyes, then he will be able to read your lessons of morality. Prisons and churches won't cure him. He asks for bread, you give him a stone; he asks for work, and you give him a chain. You are bad physicians who tamper with the effect, instead of remedying the cause. Do you want to prevent a man from stealing? Then, don't merely punish him for the offence, but give him plenty, so that he has not the temptation. There is the fault in your legislation; there the flaw in your religion. Take away the cause—Poverty, and you will not have the effect—Crime. Willing idleness is the only fundamental crime against the canon of society. Parsons! you may preach to eternity, and in vain, as long as you preach to to the hungry and oppressed.

Then I ask you once more, what good have you done us? Nay! what evil have you not done us through three hundred years? I ask you once more, show us some service worth eleven million pounds per annum.

Working men! will you allow your property to be thus squandered, while your wives and children are starving? Tithes were to give subsistence to those who were poor, but now they turn those poor who have subsistence.

Dissenters! will you let your faith be treated as an offence, by a tax being laid upon your conscience. Every sixpence you surrender to the priest of Mammon is an act of worship to the golden calf. You are rendering to Cæsar that which is God's. The State priest does not toil in your vineyard. He does not toil at all. By law, a man may sue you, if you do not pay him for his work; but these men sue you if you do not pay them for their idleness.

State Churchmen! what shall I say to you? You are worse than the Pagans of old: they offered their wealth to the god, you render it to the priest; they adorned the shrine, you deck the minister; they raised a temple to the deity, you build a palace to the bishop. Your priests of simony profess to be the servants of God: generally it is the master who hires the servant, but here it is the servant who purchases the master. If the preacher must be paid, let him be paid for what he is worth, and if he is worthless, let him not be paid at all. Let him be paid by those for whom he does the work, and not by those for whom he does no work whatever. Let every man have a voice in electing his own pastor. Restore the enormous robbery of Church lands to the people. Remove the golden calf from the temple of the eternal God. Pay your schoolmasters more, and your parsons less. Look less to the Priest and more to the Deity. Fear less; love more. Look more at Heaven and less at Hell. Christianity is not a shadow but a substance. Christianity is not the religion of the future only, but of the present too. Paradise, you say, has been on earth, then Paradise can be on earth again. It is you, Priests! who prevent it. You darken the sky with your own shadow, and say, God created the gloom. But your reign of terror is nearly over. You, drag-chains of the world! your links are breaking. Onward and upward is the march of nations!

The Countess of Donoughmore has arrived at Muckross on a visit to Colonel Herbert, M.P.

American News.

The brig Beauty, arrived at Halifax on Saturday night, the 27th December, reports that on her outward voyage, on Nov. 7, in lat. 40, she picked up a whale boat, bottom up, starboard side stove, and oars lashed to thwarts, with a lugsail mast floating alongside. The boat contained a cask of water, and a life-buoy marked "Le Lyonnais, Havre;" also a white shirt and a fine cambric handkerchief marked "F. E." We, says the Herald, have examined the passenger list of the Lyonnais, but find no name corresponding with those initials. The Lyonnais was abandoned on the 3d of November, consequently but six days elapsed from the time of her disaster till the capsized boat was picked up by the Beauty. Mr. Poirrier, the agent of the Franco-American Steamship Company, has received no further intelligence in reference to the captain and passengers of the Lyonnais, who were stated to have arrived at Bordeaux.

The N.Y. Herald's correspondent at Washington states that the U. S. Supreme Court have come to a decision upon the important questions presented in the case of Dred Scott, recently argued before that tribunal. Judges Taney of Maryland, Daniel of Virginia, Wayne of Georgia, Catron of Tennessee, Nelson of New-York, and Grier of Pennsylvania, hold that Congress has no power over the question of slavery in the Territories, and that the Missouri compromise was unconstitutional, and therefore of no effect. Judges McLean of Ohio, and Curtis of Massachusetts, hold that Congress has power over the question of slavery in the Territories.

Robert Carter Nicholas died on his plantation in Terrebonna, La., on the 24th ult., of apoplexy. In politics, he was a Democrat. He was a captain in the United States Army during a part of the war of 1812, being attached to the division stationed on the Canada frontier, and afterwards promoted to the rank of colonel. He was for twelve years a Senator in Congress which post he filled with honor to the State and credit to himself. Col. N. was sent as Charge d'Affaires to Naples, by General Jackson. He was also Secretary of the State of Louisiana; and later, Superintendent of Public Education. He was about sixty-five years of age.

A recent canvass of the town of Chelsea, Mass., reveals the fact that there are some 5,000 persons residents in that town who do not attend church on the Sabbath. It was further ascertained that the church edifices now existing will not accomodate with seats more than 4,000 or 5,000 persons, thus leaving 5,000 or 6,000 of the 10,000 or 11,000 persons resident in Chelsea, who cannot obtain seats.

A bill has been introduced into the North Carolina Legislature, entitled "An act to encourage and promote matrimony." This bill authorises the Judges of Supreme and Superior Courts, and all licensed practising attorneys at law, to solemnize the rights of matrimony, under the same rules as Justices of the Peace and ministers of the Gospel.

While the Kentucky Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, has been in existence thirty-two years, less than one-third of the mutes of the State have yet been educated. There are from one to twenty in every county in Kentucky.

Major Ben Perley Poore's success in Europe has been almost as great as in the United States. He has had the honors of a universal mention in the French press.

City News.

Ball of the Emmet Life-Guard—69th Regiment.

PRESENTATION OF A STAND OF COLORS.

The first Grand Military and Civic Ball of the above Company, (Captain Lynch,) took place at the City Assembly-rooms, on Monday evening, Dec. 29th. The spacious and elegant ball-room was well filled with a large and brilliant assemblage of citizens and military gentlemen. The fair sex were well represented on the occasion. Among the guests present, were Lieut. Col. Butler, Major Nugent, Capt. Corcoran, James L. Smyth, Esq., Lieut. Kelly, Major Taaffe, &c. After supper, the following toasts were drunk:—

Ireland—The land of our nativity. May her harp chant the hymn of her own freedom, and may her sons reign victorious in her cause.

Responded to by Major Taffee. Air—St. Patrick's Day.

United States of America—The land of Washington; the asylum for the oppressed, the modelizer for nations. May the Eagle and Shamrock get so identified with each other, that the former may plead at the cannon's mouth for the justice of the latter.

Responded to by Paymaster White. Air—Hail Columbia.

Memory of Robert Emmet.

No response. Dirge.

Universal Republicanism—The envy and enemy of despots; the guardian of mankind. May the day soon arrive when we will behold Ireland a "Nation once again." Air—Marsellaise.

Col. Butler ably and eloquently responded.

Col. Butler then proposed the health of Capt. Lynch and the members of the Emmet Life-Guard.

Capt. Lynch thus responded:

Ladies and gentlemen: For the toast proposed by Col. Butler, and so enthusiastically received by you, I feel very thankful, as it conveys the appreciation of my fellow-countrymen towards us for performing a duty which we owe as citizens to the land of our adoption, and as Irishmen, to the land of our nativity; and it brings likewise to my memory the proceedings of the past, and the object of the "Emmet Life Guard," which brought this Company into existence, which I will now briefly state. In learning the history of my country well, looking at her past and at her present; looking at her as a nation once proud and noble, but now nothing more than a mere province, robbed of her National Legislature, her commerce crippled, and her people slaves; looking at and knowing all this, myself and my associates commenced to think in the autumn of 1855, how we could help to heal her wounds and give her life and vigor, and raise her again to the grand position of a nation. We know that she is kept in chains by a foreign military force, and to talk of severing the connection without a military force would, in my mind, be talking trash and mere nonsense. We therefore came to the unanimous conclusion to organize a Military Association, to learn in reality to become soldiers; that a day might come, as most assuredly it will, when we will be called upon before the altar of our country to give her Liberty, and establish her National Legislature again, and an army and navy to enforce her laws and defend her against her enemies, revive her almost extinct commerce, open her vast mineral mines and her factories, that health, happiness, prosperity and plenty, may occupy the place of gloom, misery, discontent and poverty. To give my poor country freedom is the grand object of my life, and I can promise for the members of the "Emmet Life-Guard," likewise. To help to gain such a hallowed object shall be the height of my earthly ambition. We can then raise to our patron martyr a monument, and inscribe on it that "Ireland is a Nation." In conclusion, Ladies and Gentlemen, I, on the part of the Emmet Life-Guard, return you my sincere thanks for the kind and hearty manner in which you have so generously responded to the call of their first Ball, and it will always afford me a deep pleasure to meet with such intellectual and beautiful ladies as grace the ball-room with their presence on this occasion; to them I return, especially my hearty thanks. Captain Lynch resumed his seat amid loud applause.

Our Welcome Guests—We hail them with a caed mille failtha. Responded to by Capt. Corcoran. Air—Fly not yet.

The President Elect of the United States. Air—Grand March.

European Republican Exiles—The terror of tyrannical dynasties, and counsellors for human freedom. Air—Exile of Erin.

Army and Navy of the United States. Air—Star Spangled Banner.

The Governor Elect of the State of New-York—Responded to by Gen. Pitkins. Air—Governor's March.

The Irish Rebel—The terrible opponent of British law in Ireland, and advocate for Irish Nationality, whether in the prison or the ship, in the senate or the field, he is still the same stern foe to England and fearless friend to Ireland. Responded to by Major Nugent. Air—Tara's Hall.

Civil and Religious Liberty—The foundation of Republicanism; the helm of universal democracy. Responded to by Lieut. O'Conner. Air—Liberty Quick Step.

Irish American Military Organizations—The school of the patriot and soldier: what the laws of our native country denied, America gives; we arm for the maintenance and defence of the latter and for the regeneration of the former. Responded to by Surgeon Johnson, 75th Regt. Air—Garry Owen.

Literature. Air—Trovatore.

Irish Peasantry—Hospitable to strangers; noble to their friends; generous to their enemies, and brave in the midst of danger. Responded to by Mr. M. Keogh. Air—Sprig of Shillelagh.

Mechanics and Artizans of America—They have built for themselves a monument of fame which time shall never efface. Responded to by J. S. Smyth, Esq. Air—Grand March.

The Press—Responded to by a gentleman connected with the Daily News. Air—Liberty Tree.

The Ladies, and Mr. P. O'Connor of the Emmet Life-Guard. Responded to by Lieut. P. J. Kelley. Air—O'er young.

After supper the party proceeded to the ball-room, where the company was drawn up in line, and a stand of colors presented to it by Miss Atkinson, who delivered the following address:—

Capt. Lynch: I have the honor to present to you on this occasion, and as the representative of the ladies, this stand of colors, as a token of deep respect for you and the members of your command; and sir, in presenting you with this Flag, I deem it my duty to express a wish on behalf of the ladies, that should your adopted country call upon you to enforce her laws or defend her against her enemies, that you will heartily respond to her call. But should an opportunity present itself to you in your day of helping to free the land of our nativity from cruel oppression and wrong, it is our sincere desire that you should take this Flag with you to that land, to be borne in the midst of the battle against our common enemies, and we shall pray for your success. Not that we like bloodshed; but, we prefer death rather than disgrace. Accept this Flag then, and may your cause be as victorious as it has been honorable and just.

Capt. Lynch responded in brief and appropriate terms.

The Flag is a Sunburst on a ground of white silk, six feet six inches by six feet, and bears the inscription, "Presented by the ladies, Dec. 29th, 1856, to the Emmet Life-Guard, organised August 9th, 1855. T. Lynch, Commandant."

Dancing was kept up with great spirit, and the party did not separate until a late hour in the morning.

THE ELECTION—THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

The following able paper, from the New York Daily News, will be read with great interest:

NEW YORK, Saturday, Jan. 3, 1857.

That a new year should inaugurate new ideas, even startling and extravagant ideas, is to be expected in an age of progress. This is emphatically an age of progress, in which all things progress, though in a great many instances most of them progress backward. But that finesse and fraud on 'Change should make such rapid strides, while commercial integrity fades out of view, is not so astonishing or significant a feature of our progress as that the simplest calculations of arithmetic should result in a patent fraud and dangerous delusion. Nor is a game at snap at the financial board so ruinous to morality and social stability as a game at crib at the editor's table.

These reflections have been suggested by a close examination of the "facts," "figures" and "logical inferences," so called, which the "Republican" party have relied on to prove,

First, That Mr. Buchanan is the choice of only a minority of the popular vote.

Second, That although the "Republicans" are in a minority in the Electoral College, the joint popular majority against the Democrats is their majority.

And third, that therefore, they, the "Republicans," are already masters of success in 1860.

To this last, which is at best but false logic based upon fraudulent premises, I am sorry to find many of the Southern presses yield a precipitate belief, and already grope blindly about for some new issue upon which to maintain the interests of the South. Strange hallucination. These guides of opinion, being in a position not only tenable but indestructible, would shatter their own bulwarks to build pig-styes out of the ruins. But let me proceed at once to show that the first and second propositions above given, and assumed to be "facts" by the "Republicans," are absolute and gross frauds in their application.

Now a proposition may be technically true in the abstract and utterly false and fraudulent in the concrete or in a certain application of it. So it is with this. Here is the proof:

In the President's Annual Message he boasted that the Republic had sanctioned by its choice the conduct of his administration. He emphatically alluded to the repeal of the Missouri Compromise. The principle of that repeal implying the right of the South to emigrate to Kansas with their slaves was the main issue. No other was involved. It was in reference to it and upon it that the President announced the "decision of the country."

His doing so, was the signal for "Republican" uproar. He was charged, as usual, with "perversion," "misrepresentation," "littleness." Mr. Buchanan "the President of the minority"!! And the nicest calculations were made to show that everything but the Electoral College was against him. I had made up my mind to see it announced positively that 0 was the only figure to represent him everywhere except in the Electoral College. The Tribune actually blushed through its puritanical palor, such was its glee over the "decision of the country."

That glee was counterfeit—it was a fraud, whether deliberate or not matters little to the reader or the end in view. It is a fraud, palpable and patent to all others except the Tribune. Its main result, if it has any result, is deception, and such deception must conduce to the success of the "Republicans" in 1860.

I here transcribe the data of the Tribune, published therein at an after date, word for word and figure for figure:

"PRESIDENTIAL VOTE FOR 1856.

RECAPITULATION—FREE AND SLAVE STATES.

	Free States.	Slave States.	Total.	El'ct's.
Fremont	1,333,306	1,247	1,334,553	114
Buchanan	1,212,601	638,359	1,850,960	174
Fillmore	387,843	498,117	885.960	8
Total	2,933,750	1,137,723	4,071,473	296
Per cent. of votes	72	28	100	...
Per cent of Electors	59	41	100	...

Buchanan over Fremont, in all, 516,407; Fremont over Fillmore, 448,593; Fremont and Fillmore over Buchanan, 369,553.

The popular vote of the States going for Fremont is 47 per cent of all; his Electoral vote is only 39 per cent. Buchanan's States cast only 51 per cent of all the votes, yet give him 59 per cent. of the Electors.

The per cent. of actual votes and Electors is as follows:

	Votes.	Electors.
Fremont	30 per cent.	39 per cent.
Buchanan	45 per cent.	59 per cent.
Fillmore	25 per cent.	2 per cent."

The reader cannot well conceive how a schoolboy could be so stupid as to make this calculation, or a sorcerer so apt in delusion as to deduce from, or to pervert it into, the "foregone conclusion" of the Tribune, namely, that on the issue of the principle of the Kansas Nebraska act Mr. Buchanan is a minority President.

I reserve the absolute contradiction of this first proposition until I shall have dealt with the second.

It cannot be claimed for a moment that under any circumstances whatever the 498,117 votes cast for Fillmore in the South, or any one of them, would ever be cast for the policy represented by the "Republicans." If then, these votes be added to Buchanan's aggregate, his vote would stand 2,349,077. Add Fillmore's entire Northern to Fremont's aggregate vote, and his numbers will stand 1,622,396, giving the Cincinnati Convention a clear, undoubted, unquestionable majority of 626,681 over that of the "Republicans." On the issue already indicated, there is no fogy so stupid and no fanatic so unscrupulous as to dispute the certainty of the above vote of 2,736,920 being cast for the platform of Cincinnati on the Nebraska issue.

But is this all? Not by any means. The Tribune of this day admits that one-half the North Americans if informed they were bequeathed 1,000 negroes at $1,000 each, would not "repudiate the bequest."

It may fairly be assumed then, that those "Americans" who would accept the fat negroes would vote in favor of the principle of the Nebraska Act. Half of the whole vote of the Northern "Americans" would give Buchanan without the Southern or the South "American" vote an aggregate of 1,406,522, or a majority over Fremont of 71,969. But adding this 71,969 to Buchanan's majority, with the whole Southern vote, his majority would be 688,376.

But is it fair to say that only half the "Americans" of the North who voted for Fillmore would vote for the "Republican" policy? Not at all. They were but a fragment of the "Americans" of the North. They resisted every temptation, went in the face of inevitable defeat, and spurned the certainty of success which would await them as the perjured associates of the "Republicans." Nay, what was more, such was their aversion to the Anti-Nebraska party who solicited, courted and kneeled to them, that they preferred the success of the Cincinnati principles, wherein they were themselves anathematized, to their own success with the "Republican." So that not the half, but the whole of them to a man would, on that issue alone, vote for Buchanan. In that case his majority would be 760,345.

Let us pursue this inquiry further. On the last assumption, even in the North, the Anti-"Republican" party are in a minority. Their vote is 1,333,306; that of those opposed to them 1,600,444, leaving the former in a minority of 267,108. But let us see how the Electoral vote of the North will then stand:

Number of votes cast for Buchanan	62
New-York, where the majority against the "Republicans" would be over 41,000	35
Iowa	4
Total	101

"REPUBLICAN" VOTES.

Maine	8	Connecticut	6
New Hampshire	5	Ohio	24
Massachusetts	13	Michigan	6
Vermont	5	Wisconsin	5
Rhode Island	4
Total			76
Majority against the "Republicans"			25

These are the real "facts" and "figures" which the leading "Republican journals so calculate, arrange, and befumble, as to delude the fanatics who blindly follow them, into the belief that they are in a majority, and their opponents in a minority. These are the "figures" and "facts" which appal the Southern press, and these are the "facts" and "figures" from which the London Times predicates the triumph of the North as a prelude to the crash of the Union—a consoling prophecy deduced with gratifying unction from the "growing greatness and progress of the North."

If the prophecy be as mistaken as the historic basis is reckless and false, then need we fear but little the evil augury of this sinister croaker. The majority in favor of forcing the Wilmot proviso on the South in the House of Representatives in 1819 was larger than the majority that elected Mr. Banks, after an unexampled struggle as Speaker to the same house in the present Congress. But it was not as large as the majority by which the future house will, on the fourth of December next, elect his successor and political opponent. Thus in twenty-seven years the "Republicans," "Free Soilers," "Abolitionists," or all put together have not advanced one step or gained one vote or progressed in anything save fanaticism, licentiousness and an utter disregard of the truth. ARISTIDES.

P. S. I have made no account of the number who voted under the delusion, caused by the clap-trap of "freedom;" whereas they were voting merely to give Kansas to the Puritans to the exclusion of the Cavaliers. Yet I know it was very considerable, and know further that a party never can obtain votes, "any more than a swindler can obtain money" on a false pretense so well on a second as a first trial.

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

As regards our commissariat, at present, I feel it only necessary to say, that owing to the amenity of her position, salubrity of her clime, fertility of her soil, the immense quantity of provisions ever available, and the superabundant supply of wood and water during all seasons, Ireland stands unrivalled in being replete with all the elements of an inexhaustible commissariat, which for convenience sake might be considered under two heads. Firstly, the store of provisions, bread, biscuit, meat, meal, flour, potatoes, etc. Secondly, the means of transport, which are a sufficiency of horses and carts, which must, of course, be procured through the medium of local requisition. It may be right to state here, as a general rule, which history supplies, that no matter what country may be invaded, the invader will be sure to find friends amongst the inhabitants of the country which he invades, who, either through envy to the state in which they live, or through baser motives, will lend all their support to the invader. In the event of such traitors turning up in Ireland, they should not only be shot, but all their property seized for the use and maintenance of our troops, which will lighten the necessity of levying heavy requisitions upon our friends, and prevent the traitors supplying and assisting the troops of the invader; a course, though harsh, which is justified alike by motives of policy and humanity.

According to the last census, the population of Ireland is represented as being six millions and a half; and it is to be taken for granted that the men of the military age amount to, at least, a fourth or fifth part of the whole body of the people. Assuming this data as correct, Ireland can send into the field an army of at least a million of men, leaving the remaining five millions and a half to carry on the business of the country. Ireland being chiefly an agricultural country, her sons, therefore, generally pass the whole day in the open air, exposed to all the inclemencies of the season. The hardiness of their ordinary life prepares them for the fatigues of war, to which their necessary occupations bear a great analogy, and to whom war would become somewhat a relief, as they would then be better fed and cared for than they were ever before, their present vocations being far more fatiguing than the duties which war generally imposes; and the necessary occupations of a ditcher prepares him to work in the trenches, and to aid in fortifying a camp as well as to enclose a field. The abstemious habits of the Irish people, the consequence of a dire necessity, existing in a land of plenty, having always reduced them to live upon the coarsest and simplest food—their drink milk or water, their food potatoes or the coarsest bread, their clothes the plainest raiment, and their lodgings the rudest huts; which, coupled with their pre-eminent superior physical prowess, their alertness and hardiness, their proverbial aptness and genius in war, and inherent love of campaigning; an army composed of such men—the very images of war, and knowing the country—are easily sustained, can march rapidly from place to place, and are of all the people in the world the most pre-eminently fitted to cope with the perils and vicissitudes of war, and achieve the grandest victories.

In order to fully develope my views in relation to the fourth order of military resources—arms and munitions of war, I feel it necessary to refer to the different topics which are involved in their due consideration. I have already stated that the superficial conformation of the theatre of military operations not only determines the species of troops to be employed, but actually decides the weapons with which the troops should be armed. The disciplined armies of the world are divided into three departments; namely, infantry, cavalry and artillery. Infantry occupies the principal "role," and is the chief and primary basis of all armies, generally forming four-fifths of the entire numerical force; it acts on all grounds alike, in defensive and offensive movements. It is divided into—First, heavy armed infantry—those armed with the musket and bayonet, whose object is to overthrow everything by its fire or physical force. Secondly, light infantry or skirmishers—those armed with the rifle and sword bayonet, whose duty is to harass, annoy, and occupy by individual fire and action. Thirdly, sappers and miners and military engineers; whose duty consists in erecting fortifications, both field and permanent, and assisting in their defence or attack. Cavalry is chiefly an offensive arm, whose peculiar characteristic is its velocity, in which its power exists while on a level surface; but on rugged or uneven ground it is only fit for show. Artillery, like cavalry, requires level ground to act upon, and is incapable of doing serious injury in the field, except when opposed to columns of men. The destructive power of a cannon ball, being confined to a few inches diameter, is but a mere point, and may be fired amongst men in pretty close column without doing more than killing or wounding a few men, and against a line it can at most but injure two men; whereas, if the number of men necessary to man a gun were armed with rifles, they would, in far less time, at one-twentieth the labor and expense, inflict infinitely more mischief on either column or line than their cannon could do. And when we consider that artillery can only operate in a few places; that enlightened warriors now only oppose to it a chequered line of skirmishers, instead of regular lines or columns, against which artillery fire is only wasted; and the cumbrous and expensive amount of ammunition and stores, and the quantity of forage always essential to keep artillery in an efficient state, and the little that it is capable of effecting after all; and now this effect is completely neutralised owing to the science of selection of position—it is quite apparent that, except in the attack and defence of fortresses, and in naval warfare, the maintenance of artillery as an arm of military service, but symbolises the military folly of the age. The same may be said of cavalry. A campaign in Ireland, now-a-days, would soon show the folly and absurdity of arming a man with a carbine and sword, and cocking him up on a horse's back to fight. No man who has made war his study, and has practically applied his mind to all its details, can now entertain a different opinion.

From the earliest period up to the present time, there have been many innovations in the art of war, there has been little or no progress; it has been trammelled by a sort of etiquette, which has clogged all improvement; and the changes which have taken place in armament and system, were the result of accident, or exacting necessity, rather than the offspring of deliberate military sagacity. It is now time that war throughout its entire details, should be conducted by the stern rules of common sense, and the full knowledge of its details be made public property; as nothing can be more conducive to the general interests of society, than the reduction of war to its simple, cheap and natural level; being sure, sooner or later, to lead to the effectual amelioration of the oppressed peoples of Europe. Let us, therefore, sift all that is stable, from both ancient and modern military armaments and systems, add new ones to them and adapt the whole as a new system of warfare. The best proof that the armament of the armies of old was in many respects superior to the armament which the discovery of gunpowder introduced, is exemplified in the fact, that there were ten times as many killed and wounded in the hand-to-hand struggles of yore, as in the battles fought with fire-arms; the best system of armament being that which is calculated to destroy the greatest number of the enemy in the quickest manner, without being liable to be neutralised in effect by the selection of position.

Therefore it is self-evident, that sound military science will generally discard both cavalry and artillery in the field, as arms of military service, and solely rely upon that chief element of war—infantry, and on infantry only, for the efficient prosecution of its designs; and in order to endow that great arm with the true attributes of invincibility, it must borrow its systems of armament from those of ancient and modern armies, and at once adapt itself to new, simple, and efficient principles of military science. Let the prejudiced conservatives of the errors of present military systems and practices, in perfecting brigades of cavalry, in casting cannon of the most prodigious weight of metal and length of range, and in inventing and perfecting warlike machinery of the most nice and complicated description, requiring the labor of numberless men and horses to work them, and needing a ponderous and unwieldy baggage train, calculated to retard, embarrass, and insure the defeat of any army, particularly when opposed to a nation of civilised warriors, who scorn to follow implicitly the errors of mere military fashions, simply because these silly fashions happen to be universal, but who adopt the systems of armament and principles of action which practical experience and sound sense absolutely pronounce to be right. We will dispense with armies of mere brute animals, with casting of cannon, and with the absurd appliances of warlike machinery. The only machines we will place our reliance on, are intelligent soldiers, endowed with cool courage and armed with bright steel. The only essential arms for our army are the rifle, the pike, horse-pistols for the pikemen, and swords and pistols for the officers; they need no other; with these, in conjunction with a simple system of military operations, they stand more than a match, on their own soil, for any single military power in Europe. Every man in Ireland that can afford to buy a good rifle ought to do so; and also a bayonet or sword-bayonet to match. Although the riflemen are not intended for charging, yet, in case of being attacked by cavalry, their only resource will be to form the rallying square, and defend themselves with the bayonet, until relieved by a charge of pikemen. The main duties of the riflemen will consist in supplying the outposts; in covering the line and masses of pikemen in position; in skirmishing in front of the enemy; in hanging upon his flanks and rear; and in encircling his columns of route, with a sparkling girth of deadly fire. A chief object of theirs will be to shoot down the artillerymen, and thus dismantle the enemy's guns. When riflemen cannot be had, their places must be supplied with musketeers and fowling-piece men. Men armed with muskets should procure bayonets to match them.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Speech delivered by Thomas Francis Meagher, before the T. F. Meagher Club,

IN TAMMANY HALL, MONDAY EVENING, JANUARY THE 12TH, ON THE FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS ESCAPE FROM AUSTRALIA.

Mr. President, Ladies and gentlemen:

When you do me the honor to celebrate this anniversary with such bright festivities, the least I can do in return, is to offer my acknowledgments in person. The fear of being accused of egotism, might deter me from actively assisting in such festivities. But in no few instances, it becomes a duty to encounter such aspersions, where a large measure of public approbation is bestowed. A letter of thanks is a poor compliment to pay in exchange for the favors awarded by any great portion of the people. I prefer to incur the charge of egotism, rather than be exposed to the suspicion of ingratitude. Sins more grievous—a restless love of notoriety among the rest—I am willing to have preferred against me, rather than it should be said I disowned the act you have met to vindicate. That I have good reason to feel grateful to the Club whose congratulations I receive this evening, my memory, conscience, and heart assure me. Four years have passed since the first commemoration of my escape. On that occasion I gave expression to opinions, from which in no single instance during those four years has it been my disgrace to deviate. That you commend my fidelity to those opinions, this assemblage with its applause furnishes the best evidence. In the paper I edit, and for the sentiments of which I hold myself personally responsible, I have endeavored in an unobtrusive way to maintain the position I then felt it my duty to assume. As I have done, so shall I continue to do. Upon that subject—a political one—it would be inconsiderate for me to say more. Allusions to political conduct are out of season at this moment, when the greetings which throb around me, warm every thought I have, and should brighten into kindliness every syllable that escapes me. Such greetings are sunshine to the coldest natures. Even the snow, which sometimes falls upon natures the most genial and fruitful, should look beautiful in its presence. Even so, do scenes and faces, that have been familiar to me in my captivity, come to light; and for the land of bondage I renounced, sympathies renew themselves, which, long ago, the curse of convictism, flung upon its soil, awakened. It is winter here. It is summer—rosy summer—there. Here, the laughing waters, which, in the days of the ripening corn or the falling leaf, give life to many a glorious scene, are hushed. There, the harvest is yet upon the fields, the white fleece on its road to the sea-port has not many days left the farm of which it is the golden treasure, and the fruits are in full bloom. No contrast could be more striking. The aspirations excited by it, foreign as they may sound, will be forgiven. To a land so blessed; a land over which, one may say with truth, the scowl of winter never passes; a land of exhaustless promise, and beauty without intermission; to such a land, the purest and grandest destiny should be vouchsafed. In that land it has been my happiness to have met many generous friends. The native youth of the country—the growing generation of farmers, students, merchants, into whose hands the fortunes of the country are already passing—for intelligence, public spirit, hospitable impulses and gallant bearing, could well stand face to face, with the youth of any nation. It is a fresh and fruitful life they lead, who, beyond the frontiers of a new civilization, subjugate the wild soil, and over mountains never before trod by the white foot, and through forests impervious almost to the sun, advance the banners of social happiness and human grandeur. Such a life developes the noblest instincts, activities and schemes. Establishing a mature order of things, it escapes the infirmities which affect it when the desired maturity is attained, as the ripest fruit deteriorates when the summer is at its zenith. On more than one occasion, I have been made sensible of the brave heart and robust manhood such an existence generates. To the event you commemorate, that heart and manhood with a munificent temerity conduced. The severest penalties—imprisonment, fine, the loss of property, the loss of life—warned them from the enterprize. Into the teeth of them they dashed—deaf to every admonition—blind to every peril—to the rescue of a friend whom they had known for a few months only. For their services, they have my proud thanks. Should prosperity descend upon my path, the sunshine shall not efface, but enshrine, the remembrance of their devotion. Should poverty be my lot, the bright vision shall be all the brighter for the coldness and desolation through which it shines. In every fortune they shall have my grateful look, thought and prayer. In its career of industry; as it grows stronger, wealthier, and more beautiful in the freedom which at length has dawned upon it, and this great people through their immortal Declaration instructs it in the ways by which colonies emerge from their probationary state and consolidate their independence; in every step it takes to greatness, Australia, the country of their birth and love, for its success shall have my earnest aspiration. I have indulged in a long digression. From New-York to Hobart Town, it is upwards of sixteen thousand miles. But the digression, you will admit, was not only excusable, but commendable. Was not only commendable, but gracious. Heartily you will cheer the sentiment, that to the auxillaries in my escape something more than a word or two of thanks were due. Heartily you will associate them with me in the congratulations of this evening. Heartily you will drink their healths—drink them in deep bumpers—echoing the wishes I have uttered for themselves, their country, the propagation of republicanism, the supremacy of the people. Having thus spoken of them, I shall say no more. An act in which those brave fellows—young men of truth and genuine chivalry took part—with which they thoroughly identified themselves—no gentleman of honor questions. An act, commenting on which, at the dinner given him in Melbourne, on his release from exile, William Smith O'Brien took occasion to repudiate the compliment paid him by Viscount Palmerston, to the disparagement of John Mitchel and myself—an act, calling forth such a notice from such a man, no gentleman of honor questions. An act, the circumstances of which having been detailed by me in a letter, dated the 5th of June, 1852—which letter appeared in all the morning papers of this city under my signature on the 7th of that month—was endorsed on the 9th by the Common Council of New-York, in the resolutions offering me a public reception and the hospitalities of the city, an act, so published approved, stands in need of no further illustration. No gentleman of honor questions it. By the American public it has been ratified. To the gentlemen, then, who planned, aided and abetted the escape you celebrate, I call upon you with enthusiasm to drink!

On the 6th inst., a steeple-chase for £100 a side, came off at Jenkinstown, Co. Kilkenny, says the Kilkenny Journal, between Mr. Adderly's "The Queen," and Major Hibbert's, 50th Reg't, "The Robber," over an exceedingly stiff country, comprising more than five and twenty fences, many of them "raspers," a water jump upwards of fourteen feet across, and a double line of permanent railing, running at right angles from the Stand-house, opposite which, at a considerable distance, the start took place. A great amount of betting was made upon the result, and we understand large sums of money changed hands upon the occasion, the race coming off not exactly as was calculated upon. Mr. Adderley took the lead at starting, which he maintained, at an improving pace, to the line of rails, the first obstacle encountered. This his mare knocked against, when rising to the jump, and broke through. The succeeding rail however, she cleared in beautiful style, and passed the Stand-house in advance, his gallant opponent closely following in his wake. Arriving next at a formidable bank, both horses baulked, and were with difficulty got over, it being a stiff fence. Proceeding along, the water-jump next came in view, which Mr. Adderly charged with great spirit, his mare taking it clear off at either side in magnificent style. Here the race may have said to have terminated, for Major Hibbert's horse not answering to his call, instead of jumping, floundered into the water, throwing his rider to the opposite bank by which he lost his rein, and the horse breaking away, some minutes elapsed before he could be re-taken; Mr. Adderly in the meanwhile making good use of his time. On remounting, the Major attempted to regain his position, but finding it useless did not persevere, and Mr. Addderly cantered in an easy winner, amid the cheers of a vast concourse of people, who hailed his success with especial delight. With a liberality truly noble and generous, this highly popular gentleman contributed the sum of £50 in aid of the charities, on the evening of the race.

The deanery of Cashel is vacant by the death of the Very Rev. Samuel Adams. It is of the annual value of about £500, and in the gift of the crown. The deanery house of Cashel, (formerly the Archbishop's Palace,) is a handsome residence, and without any charge.

The Rectory and Vicarage of Drumgath, (Rathfriland,) have been presented to the Rev. Chas. Beresford Knox, A.B., Carrickfergus. The living was in the gift of the Lord Bishop of the diocese, and is of the annual value of £280 10 1.

Irish News.

The following article lately appeared in the Constitutionnel. At the present crisis, it has a certain significance: "Ireland has just given some signs of life. The first symptoms of its existence became evident on the event of Mr. Smith O'Brien's return. When the exile of 1848, who had thought the time then come to separate by force, the two countries, returned from Australia, where he had been transported, and made his appearance in his native land, his fellow-countrymen greeted him with acclamation. Deputations were sent to request him to return to public life, and accept a seat in Parliament, but O'Brien refused. It appeared to him quite useless, he said, to take a seat in an assembly in which questions relating to Ireland are judged by England and Scotland. He appears to have almost as little confidence in Irishmen themselves as in the men who represent England and Scotland. Smith O'Brien remembers that when in 1848 the suspension of the 'Habeas Corpus' seemed to give the signal for an insurrection, which would have obtained for Ireland a separate parliament, the Irish people refused to follow the standard raised by O'Brien, and he does not now wish to support the cause of the Irish people with more ardor than they do themselves, and run the risk of being sent back to the antipodes with English criminals. After having given this answer to his fellow-countrymen, the exile pardoned by the Queen has returned to private life, after merely stating, in a sarcastic way, that when his son's studies are finished, he will not oppose their giving him the votes he now declined. By this it is evident that Ireland has at last completely understood the hollow and unmeaning agitation that O'Connell carried on; and which was more embarrassing to himself at the end of his life than to any one else." Then comes a long article on Guy Fawkes and Captain John's agitation, ending with the following observations on the Times: "To-day it attacks the Catholic religion; for this paper is the organ of intolerant and Protestant bigotry, carried to the utmost extent—'au supreme degree'—and shows so much good taste in its attacks and sarcasms on the religion which is professed by several millions of British subjects. Let us hope that its destructive work will not be successful. We shall not, however, be surprised to see this paper promptly alter its sentiments. It has accustomed us to such sudden changes that there would be nothing surprising if we could count it very soon among the warmest partizans of the union with France.

The Clare Journal reports that Ennis was visited by a severe storm on the 8th and 9th ult. It raged with terrific violence, stripping several houses of slates, blowing down corn and hay stacks, and even levelled a house at Kilnamone. At Newmarket and Quin it was very violent. In the Shannon the waves rose to a great height, breaking over the usual boundaries in several places. In Ennis, about half-past three o'clock, the tide met the flood from the lakes, and being unable to find an exit from the storm blowing up the channel, overflowed its banks and laid the lower part of the town under water. The water extended a considerable distance up Church street and the Causeway, and Mill street, and although it caused considerable inconvenience it did no serious damage. Between Ennis and Clare it carried away a portion of the embankment which was recently erected under the superintendence of the Board of Works. While inspecting the injuries done to the bank, Mr. Kelly, civil engineer, was placed in considerable danger, the water rose above his knees, and were it not for his perfect knowledge of the locality, his life might have been forfeited. Several persons were struck by the falling slates, but the injuries they sustained were unimportant.

As the train which left Cavan on Monday morning, the 8th ult., at 9 o'clock, was approaching Mullingar, an axletree of one of the carriages broke, by which six passenger carriages were thrown off the line, and precipitated into a bog hole. Fortunately there were no passengers in that portion of the train. The engine got detached, and went off, and the remaining carriages, in which the passengers were, were impelled with violence against one of the six which had been forced off, but which was still partially on the rails. The consequence was that the first of the carriages having passengers in it was smashed, and the seats on which the passengers were sitting were broken in pieces, but the occupants escaped any serious injury. The engine and luggage vans being in advance were enabled to continue the journey, taking the passengers on to Mullingar.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Irish Academy, Dr. Petrie read a paper descriptive of some Roman "gold coins of the period of the republic," recently found near Fontal Abbey, Rathfarnham, and presented through him to the academy by Mr. Glennon, of Suffolk street, into whose hands the coins had originally fallen. Dr. Petrie accounted for the frequent discovery of Roman coins in Ireland by the supposition that they were brought into the country by merchant dealers with Roman Britain.

On the 8th ult., a hooker, while out trawling in the Kenmare river was upset by a sudden squall at a time when it was supposed the men were getting in their nets. She immediately sank. One of the boatmen, out of four who could swim, was saved through the extraordinary courage of three men living on the lands of Faramore, tenants to the Marquis of Lansdowne. Notwithstanding the fearfully dangerous state of the waters they procured a small boat, and went out nearly, a mile when they found one of the crew named Downing swimming about and saved him. No trace of the boat or the rest of the crew.

The town and neighborhood of Fintona, county Tyrone, says the Fermanagh Mail, were thrown into a state of consternation on Sunday morning last, by the sudden demise of Alexander Buchanan, Esq., second cousin of the new American President. Another correspondent states that after looking at the funeral cortege of his brother, Beaver Buchanan, Esq., laid down on his bed and expired.

We are pained very much, says the Dundalk Democrat, to be obliged to state that some ill-disposed persons entered the Catholic Church at Drumintee, county Armagh, on the night of the 29th of November, and took from it an image of the Virgin and Child, and some altar ornaments, which in the most sacriligeous manner they broke, and scattered the fragments about.

There are only 33 prisoners of all classes in Louth jail—18 females and fifteen males. There is not a single case for trial at the quarter sessions, and only one case for assizes—namely, that of suspected infanticide.

Christopher Martin, aged 36, was killed by the train from Dublin to Kingstown, while crossing the railway at Serpentine Avenue on the 9th ult.

A sailor was flogged on board H. M. S. Advice in Waterford Harbor for desertion.

The stained glass window, says the Dublin Evening Mail, which, it may be remembered, formed a portion of the contemplated memorial of the services of the 18th, Royal Irish, during the arduous Crimean campaign, was placed in its position during the latter part of last week, in St. Patrick's Cathedral. The window, which is Gothic, to correspond with the architectural style of the building, is a singularly beautiful specimen of this decorative art, and consists of three compartments, the upper and lower of which contain armorial bearings, surrounded with a pattern of choice design, whilst the centre is devoted to a panoramic view of the city of Sebastopol, and more especially of the Karabelnia suburb, which the gallant 18th Regiment had the high distinction of capturing and retaining for some hours upon the else inglorious 18th of June. The view is admirably drawn, and the delicate tinting and softened appearance imparted to it by the field on which it is produced, combined to render this a most charming picture. Underneath the window is the marble tablet, with its brief and appropriate inscription, and flanking it at either side are the glorious war-worn relics—the shattered colors, which, like laurelled veterans, take their rest in a position of ease and honor; whilst beyond these again are the monuments erected to note the achievements of the same distinguished corps in the campaigns of China and Burmah, and more especially "in memory of the fallen." As an addition to the thousand hallowed reminiscences with which the cathedral is replete, no less than as a last record of the fame acquired by deeds of "The Irish Brigade" of our own day, the group is one that cannot fail of being regarded with the most intense interest.

Private letters, says the Dublin Nation, mention that Lord Dunkellin's late inexcusable indecency in introducing two girls at the late French Inundation Ball in Calcutta, whom he knew to be common prostitutes, had created great disgust in the native mind, and the Hindu Intelligencer, a native journal, after contrasting the more exemplary conduct before the world, and in society, of his countrymen, Hindoos and Mussulmans though they be, with that of Englishmen, as well as their higher practical ethics, with our Christian system of monarchy, finishes his remarks with this exultant ejaculation and exhortation to his countrymen:—"By Heavens! we are better off than our vaunting Christian rulers. Oh, save us from their contamination! Brahmins, read your Shasters, for they teach you a rigid morality and lead you to safer ways." With regard to Lord Dunkellin, he had been removed from his Military Secretaryship by the Governor-General, at the instance of the Bishop, and had gone to Bombay to join the expedition to Persia, so the Hurkant thus announces:—"The prevalent belief is, with reference to Lord Dunkellin's deportation, that 'the Bishop has done it all.' Twice from the pulpit he referred to the subject in strong language, and, as we have heard, in much stronger language at a public breakfast in his own palace. The Governor-General has given way and removed the offender, and it is extremely to be regretted that he did not at the same time see the question in all its bearings, and act with a nerve befitting the occasion.

On Friday, the 12th ult., Constable Thompson, and Sub-Constables Donning and Coyne, of the Newpallas station, succeeded in arresting Denis Ryan, of Emly, charged with the murder of John Kenny, of Duncummin, near Emly, in October last. The police of the surrounding district made simultaneous search for Ryan on several occasions, but up to the time of his arrest were unsuccessful in their endeavors to take him. Ryan was escorted to Tipperary, and lodged in Bridewell, where he awaits commital to the county gaol at Clonmel, for trial at the ensuing assizes.

A numerous and influential meeting of the nobility, gentry, merchants and ratepayers of the county Dublin, convened by the High Sheriff, was recently held in the Court-house of Kilmainham, "for the purpose of considering the adoption of a petition to parliament, praying that the additional income tax may not be continued beyond April, 1857, being one year from the termination of the late war, and also the period limited by parliament for its continuance, at the time when it was originally imposed."

At the recent examinations for commissions in the Hon. the East India Company's Service, held at Addiscombe College, in the beginning of December, Thaddeus Ryan, Esq., eldest son of John Ryan, Esq., J. P., Scarteen, county Limerick, obtained fourth place among fourteen young gentlemen, who, for "superior acquirements," were selected for commissions in the Artillery branch of that service.

On Sunday, the 9th of December, in Limerick, during the celebration of Divine Service, in St. John's Roman Catholic Chapel, on old man named James Mara, who is stated to have been a dealer in pigs, was observed by a portion of the congregation to fall suddenly upon the floor, and they having instantly gone to assist him, found him quite dead. The cause of death is stated to have been disease of the heart.

On the evening of the 14th ult., as the Holyrood steamer was entering the New Dock, Limerick, from London, the pilot, John Martin, accidentally fell from the ship's deck to the hold. On being taken up, the poor fellow seemed almost lifeless, his head being extensively mutilated.

Owing to the greatly increased pressure of professional duties, Dr. O'Connor has been compelled to resign the office of physician to the Cork Workhouse, an appointment which he has held since the formation of the union, some seventeen or eighteen years ago.

As soon as it became known in New Ross that the action for libel againgst the Wexford Guardian was unsuccessful, the people of that town, sympathising with the vindicated liberty of the press, raised lighted tar barrels in various directions.

At the police court, Limerick, recently, a sub-constable of police, named Michael M'Evoy, was committed to jail for one month for dereliction of duty—he having left his post for three days without leave.

John Ellard, Esq., Solicitor, has been elected Town Councillor of the Shannon Ward, Limerick, without opposition, in the room of Henry O'Shea, Esq., solicitor, who resigned.

Owing to the temporary illness of Miss Catherine Hayes, the concerts announced to come off in Limerick have been adjourned sine die.

On the 15th ult., a woman named Bridget Collins, fell off a ladder in the Irishtown, Limerick, while ascending to clean some windows, and had her shoulder blade broken.

A monster codfish, weighing 61 lbs., was recently caught at Kilrush.

The recent announcement of an appointment to the Profession of Law, in the Queen's College, Cork is premature, that office is still vacant.

During the recent storm a couple of covered railway trucks broke away from their moorings at the Junction, on the great Southern and Western Railway, to the utter astonishment of the officers in charge, and making head from the post, soon gathered speed that put them beyond chance of detention. Hardly was their motion discovered when they were "hull down in the horizon—"and they passed the next station, the wind roaring behind, at a rate that steam itself could scarce rival. The astounded Station Master knew not what to make of the fugitive carriages as they fled by his door—and the country people who saw them supposed the d——l himself was the driver. The carriages swept at a speed of forty or fifty miles an hour by the station at Pallas—and it was not until they had arrived at a far distance beyond that they were brought to an absolute stand. The storm was remarkable for the abrupt fury of its gusts, and it was in one of these unexpected tornadoes that the brace of machines broke loose and fled.

On the December fair day of Miltown, county Clare, a man named Patrick O'Connor received a blow of a stone from a drunken man, which inflicted a dreadful injury upon his face, breaking his front teeth, and it is feared endangering his life. Four persons apprehended by the police, were brought before the Petty Sessions bench. Three were admitted to bail and one man named Kelleher remanded to a future day, Dr. Costello declining to say the man was out of danger.

A poor woman named Mary Moore, who had been residing in London for many years, was recently sent back to Cork with three children. Her husband, who is an Englishman, is a tailor, but is out of work. She had to apply for parish relief, on which the English guardians sent her and her children to Cork, leaving her husband in London. Some of the city magistrates have taken the case into consideration, and money has been contributed for the purpose of sending her back to London.

In the Incumbered Estates Court, the total produce of sales for the week ending Thursday, the 20th November, 1856, was £198,039 6s 3d. The estates sold remarkably well, in some instances for nearly thirty years' purchase. The magnificent estate of John Kelly, Esq., of Strancally Castle, Waterford, was sold on Tuesday, and brought £73,000. Andrew Carbery, Esq., merchant, Dungarvan, appears the purchaser of one lot for £8,000.

The Waterford Mail informs us that the inhabitants of Stephen street, in that city have been greatly annoyed by the incurson of an immense number of rats which have made their way up through the large sewers which have connection with the river. A regular crusade has been waged against them, but up to the present we believe the rats have gained the day; they are said to be of large size and great ferocity.

On the 13th of December a large bonfire was lighted on the property of Sir Edward Fitzgerald, close to the village of Miltown, in honor of the baronet's marriage. Dancing and other amusements were kept up to a late hour by the tenantry. On other parts of his property, similar demonstrations of respect and attachment to their landlord were exhibited.

The squally and uncertain weather, says the Belfast Ulsterman, is not sufficient to deter the Irish emigrants, who still set out for Australia and America in considerable numbers. On the 16th ult. the Semaphore conveyed from the quay a crowd of decent-looking people bound for the new worlds of Columbia or Tasmania.

On the 10th ult., the ceremony of the reception of a Religieuse at the beautiful Convent of Cappoquin took place in the presence of a large concourse of clergy and friends of the young and amiable postulant. The young lady who received the white veil on the occasion is Miss Margaret Kelly, daughter of Mr. John Kelly, Bridge street, Carrick-on-Suir.

The Limerick Chronicle states that the Rev. J. Nash Griffin, Harold's Cross, Dublin, is indebted to his powerful eloquence for the endowment to Blueworth, netting £500 a year, and an excellent house, which was presented to him by a Londoner, who heard him lately preach at Harold's Cross.

Four troops of the 13th Light Dragoons are at Head-quarters, Cahir, a Squadron at Cork, and one troop at Clogheen. One troop is ordered to proceed from Cork to join Head-quarters. Sixty-two invalids have proceeded to Dublin, to be examined before a medical board.

A skull was found by some laboring men, while at work in Vicar's lane, Kilkenny, and on an investigation being held, it was supposed to be that of Ellen Freeman, who committed suicide some twelve years since, and on whose corpse the jury had returned a verdict of felo de se.

The number of pounds of tea entered for consumption at Belfast, for the week ending November 29, was 28,534 pounds, against 43,720 pounds the previous week, making a total of 1,649,188 pounds since 1st January last, against 1,709,781 pounds same period last year.

Head-constable Barrowes, of Fethard, has retired from the Constabulary, after thirty years' service, on a pension of £60 per annum. A vacancy is thereby caused, for which a competitive examination of the constables of the riding will take place shortly.

At a coroner's inquest held in the North Infirmary, Cork, upon the body of J. Lane, who died of injuries inflicted upon him by James Sullivan, on the 13th ult., a verdict of wilful murder was rendered against said Sullivan.

A fellow named Patrick Daly was sentenced, in Cork, to a month's imprisonment with hard labor, on a charge preferred against him, of threatening to take the life of Mr. Thompson, relieving officer.

Brush-making is at present in a prosperous state. The majority of the employers in Belfast have granted to the workmen a liberal advance of wages, which the latter have acknowledged in an appropriate resolution.

Several forged £5 notes of the Bank of England, remarkably well executed, and difficult to distinguish from the genuine notes, have lately appeared in circulation in the North of Ireland.

A man named Lalor, well known in Waterford and Tramore, and who had been for many years waiter at Cummins' hotel, fell from a window in the Fanning's Institution, and was so severely hurt that death ensued.

A man named Fitzgibbon, who is employed at Messrs. Bannatyne's mills, county Clare, shot three otters with one shot just above the flood-gates erected by the Board of Works.

The great boon of a day mail between Waterford and Tramore has been granted by the Post-Master-General, and the fact is duly chronicled in the Waterford papers.

There is a mule in possession of a farmer residing near Baltinglass, which had been employed in the transit of ammunition, etc., to Vinegar Hill, in the year 1798.

We deeply regret, says a Limerick paper, to announce the loss of a large sail-boat, with thirteen souls on board, which fatal disaster occurred on the Lower Shannon during the gale on Tuesday. The ill-fated craft arrived in Limerick on the 8th ult., with a cargo of corn, which having been sold the same day, the boatmen started from the quays next morning at an early hour, before the storm set in with violence. As is customary, a few persons from the locality of the Island, who were in town, availed themselves of a passage home in the boat, and accordingly, eleven persons, (nine men and two women) were on board. The crew comprised only two men; and when arrived at Beigh Castle, the storm being at its height, they cast anchor, and lost it, and had then to run for the Islands; unfortunately, the attempt proved ineffectual, as the boat grounded and upset, when the poor people were all drowned, and the smack broken to pieces! The farmers who owned the corn, were on board, and perished, with £150 in their possession.

We were visited, says the Galway Mercury, on Tuesday, the 9th ult., by a tremendous southwester, which blew with incessant fury. The streets were nearly impassable, from flying bricks, slates, and chimney pots, hurled in all directions. A great deal of damage occurred at the railway terminus. A man named Murphy, employed at the station, ascended to secure the zinc-covering; but he and a portion of the sheeting were carried away twenty feet, and the poor man was precipitated to the ground, receiving several injuries. Telegraphic communication between here and Dublin, is at present suspended, as a large number of the posts between Galway and Athenry were levelled to the ground. Some boats, near Renmore point, were smashed to pieces, and a rumor, which we trust will prove unfounded, is prevalent that some trawlers have been either lost or wrecked.

Four soldiers of the 55th depot are being tried by court martial, at Templemore, upon charges arising from the following circumstances:—About 10 p. m., a few nights since, they were it seems, intoxicated, and not in time to get into barracks—the gates being closed before 9 p. m., whereupon they made an attack on the house of John Kennedy, Esq., Wellington Lodge, which stands isolated just at the corner of the barracks, and made several attempts to force the hall door, but ineffectually. Mr. Kennedy, perceiving they were soldiers, refrained from firing out upon the party, and dispatched his servant by means of a back passage, to call up the guard. A picket quickly arrived, when some of the party made off; but four were arrested and taken into barracks. About one p. m., one or two others returned again to the house to force an entrance, but decamped after a short time.

On the night of the 5th ult., John Creghan of Tonecor, and his wife, returning from Athlone, had occasion to pass the ford of Killyan river on the new road between Ballinamore and Mount Bellew, when the flood, which was considerable, owing to the previous day's rain, carried their vehicle more than two hundred yards down the river. Fortunately they were, owing to a turn in the river, cast on a low bank, and a bright night favoring them, Creghan, with much energy and presence of mind, released his wife from her perilous state, and saved the horse by cutting the harness, but the cart and contents were lost.

In the case of Simon Byrne, a ticket-of-leave convict, who is at present awaiting his trial for attempting to steal sheep from the lands of Mr. Robert Hanlon, and an ass belonging to a person in Athy, besides other robberies, the police of Carlow have received a warrant from the Lord Lieutenant, directing that he be arrested on his leaving prison, and transmitted to Dublin, for the purpose of undergoing the remainder of his sentence in penal servitude, in consequence of his having violated the liberty granted to him to go at large.

We regret, says the Newry Examiner, that owing to the damages sustained by the growing crops in the vicinity of Inniskeen, county Monaghan, during the severe hail storm in August last, several farmers at present, subject to serious privations, are in fact, in actual distress. We trust the landowners in all the localities so seriously affected, will look after the afflicted sons of toil. We have hopes that Col. Lewis's kindness will redeem his abortive polemical zeal.

On the 4th ult. a large vessel went to pieces on the coast at Ardmore, county Waterford, and on the 8th ult. another vessel foundered near the same spot, during a heavy gale. Before she went down, a boat containing four of the crew, was lowered; but, after breasting the waves for a few minutes, it was swamped, and the four men drowned.

Lord Fermoy, Lord Lieutenant of the County, presided at a meeting of the landed proprietors, magistrates, and ratepayers of the town of Kinsale, and of the baronies of Kinsale and Courcies, which was held on Tuesday, in the Court-house, Kinsale, for the purpose of adopting measures for the construction of a bridge across the river Bandon, at the site approved of by the Lords of the Admiralty.

At a meeting of the members of the Limerick Chamber of Commerce, on Saturday, the following were elected Market Trustees:—F. Spaight, President; Robert Rodger, James Bannatyne, Richard Russell, Laurence Quinlivan, John Sharp, William Cochrane, William Spaight, and William G. Gubbins, Esqrs.

The number of persons qualified to vote at parliamentary elections for the county Wexford and its boroughs for the present year, is as follows:—For the county, 6,370; (these are divided into four polling districts, viz:—Gorey 835, Ennisorthy 2,263, Ross, 1,774, Wexford 1,498). For the borough of Wexford 314, for the borough of Ross 191.

A requisition to the High Sheriff of Dublin is in course of signature, to convene a public meeting to petition for a reduction of the income tax from 16d. to 7d. in the pound, after the 5th of April next.

Thomas Glencross, and Thomas Maur, firemen on board the Killarney steamer, were suffocated in the deck-house, while asleep on board, from the effects of charcoal, which was in the apartment.

The sword of Col. Terence O'Rielly, the last surviving member of the Irish Brigade, and which had often been used against the Sovereign of Britain, was presented on the 8th ult. to the Royal Irish Academy.

Messrs. Kerr, of Worcester, porcelain manufacturers, offer a premium of £10 to any member of the Dublin Chemical Society who will succeed in preventing the action of acids on figments employed in their line of business.

Mr. Alexander Fairweather, steward to George R. Johnston, J.P., Ratholina, county Longford, was attacked, and violently beaten by a party while returning home.

The returns of the Irish Banks of issue for the last four weeks, exhibit an increase of £183,783.

From the present report of the Commissioners of National Education, it appears they had in operation 5,178 schools, attended by 556,551 children. At the close of the year 1855, the number of schools in operation was 5,124, attended by 538,246 children, showing a decrease in the schools in operation of 54; and a decrease in the attendance of 18,305. It is gratfying to find that the decrease in attendance in workhouse schools amounted to 10,450, and the remainder of the deficit was undoubtedly occasioned by the numbers of comparatively young men drafted into the militia, which caused the withdrawal of still younger men from school, to supply the demands of the agricultural and labor markets. Thus, we have presented to us on the one hand, diminished pauperism, and on the other, increased improvement.

The reward at present for the discovery of the murderer of Mr. Little amounts to £415, consisting of the following items—The Midland Great Western Railway Company, £200; Mr. Little, Wexford, £100; Mr. Bond, £50; a few other friends, £65. No arrest as yet made.

The Coroner's jury which sat on the body of the late John Collett, Esq., M. P. for Athlone, found, that he committed suicide at his residence, Arnewood House, Salisbury, by shooting himself through the head with a pistol, while in a state of temporary derangement.

The Kilkennies, says the Journal, commenced on Monday, the 8th ult., to beat up for recruits, and within an hour upwards of of a dozen of the "boys" presented themselves for the shilling. The Fusileers require about 400 men to complete their full number.

The Incumbered Estates Commissioners have directed that for the future all motions to make absolute conditional orders for sale shall be heard before the Commissioner by whom the petition was fiated.

The wheat crop in Kerry has been 25 per cent. greater in breadth this year than in 1855; while the increased produce per acre has raised the quantity of wheat grown in 1856 to nearly twice that grown in 1855.

A murder has been perpetrated between Waterford and Tramore. The victim was a young woman, supposed to have been murdered by two young men, who have been arrested and held in custody.

There died lately at Omeath a man name Patrick Morgan, at the extraordinary age of 120 years. Morgan's occupation was that of a fisher, besides which he rented a small farm. His faculties were vigorous to the lsst.

Richard Brew, Esq. of the Clare Militia, eldest son of the late Reverend Richard Brew, rector of Tulla, has been appointed to an ensigncy, without purchase, in the 1st West India Regiment.

The South Down Militia is at present in want of a number of men to complete its strength, and recruiting has been briskly proceeded with in Ballynahinch, Dromore, Banbridge, and Rathfriland.

The amount of duty paid at the Belfast Custom-house, for the week ending Nov. 29, was £6,163 12s 10d, against £7,969 16s the previous week, and £7,526 3s 3d the corresponding period of last year.

On different points of the coast of the County Kerry, large quantites of wreck timber are daily washed ashore. The loss of shipping must have been enormous during the late gales.

The butter market of Tralee continues to be well supplied at this period of the season. The price paid on the 8th ult., was from 60s. to 70s. per firkin.

The Westmeath Militia is to be augmented to the full strength. The number required is only 150, to replace those who volunteered to the line.

William Wroy, employed at the bleach-works of Mr. Richardson, Belfast, was killed on the 8th ult. by a sheet-iron lid falling upon him.

There was an increase of 10,000 hogsheads of porter in the exports from Dublin during the last three months, over the corresponding period of last year.

Edmund Casey, Esq., and O'Connell Fitzsimon, Esq., Glancullen, have been appointed to the commission of the peace for the county of Dublin.

Limerick was visited by a severe storm on the 9th ult, when houses were unroofed, chimneys blown down, and several persons injured.

The guardians of the Cashel Union are about establishing an asylum for the blind at the auxiliary workhouse of Castlelake, near the city of Cashel.

On Sunday morning an old man named Peter Shine, from Rookseagh, sub-contractor for manure, in Athlone garrison, was found dead, by Gunner Costelloe, in a pit near the stable.

A man named Donovan was arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the murder of Quin, of Tinlough, county Kilkenny.

Recruiting is actively carried on in the principal towns of Ireland, for the different militia regiments, which are to be filled up to the usual compliment.

Robert Mooney, Esq., Editor of the News-letter, died on the 18th ult., a little after two o'clock. It seems that the lamented gentleman was seized with paralysis on the day previous.

The Very Rev. Dr. Hally, P. P., V. G., Dungarvan, has purchased in trust for the nuns of Waterford some valuable property in the Incumbered Estates Court.

A National school teacher named Bowden, residing at Ballymiscow, was severely beaten a short time since when returning fron Belfast.

A regular line of packets has been established between Kilrush and Limerick.

The Fermanagh Militia, which corps requires 200 men to complete their ranks, have beat up for recruits.

The Royal Antrim Rifles, and Antrim Artillery, have beat up for volunteers.

The Tipperary Artillery and North Tipperary Light Infantry, have enlisted a number of smart young fellows.

A public meeting has been held in Belfast, to pronounce against a continuance of the Income Tax.

Captain Henry Lee is appointed a magistrate for the county of Waterford.

Mr. Molony has been appointed under-sheriff for the county Clare.

The 88th, or Connaught Rangers, are at Aldershot camp.

The Dublin Freeman states, that on the 18th ult., in reference to the murder of Mr. Little, an engine driver named Dowd, in the employment of the Railway Company, made a most important disclosure. He says that after midnight on Friday night previous, he had occasion to go into the yard at the rear of his house, which is situated near the carriage factory. While in the yard he saw a man come to one of the windows in the side of the building where the money was found, open it, and shove a plank through it, and rest one end of it on the window stool, and the other on a high embankment in a garden into which the window looked. Dowd says that the man was muffled up, and he saw him pass along the plank leading into the garden. He was dressed in white, and carried a bundle in his hand tied up in a red handkerchief. After reaching the garden he got over the hedge, and proceeded in the direction of Phibsborough, when the plank was pulled into the building by some one inside. Such is the statement which Dowd made to the police. On being questioned as to why he did not give information of the circumstance earlier than yesterday, he answered that he did not wish to bring any one into trouble, but in consequence of a conversation he had with another engine driver, to whom he had told what he had seen, and who advised him not to conceal the matter, he gave information. Dowd was subjected to close examination by the police, the particulars of which are kept strictly private for the present. On Dowd's statement becoming known at the terminus, it was rapidly circulated through the city, and gave rise to all kinds of rumors and conjectures.

An accident, without any serious result, occurred on the 9th ult. By the 2·15 p. m. train, from Newry to Gorah, two wagons, containing tow, caught fire by a spark from the engine. The engine-man, who first saw the fire, immediately gave his danger-whistle, and the guard at once applied his break. The remainder of the train was instantly detached. This having been done, in an instant, the engine-man then proceeded with the two burning wagons to a part of the line where there was a supply of water, and also men working on the Newry and the Junction lines. By the activity of those in charge of the train, and the men that had immediately gathered, buckets, &c., having been kindly supplied by the Rev. Mr. Hewitson, the wagons were saved. Except the loss of the tow, and the tarpaulin which covered it, there was no serious injury sustained.

The Belfast Ulsterman states, that the holy office of the dead was chanted for the happy repose of the soul of the Apostle of Temperance in St. Mary's Catholic Church, which was thronged to excess on that melancholy occasion by many of his faithful disciples, who attribute to him their advancement in religious and social improvement, and who will be happy to co-operate in a national memorial to the memory of one who shed so many blessings on his country.

The affairs of that noble pair of institutions the Royal British and Tipperary Banks, seem to promise well for no one but the lawyers. Already the latter is to be brought before the House of Lords on an appeal from the Irish Chancellor with respect to the interpretation of the Bankers' Act of George II., and the Royal British Bank, though it has not yet attained to such a lofty tribunal, has traveled from Vice-Chancellor Kindersley's Court to the Appellate Jurisdiction of the Lords Justices.

A letter from Wexford to a Dublin paper, says:—"There has been a large three-masted vessel lying in Tacomshane Bay, within a quarter of a mile of land, under great distress, since Thursday. They were obliged to cut away all the masts. A bottle has come on shore containing a note stating that she had a crew of twenty-six, and fourteen passengers. This day is so much calmer that I hope all may be saved."

Dr. Cullen having been waited on by a deputation of the Dublin Liberal Registry Club, authorised his Vicar-General to convey his Grace's desire that the clergy of his diocese shall render every availing assistance to the committee in endeavoring to procure liberal representations for the county of Dublin, but not to take part in any public meetings on political subjects.

Dr. Murphy, coroner, held an inquest at Barrington's Hospital, Limerick, on the body of Margaret Donohue, alleged to have been murdered by her husband, Thomas Donohue, chain maker. Ill treatment of the deceased after her confinement was proved, but no malice. Verdict—Manslaughter.

The Earl of Donoughmore, says the Waterford Mail, has been staying at Ardmore for the last week, engaged in visiting his tenantry and extensive estate in that neigborhood. His lordship, at his sole expense, has built substantial out-offices for each tenant and drained the land where required.

Sub-Inspector Binden has arrived in Belfast to assume the command of the constabulary in that town, in the room of Sub-Inspector Daley, who has retired from the service at his own request. Sub-Inspector Binden held an appointment in the Crimea during the war, and Belfast is the first station to which he has been appointed since his return home.

It is estimated that the high price realised this year for butter will make an addition of three millions sterling to the amount paid for produce to the farmers of Ireland.

Simultaneous collections have been made in all the chapels of the city and suburbs of Dublin, by order of Dr. Cullen, for the Catholic University.

The Poor Law Commissioners have reduced the salary of the Roman Catholic Chaplain of Baltinglass Workhouse to £50 per annum.

The Professorship of Mathematics, &c., in the National Board of Education, Dublin, is vacant by the resignation of the Rev. J. M'Cauley.

The Rev. W. H. Hutchinson has resigned the visitorship of St. Peter's, Limerick, having been appointed to the curacy of Athlone.

About two o'clock on Thursday morning the 18th ult., a schooner was driven ashore on Kerry coast, and, as reported by the Inspector of Coast Guards, all hands were lost.

Ralph Cusack, Esq., Chairman of the Board of Guardians of the North Dublin Union, is a candidate for the representation of Downpatrick, in opposition to Richard Ker, Esq.

Mr. T. C. King, the popular and favorite tragedian, is again in the Queen's Theatre in Dublin, and nightly applauded for his excellent performances.

A Railway from Dublin to Navan, so as to provide direct communication between the capital and the county of Meath is to be constructed.

Colonel Larcom, Under-Secretary, has returned to Dublin, and resumed his duties.

There are 733 paupers in the Cashel Union, being a decrease of 196 from the same period last year.

In the Tipperary Workhouse there are 484 paupers, being a decrease of 174 from the same period last year.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1857.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Captain Maurice Walsh, of New-York, having set out to travel through America, is authorized to collect advertisements and subscriptions for this paper. Captain Walsh has our written authority, which he will present to those who may not be personally acquainted with him. A list of the subscribers' names, together with the respective sums paid by each, will be published each week.

THE OLD WIGWAM ON THE EIGHTH.

The Sachems and Great Braves of our village assembled at the Old Wigwam on the 8th. It is seldom such rejoicing united the chiefs of the Democratic Nation. The glory of the dead and the praises of the living—the traditional mementoes of the past and the fresh-won scalps of the present, bound as with a simultaneous war-whoop, the chiefs of the powerful tribes of the unconquerable and unterrified nation. Seldom have the Council-fires burned so brightly. The Great Spirit was pleased; and gave good "medicine" to the happy and victorious people of Columbia.

As the assembly in the Wigwam was not for counsel but rejoicing, the daughters of the Great People, they who tend the hearths of heroes, cheer their tents, and send them forth to victory—who prize most the sons who follow warlike sires who have made great their nation—who kindle fresh fires in the hearts of men—who raise the chant of victory for the living and wail the loudest over heroes gone—they were present, making the eyes of old Braves young again, and young hearts bound with speed of antelopes.

They met to commemorate the anniversary of the immortal overthrow, by their Great Grand Sachem Jackson, of the nation whose children, from father to son, and to son's son, have been, and are, the sons of Liberty; and also they met to congratulate each other and the people who worship Liberty on whatsoever hunting-ground or high place on earth, upon the election of their Great Chief Buchanan to the Presidency of the Confederated Tribes.

Is it wonderful then, that the earth shook with the tread of multitudes, and that the winter's air became as summer, when the prairies bloom and the hunters seek for peltry.

Many noted warriors spoke: but first Grand Sachem Delavan, thus:—

Daughters of the forest, Warriors and Braves of all the Tribes of Columbia: I bid you a cordial welcome to our Council Chamber on this the Anniversary of the day on which, forty years ago, our Great Grand Sachem, the immortal Jackson, drove back from our shores, disgraced and defeated, the enemies of Liberty. Come ye from the rigid North or from the sunny South, or from the grand hills and lovely valleys of the East, or from the great Prairies of the mighty West! All—all are welcome. The doors of our Great Wigwam are open—our Council fires burn brightly. The waters of the Great Spring are refreshing, and we smoke the Calumet of Peace and Good Will with all the Tribes of the vast Hunting-Ground of America. This is our gala day! Millions of the Sons of Liberty are now rejoicing in the elevation of our worthy Chieftain, Buchanan, to the Presidency; he will soon occupy the place once filled by our own dear Jackson—worthy successor of that noble Chief. Proud are we that our own home, the patriotic city of New-York, gave to our standard-bearer a majority of votes unparalleled—a majority of twenty-five thousand. Let us rejoice then, that the perpetuity of the Union is guaranteed, and that peace and plenty are over this the "chosen land."

And further spoke the Sachem truly; that the battle grounds of New Orleans gave lustre to the country's annals; that although the great captain, warrior and statesman of that day has been taken from our midst, still his Spirit is with us, to cheer us on in the glorious cause of Democratic principles, of which he was the great exponent; and that the noblest mission of a Brave would be, to cherish the memory of the great dead Sachem's deeds and emulate his bright examples.

Then the drinking cups were filled; each warrior felt his medicine was good; and in the Waters of the Great Spring they pledged their hearts and arms to the Sachem's words.

Ludlow, of Suffolk, who formerly presided over New-York from his high place at Albany, made a good talk. His ears have not been open in vain. He has heard great truths. His sense is pointed, and his words, wielded like a war-club, fell weighty. He prized the Unterrified, for they have withstood, by the force of principle, the wild and raging fanaticism of the painted faces, the Black Republicans, whose ears were closed against the truth of history, even as their tongues were loose against the friends of truth. He spoke the praises of Democracy, and walked its victorious path, from the days of the mighty prophet Jefferson to the sun-down of the Fourth of November, 1856. He is still walking that path.

Walbridge, of portly frame and bland expression, raised his voice, and all within the wigwam were still; Braves are always still on the trail of the foe. The speaker led them to that trail. His brains are steeped in the records of War, and his tongue is big with victories. He pictured the warriors of the Red Coat tribe, who had choked the eagles of the dread chief Napoleon, and sought the scalps of the Sons of Liberty. With strong words he told the story how—on the banks of the monarch stream, whose waters measure our great territory, and on whose broad bosom floats the wealth of the vast valley of the Mississippi, these Red Coat armies fell before the warriors of Jackson, more sudden than if stricken by a plague. The tongue of Walbridge made the great old story fresh.

Purdy—the Old War Horse, Elijah—who has snuffed many a battle, and who was never known to smoke a calumet in the Wigwam of the Whigs, magnanimously complimented the present Chief of the State, who, though a King by name, was a Long Islander by nature. He spoke of the emigrant braves who were called Filibusters. The "Old Horse" liked these Filly-busters, and emphatically gave his sentiments thus—

The minister from Nicaragua, Don Fermin Ferrer, and the Government he represents—May they cement the union of Anglo-American and Spanish-American Republics, even as the Isthmus of Nicaragua unites our double continent, and brings into harmonious connection the Oceans that wash its opposite shores.

Fermin Ferrer, who represents at the Grand Council Chamber of Washington, the gray-eyed man who has liberated Nicaragua, then spoke to the assembled Sachems. His cause is just; and his speech, like Spring, held promise.

Van Buren—son of Martin—whose tongue is forked with fires and keen words, and whose Wigwam is darkened with trophies, stood forth. The presence of so great a Chief and Medicine Man, made a tumult. Events of his nation fall into his memory as acorns fall into the earth—to grow up again. His knowledge of distant people is rich as dreams are to other men; therefore, large sense comes from out his mouth.

"We are told"—he said—"that the country is another Egypt! Every portion of the country which knows enough not to vote for Fremont, and knows too much not to vote for Fillmore, is to be called a second Egypt. New-York, with her Colleges, her University, her quarter million daily newspapers issued from the press; with her professions, her artists, her lawyers, her distinguished men in every department of science and literature, her independent and sturdy mechanics, her merchant princes travelling the globe to engage in the commerce and trade of the world, and whitening every sea with the canvas which carries that commerce over the whole world; why, if this is Egypt, where is Athens?"

He said our village was the pride of the Democratic Nation; that it took the lead, promptly, to denounce and annihilate those narrow-headed, way-ward offspring of the soil who would limit from their tents the lusty braves who did not worship the Great Spirit in the way they did.

And again the Sachem Delavan arose, and again the drinking cups were filled and emptied in honor of the living chief Buchanan, who, clear in intellect—mature in judgment—ready and fearless in danger—of unswerving patriotism and stainless private character—has passed through the fiery furnace of "Republicanism" and Know-Nothing persecution, without the smell of fire upon his garments.

Schell, so called from the hardness of his faith, reminded us that Buchanan, when "he could scarcely bear arms in 1814, was ready to battle in the cause of his country," under Jackson.

Burnett, a noted warrior in Mexico, spoke of the "Father of his Country," and that great sea-dog, Jones!

Mather, with voice of praise, hailed Breckinridge, the second chief of the United States, as an orator, a soldier, and a statesman, "without fear and without reproach."

Rose and Thomson, scribes as well as warriors—who keep records of the glories of strife, that the sons of the present and future may learn wisdom from the deeds and words of their fathers—came before the assembly by command of the Grand Sachem. Their thoughts were like watch-fires which burn steady. A good omen.

Perkins, a gallant brave, with full round voice, sung nobly in praise of the daughters of the nation. After which the chiefs, greatly elated, smoked the calumet—a pipe a-piece—to show that peace and good-will existed on the topic.

Cochrane, famous for his confabs with those "who go down to the sea in ships," stood before the Sachems of Tammany, as Herodotus did before the Greeks at Olympus; deciphering for them their history. From the founding of Tammany Society in 1780 to the present, he spanned its annals as by the flight of an arrow. Their ranks had preserved unity. "Our fathers," he cried, "buried the tomahawk; let it not be exhumed by their sons. The Wigwam is at peace! Brothers! do not disturb it!"

So say we!

STATISTICS OF THE BATTLE.

Colonel Doheny, in a clear and forcible letter addressed to the Daily News, under the signature of Aristides, demolishes the triumphant speculations of the Tribune, regarding the election of 1860. Our eloquent friend has hardly had time to take breath from the labors of the great campaign which has so victoriously closed in favor of the Democracy and the Union, than he sets to work again, devoting his quick intellect to the eradication of the fallacies which spring up from the ruins of Black Republicanism, and which are propagated as medicinal herbs for the recovery, sustenance and comfort of the routed partisans of Fremont. The letter has been transferred to our columns. It will instruct and thoroughly gratify every democrat, who, not content with the recent triumph of his principles, looks forward to the reiteration of them every Presidential election that takes place till Dooms-Day.

IMPENDING WAR BETWEEN SWITZERLAND AND PRUSSIA.

Recent advices from Europe represent that quarter of the globe to be in a very unsettled and precarious condition. The fierce struggle in the Crimea has failed to inaugurate an era of harmony and peace among the rulers themselves, or to satisfy the aspirations of their respective subjects. State-craft seems to check-mate itself at every move. The re assembling of the Paris Conference is still a doubtful question, while, in many quarters, the differences between France and England are pronounced irreconcilable. The filibustering expedition of the East India Company against Persia has, by this time, commenced active operations within the territory of the Shah, while Russia has probably advanced an army to his support. But more important still to the cause of freedom and the advancement of civilization than English buccaneering in the Persian Gulf, or the Persian raids into Cabool and Candahar, is the present rupture between the Republic of Switzerland and the King of Prussia. The Prussian monarch, having remained an inglorious and cowardly spectator of the last war, is anxious to redeem his character with his royal brethren by striking a blow at the independence and integrity of the only free country in Europe.

The ancient descendants of the Helvetii, who had bravely, though unsuccessfully, resisted the legions of Julius Cæsar, rebelled, about five centuries and a-half ago, against the cruelties of Austria. The arrow of Tell was still dripping with the life-blood of the tyrant Gesler, when the shout of victory and defiance rang out from the peaks of the Jungfrau to the confines of the Tyrol. Freedom had given birth to a new nation in the heart of Europe; and then was laid the foundation of that glorious Confederation of the Swiss Cantons, whose counterpart only exists on this side of the Atlantic. For five centuries Switzerland has preserved its liberties intact amid the wars, political commotions and royal conspiracies of which Europe has been so frequently the theatre. During the campaign of 1799 the north of Switzerland was made the battle-ground of the Austrian and French armies, from whose ravages the Cantons of Schaffhausn and Zurich suffered considerably. Still was the independence of Switzerland maintained inviolate. During the dictatorship of Bonaparte, he proposed a new Constitution for Switzerland, which, after some opposition on the part of the Swiss people and certain modifications by the deputies who met at Paris in 1802, was finally accepted. In 1814 the allied armies violated the neutrality of Switzerland, having entered it in overwhelming force, promising, at the same time, to preserve its future integrity.

Four Cantons were then added to the Republic, and their independence was subsequently guaranteed by the Congress of Vienna in 1815. Austria, however, reserved to herself a mountainous district, in the Southeast of Switzerland, called the Volteline, while Prussia exacted a nominal submission from Neufchatel which, nevertheless, belongs, both by geographical position and treaty stipulations, to Switzerland. The King of Prussia never exercised any executive authority over Neufchatel; nor was his right to do so for a moment recognised by the Swiss Confederation. But, recently, a royal conspiracy was organised in Neufchatel by some of Frederick William's partisans. The revolt was promptly put down, and the rebels arrested by the Federal authorities. The King of Prussia espoused their cause and demanded their unconditional release. This overbearing dictation was unanimously resisted, and the prisoners were ordered for trial on a charge of Treason against the sovereignty of the Republic. An intimation, however, was conveyed to the King, that the penalty of the law would not be exacted, but that the prisoners would be set at liberty after the law had taken its due course, and the independence of Switzerland thus vindicated. To this moderate proposition hostile threats were returned, which were haughtily flung back by the Swiss Diet. Napoleon advised a submission to the King. His advice has been declined; friendly relations have been suspended; the Prussian ambassador has been withdrawn from Berne, and both sides are preparing to have the dispute settled by the arbitrament of the sword.

Prussia is said to have an army of 135,000 men ready to march upon Switzerland. The routes and halting places are already marked out, and the only thing required to put this Royal filibustering host in motion is the signature of the King. We hope the same success which crowned the heroism and devotion of Tell and Hofer may await the arms of Switzerland upon the present occasion, and that the same red vengeance which was hurled upon the Austrian hosts, will crush again the invaders of the only soil in Europe which is still sacred to the cause of Republican Freedom.

In the late European war, the American people could not feel much interest. It was a war of Kings, waged for the preservation of Kingly power and the perpetuation of worn-out Despotisms. With either party the citizens of the United States could have no sympathy. Although their curiosity might be excited by the movements of great fleets and armies, or their admiration challenged by feats of heroism and daring worthy a better cause, still their feelings could not be so far enlisted by the nature of the contest as to wish success to either side. There were those, however, who had felt the persecution of Louis Napoleon or suffered from the oppression of England, that yearned and prayed nightly for the Czar. There was no repulse from the Redan or Malakoff—no vigorous and successful sally into the lines of the besiegers, that did not awaken in their breasts feelings of hope, joy and vengeance. But now the entire population—citizens native and adopted—must take a lively interest in the struggle which may have commenced ere this. One of the great military powers of Europe—a power, the discipline and effective force of whose army are held up as models of perfection is about precipitating 135,000 bayonets upon a small nation whose institutions and Government are similar to our own. Its population comprise men of every shade of religion. There is the largest amount of toleration for all creeds, and the widest margin of Civil Liberty is accorded to every citizen. The people are contented, prosperous and happy, and every man is trained to the use of arms. The Swiss are mostly engaged in agricultural pursuits, and being well drilled and trained in the use of arms—being ardent lovers of their country, and devoted confessors of the grand creed of Human Rights, sealed by the blood of many martyrs, they cannot fail to give a warm reception to any invader, however strong in his Royal alliances, or deeply girdled he may be by his mercenary ranks.

Dr. McElheran is announced to deliver the second of the course of Catholic Lectures before the Catholic Library Benefit Society, on the 20th inst., at Hope Chapel. The Doctor has chosen an exceedingly suggestive and intellectual subject—"The Beautiful, the Good, the True." The lecturer's capacity and scientific and artistic experience, admirably fit him to do justice to such a theme. One feature of the lecture we desire our readers to mark well—the proceeds are to be applied to the benefit of the poor children of the Church of the Nativity.

MESSAGE FROM SMITH O'BRIEN, TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND.

Although it is my intention to shun henceforth both the showy delusions of parliamentary life and the treacherous quicksands of "Constitutional agitation," I have not abdicated my right to express my opinions with respect to the interests of my native land or of mankind, and having reason to believe that it is the wish of a considerable portion of my fellow-countrymen, that I should devote my leisure hours to such an occupation, I shall make no apology for offering to you some observations upon the present circumstances of public affairs.

Seldom have I had occasion to invite you to co-operate with any movement that has originated at the other side of the Channel, but it seems to me that you ought not to remain silent with respect to the question now under debate in England as to the propriety of maintaining for another year the additional per centage of the income tax which was imposed to meet the expenditure occasioned by the late war.

Allow me in the first place to observe, that it is the application rather than the nature of this tax that is objectionable. A property tax is the most just of all taxes, and even an income tax, if equitably graduated, would be preferable to fiscal exactions which press upon the industry or enjoyments of the poorest classes of the community. If, therefore, the present income tax were applied to purposes useful to Ireland, I would rather urge a modification of its provisions, than a diminution of its amount.

But the question now at issue is, whether the British Government ought or ought not to be encouraged by the continuance of this tax, to subject the resources of Ireland to exhaustion, in order to maintain a war establishment for the promotion of objects in which Ireland has no imaginable concern.

I know very well that my views on this subject will not be acceptable to many among you. The Irish people are fond of fighting everywhere except on their own soil, in defence of their dearest interests; and the Irish farmer has been so much accustomed to associate the idea of war with the hope of high prices, that he is inclined to welcome war on any terms.

But let us calmly inquire what has the empire gained—what has Ireland gained by the late hostilities?

Having lived during the greater part of the last two years among the neutral nations of the Continent, I have no hesitation in assuring you that the prevalent sentiment of that portion of Europe which has remained a spectator of this collision is, that the events of the war have greatly tended to augment the prestige of France and of Russia, whilst they have equally tended to diminish that of Great Britain and Ireland.

The glory of success has been attributed exclusively to France. The glory of an heroic resistance has been awarded to Russia, which, single-handed, so nobly defended itself against the united efforts of four of the most powerful nations of Europe.

Though the war originated in a struggle for ascendancy in the East between France and Russia, I am not prepared to contend that England should have remained an indifferent spectator of the contest, or that she was at liberty to acquiesce in the occupation by Russia of the Danubian Principalities; but I am convinced that the Russians would never have crossed the Pruth if, instead of writing diplomatic notes, Lord Aberdeen's Government had promptly declared that the appearance of a single Russian soldier on the territory of Turkey, would be the signal for British intervention. So, on the other hand, the withdrawal of the Russian troops behind the Pruth, ought to have been seized as an occasion for friendly mediation by England between the contending parties.

But a cry arose that the British Lion ought not to be roused with impunity; and none can forget the programme of the mighty deeds that were to be performed by the naval and military heroes of the United Kingdom that was published at the banquet given by the English officials to Sir Charles Napier. With many a jibe which I shall not repeat, the foreigner asks what has been the fulfilment of these magniloquent boasts and menaces?

Great destruction, indeed, has there been amongst the fishing smacks of the Baltic, but Cronstadt still remains even unassailed. The Museum of Kertch is sacked, and countless hayricks are burnt on the shores of the Sea of Azoff. Such are the trophies won by the mighty navy of Britain in the Euxine and the Baltic, whilst in the far East disappointment—not to say reverses, have contributed to darken the lustre of its ancient fame. He sees a noble army perishing for lack of the common necessaries of life; he sees the richest government in the world asking alms and auxiliary succour from private patriotism in aid of gallant soldiers, whose bravery and fortitude deserved a more glorious end than that found in hospitals to which they had been consigned, not by the accidents of war, but by sheer neglect and improvidence. Is it wonderful that seeing these things, he should have lost all respect for the capacity of the public functionaries of Great Britain? The repulse at Balaklava—the surprise of Inkerman, which, but for the prompt succour of a French division, would have been a disastrous rout—the ignominous issue of the British assault upon the Redan, contrasted with the glorious capture of the Malakoff by the French, and lastly, the loss of Kars, have also brought disgrace not unmerited, upon British generalship, if not upon British valor.

All the accessory circumstances of the struggle have tended to confirm these impressions. An hundred defeats would not have so much lowered public esteem for the British character as it was lowered by the adulation bestowed by the Queen, the authorities, and the people of England upon the man who three years previously had been designated by the nearly unanimous voice of the British public as a detestable and unprincipled usurper; and there is not a politician in Europe who does not believe that the Peace of Paris was imposed upon the Government and people of England by the will and dictation of this much cherished ally rather than by their own national feeling.

Were I an Englishman, I should be little encouraged by this retrospect to consent to a continuance of the income tax, but an Irishman has still less reason to assent to its longer endurance. With characteristic generosity, Ireland forgot all her past wrongs and sufferings when appealed to by the nation which had caused those wrongs and sufferings for aid in this struggle, and lavished her blood and treasure in contending against a people who never inflicted upon her the slightest injury. In this struggle, Irishmen displayed their accustomed valor. But not to Ireland belongs the glory and the fruit of such sacrifices. If a disgraceful act be perpetrated by an Irishman, his country bears all the opprobrium of the deed. If, on the contrary, he performs an honorable achievement, his exploits are heralded as the performance of Anglo-Saxon energy. An amusing illustration of this tendency specially attracted my attention in the case of one of those Irish Patriots bearing a Milesian name who in 1848 were most eager to join in insurrection against England; and who was actually forced to fly from his native country and enter foreign service. Whilst he was simply, an Irish Rebel, no term of reproach was spared towards him, but when in foreign lands he had by his valor and conduct won the highest admiration, he was extolled by the British journals and statesmen, as a distinguished English officer.

Perhaps it will be thought that as I write in my own study, under the operation of an amnesty (i.e. of an act of oblivion), I ought to forget every circumstance that is humiliating to my country. It is not, believe me, a desire to utter sarcasms, which will be acceptable to but few readers, that induces me to write this letter. Still less, is it a desire to cast reproach upon any particular statesman, or to serve the interests of any particular party. To me all the British statesmen, and all British parties are equally indifferent. Regard for the interests of Ireland and for those of humanity at large is the only motive which induces me now to address you, but I would seriously ask you—I would ask even the British people—whether it is desirable by consenting to a continuance of the war Income Tax to encourage the minister, whoever he may be, to involve Ireland—to involve the empire in new collisions which may be infinitely more disastrous and more ignominious in their results, than that which has been recently terminated.

Within the last three months the ground work for at least two new wars has been laid by British impolicy. I allude to the case of Naples and of Persia. If the British Ministry had been allowed to proceed in its career, unchecked by the continental powers, amongst whom Russia was the most prominent, the city of Naples would probably have been bombarded before now. Far be it from me to undertake the vindication of the Neapolitan Government—I believe it to be one of the worst in Europe—though candor obliges me to confess that in travelling through the Neapolitan territories, including Sicily, I observed greater appearance of material prosperity than I have found in my own country, in what is called its most prosperous era. But, admitting that the Government of Naples is as bad as it is represented by its enemies to be, is this a sufficient ground for intervention on the part of England, in regard of its internal administration? It is not alleged that any British subject has suffered wrong from the Neapolitan authorities—it is not alleged that any foreign power menaces an armed intervention such as that of Russia in regard of Hungary—of Austria in regard of Tuscany—of France in regard of Rome—all of which questionable proceedings were calmly witnessed, almost without remonstrance by England. It is simply urged that the Monarch of Naples does not conduct the government of his country in a manner suited to English ideas; and accordingly a demonstration is made by the withdrawal of the British Ambassador—an act which is generally the forerunner of actual hostilities. That the Emperor of France should concur in such a proceeding is scarcely surprising, because his dynastic ambition would very naturally render him desirous to substitute a Murat for a Bourbon on the throne of Naples, but no such motive can operate in the case of England. If England were to occupy Sicily an European war would infallibly be the consequence, and if this demonstration be solely intended as an encouragement to the Constitutionalists of the two Sicilies to revolt against their government, a more fatal lure could scarcely be presented against them; for as in the case of the demonstration made in Italy by Lord Minto, it will assuredly be found too late that England will decline to give effective force to those Italians whom her policy shall have incited to rebellion. Not only therefore as Irish tax payers, but also as friends to the constitutional liberties of Italy, we ought to withhold all encouragement from this sort of trifling with the passions of an excitable people. It may be thought indeed by some patriotic Irishmen that this precedent will be useful at some future time, and that if ever Ireland be again treated as she was treated in 1848, the governments of America or of France will find in the present conduct of England in regard of Naples, an excellent precedent to justify intervention in behalf of the suffering people of Ireland. To this argument I find some difficulty in offering an answer.

Let us now turn to the East. How many of you know what are the circumstances, actual or antecedent, of a town called Herat? Can any one tell me what possible interest Ireland has in determining whether this town shall belong to Persia or to Affghanistan, or whether it shall be maintained by the rulers of the Eastern Empire of Great Britain as an independent state, in that sort of independence which was recently enjoyed by the kingdom of Oude? For my own part, I profess that I am unable to discover what moral right the British Government possess to interfere in regard to contention respecting a country which is situated at a distance of many hundred miles from its frontier; or what legitimate interest Great Britain can have in giving armed effect to such interference. I profess myself also incapable of understanding the manifesto which has been issued by the Indian Government in justification of this proceeding. I can indeed conceive that British rapacity may desire to plunder the rich cities of Persia, as it has already plundered half the cities of Asia. I can conceive that what is called "Anglo-Saxon enterprise" may covet the valley of the Euphrates, more especially when I find that it has been seriously projected to open a communication with India in that direction; and I can conceive that the terms of a vague and unintelligible treaty may be made the pretext for opening hostilities with a view to the eventful results. This game has been often enough played in the East. It was played in a most unscrupulous manner and with the most complete success, in the case of the Ameers of Scinde. But is this sort of policy justifiable when judged by that high-toned morality which the British public is so fond of arrogating to itself? Moreover, may it not be hereafter discovered that it will have been as inexpedient in its consequences as it is indefensible in its design? Pretexts of a similar character affecting this very city of Herat, formed the ground for the invasion of Affghanistan, which terminated in the ignominous destruction of a British army, and its total expulsion from the Affghan territory. If it be true that Russian intrigue has se in motion the alleged attack upon Herat by the Persians, is it not possible that Russia may support her Persian ally, by armed assistance, and if she bring fifty thousand auxilaries into the field, who can estimate the expenditure that will be needed before triumphs can be won in such a struggle?

During the year preceding that in which I was transported to the Antipodes, British Parliament advanced on loan eight millions with a view to the relief of the Irish nation when suffering from famine. I well remember the insulting language with which this aid was accompanied, and so great was the apparent magnitude of the effort, that it might have been supposed that England had exhausted all her resources in performing an act of unparalleled generosity—yet I find that last year an addition of thirty millions was made to the ordinary war esitmates of the United Kingdom with scarcely a murmur of dissension, and Ireland has been subjected to an increase of taxation which would have been much more than sufficient to have provided an interest upon loans that would have been adequate not only to have preserved the lives of the myriads who died of actual starvation, but also to have rendered the occurrence of the famine an era of unprecedented improvement. Does it not occur to the Irish tax payers that it would be better to expend the resources of Ireland in promoting substantial measures of utility, than to squander them in wars relative to the concerns of countries with which the interest of Ireland has scarcely an imaginable connection?

If this letter had not already extended beyond the limits within which I was desirous to confine it, I would have asked you to consider also what motive can induce you to encourage the continued occupation of Greece by the maintenance there of a British force, to the support of which your income tax lends its contribution? The occupation of the Pirœus was intelligible, and possibly excusable, during the war with Russia, but since the conclusion of the Peace I have not heard even the pretext of an argument which can justify its continuance; and I can myself testify that it is most galling to the high-spirited natives of that interesting country.

Had space permitted, I would have endeavored to convince you that instead of upholding the cruel domination of a Turkish minority, European statesmen ought rather to develope those noble elements of nationality which exist among the Christian population of Turkey in Europe, and that they would find in this population, constituting as it does a large majority of the inhabitants of that land, a much more effective barrier against Russian aggression than is to be found in the effete decrepitude of the Turkish Empire.

I would also have dwelt at some length upon the Irish views of these financial questions. About fifteen years ago I studied with much attention the writings of various patriotic Irishmen who endeavored, by many elaborate statements, to prove that inasmuch as England was subjected before the Union to a much larger amount of debt than had been contracted by the Irish Parliament, it was only reasonable that the interest of the ante-union debt of England should be borne exclusively by the English people. This separate obligation was calculated to amount to above fifteen millions sterling per annum, and it is argued that injustice was done by the gradual equalization of Irish with English taxation. At present, instead of a separate taxation, amounting to fifteen millions, the exemption enjoyed by Ireland from taxation common to the United Kingdom, amounts to a mere fraction. I may be excused, however, for neglecting to recal these considerations, since they appear to have been forgotten alike by the writers by whose arguments I was convinced and by the Irish public to whom they were addressed.

But truth and justice do not change with the varying expediency of the hour, and these arguments are as valid now as they were in the palmiest days of the Repeal Association.

For the present I can dispense with the cumulative force of this reasoning, as I trust that I have said enough to convince, not only the Irish, but the British reader, that a common effort ought to be made to check the tendencies which are encouraged by that deplorable facility with which nations open their purses at the suggestion or for the behoof of those who excite the passions of ambition, revenge, or cupidity.

If the observations contained in this address be deemed by you well-founded, you will instruct your representatives to resist the longer continuance of the war Income Tax paid by you, or at least to demand that it shall be applied to objects beneficial to Ireland.

That is your duty—I have fulfilled mine.

I have the honor to be

Your very faithful servant,

WILLIAM S. O'BRIEN.

Cahirmoyle, Dec. 29, 1856.

Literature.

HOLLY AND IVY—CHRISTMAS WREATHS FROM IRISH RUINS.

NEW SETTINGS OF OLD STORIES—STRANGE BUT TRUE.

Spending the Christmas holidays in the city of New-York, I dropped in, with a few friends, the night after St. Stephen's, to visit an Irish family. When the door was closed behind us, we found that with the lasses and the lads and the old people, and the friends who were there before us, we made a room-full. Each had a congratulation to offer; something old to commemorate; something new to tell; and we were not long in discovering that exile from the old land, good health, Christmas times and bracing weather, form a combination of incidents most felicitous in a social re-union. The Past was taken from its grave, and waked in the Irish fashion with mingled tears and laughter, solemnity and mirth. As for the Future, that was entirely forgotten—for time is never less thought of than when it is passing most quickly. The Muses began to drop in invisibly, through some chink or keyhole, where the frosty air durst not enter. Stories inevitably burst forth, and at this stage of the business, there was one individual who shone out with unrivalled lustre—this was the father of the family. In Ireland, he had told stories during a generation; had been the oracle of the Past, the referee in all disputed points of local antiquity, the Nestor of the parish, in so far at least as he undervalued all mere current events, the very marrow of persuasion in persuasion's strongest point—earnestness!

Somebody in the company had the temerity to mention an occurrence which dated back ten or a dozen years or more. At this the old Patriarch energetically drew his chair closer to mine, for we sat near each other, placed his hand upon my arm, and in a voice loud enough to be heard by all the company, demanded if I ever heard the story of Gow Ardh na Tholoch. Receiving a reply in the negative, and pleased with the silence which immediately ensued, he thus began—

THE STORY OF THE BEGGARMAN AND GOW ARDH-NA-THOLOCH.

"There was once in the county Limerick a rich man, and the name they had on him was Mechaul-na-Fiola, and the way he got his money was to inherit it—"

"What a queer way," broke in the wife of the Patriarch, "you have for beginning a story. A rich man, indeed! Sure Mechaul was but a beggarman,"

"Ah! then, woman, wasn't I going to say it if you let me. Just leave me to my own courses, or the story will never be told. Well, Mechaul was the last of a family of beggarmen, and all the money they ever made came by natural descent to him; and if this doesn't make him out a rich man, I'm wrong, and all the women in the world are right, and I wish them joy; but, as I was saying, Mechaul had more money than he could count—all in yellow guineas. So he sewed them up in a piece of a blanket and strapped the blanket around his body, under his waistcoat, and resolved neither to lessen nor increase them any more, but travel to foreign parts for the sake of improving his mind. So one morning, bright and early, he turned his face towards the county Cork."

Somebody present, who had been in six or seven States of the Union, inquired, with some pomp, whether "passing from Limerick into Cork was to be looked on as foreign travel?"

"Yes," answered the Patriarch, "that much on foot was equal to half round the world in a steam-coach. For before steam was invented, people gained more insight by travelling than they do now. I remember a saying used in my time, when a man showed any amount of knowledge about anything, somebody present was sure to say, 'what wonder, sure he travelled for it.' This proverb," continued the Patriarch, "I look on as sufficient proof that going from Limerick into Cork, when it was done in the right way—on foot—as Mechaul did it, ought to be looked upon as travelling."

Many of those present eagerly assented, and the Patriarch went on:

"Well and good then, Mechaul passed through Kilmallock and on to Mitchelstown, and then turned up the Galtees, and stopped there in meditation and affliction during the course of several days."

A young man who was on the look-out for a situation here inquired, how the beggarman got a living; "did he use his money or what?"

"He lived," answered the Patriarch, "like a gentleman or a Member of Congress, having his travelling expenses—I mean his bit and sup and his bed—provided by the public; and having his money in bank—I mean in the blanket under his waistcoat—while he was enjoying the beauties of nature."

This said, not ironically, but in a spirit of vindication, was received gravely by all present, and the story-teller triumphantly resumed.

"From the Galtees he turned back again to Mitchelstown and then to Doneraile, and from Doneraile to Buttevant; there he went to see the Abbey and the wall made of bones collected on the battle-field of Uick na Nuiss, where Culkitto was laid low. And lo, and behold you, while he was meditating above the bones, and saw that some of them were very large, the thought came into his mind that the fine men who owned these bones, had to give in to death like the poorest sprissauns. And I must die, too, said he, and then what is to become of what I have here in the blanket? So, to prevent himself from thinking, he began to whistle, and went his way. Well and good, from Buttevant he went to Liscarrol, to see Barry's Castle, and from that to Kanturk, the head of the boar; and from Kanturk he turned his face to Mallow."

"Rather crooked kind of travelling," said a Blackwater man who knew every inch of the County Cork."

"Crooked or straight," replied the Patriarch, "that's how he went. I only tell you the story as I heard it from my own aunt, who was told it at Nelly Corbett's wake, at Ballycrenan, by a woman who heard it at Mechaul's wake in Tholoch. But, to continue, from Mallow he tramped it on foot down the Blackwater to Fermoy, and from Fermoy he went to see Castle-Hyde, and from Castle-Hyde he went to Kilshannick, and from Kilshannick to Lisnagar, and at last he spent three nights in Rathcormack. From Rathcormack he went to Gurtroe, and from—"

"What matter is it," interrupted the Patriarch's wife, "how he went. Can't you tell the young men the end of it at once?"

"Ah! woman," he as hastily rejoined, "you don't know but 'tis spoiling a fine book you are. Sure 'tis in hopes of seeing all this in a book some day, that I'm taking so much pains. But the women always know best, of course. If I'm not let tell how he travelled, I'll stop altogether and leave you all in pain about the result; so you'd better let me go on. Well, from Gurtroe he went to Blue Bell, and from Blue Bell to Ballincurrig, and from Ballincurrig to Lisgoold, and from that to Ballinaclashy, and from that to Ballyedmond, and from that to Middleton."

"The most of them places," again interposed the woman of the house, "are up together, like beads on a string."

"I wish," returned the Patriarch, somewhat fiercely, "that we had all the women's tongues on a string; and then whatever is said in company would be said without any interruption. I tell you again it is in hopes of seeing this in all the papers or may be in a book, to-morrow or next day, that I'm going into so many particulars; but now 'tis in such a mixum-gatherum with your interruptions, that it won't be fit to be seen, let alone understood. Well, in Middleton he stopped a night in a decent man's house, and when he was going to bed, he unstrapped his piece of a blanket, and put it down on the floor to kneel upon for safety while he was saying his prayers. And while he was on his knees, he couldn't say his prayers rightly at all, with thinking of the bones he saw at Buttevant, and out of that proving to himself, his own death. 'When those two shin bones of mine,' says he, 'will be thrown up some day on a shovel out of the earth, where will be the gold they're kneeling on? Rolling in a coach, maybe, in some lord's breeches pocket, or piled up in a bank or hidden in the box of some miser, like myself; but in any case, no longer belonging to me.' He could not stand the thought but went into bed and soon slept, for he was tired, first putting the money under his head. But in the middle of the night a skeleton of big bones came to him, and said to him these words—'Mechaul, if you don't use your money, it will all pass over to Gow Ardh na Tholoch!' Mechaul woke with the fright and he heard the voice still saying the same; and what was curious, he got fonder than ever of the money, and hurried away from Middleton, to escape the Big Bones. So then he set out towards Cloyne, and when he got to Scariff Hill, he spent half the day looking out over the valley below and beyond the town of Cloyne with its Round Tower, to the Atlantic Ocean always beating against the cliffs that kept it out. A man came up and told him there was a prophecy going in those parts, that a ship would yet sail over the top of that Round Tower below, the highest in Ireland. And when Mechaul looked and saw the awful meaning it contained, when he saw the ocean apparently higher than the valley at his feet, and noted the white-capped breakers ever rushing with fury against the lofty iron-bound shore, 'Tis a good protection, surely,' says he, 'but if the world lasts long, that water beyond will flow over those towns below; and when the thing is once done, it will then be as completely done, as if some one cut a passage for the waves in five minutes. And no matter how long I live, when once I'm dead, my money will be as surely gone from me as if I lost it now.' Thinking this way, he was, when the man asked him to stop in his house that night. So he went to the house a little on the other side of the hill and stopped there, and in the middle of the night who comes to him but St. Colman, and says the saint to him, says he, 'if you don't use your money, it will all pass over to Gow Ardh na Tholoch.' Well, when he heard this warning for the second time, he went straight out of the house without knowing where he was aiming for, and late in the morning, he came out on the sea coast near Ballycotton, with the village of Tholoch under his feet. Here he went into a cabin to rest, and the fatigue of his journey made him sleep; and when he was fairly asleep he thought he saw a tall smith come in the door with a hammer on his shoulder, and motioning fiercely to him with his other hand, says the smith, 'If you don't use your money, it will pass over to Gow Ardh na Tholoch.' 'Indeed, then it never will,' says Mechaul, rushing straight out the door to the top of the cliff and flinging the piece of a blanket with all the money into the sea; 'whoever he is,' says he, 'he never shall have it, and thanks be to God, I'm done with it;' and he turned his face contentedly towards the village. Now, you must know that Gow Ardh, or the tall smith, lived in this village; and as he happened to be going, an hour after, along the path at the foot of the cliff, he saw a large bulk a few feet out on the point of a rock, just under the surface of the water. So he brought it in and found it was all gold, and taking it home to his wife, he explained the way it happened. 'But,' says the wife, 'the money isn't ours, and let us keep it 'till we find the owner.' 'I agree with you, woman as you are,' said Gow Ardh na Tholoch."

"I doubt if that's the way he spoke to his wife," said the woman of the house."

"Well," resumed the Patriarch, "I only tell you as my aunt told me, and if you wish to doubt the word of the dead, you're welcome to your taste. But the smith and his wife resolved to keep the money till they found an owner, and their minds were just made up, when in walked the beggarman, looking for a night's lodging.

"I saw you," says he to the smith, "in a dream this morning," telling at the same time the story of the money.

"And I found your gold," says the smith, showing him the blanket and asking him to take it.

"No," says Meehaul—says he, "I won't take it. The money is yours," says he, "by prophecy and prediction, and by your own deserving. Keep it," says he, "and my blessing go with it, and all I ask is a night's lodging in return."

"But the smith's wife," continued the Patriarch, "would not be easy with her nonsense, but baked three loaves of bread that night, and put eleven of the guineas into each loaf, and gave them to the beggarman next morning for the road. Meehaul set out, and when he got to the village, feeling very thirsty, he went to the public house and swapped one of the loaves for a pint of Beamish's porter, and he did the same with another loaf in another public house, and the same with the third in another; and then set off back again for Limerick.

Well, lo and behold you, the smith and his family were at mass next day, which was Sunday, and after mass they went to the public house to have their breakfast, and in cutting their loaf, out came the guineas; and then from that house they went to the second one where the beggarman called, and the same thing happened there, and from that they went to the third, and the same thing happened there; and so they had back their thirty-three guineas."

"I think," remarked a young man who had read Waverly, "that the last part is very awkward. If I were writing an account of it, I would say that the three loaves were sold in the same house."

"You have no right," replied the Patriarch, "to change a single iota of the story. I tell it to you as I heard it from my aunt, and she got it at Nelly Corbett's wake, at Ballycrenan. But to make a long story short, the beggarman came back in a year's time, to pay a visit to the smith, and he found him enjoying the money honestly and living on a fine farm; for when the smith's wife saw the money come back in the loaves of bread, she took it as a sign from Heaven that they were the rightful owners of the whole. "'Twas a happy day," says Mechaul, "I lost my money and you found it; for I am a better man in heart, and you better in pocket than either of us was before. Now I am come to make my soul among you," says he, "and to call for assistance on good St. Colman."

"You're welcome," said the blacksmith. Sit in that corner there," said he, "while you live, and when you die, I'll bury you decent." And Mechaul stayed with him, and when he died, he was buried decent sure enough, and 'twas at his wake the woman heard the story that told it afterwards at Nelly Corbett's wake, at Ballycream, to my aunt, and she told it to me;" so there's the story of Gow Ardh na Tholock, and if ever you intend to make a book, just send me in a letter, and pay my expenses, and we'll make a book that will be worth reading."

I thanked him for his kind offer, and bade the Patriarch and his family a long good night. F.

THE HISTORY OF CATHOLIC AMERICA.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES: A Sketch of its Ecclesiastical History. By HENRY DE COURCY. Translated and enlarged by JOHN GILMARY SHEA. Dunigan and Brother.

There is no intelligent Episcopalian, Puseyite, Presbyterian, Unitarian, Methodist, Baptist, Quaker, Shaker, Mormon, New Jerusalemite, or Jew, to whom a History of the Catholic Church in the United States should not—we may say would not—be acceptable; even as the historical record of any of these churches or sects in the Republic should necessarily be of interest and instruction to the intelligent reading and thinking Catholic. The history of Maryland, Virginia, or Massachusetts, is of not less intrinsic value to the student, who born, or settling in New-York, believes this State to be the greatest in the Union, than the history of New-York is to the Marylander, Virginian, or Yankee, who believes his own State to be that especial one upon which God has smiled most bounteously.

The annals recording the rise, labors and progress of the various churches, devotional organisations, fanatical factions and spasmodic sectionalists of the country, are important contributions to its History. They possess an attraction for the statesman, philosopher and honest student, far above that even which recommends them to their respective partisans. They are to the "religious" history of the country, what the State histories are to the History of the United States.

Apart from sectional feelings, the history of so important and prominent a profession of Christian faith as the Catholic, must present a multitude of deeply impressive subjects for meditation to the student. Its magnitude and antiquity must command a respectful attention from those who are even fundamentally opposed to its doctrines. Intellectual men cannot afford to look upon it but with sensations of wonder and awe, if not with enthusiasm and veneration. That instinct of human nature which makes us bow before great success in whatever shape, or by whatever means manifested or attained; and which seduces from the man of intellect and culture a submission equal to that forced from the ignorant, has made, and ever will make, men of the most ultra antagonistic doctrines unite in rivalling each other's admiration for the pristine beauty, mediæval grandeur, modern trials and all-time success of the Roman Catholic Church.

The politics and political convulsions springing from its necessities or rule; the arts, whose radiant resources, it would almost seem, exhausted themselves in illustrating it; the music it inspired, with a power mimicking its own,—these if no other, or more unearthly attributes, chain the most comprehensive intellects, against their worldly will it may be, to its earthly majesty, as the kings were fettered to the car of the Assyrian monarch. They cannot help it.

Typical of those—well known for an opposition to the tenets of Catholicity, amounting to a passion beyond the bounds of even theological asperity, who render indirect homage to these very tenets, while bowing before the magnitude they fear to comprehend,—are a few notable men, differing in their degrees of mental solidity, and of course varying in their views—but chiefly, however, in the mode of expressing them. We may regard these men as the representatives of a large intellectual class, and their opinions are consequently, if for no individual reason, valuable.

Old Samuel Johnson, whom Curran called an intolerable dog-

matist, a slave in politics and a bigot in religion; and whom Carlisle extolled as "the greatest soul in England in his day," gave expression to such sentiments of Catholic sympathy that he has been "misrepresented as leaning too much towards Popery in its entireness."* The author of Dr. Johnson's Religious Life and Death, devotes a very entertaining chapter to a review of his hero's opinions on Roman Catholics. He feels gratified in the knowledge that Samuel "rejected error under whatever countenance of authority it might be broached, and in common with all great minds loved truth in its solidity and simplicity;" and at the same time, in the same paragraph, warns his readers not to be surprised at Johnson's being more favorably inclined to Catholicity than Presbyterianism, because "his (Johnson's) principles and feelings were ever ranged on the side of authority, antiquity and establishment." In this chapter the Doctor defends and explains The Mass, Purgatory, Confession, The Efficacy of Prayers for the Dead, Invocation of Saints, &c., to which passages, as we are not writing a theological essay, we will refer only by name. His opinion on conversion, reported by Sir Walter Scott, well sums up, in effect, the opinions held by Johnson. "A man," he said, "who is converted from Protestantism to Popery, may be sincere: he parts with nothing: he is only superadding to what he already had. But a convert from Popery to Protestantism gives up so much of what he has held as sacred as anything that he retains—there is so much laceration of mind in such a conversion, that it can hardly be sincere and lasting." So much, en passant, for the burly sage of Bolt Court and his regard for "Popery."

Thomas Babington Macaulay, whom no one will accuse of undue affection for Catholicity, compiles into brilliant periods evidence of the capacity, influence and magnitude of the Church, past and present. He believes that all the progress with which the world has been visited during the two centuries and a half past, has tended to the benefit and extension of the Church of Rome. Looking upon it as "a work of human policy," he cannot see in the history of the earth anything so well deserving of examination. He says:

"The history of that Church joins together the two great ages of human civilization. No other institution is left standing which carries the mind back to the times when the smoke of sacrifice rose from the Pantheon, and when cameleopards and tigers bounded in the Flavian amphitheatre. The proudest royal houses are but of yesterday, when compared with the line of the Supreme Pontiffs. That line we trace back in an unbroken series, from the Pope who crowned Napoleon in the nineteenth century, to the Pope who crowned Pepin in the eighth; and far beyond the time of Pepin the august dynasty extends, till it is lost in the twilight of fable. The Republic of Venice came next in antiquity. But the Republic of Venice was modern when compared with the Papacy; and the Republic of Venice is gone, and the Papacy remains. The Papacy remains, not in decay, not a mere antique; but full of life and youthful vigor. The Catholic Church is still sending forth to the furthest ends of the world missionaries as zealous as those who landed in Kent with Augustin; and still confronting hostile Kings with the same spirit with which she confronted Attila. The number of her children is greater than in any former age. Her acquisitions in the New World have more than compensated her for what she has lost in the Old. Her spiritual ascendancy extends over the vast countries which lie between the plains of the Missouri and Cape Horn—countries which, a century hence, may not improbably contain a population as large as that which now inhabits Europe. The members of her community are certainly not fewer than one hundred and fifty millions; and it will be difficult to show that all the other Christian sects united amount to one hundred and twenty millions. Nor do we see any sign which indicates that the term of her long dominion is approaching. She saw the commencement of all the governments, and of all the ecclesiastical establishments, that now exist in the world; and we feel no assurance that she is not destined to see the end of them all. She was great and respected before the Saxon had set foot on Britain—before the Frank had passed the Rhine—when Grecian eloquence flourished at Antioch—when idols were still worshipped in the temple of Mecca. And she may still exist in undiminished vigor when some traveller from New Zealand shall, in the midst of a vast solitude, take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's."†

* * * * * *

"Four times since the authority of the Church of Rome was established in Western Christendom has the human intellect risen up against her yoke. Twice she remained completely victorious. Twice she came forth from the conflict bearing the marks of cruel wounds, but with the principle of life strong within her. When we reflect on the tremendous assaults which she has survived, we find it difficult to conceive in what way she is to perish."‡

Speaking of Thomas à Kempis, Johnson observed that "it must must be a good book, as the world has opened its arms to receive it." If the merits of the Church of Rome be judged on the same terms, and according to Macaulay's statistics (made in 1840) we have little difficulty in coming to a decided conclusion.

Young Kirke White, writing a letter of advice to his brother James, speaking of the formulas of the Episcopal Church, makes some shrewd remarks which are to the purpose. Alluding to the venerably ancient nature of many of the services, and to their having been used "from age to age ever since in our churches, with but few alterations," he continues,—"But you will say they were used by the Roman Catholics, who are a very superstitious and bigoted set of people. This is no objection at all, because the Roman Catholics were not always so bad, and what is a proof of this is, that there once was no other religion in the world; and we cannot think that church very wicked which God chose, once, to make the sole guardian of his truth."§ The conclusion to which this inevitably leads is one that completely upsets the faith professed by the gentle writer. In his honesty he annihilates the theological policy to the laborious study of which he sacrificed his life.

These few opinions, quoted from honest youth, eloquent maturity, and the convinced dogmatism of erudite middle age, are fitly identified with the opinion of large classes in the intelligent world. When the Church of Rome has commanded from such men such testimony to its intellectual and political prestige, its might and past mission, its grandeur, present power, and the possibility of never-ending progress in the future, we are prepared to hear Mr. Lynn-Lachlan Davis, author of that useful brochure The Day-Star of American Freedom, avow that the study of its history—which from the Crusades to the present, from childhood to hoary age, has exerted a magical influence over the dream of the Virgin, the meditation of the Matron, and the actions of men of every caste and type—elicits "a more passionate fondness than the 'Arabian Nights,' or the most truthful and enchanting picture man has sketched either of domestic manners, or of Oriental magnificence and renown."

Considering the history of this Church in the United States, considering what is given to us as its history—the material for it and the uses they have been put to—opened out so large a chart of inquiry to us, that we must defer to another day the opinion we have arrived at in such consideration.

* Dr. Johnson: his Religious Life and Death. p. 278.

† Macaulay's Miscellaneous Writings. Article on "Ranke's History of the Popes." p. 401.

‡ Ib. 403.

§ H. K. White's Letters in The Remains, &c.

WINTER THOUGHTS.

NO. III.—SNOW ON THE GROUND.

I.

Like a corpse the stark earth lieth,
Free from toiling Life's deceits;
And the Air, grown pale from watching,
Swathes her round with snowy sheets.

II.

Fold on fold wraps mutely round her,
Her calm breast no life-hope rears,
And she seems from heavens weeping,
To be tombed in frozen tears.

III.

But though rigid cold her bosom,
Gone her music—fled her bloom;
Still the shrouded Earth, like Juliet,
Is but tranced within the tomb.

NO. IV.—SUMMER ALWAYS.

I.

While the wind is fiercely howling,
Lilla dear, come anear—
While the wolf-like wind is howling,
Round the cottage gables prowling,
And the wintry clouds are scowling
On the mere:—
Let us, waking up the embers,
Love and youth and books revere,
Feel that howling bleak Decembers
Cannot make a winter here,
Lilla dear.

II.

While the outside world is shivering,
Lilla dear, come anear—
While the beggar earth is shivering,
Like a miser, old and quivering,
Unto Time his debt delivering
Of the year:—
Let us, clinging close together,
Though perchance we drop a tear
O'er the past, find summer weather
E'er in living, loving here,
Lilla dear.

JOHN SAVAGE.

INNER LIFE.

Twilight shadows gather round me,
Dimly glows the dying light;
Icy fetters that have bound me,
Melt before the radiant Night.

Mystic visions o'er me stealing,
Gleam of beauty uncreate,
Seraph music, Heav'n revealing,
Make my soul with bliss elate.

Through the gloom white wings are glancing,
Like the silent falling snow;
Spirit longings, soul entrancing,
Make my heart with fervor glow.

Ever, in this lonely dreaming,
On my soul there falls the light
Of two blue eyes sadly gleaming
Through the silence of the night.

Radiant eyes, so deep and tender,
Lighting up my lonely way,
With the calm light of their splendor,
With their pure and constant ray.

And a brow, upon whose whiteness
Sits enthroned the spirit's might,
Radiant with a soul-lit brightness,
Earnest love of Truth and Right.

And I know that 'mid life's changing,
As Time's currents onward roll,
That a soul with love unchanging,
Holds communion with my soul.

Weary heart, upon Life's ocean
Ever tose'd by wind and wave,
With a restless surging motion,
Vainly seeking Hope to save.

In the end, to rapture turning,
All thy sorrow here shall cease,
Like the dove to heaven returning
With the olive-branch of peace.

New-York, 1857. SERVA.

AMERICAN PRIVATEERS.

The Second War with England. By J. T. Headley, author of Napoleon and his Marshals, &c.; 2 vols. Fourth Thousand. C. Scribner.

Coming to us the day previous to the anniversary of Jackson's great victory, which closed the Second War with England, Headley's History has a peculiar interest. It refreshes the mind, and invigorates the heart to fight these battles o'er again. In this book, vividly written, and with a hearty national spirit, the leading facts of the War, both by sea and land, may be found. As a good specimen of the author's clear and picturesque style, the following chapter from the gallant history of American Privateering, may be taken. When one reads the details of the dreadful fight between the Armstrong and the British Squadron he may may not wonder that English statesmen exert themselves to abolish Privateering.

But the most desperate engagement probably during the war took place this year, between the privateer brig, General Armstrong, and the crews of an English squadron, in the port of Fayal. This brig, carrying only seven guns and ninety men, entered that port to obtain water, and her commander, Captain Reid, seeing no sail on the horizon, dropped his anchor. A few hours after, the British brig Carnation, came in, and anchored near her. Soon after, the Plantagenet, 74, and the Rota frigate arrived. Captain Reid, knowing how little regard English officers paid to the laws of neutrality, became very solicitous about the safety of his ship, and applied to the authorities of the place to know what course he should pursue. They told him he need entertain no fear, as the English officers knew the rights of a neutral port too well to molest him. Captain Reid, however, suspected it would be otherwise, and kept a close watch on the movements of the enemy. About nine o'clock in the evening, it being broad moonlight on the bay, and not a breath of air disturbing its glittering surface, he saw four boats rowing rapidly and silently towards him. When they came within hail he called out to know their purpose. The latter making no reply, and keeping steadily on, he bade them stand off. They paid no heed to his repeated orders, and were about to board when he gave the command to fire. After a short but fierce contest the assailants were driven off, and returned to their vessels. The news soon spread, and the inhabitants, with the governor, gathered on the shore to see the battle. About midnight, fourteen launches, filled with four hundred men, were seen to put off and steer straight for the privateer. Captain Reid, who, in the meantime, had cut his cable and moored closer in shore, knew he could not save his vessel; but indignant at this violation of the laws of neutrality, he determined the enemy should pay dear for the conquest, and the moment the boats came within range opened a tremendous fire upon them. They staggered under it, but returning it with spirit, continued to press on. But as they got nearer the carnage became awful. Every gun on board that privateer seemed aimed with the precision of a rifle, and the discharges were so rapid and incessant that it was with the utmost efforts that the boats could be pushed on at all. The dead cumbered the living, and the oars were continually dropping from the hand of the slain, crippling and confusing all movements. At length, however, they succeeded in reaching the brig, and cheered by their officers shouting "No quarter," began to ascend the sides of the ship. In a moment its black hull was a sheet of flame rolling on the foe.

Shrieks and cries, mingled with oaths and execrations, and sharp volleys of musketry rang out on the night air, turning that moonlight bay into a scene of indescribable terror. The bright waters were loaded with black forms, as they floated or struggled around the boats. The Americans fought with the ferocity of tigers and the desperation of madmen. Leaping into the boats they literally massacred all within. Several drifted ashore full of dead bodies—not a soul being left alive of all the crew—others were sunk. Some were left with one or two to row them. Overwhelmed, crushed and discomfitted, the remainder abandoned the attempt and pulled slowly back to the ships, marking their course by the groans and cries of the wounded that floated back over the bay. Only three officers, out of the whole, escaped, while scarce a hundred and fifty of the four hundred returned unwounded to their vessels. A hundred and twenty were killed outright. The loss could scarcely have been greater had the enemy fought a squadron equal to their own.

Our Consul, after this, dropped a note to the Governor, who immediately sent a remonstrance to Van Lloyd, commander of the Plantagenet, saying that the American vessel was under the guns of the castle, and entitled to Portuguese protection. To this Van Lloyd replied that he was resolved on the destruction of the vessel, and if the fort undertook to protect her, he would not leave a house standing on the shore.

The next day the Carnation hauled in alongside and opened her broadsides on the privateer. Reid, still grimly clinging to his vessel, returned the fire, and in a short time so cut up his antagonist that he hauled off to repair. That little brig, half a wreck, lying under the walls of the castle, fighting that hopeless gallant battle, vindicating her rights against such fearful odds, with none who dare help her, presented a sublime spectacle.

At length, his guns being dismounted, Captain Reid ordered his men to cut away the masts of the ship, blow a hole through the bottom, and taking out their arms and clothing, go ashore. Soon after, the British advanced and set her on fire. Van Lloyd then made a demand on the Governor for Captain Reid and his crew, threatening in case of refusal to send an armed force and take them. Fearing that the Governor would not be able to prevent their arrest, this gallant band retired to an old convent, knocked away the drawbridge, determined to defend themselves to the last. The English commander had no desire to place his crews again under the deadly aim of those daring men, and abandoned the project.

The American loss in this engagement was two killed and seven woudned. Thus dearly did England pay for this violation of the laws of a neutral port. That brig cruising successfully to the close of the war, could not have inflicted so heavy damage on the enemy as she caused in her capture.

The gallant bearing and patriotic feeling that marked these little cruisers are worthy of record, while the hair-breadth escapes—the tricks employed to entice merchantmen within their reach—the wit and humor exhibited in hailing and answering the hails—the saucy and irritating acts committed on purpose to provoke—the good-natured jokes they cracked on those they had first outwitted, then conquered, would make a most characteristic and amusing chapter in American history.

In the report supplied by the Paris Moniteur of M. Pousard's address, on the occasion of his reception by the French Academy, we find the following passage:—"It has been the fashion to proclaim that the dramas of the divine William (sic) embraced humanity under every aspect, whereas our classical writers only represent individuals. Goethe discovered in Hamlet a thousand things which Shakspeare, fortunately for himself, never thought of; everything has been adored in him, even to his bombast and his indecencies; the pecularities of his style have been copied, as had been those of Racine. That fanaticism has now somewhat calmed down, and there remains of it a just and well-founded admiration.

A GARLAND FOR THE GRAVE OF THEOBALD MATHEW.

The departure from earth of that great and good man, Father Mathew, has inspired the deepest sensation of regret which has been manifested for years by the public press of England as well as Ireland. His virtues and labors were of such a nature as to overrule any political feeling between the people who desire to honor his memory, and thus we find the London Times aspiring to do more justice—by a more extended notice—to the "Dead Apostle," than that accorded by even the most enthusiastic of the Irish Journals. Several poems have appeared, illustrating the life, and lamenting the death of the great reformer, a few of which—as they are just at hand—we string together in chronological order, as a meet and loving garland for the sacred grave.

The first was published several years since, and is a worthy invocation to an Artist about commencing a picture to illustrate the labors of—

FATHER MATHEW.

TO A PAINTER.

Seize the pencil, child of art!
Fame and fortune brighten o'er thee;
Great thy hand and great thy heart,
If well thou dost the work before thee!
'Tis not thine to round the shield,
Or point the sabre, black or gory;
'Tis not thine to spread the field,
Where crime is crown'd—where guilt is glory.

Child of art! to thee be given
To paint, in colors all unclouded,
Breakings of a radiant heaven,
O'er an isle in darkness shrouded!
But to paint them true and well,
Every ray we see them shedding
In its very light must tell
What a gloom before was spreading.

Canst thou picture dried-up tears—
Eyes that wept, no longer weeping—
Faithful woman's wrongs and fears,
Lonely, nightly vigils keeping—
Listening ev'ry footfall nigh—
Hoping him she loves returning?
Canst thou, then, depict her joy,
That we may know the change from mourning?

Paint in colors strong, but mild,
Our Isle's Redeemer and Director—
Canst thou paint the man a child,
Yet shadow forth the mighty VICTOR?
Let his path a rainbow span,
Every hue and color blending—
Beaming "peace and love" to man,
And alike o'er ALL extending!

Canst thou paint a land made free—
From its sleep of bondage woken—
Yet, withal, that we may see
What 'twas before the chain was broken!
Seize the pencil, child of art!
Fame and fortune brighten o'er thee!
Great thy hand, and great thy heart,
If well thou dost the work before thee!

The following "Farewell" sonnet was addressed to the good Father, by John Savage, and published in the Tribune, on the Monday of Father Mathew's departure for Europe, after his American tour:

FAREWELL TO FATHER MATHEW.

Farewell, my friend!—the mad world's friend, farewell!
May airs propitious soothe your ocean way,
And Heaven to thee the debt of Earth repay.
Farewell! the word brings visions like a spell,
And down the cloudy future people's swell.
I see them hold their hearts upon their tongues,
Eager for sacrifice of speech—and throngs
Hold solemn homage at a festival;
And daring youth and hearty age there meet,
And maiden tears of joy bedew the shrine—
And starving Bacchus groans in his retreat:
Whille joyful babes of happy sires entwine
A wreath for Mathew's living shade! and down
Eternity's broad path they bear his deathless crown.

Nov'r 7, 1851.

A correspondent of the Dublin Nation contributes these calm and loving verses to the theme:

THE DEAD APOSTLE.

His call hath come—the pure and faithful spirit
That labored long, with patience and with love,
Hath left its earthly country, to inherit
The Christian's guerdon in the world above.

Here is a sad procession, moving slowly,
Of mourning hearts, and eyes with weeping dim;
There is a temple, calm, and bright, and holy,
Where angels string their harps to welcome him.

For ceaselessly his God and country serving,
To one high cause his health and life he gave;
He passed along his chosen path unswerving,
And Eire weeps her blessings on his grave.

His voice hath calmed the scenes of senseless riot—
Brought hope and peace to many an aching breast—
We may not question the celestial fiat
That changes now his suffering into rest.

By city, village, mountain—never weary,
So long as strength was left him, on he trod,
Working such changes within the homes of Eire
That all men owned his mission was of God.

Nor here alone. The exiles of his nation,
In their far homes beyond the waves he sought;
Long may his name, in love and veneration,
Live there and guard the lessons that he taught!

His toil was bless'd—tho' some, alas, have slighted
His gentle counsel, and their sacred oath;
How many hold unstained the faith they plighted,
And now, with grief and joy will think on both?

And would they honor him whom Heaven hath taken?
Would they repay his love with their good will?
Oh! let them hold his precepts still unshaken,
And teach their children to respect them still.

So manhood shall increase and strength be granted
To our endeavors, as the seasons roll,
Until the seed our dead Apostle planted
Bear tenfold fruit to bless his parted soul.

MAHRIADH.

The following, from the Cork Examiner, fitly calls to mind one of the dearest ambitions of Father Mathew's life—that of raising a Cemetery for the free burial of the poor:

FATHER MATHEW.

Beneath the Cross they laid the man of God,
More meet a shelter than the clayey sod,
For him whose noble heart had throbb'd and broke
To free its children from a sinful yoke.
He clung to it in life, nor would he leave
In death its shadow for a flowery grave.
The dying Priest expressed one wish alone,
It was to rest beneath that Cross of stone.

Beneath the Cross they laid that sainted one,
Whose sainted voice unto his standard won
Millions, who spell-bound at the mighty call,
Burst the vile bond which held their souls in thrall;
Its tones are mute, but long their echoes will Ring in the poor man's home and cheer it still;
Peace he has brought, where despair had dwelt,
All creeds and nations have his influence felt.

Beneath the Cross they laid the honored dead,
Its fostering arms as if in welcome spread
To him whose hand was stretched in aid to all,
Whose ear was never closed to Sorrow's call,
Whose noble eye e'er shone with kindly ray,
Cheering the wretched through life's wintry way.
Apostle of the Cross, 'twas fit that he Should rest at last beneath the hallow'd tree.

Beneath the Cross they laid him; it was just
That no vain monument confined his dust;
Noble his birth, yet with the poor he stood,
Untired, unaided in his work of good;
He claimed no honor, nor would he be laid
Where worldly hearts a mocking tribute paid.
In marble urns let other men seek rest,
The Cross alone should wave above his breast.

Beneath the Cross he sought his dreamless bed,
No marvel if we view the life he led,
Self-sacrificing, humble, gen'rous, pure—
Sparing not means nor health to serve the poor.
But words are weak, and language empty sound,
Read his best praise in tearful eyes around,
In the deep sobs which break forth now and then,
Amid the speechless grief of mourning men.

Beneath the Cross they laid him let us kneel,
Hushing our anguish, while we inly feel,
Though we shall meet his equal ne'er on earth,
He won the laurels due to priceless worth.
While mem'ry lives, his unforgotten name
Shall swell the record of our country's fame;
From age to age shall Mathew's deeds be given,
As those unmatched on earth and worthy Heaven.

Cork, Dec. 18. J. E. M.

LOCAL CHANGES AND LOCAL FACTS OF OLD NEW-YORK.

BY JOHN F. WATSON,
Author of the Annals of Philadelphia.

NO. III.

APPAREL.

"We run through every change which fancy
At the loom has genius to supply."

There is a very marked and wide difference between our moderns and the ancients in their several views of appropriate dress. The latter, in our judgment of them, were always stiff and formal, unchanging in their cut and fit in the gentry, or negligent and rough in texture in the commonalty; whereas the moderns, casting off all former modes and forms, and inventing every new device which fancy can supply, just please the wearers "while the fashion is at full."

It will much help our just conceptions of our forefathers and their good dames, to know what were their personal appearances. To this end, some facts illustrative of their attire will be given. Such as it was amongst the gentry, was a constrained and pains-taking service, presenting nothing of ease and gracefulness in the use. While we may wonder at its adoption and long continuance, we will hope never again to see its return. But who can hope to check or restrain Fashion, if it should happen to set that way, or who can foresee that the next generation may not be more stiff and formal than any which has passed, since we see, even nw, our late graceful and easy habits of both sexes already partially supplanted by "monstrous novelty and strange disguise!" Men and women stiffly corsetted, long, unnatural-looking waists, shoulders and breasts stuffed and deformed as Richard's, and artificial hips; protruding garments of as ample folds as claimed the ton when senseless hoops prevailed.

A gentleman of eighty years of age has given me his recollections of the costumes of his early days to this effect, to wit:—Men wore three-square or cocked hats, and wigs; coats with large cuffs, big skirts, lined and stiffened with buckram. None ever saw a crown higher than the head. The coat of a beau had three or four large plaits in the skirts, wadding almost like a coverlet to keep them smooth; cuffs very large up to the elbows, open below and inclined down, with lead therein; the capes were thin and low, so as readily to expose the close plaited neck-stock of fine linen cambric, and the large silver stock-buckle on the back of the neck; shirts with hand-ruffles, sleeves finely plaited, breeches close fitting, with silver, stone, or paste gem buckles; shoes or pumps with silver buckles of various sizes and patterns; thread, worsted, and silk stockings; the poorer class wore sheep and buckskin breeches close set to the limbs. Gold and silver sleeve-buttons, set with stones or paste of various colors and kinds, adorned the wrists of the shirts of all classes. The very boys often wore wigs, and their dresses in general were similar to those of the men.

The women wore caps, (a bare head was never seen) stiff stays, hoops from six inches to two feet on each side; so that a full dressed lady entered a door like a crab, pointing her obtruding flanks end foremost; high heeled shoes of black stuff, with white cotton or thread stockings; and in the miry times of winter they wore clogs, gala shoes, or pattens.

The days of stiff coats, sometimes wire-framed, and of large hoops, was also stiff and formal in manners at set balls and assemblages. The dances of that day among the politer class were minuets, and sometimes country dances; among the lower order hipsesaw was everything.

As soon as the wigs were abandoned and the natural hair was cherished, it became the mode to dress it by plaiting it, by queuing and clubbing, or by wearing it in a black silk sack or bag, adorned with a large black rose.

In time, the powder with which wigs and the natural hair had been severally adorned, was run into disrepute, only about twenty-eight to thirty years ago, by the then strange innovation of "Brutus heads;" not only then discarding the long-cherished powder and perfume, and tortured frizzle-work, but also literally becoming "round heads" by cropping off all the pendant graces of ties, bobs, clubs, queues, &c. The hardy beaux who first encountered public opinion by appearing abroad unpowdered and cropt, had many starers. The old men for a time obstinately persisted in adherence to the old regime; but death thinned their ranks, and use and prevalence of numbers at length gave countenance to modern usage.

From various reminiscents we glean, that laced ruffles depending over the hand, was a mark of indispensable gentility. The coat and breeches were generally desirable of the same material—of "broad cloth" for winter and of silk camlet for summer. No kind of cotton fabrics were then in use or known. Hose were therefore of thread or silk in summer, and fine worsted in winter; shoes were square-toed, and were often "double channelled." To these succeeded sharp toes, as piked as possible. When wigs were universally worn, gray wigs were powdered; and for that purpose sent in a wooden box frequently to the barber to be dressed on his block-head. But "brown wigs," so called, were exempted from the white disguise. Coats of red cloth, even by boys, were considerably worn; and plush breeches and plush vests of various colors, shining and smooth, were in common use. Everlasting, made of worsted, was a fabric of great use for breeches, and sometimes for vests. The vest had great depending pocket flaps, and the breeches were short above the stride, because the art, since devised, of suspending them by suspenders, was then unknown. It was then the test and even the pride of a well-formed man, that he could by his natural form readily keep his breeches above the hips, and his stockings, without gartering, above the calf of his leg. With the queus belonged frizzled side-locks and tout pies, formed of the natural hair, or, in defect of a long tie, a splice was added to it. Such was the general passion for the longest possible whip of hair, that sailors and boatmen, to make it grow most, used to tie theirs in eel skins. Nothing like surtouts were known; but they had coating or cloth great coats, or blue cloth and brown camlet cloaks, with green baize lining to the latter. In the time of the American war, many of the American officers introduced the use of Dutch blankets for great coats. The sailors used to wear hats of glazed leather, or woollen thrums called chapeaus; and their "small clothes" as we would now call them, were immensely wide "petticoat-breeches." The working men in the country wore the same form, having no falling flaps, but slits in front; and they were so full in girth, that they ordinarily changed the rear to the front when the seat became prematurely worn out. At the same time numerous working men and boys, and all tradesmen, wore leather breeches and leather aprons.

Some of the peculiarities of the female dress were these, to wit: Ancient ladies are still alive, who often had their hair tortured for hours at a sitting in getting up for a dress occasion, the proper crisped curls of a hair-curler. This formidable outfit of head-work was next succeeded by "rollers," over which the hair was combed above the forehead. These again were superseded by "cushions" and artificial curled work, which could be sent to the barber's block, like a wig, "to be dressed," leaving the lady at home to pursue other objects.

When the ladies first began to lay off their cumbrous hoops, they supplied their place with successive substitutes, such as these, to wit: first came "bishops," a thing stuffed or padded with horse-hair; then succeeded a smaller affair, under the name of Cue de Paris, also padded with horse-hair. How it abates our admiration of the "lovely sex" to contemplate them as bearing a roll of horse-hair under their garments! An old satire said,

"Thus finished in taste, while on her you gaze,
You may take the dear charmer for life,
But never undress her—for out of her stays,
You'll find you have lost half your wife."

Next they supplied their place with silk or calimanco, or russell thickly quilted and inlaid with wool, made into petticoats; then these were supplanted by a substitute of half-a-dozen petticoats. No wonder such ladies needed fans in a sultry summer, and at a time when parasols were unknown, to keep off the solar rays. I knew a lady going to a gala-party, who had so large a hoop, that when she sat in the chaise, she so filled it up that the person who drove it, (it had no top,) stood up behind the box and directed the reins.

Some of those ancient belles, who thus sweltered under the weight of six petticoats, have lived now to see their posterity, not long since, go so thin and transparent, a la Francaise, especially when between the beholder and a declining sun, as to make a modest eye sometimes instinctively avert its gaze.

Among other articles of female wear, we may name the following, to wit: Once they wore a "skimmer-hat," made of a fabric which shone like silver-tinsel; it was of a very small flat crown and big brim, not unlike the present Leghorn-flats. Another hat—not unlike it in shape—was made of woven horse-hair, wove in flowers, and called "horse-hair-bonnets," an article which might be again usefully introduced for children's wear, as an enduring hat for long service. I have seen what was called a bath-bonnet, made of black satin, and so constructed as to lay in folds, that it could be set upon, like a chapeau-bras; a good article now for travelling-ladies. "The mush-mellon"-bonnet, used before the Revolution, had numerous whalebone-stiffeners in the crown, set at an inch apart in parallel lines, and, presenting ridges to the eye, between the bones. The next bonnet, was the "whalebone-bonnet," having only the bones in the front as stiffeners. "A calash-bonnet" was always formed of green silk; it was worn abroad, covering the head, but when in rooms, it could fall back in folds like the springs of a calash or gig-top; to keep it up over the head, it was drawn up by a cord always held in the hand of the wearer. The wagon-bonnet," always of black silk, was an article exclusively in use among the Friends, and was deemed to look, on the head, not unlike the top of the "Jersey-wagons," and having a pendant piece of like silk hanging from the bonnet and covering the shoulders. The only straw-wear was that called the "straw-beehive-bonnet," worn generally by old people.

INCIDENTS OF THE WAR AT NEW-YORK.

——"this is to show
Mankind, the wild deformity of war!"

New-York city having been held during the term of the revolution as a conquered place, and also as the chief military post of British rule, it becomes matter of interest and curiosity to the present generation to revive and contemplate the pictorial images of those scenes and facts which our fathers witnessed in those days of peril and deep emotion. I give such as I could glean.

The spirit of opposition in us began before the revolution actually opened.

The first theatre, in Beekman-street, (now where stands the house No. 26,) was pulled down on a night of entertainment there, by the citizens, generally called "Liberty Boys." The cause arose out of some offence in the play, which was cheered by the British officers present, and hissed and condemned by the mass of the people Soon after the people seized upon a Press Barge, and drew it through the streets to the park commons, where they burnt it.

After the war had commenced and New-York was expected to be captured, almost all the Whig families, who could sustain the expense, left their houses and homes to seek precarious refuge where they could in the country. On the other hand, after the city was possessed by the British, all the Tory families who felt unsafe in the country made their escape into New-York for British protection. Painfully, family relations were broken; families as well as the rulers took different sides, and "Greek met Greek" in fierce encounter.

Mr. Brower, who saw the British force land in Kip's Bay as he stood on the Long Island sound heights, says it was the most imposing sight his eyes ever beheld. The army crossed the East River, in open flat boats, filled with soldiers standing erect, their arms all glittering in the sun-beams. They approached the British fleet in Kip's Bay, in the form of a crescent, caused by the force of the tide breaking the intended line of boat after boat. They all closed up in the rear of the fleet, when all the vessels opened a heavy cannonade.

I shall herein endeavor to mark the localities of position occupied by the British, especially of residences of distinguished officers, and also of those suffering prison-houses and hospitals where our poor countrymen sighed over their own and their country's woe.

All the Presbyterian churches in New-York were used for military purposes in some form or other. I suspect that they were deemed more whiggish in general than some of the other churches. The clergymen of that order were in general throughout the war, said to be zealous to promote the cause of the revolution. The Methodists, on the contrary, then few in number, were deemed loyalists, chiefly from the known loyalism of their founder, Mr. Wesley. Perhaps to this cause it was that the Society in John-street enjoyed so much indulgence as to occupy their church for Sunday night service, while the Hessians had it in the morning service for their own chaplains and people.

The British troops were quartered in any empty houses of the Whigs which might be found. Wherever men were billetted, they marked it.

The Middle Dutch church in Nassau-street, was used to imprison 3000 Americans. The pews were all gutted out and used as fuel. Afterwards they used it for the British cavalry, wherein they exercised their men, as a riding-school, making them leap over raised windlasses. At the same place they often picketed their men, as a punishment, making them bear their weight on their toe on a sharp goad. At the same place, while the prisoners remained there, Mr. Andrew Mercein told me he used to see the "Dead Cart" come every morning, to bear off six or eight of the dead.

The old sugar-house, which also adjoined this church, was filled with the prisoners taken at Long Island; there they suffered much, they being kept in an almost starved condition.

This starving proceeded from different motives; they wished to break the spirit of the prisoners, and to cause their desertion, or to make the war unwelcome to their friends at home. On some occasions, as I shall herein show, the British themselves were pinched for supplies, and on other occasions the commissaries had their own gain to answer, by withholding what they could from the prisoners. I could not find, on inquiry, that Americans in New-York were allowed to help their countrymen unless by stealth. I was told by eye-witnesses of cases, where the wounded came crawling to the openings in the wall, and begging only for one cup of water, and could not be indulged, the sentinels saying, "We are sorry too; but our orders have been, 'suffer no communication in the absence of your officer.'"

The North Dutch church in William-street was entirely gutted of its pews, and made to hold 2000 prisoners.

The Quaker meeting-house in Pearl-street was converted into an hospital.

The old French church was used as a prison.

Mr. Thomas Swords told me they used to bury the prisoners on the Mount—then on the corner of Grace and Lumber-streets. It was an old redoubt.

Cunningham was infamous for his cruelty to the prisoners; even depriving them of life, it is said, for the sake of cheating his king and country by continuing for a time to draw their nominal rations! The prisoners at the Provost, (the present debtor's prison in the Park,) were chiefly under his severity, (my father among the number for a time.) It was said he was only restrained from putting them to death, (five or six of them of a night, back of the prison-yard, where was also their graves), by the distress of certain women in the neighborhood, who, pained by the cries for mercy which they heard, went to the commander-in-chief, and made the case known, with entreaties to spare their lives in future. This unfeeling wretch, it is said, came afterwards to an ignominious end, being executed in England, as was published in Hall and Sellers' paper in Philadelphia. It was there said, that it came out on the trial that he boasted of having killed more of the ksng's enemies by the use of his own means, than had been effected by the king's arms! he having, as it was there stated, used a preparation of arsenic in their flour!

Loring, another commissary of prisoners, was quite another man, and had a pretty good name. Mr. Lennox, the other, being now a resident of New-York—I forbear any remarks.

There was much robbing in the city by the soldiery at times. In this, Lord Rawdon's corps and the king's guards were said to have been pre-eminent.

The British cast up a line of entrenchments quite across from Corlear's Hook to Bunker's Hill, on the Bowery road, and placed gates across the road there. The Hessians, under Knyphausen, were encamped on a mount not far from Corlear's Hook.

Mr. Andrew Mercein, who was present in New-York when most of the above-mentioned things occurred, has told me several facts. He was an apprentice with a baker who made bread for the army, and states, that there was a time when provisions, even to their own soldiery, was very limited. For instance, on the occasion of the Cork provision fleet overstaying their time, he has dealt out six-penny loaves, as fast as he could hand them, for "a hard half dollar a-piece!" The baker then gave $20 a cwt. for his flour. They had to make oatmeal bread for the navy. Often he has seen 7s. a pound given for butter, when before the war it was but 2d.

When Cornwallis was in difficulties at York Town, and it became necessary to send him out all possible help, they took the citizens by constraint and enroled them as a militia. In this service Mr. Mercein was also compelled, and had to take his turns at the fort. There they mounted guard, &c., in military attire, just lent to them for the time and required to be returned. The non-commissioned officers were generally chosen as Tories, but often without that condition. Mr. Mercein's serjeant was whiggish enough to have surrendered if he had had the proper chance. There were some independent companies of Tories there.

It was really an affecting sight to see the operations of the final departure of all the king's embarkation; the royal band beat a farewell march. Then to see so many of our countrymen, with their women and children, leaving the lands of their fathers because they took the king's side, going thence to the bleak and barren soil of Nova Scotia, was at least affecting to them. Their hearts said, "My country, with all thy faults I love thee still."

In contrast to this, there followed the entry of our tattered land weather-beaten troops, followed by all the citizens in regular platoons.

Then crowded home to their own city, all those who had been abroad, reluctant exiles from British rule—now fondly cherishing in their hearts,

"This is my own, my native land."

The Hessian troops were peculiarly desirous to desert, so as to remain in our country, and hid themselves in every family where they could possibly secure a friend to help their escape. 'Twas a lucky hit for those who succeeded—for they generally got ahead as tradesmen and farmers, and became rich. The loss to England in the "wear and tear" of those Hessians, formed a heavy item. It is on record that the Landgrave of Hesse was paid for 15,700 men lost, at £30 a head, £471,000 (being more than two millions of dollars), paid to his agent, Mr. Van Otton, at the Bank of England in 1786.

It is estimated that 11,000 of our Americans were interred from the British prisons at the Wallabout, the place of the present Navy-Yard. In cutting down the hill for the Navy-Yard, they took up as many as thirteen large boxes of human bones; which, being borne on trucks under mourning palls, were carried in procession to Jackson-street, on Brooklyn Height, and interred in a charnel-house constructed for the occasion beneath three great drooping willows. There rest the bones of my grandfather, borne from the Stromboll's hospital-ship three days after his arrival.

Two of the burnt hulks of those ships still remain sunken near the Navy-Yard—one in the dock, and one, the Good Hope, near Pinder's Island—all "rotten and old, e'er filled with sighs and groans."

Our ideas of prisons and prisoners—having ourselves been never confined—are two vague and undefined in reading of any given mass of suffering men. To enter into conception and sympathy with the subject, we must individualize our ideas by singling out a single captive; hear him talk over his former friends and happy home; see him pennyless, naked, friendless, in pain and sickness, hopeless, sighing for home, set wishing to end his griefs by one last deep sigh. With Sterne's pathos, see him notch his weary days and nights; see the iron enter his soul; see him dead; then whelmed in pits, neglected and forgotten. Such was the tale—if individually told—of 11,000 of our suffering countrymen at New-York.

TO BE CONTINUED.

The Chemistry of Nature.

A SELF-ACTING LABORATORY.

The gastric juice which reduces the food in the stomach to a semi-fluid, and the bile which tempers this crude material and adapts it to the purposes of nutrition, are the two principal agents in the production of venus blood. As health depends mainly upon the quality and purity of tis fluid, a medicine which acts immediately upon its elements, discharging therefrom every tainted and unwholesome particle capable of feeding or creating disease, must necessarily be the true elixir of health—a sure antidote to the seeds of all internal disorders. In this consists the wonder-working power of Holloway's Pills. They seem literally to compel the stomach and the liver to do their whole duty, and to remove every impediment to its performance. We learn from their distinguised inventor, the modus operandi of his medicines, but our knowledge of their effects is based on our own observation as well as on the testimony of the world at large. We know that the victim of liver complaint, with attenuated frame, jaundiced skin, and lack-lustre eye, rapidly recovers strength, energy and a healthy appearance under the disinfecting, renovating and regulating influence of the Pills; and if the disturbance of the internal functions has produced external disease, that too disappears under the searching action of Holloways Ointment. The liver is a very susceptible organ. It always sympathises with the stomach, and intemperance in eating or drinking, over application to business, anxiety, sudden changes of temperature, an unwholesome atmosphere, and innumerable other causes, tend to derange and obstruct its action. What is the practice of the oracles of the faculty in cases of liver complaint? Their sole remedy is a mineral poison—Quicksilver, or one of its deadly oxides. Salivate! Salivate! Salivete! is the word. To cure one malady another is created. The liver becomes the battle ground between a dangerous disorder and a worse remedy; and if the patient escapes with life or without carious bones and contracted sinews, it is by a miracle. Holloways Pills on the other hand strike at the very source of the disorder, and at the same time give tone to the whole system. Let common sense determine whether it is better to annihilate the virus of disease by an inocuous vegetable preparation, or to administer poison by way of antidote.—N. Y. Sunday Mercury.

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Carefully revised every week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1857.

FLOUR—Com'n to Extra State per barrel			$6.25	a $6.85
Common to Fancy Western	do		6.40	a 6.85
Extra Western	do		6.75	a 8.75
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do		6.85	a 7 10
Mixed to Extra Southern	do		7 10	a 8.75
RYE FLOUR—Fine and Super	do		3.50	a 5.25
CORN MEAL	do		3.12½	a 3.75
WHEAT—Canada White	per bushel		1.70	a 1.80
Western White	do		1.68	a 1.80
Southern White	do		1.70	a 1.80
All kinds of Red	do		1.38	a 1.60
CORN—Mixed	do		— 69	a — 71
Yellow	do		— 71	a — 75
White	do		— 71	a — 75
OATS—State and Western	do		— 47	a — 51
Jersey	do		— 44	a — 47
Southern	do		— 39	a — 44
Rye	do		— 90	a — —
Barley	do		1 —	a 1.32
White Beans	do		2 —	a — —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels			— —	a 4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb			— 13½	a — 13¾
Fair			— 13¾	a — 14¼
Rice, per 100 lbs			3.25	a 4.25
Hops, per lb			— 7	a — 10
Pork—Mess per bbl			19.31½	a 20.—
Prime, per bbl			17 —	a 17.25
Beef—Country Mess			10.50	a 12.25
Prime			9 —	a 10 —
Dressed Hogs, per lb			— 8¼	a — 8¾
Lard, in bbls. per lb			— 12¼	a — 12½
Butter—Western, per lb			— 14	a — 20
State, per lb			— 20	a — 25
Orange County, per lb			— 26	a — 29
Cheese, per lb			— 9½	a — 10½
Potatoes—Carters, per bbl			3 —	a 4 —
Mercers, per bbl			2.50	a 3.25
Onions—Reds, per bbl			1.62½	a 1.75
White, per bbl			3.50	a — —
Apples, per bbl			2.75	a 6 50
Eggs, fresh per dozen			— 28	a — 30
Limed, per dozen			— 24	a — 26
Feathers, Live Geese per lb			— 50	a — 55
Seed—Clover, per lb			— 12	a — 12½
Flax, per bushel			2 —	a — —
Timothy, mowed, per bushel			2.25	a 2.37½
Timothy, reaped, per bushel			3 —	a — —
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb			— 9	a — 11
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl			— —	a — 80
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb			— 7	a — 16

Special Notices.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Notice of Application for the discharge of an insolvent from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

James Grant of New-York City, Notice first published January 12th, 1857, Creditors to appear before the Hon. A. D. Russel, City Judge of the City of New-York, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1857, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at his Chambers No. 25 Chambers street, in said city, to show cause, if any they have, why an assignment of said Insolvent's Estate should not be made, and he be discharged from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the Statute for the discharge of an Insolvent from his debts.

McCUNN & MONCRIEF,
Jan17 6t Atty's. for Insolvent, 29 Wall st., New-York City.

L. SILLIMAN IVES, LL.D.,

Will Lecture on

"Church and State Charities Compared,"

For the Benefit of the

SOCIETY OF ST. VINCENT DE PAUL,

At the

Broadway Tabernacle,

On Thursday evening, January 29th, at 8 p. m. Tickets 25 cents—to be had at the Catholic bookstores and of the members of the several conferences.

DR. M'ELHERAN

Delivers the Second Lecture of the course of Catholic Lectures, before the

Catholic Library Benefit Society,

On Tuesday evening next at Hope Chapel.

Subject....The Beautiful, the Good, the True.

The proceeds to be applied to the benefit of the destitute children of the church of the Nativity.

Tickets 25 cents, to be had at the door.

"Charity covereth a multitude of Sins!"

FIRST ANNUAL GRAND SOIREE

OF

ST. JAMES' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION,

AT THE

City Assembly Rooms, on Monday evening, Jan. 26, 1857. Shelton's Band.

Tickets can be had of the following committee:

Dr. Philip O'Reilly, cor. Madison and James sts., Dr. Purcell, do.; Dr. Richard Dillon, cor. Pearl and Rose sts.; Dr. E. D. Connery, 186 Henry st.; Judge Macarthy, 25 Oliver st.; Major R. Barry. 488 Pearl st.; Peter Kenny, 187 Allen st., John Kenny, do.; Andrew E. Mylott, cor 7th av. and 26th st.; James Molony, 218 8th st.; Denis Hogan, 14 Roosevelt st., Michael Carroll, do.; Geo. W. Casserly, 60 do; Timothy Coleman, 29 do.; P. O'Neil, 48 do.; Edward Nugent, 48 do.; A. McCaffrey, cor. Catherine and Henry sts., Richard Walters, do.; Bernard Murphy, 4 James st.; John Lynch, 61 do.; Edward Hart, 74 do.; John Healy, 2 do.; John Kelly, 12 Monroe st.; Edward Hart, 27 do.; E. J. Kelly, 19 Oak st.; Thos. Hussey, cor. Madison and Oliver sts., A. C. Reel, do.; Geo. Carr, 90 Madison st.; James Reilly, 35 do.; Philip Lyons, 225 do.; Michael J. Higgins, 42 do.; Jas. Grady, Catharine st.; Bernard McFeely, 144 Chatham st.; Francis Priest, 126 do.; John Donoghoe, 71 do.; Francis Hagerty, 3 Catharine st., J. Donnelly, 3 do.; John Marsden, 22 Catharine Slip; Edward Butler, 417 Pearl st.; Richard Fitzpatrick, 393 do.; Geo. Rice, 24 Vandewater st.; Bernard Duffy, 38 do.; Wm. Cleary, 11 Jacob st.; John O'Sullivan, 24 Rose st.; P. Mulvehil, 84 Oliver st.; Wm. Walsh, 84 do.; Denis Decourey, 8 Chamber st.. P. Crowe, 46 Frankfort st.; P. J. Tully, 38 do.; Michael Conroy, 36 do.; P. Hughes, 88 Cherry st.; John Oliver, do.; Thomas Fitzgerald, 14 do.; Edward Sweeney, 38 do.; Mich'l Hallinan, 109 do.; Stephen Lynch, 97 Gold st.; Chas. J. Dougherty, 261 William st.; Chas. Doherty 96 Cliff st., Geo. Hargan, 39 Henry st.; John Crowe, 15 Cherry st.; James Grady, 28 Catherine st.

P. G. DOWLING, Floor Manager. Councilman JAMES REILLY, Treas'r.
JAS. M. SHEEHAN, Sec'y. WM. O'DONNELL, Chairman.

TO BUILDERS AND ARCHITECTS.

IVISON & PHINNEY, No. 321 BROADWAY,

Publish a New and Improved Editon of an invaluable Work to Builders and Architects.

GOULD'S AMERICAN HOUSE CARPENTER'S ASSISTANT.

232 pages, quarto—price $3. A novel and easy System of Lines, founded on Geometrical Principles, for Cutting every description of Joints and for Framing the most difficult Roofs. It is intended as a summary of all past experience in this line, systematising the whole, and explaining the principles involved.

There is a great difference between a work that merely states right principles, and another that develops them—between a work that tells what should be done, and another that tells how this should be done. The "Carpenter's Assistant" is the latter of these. Without requiring erudite study, it imparts more practical skill in the business than could be obtained from an abstract knowledge of the whole range of geomical science. The tables are accurate, and the expositions remarkably simple and comprehensive.

The Trade Journal says of this work: "Every Carpenter and Joiner whose ambition reaches beyond the bench and the workshop, should make himself the owner, not of the book alone, but its contents. To just such instructions as he meets with in this work, is the writer of this paragraph indebted for his own advancement from the journeyman's rank to the position he now occupies. The whole work, which has been a very expensive one to get up, doe s great credit to the publishers, and when known generally, cannot but receive a cordial welcome from that valuable class of men to whom we are indebted for the shelter afforded by the "house we live in."

The above book furnishes an admirable opportunity for

TRAVELING AGENTS.

It is highly popular and has obtained a valuable reputation. Persons acquainted with the business, will find this a profitable book for circulation.

Price $3; a large discount to agents. IVISON & PHINNEY, ja17 1t 321 Broadway.

GLORIOUS NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

MADAME PAULINE HELD, the wonderful Animal Magnetizer, has opened her Rooms, No. 20 HOWARD STREET, near Broadway, for the reception of patients. No matter how obstinate or severe their diseases (unless Consumption), she engages to cure them; ordinary cases in three, and extraordinary cases not more than twelve visits. One trial will satisfy the most incredulous of the efficacy of her treatment. She uses no medicine and the patient never suffers a relapse. Call and judge for yourself. Consultation fee, Two Dollars. Can be seen at all hours from 8 to 1, and 2 to 6.

MADAME PAULINE HELD,
jan17 3mos 20 Howard street, near Broadway.

THOMAS LYNCH,

Provisions, Wholesale and Retail,

NO. 22 ESSEX-MARKEV, NEW-YORK.

Fresh, Salt, Corned, and Smoked Provisions. Shipping orders punctually attended to. Goods delivered to any part of New-York, free of expense.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. Steamer ERICSSON, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 17th day of January, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

jan17 ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Literary and Artistic News.

It was John Randolph, and not John C. Calhoun, who originated and used the phrase, "a wise and masterly inactivity." Mr. Randolph used it in 1827, when there was a majority in the House of Representatives opposed to the Administration, and Randolph, being the leader of the opposition, advised his party in a speech, "to throw in no medicine at all; to abstain; to observe 'a wise and masterly inactivity;'" and the same phrase occurs very often in his speeches. John Randolph, of Roanoke, was also the author, and not Mr. Jefferson, of the declaration that the "Democracy in this country is the natural ally of slavery." And it was John Randolph who, as long as the Missouri agitation about slavery, declared, in earnest sincerity of heart, "I am persuaded that the cause of humanity to these unfortunates (slaves) has been put back a century—certainly a generation—by the unprincipled conduct of ambitious men, availing themselves of a good as well as a fanatical spirit in the nation."

Dr. Hoffman, following in the wake of Davy and Deville, has come forward as a discoverer of metals. In a lecture delivered by him lately at the British Royal Institution, he exhibited a bright glistening mass, somewhat resembling butter, and described it as ammonium—the metal base of ammonia. This is regarded as a highly interesting chemical fact, inasmuch as it strengthens the views entertained respecting the constituents of the atmosphere, viz., that they are metallic.

The first printed almanac that has come to us, published at Augsburg in the year fourteen hundred and ninety-nine, is wholly rhymed, and tells in rhymes, even upon its title-page, how it was made to describe the months as they are made by nature, and the influences of the stars; to give instruction as to meat and drink, on purging, bathing and the management of health; to teach how a child should be educated; also how the plague is to be be escaped—for which reason, it adds, this is a book of medicines.

Here is another extract from the Continental journals that puts the fool's cap on all the other stupid extracts—"Rossini, talking of the Operas Casse Voix, said, 'Look at Verdi! His operas are known to crack voices as easily as a squirrel cracks nuts. One season of his repertoire will take the edge off the finest voice in the world; his music eats into it like rust. And you will see with Grisi, if she sings much in Verdi's music, that her voice even will become Verdi Grisi!'"

Dr. Balfour, an able surgeon at Madras, has just published a curious volume of reports on cholera. He stated some years ago a theory that there were many places absolutely exempt from the scourge. Investigation has confirmed his opinion. In Madras alone there are thousands of villages which have never felt the visitation, though surrounded by infected districts. Minute lists are supplied, and each place is to be separately examined. At present the only facts known are that places which are in very exposed situations, or very well drained, are comparatively favored.

Great age this we live in! People don't laugh nowadays—they indulge in merriment; they don't walk—they promenade; they never eat any food—they masticate it; nobody has a tooth pulled out—it is extracted; young men do not go courting girls—they pay young ladies attention; it is vulgar to visit any one—you must only make a call; of course you would not think of going to bed—you retire to rest; nor would you build a house—you would erect it.

The well known traveller, Doctor Karl Scherzer, of Vienna, who has just published a new work, "Wanderings through the Central American Free States, Nicaragua, Honduras, and San Salvador," has been invited by the Archduke Ferdinand Max, to accompany the Austrian frigate Novara on her intended voyage round the world.

A word of news for the doctors. The number of students this year at the Medical School of Paris is exactly 1,000. Of these, 902 are for the degree of doctor, and 98 for the grade of health-officer; 126 are new inscriptions, 11 are from the schools of Strasbourg and Montpelier, and 84 are from the preparatory schools lately organized.

In the Imperial Library at Paris an interesting work on "Electricity as a Universal Agent," has been found. It was written by Count Tressau, and being printed so far back as 1738 is said to have forestalled the recent important discoveries in that department of science.

A new tenor has appeared in London, Signor Volppini, with the greatest success. He promises to fill the gap now felt. His voice is said to rival Tamberlik's, and his acting is said to be superior to that of the great tenore robuste.

Miss Ellen Conran has been re-engaged in Florence, at the Pagliano Opera, the largest house in Europe, and from thence goes to the San Carlo of Naples. The Italian papers speak in high terms both of her success and progress.

Thomas Hood, the younger, is to present this season his maiden work as author and artist—a gift-book seasonably published, and called alliteratively "Pen and Pencil Pictures."

The committee of the Royal Institution of Liverpool have thrown open to the public a new branch of that establishment to be called the "Museum of Applied Science."

Sir Robert Peel has promised to give £25 a year for four years for the purchase of books and pamphlets for the Huddersfield Mechanics' Institute.

A monument to the memory of Mrs. Ann Jane Barrett, the actress, has been erected on the lot belonging to the Boston Museum Dramatic Fund Association, in Elm avenue, Mount Auburn. The monument is eight feet high, executed by Carew.

Mr. R. H. Horne, the author of "Orion," when the last mail left Melbourne was a candidate for a seat in the Legislative Chamber.

It is said that Father Ventura will preach at the Tuilleries during Lent.

The Brooklyn Common Council passed on the 30th ult. the resolutions granting J. A. Dayton and associates the privilege of establishing a ferry at the foot of Fulton street, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor. Only two members voted in the negative, namely, Alderman Kalbfleisch and Wardwell.

The flags of most of the shipping were displayed at half mast on the 30th ult. in token of respect for the memory of the late well known and wealthy merchant Benjamin Flanders.

On the recommendation of the Marquis of Clanricarde, Viscount Dunlo has been appointed a Magistrate for the county Galway.

Jonathan Darcy, Esq. of Lissineeran, has been sworn in a Magistrate of the King's County and county Tipperary.

Major-General Mansell has been recently inspecting the United military districts of Cork and Limerick.

A concert of sacred music was recently given at the Curragh camp.

The shop of Mr. M'Donnel, draper, Dunmore, Galway, was broken into recently, and a quantity of goods carried off.

The Board of Governors of the Lunatic Asylum of Waterford have received a communication from Dublin disallowing the salaries heretofore paid to the Protestant and Roman Catholic chaplains, and directing that the same shall not be paid in future.

The barque Edward, of North Shields, was driven ashore on the east side of Dunworly Bay, on the 16th ult. in the gale, sixteen hands all saved by the country people. Cargo, deals and staves, from Quebec for London.

The town of Galway is to be made a district military station, and united with Gort, which is to be occupied exclusively by cavalry, and the barracks at Gort are to be enlarged for that purpose.

Captain Bruce, of Ballyscullion House, county of Derry, has made the reduction of five shillings in the pound to all of his tenantry who have paid the May rent, 1856.

William F. Black, Esq., of Lislap, will be High Sheriff of Tyrone for the next year, and Edward Greer, Esq., of Omagh, will be his Sub-Sheriff.

The house of Mr. Thomas Hannigan, who keeps a provision store at Waterside, Derry, a short time since was robbed of £10 and a silver watch.

Mr. James Patterson, late of Foyle College Academy, Derry, and eldest son to Captain Patterson, of Gortlee, has been appointed a cadet in the Royal Navy.

The Lords Justices have approved of the appointment of the Earl of Belmore to be a deputy-lieutenant for the county of Tyrone, in the room of Lord Claude Hamilton, resigned.

Mr. James Fallon is elected governor, and Sir Timothy O'Brien, deputy governor of the Hibernian Bank.

The Marquis of Sligo has contributed £10 in aid of the funds of the Sisters of Mercy of that town.

A detachment of the 50th Depot, from Belfast has relieved a detachment of the Third Buffs at Armagh.

The Moore testimonial is to be erected in College-street, Dublin.

A remarkable instance of longevity is mentioned in the Mexican papers—that of a lady who died at Actopan at the age of 139 years.

Sir E. B. Lytton has been elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University by a majority of 108 over Lord Stanley.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man.

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 186 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings:—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hehir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's.

j3tf

Special Notices.

TAILORING—1856-7.

George P. Fox has removed to his recently purchased store, house and lot, No. 47 Amity street, near Broadway, thereby freeing himself from the exactions and unenviable trammels of a Broadway landlord, at a saving in favor of his customers at the rate of $5000 to $6000 per annum. The general arrangements, particularly the cutting and sewing departments, are admitted by those who have already patronized his new establishment, to be decidedly superior to any of his former stores, Nos. 321, 333, 531 Broadway.

3m27dec

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furnishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
GERALD GRAY.

y10jan

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY.

EGAN & CO. invite the public in general to examine their very large stock of Irish Linens, their own importation,

Silks and embroideries,
Hosiery and Gloves,
French and English Merinoes,
Blankets, Quilts, and Flannels,
Shawls and Cloaks.
Heavy and Fine Cloths for Ladies' Cloaks.

The above goods will be shown freely, without any unpleasant forcing to buy, and will be sold twenty per cent. below Broadway prices, where the rents are high. We are constantly getting in goods from auction.

No second price. dec27

Information wanted of Margaret Ustice and Jane Crowley, who came passengers by the Isaac Wright, on her last trip from Liverpool, by Richard Tracey, 11 Jay street, Brooklyn, in care of Mr. Owen Gilligan, or at this office. no22

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellectual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes	50 cents.	Pit	12½ cents.
Gallery	12½ cents.	Orchestra Stalls	50 cents.
Private Boxes			Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7½.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.

NEW HALL, 585 BROADWAY,

Opposite Niblo's Garden,

ETHIOPIAN OPERA TRIUMPHANT.

By request, grand revival of the glorious burlesque opera, in three acts, of

LA SONNAMBULA,

which will be given on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings, Jan. 5, 6, and 7, with the whole of the original music.

Preceding which,

NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

On Thursday (Christmas Day) a grand afternoon concert, commencing at half-past two o'clock.

☞ Doors open at 7 o'clock. Concert at 7 1-2 o'clock. Admission 25 cents: Orchestra seats 50 cents.

MONTGOMERY GUARDS.

The Twentieth Annual Ball of this Company, will take place at NIBLO'S SALOON, on Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857.

Tickets—Two Dollars Each—may be had of any of the members, or of the Committee of Arrangements.

Henry Brenner, 71 Wall-st.,
Mathew Riordan, 94 Wall-st.,
John Moore, 75 Oliver,
Chas. Leary, 345 Second Avenue,
M. Maher, 138 Water, cor. Pine,
John Campble, 321 Water,
M. Reynolds, 45 Scamell.

HENRY BRENNER, Chairman.

CHAS. LEARY, Secretary. j3 4t

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 839 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.

JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Special Notices.

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,
138 Pearl Street, N.Y.

dc27 3ms.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 81 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y. JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Monday Evening at corner of 11th st. and First Ave. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J. OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey. WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 88 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport, y4ljune

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Daguerreotypes.

FACTS

THAT NEED NO MARKING.

Progression.

From Humphrey's Photographic Journal of Sept. 1856.

We do not approve of the plan of puffing the members of the Photographic profession by way of personals. This may do very well when one is trying to bring his works into favor with such as are susceptible to flattery, and measure out their support according to the amount of editorial ink used as bait. We feel confident that those who best know will agree with us as that it is no puffing, when we can say with so much truth, that the Photographic Art this day owes, in no small degree, its position in this country to Mr. C. D. FREDRICKS, a gentleman who was the first to introduce the Photographic process upon an extensive scale in America. Previous to his establishing himself here, he visited Europe, and, with an enterprise worthy of imitation, he was not satisfied with first securing what knowledge he could himself gain, but also engaged the services of several of the most eminent Parisian Artists. He then, in connection with Mr. GURNEY, opened an establishment on a plan unequaled in the world.

After succeesfully following his profession, in connection with Mr. G., for some time, he has opened a "Temple of Art" in this City, under his own professorship and supervision. We have honestly and candidly presented the foregoing, feeling that is justly due to a fellow-laborer.

CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, &c., No. 585 Broadway, opposite Metropolitan Hotel.

FACTS WHICH ARE KNOWN.—PHOTOGRAPHS DAGUERREOTYPES, AMBROTYPES, &c.—The undersigned having removed the Photograph department and his Parisian artists from his old place of business, No. 349 Broadway, to his new and magnificent establishment, No. 585 Broadway, would call the attention of public to the fact that his Galleries, and the pictures made in them, are superior to anything before exhiited. Those desiring Photograps, Daguerreotypes, or Ambrotypes, executed by artists of refined taste, would do well to call and judge for themselves. Reception Rooms on the first floor, and are open from 8 A. M., to 10 P. M.

CHARLES D. FREDRICKS,
Late GURNEY & FREDRICKS, No. 585 Broadway
oct11 3mos opposite the Metropolitan Hotel.

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 53 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARDS," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Special Notices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street, sept27 3mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring, by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfactiofi be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York. Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

P. P. P. Patent Porous Plasters.—Sore chests, weak backs pains in the side, deep-seated rhematic and nervous affections, soon benefited. Counter irritant, but so mild as to create no inconvenience. Sold by al medicine venders. The fresh made now ready, at principal office, 48 Canal street. Twenty-five cents each plaster.

4t T. ALLCOCK & CO.

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete prcess (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,
428 Broome st.,
tf6dec New-York.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any order left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicines.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousanos to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtaincd. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENEUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bouud, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

For THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issned in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18 tf

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

---

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 13 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

1jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 23½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	3s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 3s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

CARPETINGS FROM AUCTION.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW-YORK AND VICINITY.

STEPHEN LEAHY,

98 SIXTH AVENUE, between Waverly and Clinton Place,

BEGS to call the attention of the ladies to his large and varied stock of Carpeting and Oil Cloth. The collection comprises goods of every grade and style, from the richest and most beautiful of foreign manufacture to the lowest price domestic.

All who are acquainted with the Carpet trade, and have visited our New Store, acknowledge our stock the most varied assortment and best selected on exhibition in the city. The facilities we enjoy for purchasing cheap, and an experience of many years in connection with the largest houses in the country, enables us to present to our lady friends and the public, the cheapest and most select stock of goods in the city.

sept27 3mos STEPHEN LEAHY, 98 Sixth Avenue.

Men's Furnishing Goods.

84 William Street, corner of Maiden Lane, New-York.

GEORGE M. TRACY,

HAS now on hand a choice stock of FALL AND WINTER GOODS, nearly all of which are made under his own inspection, of the choicest fabrics and newest styles. Merchants will find this a desirable place to make their selections. Annexed is a catalogue of some of the articles:

Hosiery and Gloves	Improved Napoleon Ties
Silk Beaufort Ties	Stocks, in great variety
Linen Collars	Silk and Linen Handkerchiefs
Silk Albert Ties	Dressing Robes
Fine Shirts	Travelling Shawls
Cravats and Stocks	Silk Under Shirts and Drawers
Suspenders	Silk and Gingham Umbrellas

His shirts are of superior make and quality, and warranted to fit. Persons wishing goods for their own use will be served at retail as well as wholesale, at the lowest prices. oc4m2

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 35 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.
dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

---

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 13, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

Special Notices.

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

TO BOOK, FANCY AND TOY DEALERS.—Your attention is directed to

A NEW ARTICLE

FOR THE HOLIDAYS,

"CHESS, CHECKER AND BACKGAMMON BOARD FOR THE MILLION," being a new invention, whereby the above three games can be obtained at a cost not equal to the expense of purchasing the ordinary men alone for playing the game of chess. The article is gotten up in three styles, forming a neat and convenient ornament for the parlor.

Call and examine or send orders to dec27 A. RANNEY, Publisher, No. 195 Broadway, N. Y.

Wines and Liquors.

THOMAS RUSSELL,

209 Fulton Street, between Church and Greenwich streets, and across town at 111 Attorney street, corner of Rivington.

THE subscriber begs leave to imform the public, that he has opened the abovee stablishment for the sale of

PURE WINES, BRANDIES, &c.,

with an extensive assortment of

CHOICE CORDIALS,

by wholesale and retail, and would call the attention of buyers to his stock, consisting in part of

FINE COGNAC BRANDY.

The celebrated brand of Leger Freres, a superior article for medicinal purposes.

Pinet Castillon, vintage 1823 and 1842.
Otard, Dupuy & Co., vintages 1836 and 1840.

PORT WINE,

(J. & R. Osborn's Importation,)

COLERAINE AND DUBLIN MALT WHISKEY,

Imported by the subscriber, to which he invites the attention of the connoisseur.

HOLLAND GIN,

Meder Swan, and other favorite brands.

Together with a large assortment of

DUBLIN & LONDON PORTER, SCOTCH ALES,

and a select supply of genuine Havana Segars, of various brands.

Particular attention given to orders for families, and goods forwarded to any part of the City, Brooklyn, Jersey, &c. Country Orders, with remittance, immediately attended to.

Having engaged the services of Mr. Thomas Dillon, (late with Archdeacon & O'Conner, Wall street) customers can depend on all orders entrusted to his care being promptly and faithfully attended to.

Parties residing up town can procure the above articles of T. & J. Russell, corner 86th street, and 6th Avenue: T. Russell & Co., corner 4th street and 6th avenue, and at the corners of 18th Street, 8th and 10th Avenues.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY STREET,

3m18dec New-York.

ELIZABETHAN ALE.

MEDICAL men now very generally recommend the occasional use of pure ale to those who are in need of nourishment; and it is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage for general use that can be found. This is not a new idea. In Queen Elizabeth's time our ancestors universally consumed it—from Elizabeth herself, in her palace, to the farmer in the field. In those days, adulterated wines and fiery liquors may be said to have been unknown, and very heavy penalties were enacted against using anything except malt and hops in brewing. It is not at all extravagant to assert, that the average duration of the life of a large portion of our race is a third less than it was two or three hundred years ago, and this is chiefly attributable to what we eat and what we drink. Even now the heartiest people that can be found are from the rural districts of England, who yet follow the old fashioned diet.

All who use ale, whether as a beverage or for the purpose of nourishment, will find the Elizabethan Ale most excellent. Being made on the Scotch plan, it is as pure and wholesome, (if not equal in flavor) as the imported, while its cost is but little more than a common article. Families and retailers supplied at 120 WATER STREET, one door above Wall. oc4m3

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. y1aug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 206 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. y1ly26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on libberal terms. jly5 y

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.
JOHN SAVAGE, Literary Editor. JAMES ROCHE, Associate Editor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies Six Cents
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1857. NO. 42.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLII.

Editorial.

The Fight for Freedom—Switzerland in Arms—The White Cross of the Alps—The Black Eagle of the Rhine.

Fabens on Nicaragua.

Treachery in the Camp—Defeat of Col. Forney.

European Interference.

Postcript.

Literature.

Personal Recollections—An Election Scene in Australia—Aristocrats and Democrats—An Apothecary thereabouts—the Established Church upon Wheels—Fat and Lean Celebrities.

New-Mexico—Tit for Tat—Sculptors in Rome—Work for Carpenters—Reviews—Lit. and Art Items.

Poetry.

New-Year's Cogitations, by "Shamrock"—"Le Dernier Adieu Du Soldat," by Garryowen—The Druid's Prophecy, by Kinkora.

Miscellaneous.

Balls—Guyon Cadet's, Meagher Club, Emmet Guard, Montgomery Guard, St. James' Benevolent Society—Military Resources of Ireland—Old New-York Persian War—Republicanism—Herat—Waterford of To-day—Decline and Fall of England—In Ireland but not of Ireland—Irish news from all quarters—European news—News from California—American—City news, &c.

Answers to Correspondents.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a private nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. Madden, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. Supple, 12 mo. wrappers, 37½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. Campion. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By Thomas Irwin. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

Dublin University Magazine, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

Dublin Penny Journal, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New York.

nov29,tf.

Publications.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, John Mitchel.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: Second Series.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

JUST PUBLISHED.

BROWNSON'S QUARTERLY REVIEW

For January, 1857.

Commencement of the New Volume.

CONTENTS.

I. BROWNSON ON THE CHURCH AND THE REPUBLIC.
II. E. H. DERBY TO HIS SON.
III. MAREL ON REASON AND REVELATION.
IV. SLAVERY AND THE INCOMING ADMINISTRATION.
V. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES ON THE CATHOLIC PRESS.
VI. LITERARY NOTICES AND CRITICISMS.

Published by EDWARD DUNEGAN & BROTHER,
JAMES B. KIRKER,
ja17 151 Fulton-st, New-York.

Special Notices.

Brady's Gallery.—No. 359 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS.

In anticipation of the demand for Portraits during the ensuing Holidays, Mr. Brady has enlarged his facilities for the production of the

AMBROTYPE.

The most perfect of pictures taken in an instant, durable, inexpensive, and elegant; the

MELAINOTYPE,

An entirely new style of miniature, equal to those on ivory, first introduced at Brady's Gallery; the

VIGNETTE PHOTOGRAPH,

Made at no other establishment in the world, are all executed promptly and in superior style.

COPIES

of old Daguerreotypes, Portraits, Crayons, Engravings, &c., produced by the Photograph, of any desired size, and in any number. A hundred, or a thousand Photographs produced from a single sitting. m1d20

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a danghter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP and Services of the Catholic Church, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by
EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

Pages of its History—By Henry de Courcy, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by John Gilmary Shea.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McClosky, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844, "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.
Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.]
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,100
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.
GUION & CO.,
116 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my8 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.
REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.
For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.
New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.
JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.
EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.
It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.
The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.
Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.
ap19ly Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.
6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.
ap19ly Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.
All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 13 tf

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.
N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.
SMITH, No. 31 Park Row,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.
FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 31 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.
His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.
N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.
Give him a call by all means. my31y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.
Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.
Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.
Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.
The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 58 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.
Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.
Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 58 Sixth Avenue,
Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.
P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines, Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

The steamship Emen, from Havre, has brought us one days' later news from the Continent, than what we received by the Asia.

SWITZERLAND AND PRUSSIA.—The difficulty still exists between Switzerland and Prussia. The Republic was taking the necessary steps to repel invasion. The latest despatch, dated Berne Dec. 27th, says: The Swiss Diet has received from the Emperor Napoleon a proposition for an arrangement. Popular enthusiasm is increasing on all sides. The whole Swiss Union is organised militarily for the defence of the national territory. An appeal has been made to the Swiss women for the organization of ambmlances for the care of the wonnded.

We mentioned, says Galignani's Messenger, that the canton of Vaud had offered sixteen battalions over and above its ordinary contingent. Similar offers have been made to the federal government from all the other cantons. Permissions and passports have been everywhere refused to those who are liable to be called under arms, and the greatest activity is everywhere displayed in order to complete the war material in the arsenals. In several cantons the students have organized themselves into academical legions, and placed themselves at the disposal of the military authorities. The small cantons are equally full of enthusiasm for the common cause, and prepared for every sacrifice. It is said that in the canton of Neufchatel the royalists of different localities, and in particulrr of the Lague, have taken refuge, to the number of 200, in France. The Lausanne Gazette states that such of them as belong to the federal army will be considered as deserters, if they do not come forward when called on The Saisse and the Bund announce that all the line of the Rhine, from Bale to Constance, is at this moment full of the troops of the confederation. It was rumored at Berne, on the 23d, that the Baden government has given permission for the passage of the Prussian army through its territory. The Bund of the 24th says:—The Council of War, composed of superior officers, which was summoned on Monday to Berne, has already commenced its deliberations, though not yet complete. The federal administration of the telegraph is adopting every measure to render the telegraph as useful and extended as possible during the approaching military operations. As for money to carry on the war, the Confederation need feel no uneasiness, as it has credit and abundance of it. It has already received communications from Paris, asking whether, in the event of serious complications, it would stand in need of capital. Several bankers have already come to Berne to offer a loan. The Federal Council has convoked several financial men to prepare propositions to be submitted to the Federal Assembly.

The Berne correspondent of the Paris Presse, says:—The military preparations of Switzerland assume an importance far exceeding all that was seen in 1838 and 1847. The popular demonstrations do not allow a donbt to be entertained of the unanimity of the national sentiment. The cantonal governments and private individuals vie with each other in enthusiasm and sacrifices; and the Federal Council receives every day the most satisfactory assurances of devotedness, accompanied by offers of service and of money. There are at the present time already 15,000 men echeloned on the line of Basle-Reinfelden-Elestal, and as many from Rheinfelden to Schaffhausen. The various gymnastic societies of Switzerland have all offered their services, and there is some intention of forming all the members into a special corps. It is calculated that there would thus be a body of 2,000 young men, accustomed to every kind of bodily exercise, and capable of rendering the greatest service to their country. In all the cantons, officers of every rank, freed from military service, offer themselves for any duty that may be required; and their offers are at once accepted. The following are some of the superior officers of the federal staff:—Commander-in-chief of the engineers, Colonel Buchwalder; commander-in-chief of the artillery, Col. Fescher; commander-in-chief of the field train, Lieut.-Col. Wurstumberg; commander-in-chief of the wagon train, Major Fornara; auditor-in-chief, Ganzenbach; commissary-in-chief, Abys: physician-in-chief, Dr. Fugel; veterinary-surgeon-in-chief, Neeff. About 1,000 officers, sub-officers and soldiers of the Neufchatel mountains have sent an address to the federal government, in which they claim, as a favor, to be placed in the advanced guard, if an engagement should take place with the Prussians. The Federal counsel has referred this application to the military department. A report is generally current here that the federal government has contracted a very considerable loan, the amount being stated as high as 50 millions, and it is said that two London banking-houses have engaged to place the greatest part of it.

The Bank and Handels Zeitung, of Berlin, of the 24th ult., says it is rumored here in well-informed circles, that the question of Neufchatel will be arranged by a conference, independent of that of Paris, and meeting at Vienna or London, and that Switzerland will be admitted to it. We may add that this rumor is widely disseminated at Vienna. It is alleged that General Dufour has written another letter to the Emperor Napoleon, proposing the decision of Europe on the question. The General, it is said, asserts that it is not yet too late for negotiations and that the Federal Council could not cede before, because it was not treated with what it considered proper respect. He further says that Prussia has not given positive assurance as to what she will do with Neufchatel, even if the prisoners were set at liberty. Lastly, he says that Switzerland is quite ready to abide by a European decision.

SPAIN.—According to one of the ministerial papers of Madrid, of 24th of December, General Santa Anna, of Mexico, has sent agents to Madrid to propose to re-establish monarchy in Mexico, with a Spanish prince as sovereign, provided the Spanish government will grant him certain assistance. The Epoca opposes any such project, unless it be freely demanded by public opinion in Mexico and have the support of England and France.—The Archbishops of Valencia and Granada had sent addresses to the Queen, thanking her for what she has done for the church, and exhorting her majesty to continue "the glorious enterprise of Catholic emancipation in Spain."—It is said that the government has resolved on forming a naval squadron in the Mediterranean, consisting of the Isabella II., a ship of the line, a frigate and a brig.

FRANCE.—I am happy, says the Paris correspondent of the Le Nord, to be able to prove to you how well founded were the hopes I had expressed relative to a satisfactory arrangement of the Bessarabian frontier question. It appears a new line of frontier has now been definitely arranged. Bolgrad will be incorporated with Moldavia; the Isle of Serpent and the Dolta of the Danube will belong to Turkey, and Russia will receive in exchange and as an official compensation for this last concession and as a real equivalent for Bolgrad, a territory of 140 sqare miles, which would advance her territory to the second Yalpuk, and would easily permit her to establish a central administration for her Bulgarian population. In this manner all parties will be satisfied; Russia will lose none of her Bulgarian subjects; England and Austria will no longer fear for the Danube, and Turkey will be equally satisfied. It appears that the honor of the arrangements is due to the Emperor Napoleon, who first conceived the idea and has got it accepted, in principle at least, by all parties. The representatives of Russia have likewise approved, and have demanded, by telegraph, the ratification from their court. As soon as this answer shall arrive, and perhaps it has arrived by this time, nothing will oppose the meeting of the conference with respect to the plenipotentiaries. I may affirm that Russia will be represented in the conferences by the Baron de Brunnow, in addition to Count Kisseleff, as first plenipotentiary.

The Emperor and the Empress honored the Odeon with their presence the night of the 26th of December, to witness the representation of the "Cid" and "Madame de Montarcy." Their majesties, on entering the house, were most warmly received.—It is stated in a Paris letter in the Emancipation of Prussia, that the French government has sent a certain number of pardons to political offenders in French Guiana.

SWEDEN.—The liberty of the press has just achieved a triumph in Sweden. The four Chambers of the Diet have unanimously rejected a bill of last session, which erases from the constitution and places in the rank of the ordinary laws that which guarantees the liberty of the press. In the Chamber of Nobles, one of the ministers, (M. de Grippenstadt,) made a sort of apology for presenting the bill, saying, "Ministers are men, and as such are liable to commit errors." The rejection took place almost without discussion, in the Chamber of the Clergy and of the Bourgeoise. In the Chamber of Peasants fifty members spoke against the measure. The last speaker, in concluding, said:—"The liberty of the press is the tongue of the nation, and the wish now is to cut it out. Will you allow that to be done?" "No! no! a thousand times no! God preserve us from it!" was the cry of all the others.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Le Chevalier de Chatelain, a naturalised foreigner, has received a letter from the Home Office, England, says the United service Gazette, explaining to him that "no certificate, or other act of naturalization, granted by the British government to an alien, places him beyond the lawful power and control of his native country, unless he have received from the government of such country a certificate of denationalisation, or been released from his original obligations as a subject or citizen in soms other legal way." The chevalier complains of this rule as bearing hardly upon those Frenchmen who, like himself, were naturalised before the revolution of 1848, and who are unwilling to apply to the present government of France for a certificate of denationalisation or any other favor.

Two French chymists, Messrs. Wohler and Deville, have succeeded in crystalising the well-known substance boron, which has hitherto been known only as greenish-brown powder, or in combination with an acid, and they submitted specimens of the crystals to the Academy of Sciences a few days ago. These crystals possess a brilliancy and refractive power which nothing equals but the diamond, the hardest substance known. The specimens yet obtained are very small, and have a shade of red or yellow, but the colour is believed to be accidental, and they hope that further experiments wil lenable them to procure it colorless. Boron agrees with silicon in many of its properties, and is considered as intermediate between it and carbon. This discovery may soon put us in posession of a factitious diamond which the most experienced eye will be unable to distinguish from the genuine.

A correspondent of Notes and Queries says:—Pray, insert the enclosed from the Weekly Journal, or Saturday Post, April 26th, 1718, for the benefit of our witty contemporary, Punch. It may give Mr. Leech a hint, which he will know how to turn to a good account:—"One day last week a gentlewoman unluckily stopped to buckle her shoe at a linen draper's shop, her hoop petticoat, of more than ordinary circumference, flew up, and an arch little chimney sweeper passing by at that instant immediately conveyed himself underneath the machine, and with a loud voice cried out, 'Sweep, sweep;' the gentlewoman being affrighted, leaped back, the boy struggling to get out threw madam in the dirt, and with much ado at least the devil got away and left the lady in no small confusion."

At the Western Circuit, England, John Riley was indicted for assaulting Alexander Carrick with intent to murder him. The prisoner pleaded "guilty," and then addressed the court in the most extraordinary manner ever heard; he would not care for being hung that moment if they would only let him have the ——'s life.

The Judge addressed him, saying he was a convict at Dartmoor, and he had gone behind a warder with a spade and in a cruel and cowardly manner had cut him on the head.

Prisoner—Cowardly! I don't call it cowardly. I should have been a —— fool if I had not tried to kill the ——. Talk about slaves! Let the public go to Dartmoor, and there they will see what slaves are. If they sprain their ankles they give them poison; if they have the tooth-ache they give them a dose of salts. I only speak for my brother convicts. If one complains of a warder, they put nine pounds weight of iron upon him; a set —— ! they never had any clothes on their backs till they got there.

The Judge—I want to say to you——

Prisoner—I don't care a —— what you say now, I can assure you.

The Judge—Have you done?

Prisoner—No; I have not done. You and all the rest of you are a set of —— swindlers. Hang me at once.

Eventually, after the prisoner had conducted himself in such a way as to make every other prisoner appear a polished gentleman, he was sentenced to three years' imprisonment with hard labor.

A writer in a Ceylon paper reports that the islands of Mauritius and Bourbon are largely supplied with pork from India, the meat of animals which have fed on numerous dead bodies of human beings consigned by a prevailing superstition to the sacred waters of the Ganges.

During the month of November the number of wrecks reported in England was 210. In the month of January the number was 265; in February 174; in March 145; in April 157; in May 112; in June 84; in July 104; in August 88; in September 127; and in October 199; making a total in the past eleven months of 1,665.

Coal, as is generally known, is the produce of buried trees. The first coal mines were worked in Belgium in the year 1198, and very soon after in England. There is now raised five times as much coal in Great Britain as in any other country; and it is estimated that there are in the three kingdoms more than 4,000 square miles of coal-fields as yet to cut out.

George Smith, who executed Palmer, has become insolvent. He filed his petition, and was thus described—"George Smith, late of Oakham, in the parish of Rowley Regis, in the county of Stafford, in lodgings, laborer, drover, of cattle salesman, and public executioner for the county of Stafford.

At ten, a child; at twenty, wild;
At thirty, tame, if ever;
At forty, wise; at fifty, rich;
At sixty, good, or never.

The expenditures between the years 1831 and 1855, sanctioned by the House of Commons upon royal and other commissions, for digesting, &c., the statute laws. exceeded £1,100,000. Yet after all this our statute-book is "wholly undigested, and devoid of any system whatever."

We hear, says the United Service Gazette, that Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob, of the Bombay Artillery, the author of the rifle shell, is by this time on his way through Scinde, in command of a small force, to assist the Affghans in their resistance to the Persians.

Some vagabonds broke into Colonel Colt's premises in Pall-mall, London, and actually carried away a number of revolvers. The fellows effected an entrance from the rear of the premises which adjoin the Duke of Norfolk's mansion in St. James's square.

The extension of our coast defences, says the United Service (English) Gazette, is very properly under consideration. A number of military officers have been directed to inspect and report upon suitable sites for the erection of forts and batteries.

It is an extraordinary fact that within the last 12 months upwards of 8,000 letters and newspapers have been posted in England without any address.

THE PERSIAN WAR—BLOCKADE OF GRANADA.

From Ernest Jones' Paper.

Another war—as though the contest with Persia were not enough. Another war—in the far west, to keep the balance with the war in the far east. Neither scale shall kick the beam—both shall sink heavily full of blood. Diplomatic intercourse is suspended with New Granada, and another kind of intercourse has begun instead: English war-ships, the West Indian fleet, have been ordered to operate against that republic.

There is something behind this. In the same way in which the question of the old world's commerce and Asiatic supremacy are being debated by the logic of bayonets against Russia in the Persian war, in the same way western commerce and new world supremacy are being contested with the United States in the war with New Granada. Ruatan and Belize, Honduras and Cuba, were prefatory skirmishes; the right of way at Panama and the pretectorate of the Mosquito coast were first steps in that direction. The Granada attempt is the second measure in England's policy of dominion and aggression.

There is something almost grand, in that world-grasping statesmanship, which has its eagle eyes in every quarter of the habitable globe, watching every opportunity of vantage. But, alas! there is a drawback to the grandeur: British statesmanship inserts "the thin end of the wedge" in the breast of the weak—but passes bowing by the stature of the strong. It could sacrifice honor and consistency to Russia and Austria; but tries to circumvent the former by falling on a weakened prey—the Persian State. The quarrel is in reality with Russia; not with Persia, and instead of attacking the great enemy at once, it is the miserable go-between, Persia, that has to bear the shock. This policy is decidedly a mistake—a fatal mistake: for, while England comes in direct collision with Persia, and exhausts armies and treasures on its deserts, Russia only indirectly appears upon the stage; its hosts and its influences remain almost untouched—Persia bleeds for it; Persia pays for it; Persia suffers for it; and the end of the Anglo-Persian war can only be, even if England prove victorious, that she will be weakened and injured by her victory, while Russia all the time has been recruiting its strength and nursing its finances. So fatal—so erroneous is a dastardly, hesitating policy. The question of Eastern supremacy must not—cannot be debated in the East; the sovereignty of Asia must not, cannot be decided in Asia—it is in Europe, on the plains of Poland and Hungary, of Finland and Bessarabia, that those problems have to be solved. In no other quarter can they receive a satisfactory solution.

The same with the West. It is, to all appearance, a very skilful policy on the part of Great Britain to insert a British wedge between North and South America, to cut off the Union from Peru and Chili, La Plata and Brazil, by absorbing or coercing the smaller republics like Mexico, Honduras, Venezuela, New Granada and their kin. England has facilities for this: she possesses Jamaica, and a chain of minor islands off the Central American shores, and her naval supremacy is not contested yet, even by the United States. It is, no doubt, also very plausible policy, to put forth Spain as a scapegoat, and make that power, by secret promises of support, organise an attack on Mexico. But what does this mean, after all? It is nothing more nor less than saying to the great republic, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther; we are the sovereigns of the world, and we will compass your expanding ambition between iron limits. We have the Canadas on your north; they will prevent your stretching your great stature to the Arctic pole; we will have a chain of provinces on the south, that will debar you from extending to the Equator, and by degrees we hope to move our frontiers outward, crushing you up between narrower bounds, till we have crippled your commerce and destroyed your power, while the Atlantic and Pacific oceans shall be swept by our invincible fleet."

Such is the design of the British oligarchy. It seeks to grasp the world. France under Napoleon is a phantom, Austria a stuffed figure, Prussia a doll. Russia and the United States alone remain to contest the world with England, and England enters on the mammoth-contest. But as to the case of the East, so in that of the West, the tortuous policy of the British Government is a great blunder. Suppose her to coerce, even to annex, Honduras, Mexico, Venezuela, Granada, Cuba, and St. Domingo, what will she have gained? Refractory and rebellious dependencies.

Now, these countries hate the United States. A few years of British rule will change that hate to love. England will but have raised up allies for North America, where now are jealous enemies. Moreover, while this policy of annexation, coercion ——ession is being pursued by England at great cost, what the United States be doing? Doubling their strength; ..easing their resources; multiplying their numbers—centu..ing their wealth.

Then, when England is weakened by her American intrigues; when she has lost many men, much treasure, and even, perhaps, some ships, she will have, camped amid rebellious lands, surrounded by hating populations, to meet the concentrated, increased and irresistible power of a great free empire, mustering then a population of fifty millions, with a ring fence—with an army that needs but cross its own threshold to tread down a British dependency, while Britain has to defend those dependencies from a distance embracing half the circumference of our globe.

Who can doubt the issue? So fatal is the policy of striking the weak and passing by the strong. It may seem very grand to our shortsighted politicians, for England to be smiting Persia on one side of the world and Granada on the other. But grand though it may seem, it is very petty in reality; sounding policy though it may appear, it is in reality a very fatal blunder.

There is but one course of policy for England to pursue: strike Russia in Europe, and leave the New World to itself. America will take care of America, whether we choose or not.

American News.

The Presbyterian General Assemblies have been disputing for a long time concerning the propriety of a man marrying his deceased wife's sister. The legality of a nearer and more delicate relationship being established by marriage has just been decided by our Court of Appeals, says the Louisville, Kentucky, Journal, of the 9th inst. It is altogether proper, so says that learned tribunal, the highest authority in the State, for a man to marry his mother-in-law! The quartette of Judges came to this decision after this fashion, and upon the following case:—Ellen Bell married Samuel Bell, her son-in-law. Mr. B. died, leaving the interesting widow, and also several children by his first wife, whose grand-mother was at the same time their step-mother. These children refused to grant the old lady her dower, and hence the suit. The case was brought before Judge Pryor, the late learned and estimable Judge of the adjoining circuit. He decided that the marriage was void, as the parties were within the degrees of relationship fixed by the statute of 1798. An appeal was taken, and the abjudication of the lower Court was reversed. The Court of Appeals decided that there was no prohibition to such a marriage by the statute of 1798—that marriages within the Levitical degree are not void, though voidable. Accordingly, if any man desires to marry his mother-in-law he can go ahead. The law is on his side.

Times have somewhat changed in this city, says the Richmond Examiner, since Sam, with his regiments of oath-bound followers amused himself by making all the offices in this city political. The shades of Michaels, Strobia, Campbell, and of other old line Whigs, not less than those of many Democrats "untimely slain," dog the footsteps of that broken and disappointed adventurer, who only by bloodshed holds a precarious and crumbling fortress in Maryland. Jack Cade was a prosperous pillager one day, and a fugitive from justice the next. Sam's condition is almost as desperate in 1857 as was that of Cade when he was slain in the garden of a private gentleman of Kent whilst searching for food.

The father of John Adams was a worthy cobbler, who designed to bring up his son to the same trade, but on setting him to cut out the "uppers" for some shoes, John copied the pattern faithfully, embellishing every "upper" with the three-corned hole by which the pattern had been hung on the nail. "I saw," said the father, "that I couldn't make a shoemaker of him, so I put him to learning!"

Hon. Simon Cameron was on the 13th inst. elected by the Pennsylvania Legislature to the United States Senate for six years from the 4th of March next. The defeat of his competitor, Col. Forney, has created an intense excitement in the democratic camps at Washington and Harrisburg, and a corresponding enthusiasm on the part of their opponents.

The Marion, S. C. Star, says a frightful tornado passed through the upper portions of Marion District, some few days since. Considerable damage was done to timber and fences. Some few houses were blown down and their contents scattered about by the wind. In one instance a carpet bag was taken and carried a distance of one mile before it touched the ground.

Mr. Thomas Conlin, a native of Ireland, died in Woonsocket, recently, aged 67 years. The deceased was a soldier, under Wellington, throughout the entire Peninsular War, and in several severe engagements, among them the terrible storming of Badajoz, yet he escaped without material injury.

The New Orleans Picayune of a late date says, "The Lafayette horse cars were not running yesterday, in consequence, as we understand, of the murderous attacks which have recently been made on the persons who were employed to attend to the business of the road.

John Stevenson and Julia McCrea, of the Boston colored aristocracy, instituted lately a suit against the manager and lessee of the Howard Athenæum, to test the right of admission into the "family circle" of that place of amusement.

An application will be made to the next Pennsylvania Legislature to charter a new bank in Philadelphia, with a capital of five millions, with power to increase it to ten millions. It will be called the "Republican Bank."

The value of steamboats lost and damaged by snags the past year, on the Mississippi River, is $238,750; and the value of cargoes lost by the same agency is $285,104; making a total of $523,584.

A number of the leading citizens of Gadsden County, Florida, have written to the Tallahassee Floridian, to say that a report of the existence of fears of a servile rising in their county was entirely without foundation.

The number of deaths by small pox in Boston, in 1850, was 179; in 1851, 63; in 1855, 12; in 1853, 5; 1854, 118; in 1855, 182; in 1856, 78. During the six months ending with December, 1856, there were but four deaths.

A proposition has been laid before Congress to expend $150,000 per annum, for five years, for the improvement of southern and western rivers.

Mr. Houston offered a resolution in Congress which will have the effect of again bringing up the doings of the late Naval Retiring Board.

A company has been formed in New-York, says the Lynchburg Virginian, for the purpose of working the Montgomery, Va., coal mines.

There are between thirty and forty thousand Jews in California, and they have lately started a paper in San Francisco.

At the late municipal election in Macon, Ga., the Democrats elected their entire ticket, turning out the present incumbents, who are Know-Nothings.

A white man was "rode upon a rail" a few days ago at Knoxville, Tenn., for being too intimate with the negroes.

We learn from Havana that the health of Dr. Kane is improving.

City News.

Guyon Cadet's Ball.

The Eighth Annual Ball of the "Guyon Cadets," Co. D, Ninth Regiment, took place at the City Assembly Rooms, Broadway, on Wednesday evening, January 7. It was a very pleasant affair. The inspiring music of Shelton's Band added much to the evening's enjoyment. After midnight the company retired to the supper room, which was well provided with "good things." Among the toasts, which were drank with enthusiasm, were the following:—

"The President of the United States." "The Press." "Ireland—Vast is the ocean that divides but boundless the love that unites us." "Civil and Religious Liberty—God's noblest gift, man's dearest right." "The Ladies."

On re-entering the ball-room, the military went through a few evolutions. Captain Murphy, some time since having notified his intention to resign his command, the "Guyons" took this opportunity of presenting him with a splendid gold hunting-watch suitably inscribed.

The military formed a hollow square, Capt. Murphy and his officers occupying the centre, when Mr. Cullen, Secretary to the Company, said—

Capt. Murphy—I regret the duty I am about to perform has not been allotted to one more qualified to express the feelings of respect and esteem entertained for you by the Company of which I have the honor to be an humble member. We have learned with deep emotion that you intend ere long to resign your command. You, sir, are well aware that every member of this Company will regret your resignation; but it is pleasure to us to know that you will remain with us in another capacity. We cannot part with you without making an acknowledgement of the prominent part you have ever taken to organize amd consolidate us as a military body. As a Captain, you have faithfully performed your duty with credit to yourself and honor to your command.

Mr. Cullen paid a handsome compliment to Capt. Murphy as a patriot, a soldier, and a man, and concluded thus—

When your children will have arrived to the age of manhood, may they view this little emblem of our friendship with feelings of honorable pride, and may it be an inducement to them to tread in the footsteps of their respected father. (Cheers.)

Capt. Murphy returned thanks for the gift and the manner in which it was presented to him, reviewed the past history of the Company, and bore willing testimony to the spirit of unity and brotherly love that animates its members. Many times, said he, have your patience and your pockets been called on to aid a brother member in sickness and adversity, and nobly have you ever responded to the call.

After this, dancing again, commenced which was kept up until 5 o'clock in the morning, when the company separated, well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

The Ball of the "T. F. Meagher Club" passed off most brilliantly. Tammany Hall was crowded on the occasion with some of the best specimens of the manhood and womanhood of New-York. The music, the dancing, the supper, the conversation in the ball-room, the sentiments and enthusiasm at the festive board—everything was admirable and exhilarating. Mr. John Duffy, the estimable President of the Club, acquitted himself to the thorough gratification of all present. The other officers of the Club were unremitting in their attentions, and have left the happiest impressions on young and old. The Club maintains its prestige with undiminished spirit.

A full account of the Ball of the "Emmet Guards," 1st Co., 10th Regiment, N. Y. S. M., will appear in our military columns next week. The Ball came off at Niblo's, and brilliantly sustained the social reputation of the Guards. Captain Kennedy has good reason to congratulate himself upon the success which attends every effort of his officers and men.

"Montgomery Guard"—the old Montgomery Guard of the 11th Reg't—entertain their friends at the same place, Niblo's, on the 27th of this month. The Green coats and Bear-skins will, no doubt, muster in full force, and bring a crowd of beauty and sterling worth about them. The Montgomeries are always successful. Everything they undertake is perfect.

The evening previous, a grand Soiree, for the benefit of the School of the parish, will be given at the City Assembly Rooms, by the members of the St. James' Benevolent Society. The names of the Committee, which appear elsewhere, guarantee one of the pleasantest festivities of the season. The object is sure to make it so.

We sincerely regret it was not in our power to attend the lecture delivered by Captain Huston, on the 12th of this month, in Hope Chapel. Having had to attend in Tammany Hall the same night, we had to deny ourselves the pleasure which the address of the accomplished Captain afforded all who heard it.

Those who reside up town cannot fail to be very materially convenienced by the elegant new Clothing Establishment of Messrs. Townsend & Gray, 815 Broadway. The gentlemanly deportment and business experience of this firm, eminently entitle them to success. Their cheap and elegant supply of goods recommend them to a full measure of patronage. We trust and believe they will obtain it.

The Chamber of Commerce met on the 14th inst., and appointed committees to receive Captain Hartstein and the officers of the Retribution, in an appropriate manner. It is proposed to give a grand banquet to the British officers. It is also proposed that our popular Seventh regiment perform escort duty. The recommendation of the special committee of the Board of Councilmen, to appropriate $2,500 for the reception, was unanimously endorsed by the Board the same evening.

A bill was introduced in Congress for the establishment of a mint in this city.

Mr. Nowlan, says the Courier and Enquirer, an Irish-American engineer, has shown us his plan for uniting this city and Brooklyn by a grand bridge. This plan possesses merits, and if we are ever to have a bridge erected, it should receive the consideration to which it is justly entitled. As to the practicability of his undertaking he has no doubts. He proposes to erect the bridge from the foot of Fulton street, the ascent to it being gradual, commencing on one side at Peck slip, and the other at Maiden lane. The ascending way being of iron work, would not interferfere with the travel upon the street. The width of the bridge is to be 74 feet, its height 125 feet above high water mark, and the span of the arches 300 feet. The bridge is to be supported upon iron cylinders resting upon mason work. Such a bridge would necessarily be expensive, but it is supposed that it would pay a good interest. One peculiar feature in it is that in its construction neither bolt, screw, nor nut would be used. The Scientific American regards this plan as the most ingenious yet proposed.

The Board of Councilmen has appropriated $2,000 for the celebration of the anniversary of Washington's birth-day. A resolution to increase the pay of members to eight hundred dollars per annum was called up by Councilman Waugh, and afterwards amended by that gentleman, substituting eight dollars per night instead of four dollars—the present compensation—which was carried by 27 to 23; but when the committee rose they refused to concur in it, 34 voting negatively, and 23 affirmatively.

WHAT REPUBLICANISM ACHIEVES.

From the People's Paper.

Here we have an old monarchy with a German Royal family costing one million pounds per annum; a nationai debt of 800 million pounds sterling, costing twenty-eight millions per annum, and entailed by that German royal family, through German wars for German interests, a hereditary landed-aristocracy drawing a rental of 100 millions yearly from the people; a State Church robbing the same people of eleven millions more every year; a poors-rate equal to the revenue, and a pauper population equal to the inhabitants of some continental kingdoms—and debt, royal extravagances, pauperism, poor's-rates, taxation, and land rental, increasing constantly. That is what we have here.

On the other side of the Atlantic there is a young republic, with a native President who costs only £5000 per annum—a national debt of only seven million pounds, which might be paid off in one year, without the revenue of the country feeling any material drain; an income so large that the Executive seeks to reduce it by ten million dollars; no hereditary aristocracy drawing the life-blood from the people's veins, no State Church "spoiling" the people, as the Israelites were told to spoil the Egyptians, we are informed, but for a far less excusable motive; no paupers and no poors-rates worth mentioning; no foreign interests predominant in legislation; no war undertaken for the interests of an alien-descended family; no decay, no decline, no threatened ruin, but, on the contrary, prosperity, wealth, economy, happiness, and contentment. That is what they have there.

We do not forget the blot of negro slavery there, neither do we forget the blot of white slavery here.

Why is this difference?

Because in the one country there is a franchise restricted to one-seventh of the population, one-half of which seventh returns seven-tenths of the representation; combined with that useless, mischievous, and ridiculous institution called "monarchy."

Because in that country there is Universal Suffrage and a republic.

That is the difference between the two institutions as shown in their results.

Could there be a more striking comment on the relative value of the two?

President Pierce's last message, just given to the world, presents a picture of prosperity and good government—such as no other country in the world can show.

Similar prosperity might exist here under a similar government. The resources of America are, it is true, greater than our own, but the resources of Great Britain and Ireland are more than great enough to produce identical results. The cause of the difference lies in the difference between the institutions of the two nations.

Take a case in point. Holland was once a republic; it is now a monarchy. When it was a republic it was rich, prosperous, and happy. Its commerce filled the world; its fleets swept the seas; it had no debt; its treasury was always filled to overflowing, and its people were the envy and admiration of the world.

It became a monarchy, and its commerce decayed, its fleets vanished, its prosperity disappeared, and it has sunk as low as once it rose pre-eminent.

You may say, the rivalry of England produced those results; but, in the face of that rivalry, the United States rose from small beginnings, under a republic, while under a monarchy, Holland sank from consummated greatness. Take Sardinia; it flourishes more than any other Italian state. Why? Because it has more liberty.

Nay! Look nearer home. England rose to commercial greatness. Why? When was the foundation of that greatness laid. Under the house of Anjou? Under the house of Plantagenet? Under the Stuarts? Under the Guelphs? No! Under Cromwell. The few years of the republic laid the foundation of England's commercal and political greatness.

Has that greatness increased since? Yes. Why? Not because of monarchical institutions; but because those institutions were limited. Because, surrounded by despotic states, there was comparative liberty here. Had Cromwell never been—had the Stuarts succeeded in establishing despotism, England's commerce and England's greatness would have been on a par with those of Naples now.

Thus, in the exact proportion in which you approach a republic and recede from a monarchy, a country flourishes. In the exact proportion in which you approach a monarchy, and recede from a republic, a country decays.

England is decaying, and decaying rapidly, because monarchical and aristocratic influences have been obtaining the ascendant. By the term "aristocratic," we mean the moneyed oligarchy, as well as the landed. The former is as fatal as the latter. As moneyed oligarchy arises, so trade declines. The House and Flandrian cities of the middle ages prospered when free guilds prevented the monopoly of the individual capitalist. With their municipal freedom fell their trade.

Real greatness and real prosperity are inseparable from liberty, and monarchical and aristocratic institutions are incompatible within free trade, for they are fatal hindrances to the development of the resources of a country.

PROSPERITY OF THE IRISH PEASANTRY.

From the Cork Examiner.

The country in which we live, is assuredly not one of the richest or greatest in the universe. The poverty of Ireland has not altogether departed, and poor Paddy has many a day of toil and labor to go through before he can hope to attain the wealth, and consequent respectability, of Mr. John Bull. Yet to those who can carry their recollections back for a space of ten years, and think of the various forms of misery and calamity through which at the commencement of that period she passed, it must appear that no country has ever within the same period made the same progress; and, granting a continuation of a similar favorable state of things as that we now enjoy, or, even a condition not entirely so advantageous, but something approaching to it, it must be evident that the time would not be far distant when Ireland might take a place among the happiest and most prosperous nations of Europe. On a dim and possible future, however, we do not now mean to calculate. We simply wish to draw attention to a few of the most gratifying features of the present condition of this country.

The decrease of pauperism throughout the entire length and breadth of the land has been so often dwelt upon and exposed, that we need not advert to it further, than simply to say, there is not, we believe, one workhouse containing an able-bodied male pauper.

Why should there be? Labor, at a rate of wages which the imagination of the peasant only associated with England, America, and other El Dorados, is now scarce—to such a degree, indeed, that the introduction of machinery has become quite common, and even the use of steam upon some of our larger farms, is not unknown. The prices the peasant pays for his food are high; but still his weekly hire is quite sufficient not only to feed him well, but to clothe him decently. If you wish to judge of the condition of the peasantry, go to the parish chapel on Sunday, and see the congregation issuing from their devotion. Poor Paddy and his inalienable rags appear to have given place to a sturdy, well-fed, well-clad peasant; and though poverty is not banished, and misery, aye, abject misery still exists, yet as a whole, it is in far smaller proportions than even in the years which preceded the famine.

Contrast the appearance of the girls, smart, tidy—and smiling brightly in their Irish beauty—with the miserable creatures who seven or eight years ago might have been seen creeping out of the same place of worship; and if you be an Irishman, your heart will swell with pride and thankfulness looking on those future mothers of your race. But it is not necessary even to go into the rural districts to witness these proofs of improvement. Observe the streets of any city or large town on a Sunday or holiday, when the people come in from the country to make their purchases, and not only will their vast numbers testify to the large proportion of those who have money to spend, but their dress and demeanor will most certainly betoken decency and comfort.

We are led more immediately to those remarks by reading the account of a sale of property which took place lately in a county bordering upon our own, that of Kerry. In the minds of strangers, "the kingdom" is associated with glorious mountain scenery, placid lakes, grand ravines, roaring torrents, and all the other attractions which bring them in crowds to make their annual pilgrimage to Killarney. But few of them, we suspect, would be inclined to think at the same moment of the county of Kerry and improved farming, and of steady, peaceful and successful industry. Yet that such an association exists, a very few facts will be sufficient to show. The Locke estates, in the county of Kerry, being encumbered to the extent of £39,000, the English agents set apart for sale so much as they conceived would at fair prices produce £30,000; the net rental consisting of nearly £2,200. To the astonishment, however, of all concerned, the property realized, not merely the sum required, but brought within a few hundreds of £70,000, every penny of the purchase-money being paid by residents of the county of Kerry.

This fact is a pretty fair indication of the positive wealth which exists within that county; but there was yet one other feature which proves in a more peculiar and distinct manner the general advance of the country in prosperity; that was, the large purchases made by working-farmers, one of whom paid for his holding a sum so high as £6,010. Hitherto the possession of sums so large as this by working agriculturists, was almost unprecedented, and, where occurring in individual cases, was generally the result of mere pinching. In all the purchases, however, of this class of which we speak, no less than thirty years' rental was given for the land—so that its eventual improvement alone, and that to a very considerable degree, can adequately remunerate the purchaser for his outlay. This disposition to invest the accumulations made by fortunate enterprise—though we have thought it necessary to give only these few instances—is becoming far more general throughout the country, and affords a healthy contrast with the timrous state of mind of the peasant of former days, who thought the only way to secure his little hoard, was by hiding his guineas in the thatch, carefully wrapped up in the traditionary stocking-heel. Now we begin to see more and more these idle coins made productive—applied to the higher cultivation of the land or the better breeding of cattle, with a proportionately high remuneration following the industry of the farmer.

Let us hope that this condition of things may continue, and at no distant day we may, with the blessing of Providence, look forward to see many of our exhausted turf-bogs converted into smiling pastures, and our now arid hill-sides the feeding-grounds of sleek cattle; and we may hope too, that it shall be many a day before our lusty millions will be again compelled to cross the channel or the ocean to find employment for their strong arms.

WATERFORD OF TO-DAY.

From the Waterford Chronicle.

In a recent issue of the Irish News (New-York), we find a letter addressed to the gifted Editor of that Journal, signed "An Officer of the French National Guards," declaring Waterford "more gloomy than ever;" the "Quay silent and bare;" "no stir of business or of pleasure." "In Waterford," says this Correspondent, "there is more poverty than I ever witnessed before, and the boaster's material prosperity of the country has not reached this gloomy and most abandoned city." Now, as we know Waterford, just as well as this Military Correspondent of the News, and as we know it to be directly the reverse of what the Guardsman represents, we have no hesitation in objecting to this picture of what we are happy to be able to call a most unreal state of things. We can tell him that, at this instant, labor, trade, and commerce are far more brisk and diffused than they have been for the last fifteen years.

At this instant, and at the dead of winter, a laborer's wages in this city, is from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. per day. Tradesmen get these short December days, 3s. 4d. per day; and any thing like a sufficiency of laborers or trade-people cannot be got to do the city business. Yet, even in the "good times," this was not so. Again, competent clerks are certain of permanent and lucrative situations. Attorneys of short standing are making their £500 a-year, without the public knowing aught of it; and the seniors of these men are making from £1000 to £1,500 per annum. The long run of high prices has given the farmers capital, and capital has enabled them to till the land, and manure to make it yield.

There are now three railways entering the city—a few years ago there was not one. There are one half-dozen hotels more than there were ten years ago. We have now eight first-class steamboats plying between this Port and the great markets at the other side, and we have several excellent boats of lesser tonnage. Notwithstanding this, however, these vessels are frequently unable to take away the superabundant produce awaiting exportation. Within the last ten years, we have built new Court-houses and new Chapels. We are engaged in important public projects, such as public bathing-places and public parks; and as to the public amusements, of which the correspondent of the News declares we know nothing, we do really know that there is not a night in the week, during which there is not some lecture, concert, or spectacle going on at the Townhall. Hurrah for Waterford yet.

IRELAND AND ENGLAND.

From the Dublin Nation.

In the midst of national apathy and distraction Smith O'Brien stands out again before his countrymen and raises his voice to give them warning and sage counsel; moved by a love of his native land that neither time nor distance, nor suffering could chill or damp, he speaks to them the words that his wise head and warm heart dictate, and points out to them, and denounces the latest injustice of the British Minister. The question of the Income Tax is one that concerns the three kingdoms, but Ireland in particular, for if the Minister succeed in the swindle he has planned and continue to squeeze the War Income Tax out of the people until April, '58, and if in the fullness of his purse he will go war with Persia, and end by annexing a portion of that country or making a "treaty" after his own heart, England may gain something by it, another market may be opened for her cotton and Brummagem ware, but what in heaven's name will be the benefit to Ireland? To what shall we point, and say, there is our recompense, if indeed anything could be regarded as a recompense, for our participation in those cruel and immoral wars? Our oppressors and their vile press and some wretched prints in this country will tell us we participate in the "glory" of England. The "glory" God save the mark, that is to say we get our share of the ill-fame, the curses and the hatred heaped on England by all the peoples of the earth, near and far, civilized and barbarous, Italian, Indian, and Chinaman. This is our lot then, and we are told to feel happy in it—to pay and fight for England wenever and wherever she pleases, to carry her bloody flag over hill and valley, through steel and fire, while she is directing her best efforts to impoverish and degrade us, and spurning our poor people from her shores whenever for a moment in the hard struggle for bread, by any one of the thousand chances of life, accident, disease, or temporary lack of employment, they are forced to apply for a portion of that relief which the law allows to the inhabitants of the country.

This week we print a case taken from the Cork papers, one out of a hundred others most of them nearly as bad and others worse, which should stir the blood of every man, worthy of the name, in Ireland, whatever may be his politics or creed, to see that this cruelty, injustice and ignominy be no longer perpetrated on his fetlow-countrymen. Why what sort of men may we be who endure this? What nation the whole world round, so weak or so degraded that she would suffer even the poorest and most worthless of her sons to be thus carted and shipped off from the shores of another, in chains, sick perhaps, often nearly naked, and in all weathers. Ireland only on the face of the earth would see these horrors done and say or do nothing. In Prussia, a little time since, an Englishman was arrested and kept in durance for a few weeks, on a wrong suspicion, and forthwith he appeals to the British Minister, rnd makes a great rout in the British press about the indignity. An English gentleman is stopped in the streets of Naples, at night, and merely asked, "Who goes there," and immediately a correspondent reports the affair as if an earthquake had occurred; and only a few days ago a Neapolitan officer during or after a review, is said to have got into a carriage hired by an Englishman, and driven off to regain his regiment, the consequence of which was that the affair was inquired into, from one office to another, until the offender was found, when a satisfactory explanation or apology. Thus is the Englishman guarded and protected in all parts of the world, while our countrymen, who are told, forsooth, that Ireland is an internal part of the British empire, are cast like weeds from the shores of England, are banished like felons from the land in which, in many cases, they have toiled during long years, and abided by the law, and paid taxes. We ask the people of Ireland for how much longer do they mean to look on at tqese things, and make no sign? For how much longer will they be content to sweat and bleed for England, to contribute in every shape to her werlth, and be treated as her inferiors and her slaves.

IN IRELAND, BUT NOT OF IRELAND.

From the Evening Mail.

"The murder of Mr. Little," says the Morning Chronicle, "promises to add one more instance to the many previous examples of mysterious and unpunished crimes which are already on record in the Irish annals." Asking our candid contemporary's pardon, we must take the liberty to remark, that the murder of Mr. Little rather smacks of the motives to bloodshed which peculiarly characterize the most civilized metropolis of the world. In its object and its accessories it bears a horribly distinct similitude to a vulgar English assassination; nor can we doubt that the manner of its perpetration was suggested immediately by an outrage, of very recent occurrence, within one hundred yards of the temple of British justice in Westminster Hall.

The method adopted to stun the victim, by felling him while he was wholly unsuspicious of any evil intention, just as a butcher fells an ox before cutting its throat, was manifestly borrowed from the murderous and fatal assault on Cope, in Parliament street, Whitehall, last month. In both cases plunder was the object, and in order to effect that without resistance or discovery, a treacherous blow was dealt to the unwary victims, which deprived them instantaneously of consciousness and, of course, of the power of raising an alarm. An English convict, bearing a ticket-of-leave, was the author of the insidious act in one case, and his hand it was which showed what the celebrated Mr. Thurtell (a veritable John Bull, by-the-by, without the slightest possibility of mistake) would have called "the trick," to the slaughterer of Mr. Little.

So far, therefore, this fiendish act may justly be characterised as an English murder. It was done after the pattern most recently imported from the sister country; but whether the hand which wielded the murderous instruments be even native here, time alone can unfold. It is yet hidden in the cloak of mystery; but the insinuation of the Morning Chronicle, that its concealment is aided by the usual means which render the detection of crime in Ireland so difficult, is in this instance utterly groundless. Except the wretch who committed this crime, we are satisfied that there is not an individual of any rank or denomination in our community who would not gladly assist the pursuits and inquiries of justice to bring him to condign punishment.

The peculiar difficulty of unravelling this mysterious deed has nothing whatever to do with the strange workings and idiosyncrasies of our social system: it lies in the fact—of which there seems not a question—that the design and the act were known to only one human being; and he laid his plans so warily as to have prevented the discovery of the deed for so many hours, during which he was doubtless enabled to get rid of any overt evidences of his guilt. His extreme caution and self-possession were made manifest to the first glance at the scene of this fearful tragedy. The absence of all appearance of struggle shows that he had such a mastery over the foul and cruel fiend within him, as to bide his time, after gaining admittance, until the violent onset could be made with perfect security. A further evidence of calculating forethought is the pile of bank notes left untouched on the table, although they were more portable than coin, and the greater number of them being, probably, pound notes, were, therefore, not so liable to be traced to the previous holders. Does not this prove that even the cursed greed of gain, for which he did not scruple to shed innocent blood, could not constrain hifn to compromise the safety of his vile body by affording a possible clue to his detection.

Where so much cool circumspection exists, there must be also great power of controlling emotion, and taking measures quietly for secreting all evidences which it is necessary to keep out of sight. In tracking out such a criminal, justice has a deep and crafty game to pursue; but we are confident that he will be overtaken; and the Morning Chronicle may be certain that the efforts which are made to secure him, will not be baulked by any movement of popular sympathy or connivance "even in Ireland."

HERAT—PAST AND PRESENT.

From the Dublin University Magazine.

To the classical reader, Herat is probably better known by its ancient appellation Aria or Artacoana, an obvious corruption of Heri, the old Persian name for the adjacent territory. In the time of Alexander, it was already of some importance, and Major Price quotes a proverbial stanza purporting that, "originally founded by Lahorausd, it was considerably augmented by Gnshtausp, further enlarged by royal Bohmen, and finally completed by Alexander the Grecian." Like most celebrated cities in the East, Herat has undergone many vicissitudes. . . . Its situation is described as very beautiful. It stands in a fertile and well watered valley, thirty miles in length by fifteen in width, cultivated like a garden, and once covered with flourishing villages. As the emporium of commerce between Cabul, Cashmere, Bokara, Hindostan and Persia, it is dignified by the appellation of Bunder or Port, though no more on the sea coast than Bohemia. Its staple commodities are silk, assafœtida, and saffron. In the gardens around the city, and also within the walls, abound mulberry trees, grown for the sole purpose of rearing the silkworm. Pines are indigenous in the plains, the pistachio tree on the hills, and in both localities flourishes the assafœtida. Both Hindoos and Beloochees are as partial to this odorous plant as the Italians to garlic. The stem is roasted in ashes, the leaves boiled like any other green vegetables. Wheat, barley, and many kinds of fruit grow abundantly in this favored valley, while large flocks of broad-tailed sheep graze on the lower slopes of the hills. "Herat," exclaims its native historian, Khondemir, "is the lamp which gives light to all other cities. Herat is the soul, of which this world is but the body; and if Khorasson be the bosom of the world, Herat is allowed to be the heart." In the early part of the present century, 1810–12, the population was about one hundred thousand; but in 1837 it had declined to less than half that number. At that time it consisted of little more than four long bazaars, each containing about ten thousand inhabitants. How has it fallen since its splendors called forth the enthusiastic praises of Khondemir at the close of the fifteenth century? It then possessed a citadel, "renowned for its impregnable strength and solidity; of which the surrounding fosse is described to have been more unfathomable than the soul of the liberal man in his bounty, and the ramparts more lofty than to be spanned by the ordinary powers of the imagination." It could boast, besides, of many splendid mosques, colleges, almshouses, mausoleums, and caravansaras, and one library. A little way out of the town, on the banks of a river, stood a gorgeous college. From the varnished gilding on the walls the dawn of the morning derived its blushes, and the reflection of the lapislazuli, inlaying, lent its azure tints to the vaults of heaven." Of the numerous public gardens for the recreation of the citizens, the one called the "Ornament of the World" surpassed the wonders of fancy. Thirty-two years were consumed in laying out the grounds and planting them, and in adorning them with porticos, corridors, and pavilions. Like the flower-enamelled retreats of Elysium, its heart-expanding area exhibited one entire carpet of roses, and of every description of flower and flagrant shrub; the soul-refreshing air which breathed through every avenue, like the zephyr breeze of the earliest month of spring, possessed the influence of assuaging the sorrows of the most afflicted.

Temple and tower have long since crumbled away; the health-giving gardens have been trampled under foot; the names of Khondemd, and of his yet more illustrious fellow-citizen, Noor-eod-deer-Abdvirahman-ool-Jami, author of "Yussuf Zuleitha," have passed into oblivion; and the once stately streets are now filled with heaps of offal and carrion.

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

With regard to fowling-pieces, all the ball-proof ones should be selected, and the unserviceable ones thrown amongst old iron. There is under the barrel of every fowling-piece a stout rod of iron attached to it; a part of this rod can be filed off, and a notch left near the top of the muzzle, on which a bayonet or sword—the longer the better—can be fixed, in order to make the weapon as effective as possible. The fowling-pieces are light handy weapons in positions of short range, and are the fittest weapons for lads under the military age, and for stiff men over that age. In city fighting, fowling-pieces, horse-pistols, blunderbusses, and, in a word, every sort of arms and weapons, can be used with effect; but in the country the piece that kills at the greatest distance is absolutely the best. The chief and primary arm of Ireland's military force must be composed of pikemen, whose armament and equipment are so cheap and simple, that the very poorest man can at all times stand armed and equipped. There are many species of pike, but the plain blade, without hook or crook, will, in the end, turn out to be the best. The pike and handle should measure ten feet—longer would be unwieldy—shorter would be ineffective. Every pikeman should procure himself a horse-pistol, or, better still, a nine-inch revolver, and a leather waist-belt to be buckled in front, to which his cartridge and cap pouches are to be attached; and also a leather case, something similar to a dragoon's holster pipe, for his pistol, which is to be worn on the left side; when in the holster, the muzzle of the pistol points to the ground, the lock turned to the body. Without being so supplied with pistols and their specified accompaniments, the pikemen would sometimes be liable to be seriously annoyed by the enemy's cavalry, who could halt within pistol-shot range, and discharge their pistols in the pikemen's faces and then scamper away unmolested; but when the pikemen are also armed with pistols or revolvers, and well supplied with percussion caps and cartridges, an occasion of this sort can never take place without the cavalry being made to bite the dust for their civility. The duties of the pikemen will be few and simple. Charging will be their sole object, and to do so effectively, they must be practised in the sectional drill, and particularly practice charging in line and in column, and learn to move forward, swiftly, orderly and evenly, like a living wall, making their pikes' points tell together upon the enemy's line. I know that a prejudice, partly founded in ignorance and partly in tyrannic interest, exists against the introduction of the pike as a weapon of military service, and therefore I feel it necessary, on that account, to explain my views fully in relation to this very important matter. The chief design in arranging and distributing troops on the scene of active operations is to place them in such a manner as to enable them to wield their arms with greatest effect, and to advantageously and efficiently occupy ground, that they can effectively strike without receiving an adequate return of the compliment. Prior to the discovery of gunpowder and the invention of fire-arms, when infantry soldiers were armed with swords, spears and bows, it being essential to leave room between the men for the free use of their weapons in action, they always opened out for that purpose, as cavalry do now for the lance and sword exercise. The Romans, armed with swords, were drawn up in single rank at intervals, and also, with the same design, the Greek phalanx of pikemen. But military men, from the universal adaptation and application of projectiles, believing the shock of armies as of old no longer needful, discarded the old species of arms and the formations that suited them. Hence we see the lines now closed in, the men standing shoulder to shoulder, not (as is the case) for the purpose of placing more men under the enemy's fire, but in order to favor him with a closer and thicker fire of leaden hail. Although these tactical changes were generally accepted, after the lapse of some time it was, however, found that the shock of arms became necessary, and could not be avoided; hence the application of the bayonet. The chief battles during the late continental wars were decided by bayonet charges: and of these battles, Waterloo closed the scene; and lately the Alma and Inkerman were decided by the charge, and by the same chivalric medium the Malakoff was captured. These military historical facts, in bold relief, glittering in martial science, teach the keen-thinking soldier-student of liberty a new and grand application of an old arm accompanied by new tactics in war's grand domain. It was the application of the pike in war that encircled the bold brows of ancient democratic Greece and republican Rome with that red and glowing blaze of military glory which dazzles the world, even to this day; and the application of the same weapon, under improved principles, and the auspices of native genius, and the inspiration of native patriotism, may, sooner than we can now imagine, be mainly instrumental in striking down the flag of the invader, and preventing him from erecting his gaudy pavilion upon the verdant soil of Erin. The front rank of the Greek pikemen, as I have shown, stood apart from each other, and each rear-rank man a space in rear, midway between the two front-rank men. This weakness of order has been partially remedied by the Theben general, Epominandes, who, curtailing his breadth of front, deepened and strengthened his phalanx in rear, so that when the front-rank men fell those in rear supplied their places. In this order he used to choose a spot in the enemy's line, sometimes the centre and at others the flank, as at Mantinea, and charge right through it with his phalanx, and then taking the broken lines in the adjacent flank, obtained the victory. The Roman tactics were similar on many occasions. This was also Napoleon's system of charging with the bayonet; but, instead of being thin and checkerwise like the Greeks and Romans, his men stood close, shoulder to shoulder, rank behind rank, forming dense, deep, and solid masses, with which he used to charge and break the centre of the enemy's line; but he never succeeded against the English line, only two deep, with his columns, owing to their narrowness of front, as the English line at Waterloo, for instance, lapped round his front and flanks, wrapping their column in a girth of deadly fire, throwing it into disorder and confusion, and thus defeating it. With all his military genius and knowledge, if Napoleon had taken a leaf from the history of Epominandes, he might have gained Waterloo. At the battle of Mantinea, Epominandes showed a front as broad as that of the enemy, but supported his left flank with a deep phalanx of pikemen opposite the enemy's right, where he struck the fatal and successful blow. Had Napoleon charged the English with as broad a front as theirs, placing his grand column in the centre, instead of the battle of Waterloo being the name of the defeat and the disgrace of France, it would have been the denomination of her greatest victory and proudest glory. But, plainly speaking, Napoleon's deficiency in military knowledge gave Wellington the victory; and no fact more than this so convincingly exhibits the great value of precise military knowledge, more particularly as applied in relation to the charge.

There are two objections advanced by military men against the acceptation of the pike, as an arm of military service, which I will presume to dispose of now. The first is:—They suppose that each pikeman needs a certain clear space or, in other words, elbow-room to wield his pike; that this necessity precludes the possibility of pikemen occupying their own ground in sufficient numbers and strengh to be effective: and considering the distance they may have to travel over in this scattered order under the enemy's fire, before they reach his line, when they would be too few and too feeble against men standing shoulder to shoulder, this objection would, indeed, be well-founded, if the pikemen needed this supposed necessity of elbow-room; but I have taken the best means of proving this supposition to be false, in both theory and practice. I have drilled a strong company of pikemen in the pike exercise, the simplest and easiest exercise to be learned; and they can charge and go through all essential movements, shoulder to shoulder, in as close and compact array, as any company of musketeers can do. They charge similarly to a company of bayoneteers. The pike company stand with ordered pikes, as musketeers do with ordered muskets; each man's pike stands perpendicular at his right side, the but of the handle on the ground; the right arm pointing down at full length, holding the pike in its place. At the word "Charge," the front-rank make a half-face to the right; each man's pike is thrown point forward in horizontal position; left hand foremost, firmly holding up the pike; right hand holding the but of the handle on the right hip; rear-rank men sloping pikes as gunsmen slope arms; the whole move forward evenly stepping off with the left feet, in a smart trot, until they reach the enemy's line, when the rear-rank throws forward its pikes to assist the front in stabbing the enemy. In stabbing the enemy, the pikeman should be expert, and take care, each man, not to lock his pike by running it through more than one man at a time. A smart thrust, bestowing six inches of bright steel, ought to be sufficient to do for any reasonable enemy; and if not satisfied with that, he should get no more—we are not bound to be pleasing him. This applies to charges against infantry; but in charging cavalry, the front-rank men will charge the cavalrymen, and the rear-rank men the horses; taking care not to stab the horses' breasts, which would have the effect of making them push forward, but their noses, which would have the effect of making them bound backwards. Each rear-rank man should give the horse in front of him a smart prod on the nose, sufficiently effective to inspire that animal, for ever afterwards, with such a holy hatred of both pike and pikemen, as to be quite useless as a cavalry charger. Should the cavalrymen not be obliging enough to wait to be piked, then the pikemen will favor them with a volley of pistol bullets. As regards the second objection, which is, that the pikemen while advancing to the charge, are exposed to the fire of the enemy's line, until they reach it; suffice it to say, that this objection applies equally to bayoneteers, who also, in charging are exposed to the fire of the enemy's line, until they close with it, when the firing ceases, and the fate of the day depends on the success of the charge. Therefore, if this objection has any validity, it applies against charges entirely; but experience has shown that battles can only be effectively decided by the charge, and that really the fire of artillery and small arms are merely made use of to prepare for that grand event. The general's chief design in firing on the enemy's line, is to weaken and create confusion in it, while he brings up his reserve intact; and on the advantage derived from his line being complete over the shattered state of the enemy's, he founds his hope of success in the charge. When two opposing lines of bayonets meet, the line which has the advantage must succeed; and it is from the skill and success in firing on either side, that this culminating advantage is obtained. But the line of pikes needs not the fire of artillery or small arms, to give it the advantage over a line of bayoneteers, because their feebleness, owing to their thinness of order and toothpick-like armament, render them no match, but an easy prey to the long, strong, and deep files of the pikemen. All despotic or oligarchical governments, whose upas-like existence depends upon subsidized armed brute force, will diligently fulminate unceasing anathemas against the pike, owing no its "unpardonable defects," namely, its simplicity, invincibility, and cheapness; and the impossibility of legislative enactments ever divorcing the peasant from his pike. Whenever an army is the property of a despot or an oligarchical clique, and not that of the people, it has been, and always will be, the interest and policy of such despot or clique to cause the armament and equipment of such troops to be as complicated and expensive as possible, in order to raise the appliances of war, like every other luxury, above the reach of the democracy. But all the efforts and slanders of those crowned and uncrowned representatives of the sable monarch of the infernal deep, cannot for a moment prevail against the pristine splendor of the queen of weapons. The vivid lights which flash from its reappearance on the battle scenes, reveals a grand arcanum in the crimsoned field of Mars, which at once startles and awakens the tyrants of Europe to a full sense of the God-like redeeming might which ever slumbers in the peasant's stalwart arm. Had the peoples of Europe hitherto known the superiority of the pike as a weapon of military service, and how cheaply and easily it is to practically apply that knowledge, I feel certain they would not for a single day submit, spaniel-like, to be the mere goods and chattels of those useless and pernicious tom-fools, called kings and emperors. But it is well to promulgate this wholesome saving knowledge now itself.

I have very little more to say in relation to the armament of the people; but if I had liberty to offer my advice, I would recommend every man to procure either the rifle, or the musket, or the pike, in preference to fowling-pieces. It is for shooting men, not birds, that we may require fire-arms by-and-by. At all events, whatever be the weapons of the people's choice, every man should, at least, be armed. There is no time to be lost; it is wise to stand prepared. The hour, big with the fortune of Ireland and the fate of her children, may, for ought we know, be very rapidly advancing. And practise in the use of arms should, from henceforth, be more than a profession; it should be an essential grace, a necessary accomplishment, a paramount qualification, without which the man should be despised; because, then he would be no better than a sort of he woman. No exertion should be spared in inducing the people to arm, and to practice their use, and the man who will not do so, should be pointed out to the world, and to the ladies in particular, in his true colors. I would entreat each lady in the land, for God's sake and her own, never to marry a man that is not a patriot, and armed besides; because, if he is not a patriot, surely he must be a bad sort; and if he is not armed, he is truly no good—no good for her, no good for his country, no good for anything. It is a hateful to hear a conceited civilian, in whose dull mind a wise or patriotic notion never stirred, in whose base heart a noble motive never moved, in whose corrupt veins a manly drop of blood never ran, affecting to despise the soldier or contemn the profession of arms. To be a man, is one of the greatest honors to which the best of us can aspire; but, to be a soldier, adds dignity to that honor. All cowards hate the soldier, because they fear him, and envy him his superiority, and, therefore, pretend to despise him; as all slaves hate and envy the patriot, because they lack the virtues to imitate him. The soldier, so long as his services are not prostituted to the interests of the despot, or the unjust agrandizement of one state at the expense of another, but are devoted to the service of his fatherland and the maintenance of justice and liberty, is one of the most valuable members of society, and justly holds, as a citizen of the world, the highest position upon the scale of honor and respectability; and as every man is entitled to remuneration for honest services, faithfully rendered, so is the soldier. But above all, the patriot soldier, whose unforced devotion prompts him to take up arms, and volunteer his services at the shrine of the land of his nativity, by the generous nobleness of his nature, is risen aloft above his peers to the climax of truest glory, and justly merits the unalloyed respect and homage of mankind. He is the real, the truest, and the greatest philanthropist, because he freely gives his time and services, and risks his noble life in the sacred cause of universal charity.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Irish News.

At Clashmore Petty Sessions, on Dec. 8, a case of much public importance took place before the Bench of Magistrates, Messrs. J. Orme, R. M., George Roche, and Francis Kennedy. A man named John Bourke was prosecuted by Mr. Pollock, on behalf of the Youghal Board of Guardians, for inoculating children with the small pox, he not being, as was allegeed, properly qualified to do so. Several witnesses were examined in sustainment of the prosecution. The magistrates stated that there was no direct evidence of inoculation by small-pox, though they were of opinion the defendant was guilty of the practice. They, however, could not convict, and cautioned Bourke to be more careful as to the manner in which he conducted himself in future.

A melancholy occurrence took place, says the Cork Examiner, in Messrs. Murphy's brewery, Watercourse. It appears that a child of Mr. Daniel Forde, printer, whilst playing with some children in the brewery was put by them into a hole the mouth of which they covered with a door, telling him that he should remain there always. The poor little fellow was exceedingly terrified, and when, after being incarcerated for some time, his juvenile companions took him out, he was found to labor under a palpitation of the heart, the result of the terror which his situation had caused. The assistance of Dr. M'Evers was instantly obtained, and every means of remedy resorted to, but all failed to restore the child, who expired in the course of the evening.

Col. Hastings Doyle arrived in Bandon on the 23d, to inspect the South Cork Militia staff stationed in that town. He was received by Col. the Hon. H. B. Bernard, Captain Tuckey, Lieut. Walker, Quartermaster Cummins, and Dr. Toole, local surgeon to the regiment. He immediately inspected at the staff barracks the men and their arms and accoutrements, and afterwards the regimental stores, with which he expressed himself much pleased.

The Rev. J. Fitzpatrick, P. P., Midleton, very gratefully acknowledges the receipt of twenty pounds from Lord Midleton. This very liberal and generous donation has been given by his lordship to the Catholic inhabitants of the parish of Ballintowlas, to enable them to make a convenient approach to their chapel. The site of the chapel and adjoining graveyard have been long since given gratuitously by his lordship's family for the use of the Catholic people of this parish.

The Dundalk Democrat states that two young ladies, Miss Lawless, daughter of Mr. John Lawless, Dundalk; and Miss Maginness, of Newry, received the white veil in the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy in the latter town. The Right Rev. Dr. Leahy officiated on the occasion. A large number of the friends of both the postulants, and also of the clergy of the dioceses of Armagh and Dromore were present at the solemn ceremonies.

A soldier of the Eighty-eighth regiment named James Johnston, who had been confined in the military prison in Limerick, on his discharge appeared before one of the magistrates and confessed he had murdered a man named James Pickergill, in Hull, England. He said he never could find the least peace of mind since he was guilty of the horrible act. He lies at present in the city jail, till a communication be made to the authorities at Hull.

At the New Ross Petty sesions, at the prosecution of Smyth Ardagh, Esq., agent to Samuel Le Hunte Hobson, Esq., John M'Carthy was fined £2 with costs, for sporting on the lands of Ballymacar without permission—although he had taken out the necessary game certificate; and Patrick Evoy in the sum of £5 or one month's imprisonment, for sporting on said lands without license.

An accident occurred in Mahony's mills, Cloghroe, to one of the employees, John Walsh, which resulted in a severe fracture of his right leg. The man was at the time employed at the machinery, in which his leg became entangled. He was removed immediately after the occurrence to the South Infirmary, Cork, where his injuries were attended to by Mr. Gillespie, resident physician; but they are of so serious a character as to require amputation of the limb.

The London and West of Ireland Fishing Company have called upon the Harbor Commisioners of Galway to furnish them with returns of the vessels detained there for the last three years by contrary winds, with a view of enabling them to arrive at certain conclusions as to the number of vessels necessary to carry on their operations.

The Tarbert Pier is progressing fast towards completion. This great structure, when finished, will cost over £13,000. There will be 20 feet of water at the pier in the lowest state of the spring tide, so that ships of any burden may take in loadings and discharge cargoes at its side.

The Town Council of Waterford forwarded a resolution of thanks to the Earl of Clarendon for the assistance he afforded in securing the co-operation of the government of the Emperor of the French in the National Agricultural Exhibition, to be held in that city in August next.

Commenting on the annual dinner given to the tenantry of the Farney estate, Co. Monaghan, by that notorious exterminator, Evelyn J. Shirley, the Dundalk Democrat says :—"The fall of the leaf" always brings us to the verge of winter, and in the realms of Farney that period is celebrated for what is called the "Turnip Dinner," given in the Baronial Hall attached to Lough Feaah Castle, which, we have been often told, "has been built for the accommodation of the tenantry." Why it is called the "Turnip Dinner" we know not, except that there is more of that root on the table than is necessary, and that the poor "tenants at will" find more of it on their plates than of beef or mutton. We rather suspect that this is the reason why the November dinner is known by this particular name ; but at all events the people call it the "Turnip Dinner," and we are not going to dispute the validity of the title. Last year we could not discover in any of the public journals a report of the sayings and doings of the Lough Feagh glorification. At present we are more fortunate, for we find in last Saturday's number of a stupid landlord print published in Drogheda, a report of this year's "Turnip" eloquence. How well the reporter, whoever he was, knew where to send his report. How soon he discovered a congenial organ for his stupid nonsense ; a paper which closed its ears, lest it should hear the wailings of the 1,000 human beings sent off these estates, in the famine years, to rot and die in the Carrickmacross Workhouse. The "Turnip Dinner" of this year was quite up to its predecessors—the same fare, the same faces, the same nonsense, nothing but cant and romance.

A curious case, says the Dublin Freeman of the 13th ult., appears in the reports of the proceedings in the Rolls-Court this week, in which the purchaser of an estate in the Incumbered Estates Court, although actually put into possession of his purchase in September, 1854, was ordered to bring in all the rents he had since received, in consequence of there having been a Chancery receiver over the estate, who, by some omission, had not been discharged, and who, therefore, by some process of law we cannot understand, still held the control over the estate, although sold and paid for. The affair appears to be another of the many complications arising out of John Sadleir's affairs, the estate having been first sold to Mr. J. B. Kennedy, in trust for Mr. Robert Keating, who passed it on to John Sadleir, who likewise handed it over to the Globe Insurance Company, and they to Burmester and others, trustees for the London and County Bank.

On the 14th of December, a person respectably attired, while passing up Grafton street, Dublin, was seen to fall heavily on the flags. Major Anderson and Lieutenant Farrell, of the Royal Artillery, who were near at the time ran to his assistance, and conveyed him in a lifeless state to the shop of Mr. Madden, bookseller. Dr. Vance, of Suffolk street, and two other medical gentlemen, were in prompt attendance, but on examination they found he was quite dead.

The December fair of Tipperary was largely supplied with stock of every description. Fat cows sold at from £14 to £16 ; heifers, £11 to £14 ; yearlings, £5 to £7 ; calves, 35s. to 45s. each. Bacon was in active demand, and rated so high as from 56s. to 58s. per cwt. One gentleman sold a choice lot of store pigs at £5 14s. each.

Sir William Brooke O'Shaughnessy is grand-nephew of the late Right Rev. Dr. O'Shaughnessy, R. C. Bishop of the diocese of Killaloe, and nephew of the late Dean O'Shaughnessy, of Ennis. He is son-in-law of Francis O'Shaughnessy, Esq., of Limerick, and nephew of Mr. Richard O'Shaughnessy.

On a recent investigation of rate collectors' arrear sheets in the Tralee board-room, a guardian stated that parties well able to pay were returned in arrear, and instanced the cases of two Members of Parliament, Colonel Herbert and Mr. V. Scully, who were so returned. This statement got into the local papers, and has gone the rounds of the press.

Mr. John Kelly, of Drogheda, an excise officer, was attacked and robbed of money when passing the distillery in that town, on the 20th ult., by three daring ruffians, whose recent depredations caused terror in the neighborhood. The police arrested the fellows, named M'Teigh, Gough, and Daniel, who stand committed for trial at next assizes.

The Killocalla estate, near Glyn, in the county of Limerick, has been lately purchased in the Incumbered Estates Court, by private contract, at £9,000, by Charles Humphrey Minchin, Esq., of Rutland, in the King's County.

The People of Templedigan and Rathmore presented the Rev. Michael Warren with a purse of twenty guineas upon his removal to Ballygarret, as a memorial of the affectionate esteem in which he was held by all.

The Roman Catholic inhabitants of Cashel, in conjunction with the Roman Catholic clergy of that city, have memorialized the Lord Lieutenant to appoint the Rev. Newport B. White to the living of Cashel, vacant by the death of Dean Adams.

Pursuant to a numerously signed requisition, a meeting was held on the 21st ult. in the Chapel yard of St. Peter's parish, Athlone, at which resolutions denouncing the recent verdict of libel against Archdeacon O'Reilly, were passed.

A man named Bell recently undertook to sow an acre of wheat, near Sligo, in the space of twenty minutes, and accomplished the task to the satisfaction and surprise of all parties present.

A committee is being formed in the parish of Inniskeen, to collect contributions for the relief of the poor people whose crops were destroyed in August last by the great hail storm.

A lead and silver mine is said to have been discovered by the workmen in the excavations of the Limerick and Foynes Railway.

The Limerick and Ennis Railway Company have declared a number of shares forfeited, in consequence of non-payment of calls.

The tolls of the Waterford bridge, for the ensuing year, have been sold to Messrs. Joseph and Thomas Dwyer for £4,852.

There are 733 paupers in the Cashel Union, being a decrease of 196 since the same period last year.

Four fishermen were drowned in Derry during the recent gales.

The grocers of Cork have advanced the price of sugar one halfpenny per lb.

The Limerick and Castleconnell Railway will be opened next summer.

Operations have commenced this week on the Ennis line of railway at Corbally.

A great portion of the bacon manufactured in Waterford is now forwarded to London via Milford.

On the evening of Saturday, the 20th ult., a daring attempt was made to murder Mr. Galbraith Joynt, who resides at Bellisle, in the county of Clare, within one mile of Clonlara and five miles of Limerick. It appears that this gentleman some time since purchased a large property in the neighborhood, and was intending to effect some changes as regards the occupiers, or perhaps had done so. Mr. Joynt was returning home on Saturday evening at half-past four o'clock, and as he was approaching his residence, and passing the property purchased by him, an assassin from behind a hedge fired at him. He was driving along in a gig, and the contents of the gun, being duckshot, lodged in his hand, leg, and thigh. The horse was severely injured, and a great quantity of shot was lodged in the front of the gig. Mr. Joynt, though at the time suffering much agony, at once repaired to the police barracks, and informed the acting constable there stationed of the outrage, and further stated the parties he suspected of being guilty of it. The police at once went to the houses of the accused, and in one of them discovered a gun recently discharged, besides plenty of powder and shot. Mr. Joynt has sworn informations as to the circumstance before the resident magistrate, at Castleton, who was quickly on the spot. A searching investigation was held on the following Monday by the magistrates in the district, the result of which has been the arrest of four young men named Molony, whose families were amongst those noticed to quit. It was Mr. Edward Joynt, brother to the gentleman assailed, who was supposed to occupy the gig when the shot was fired. Such is the presumption, from the fact of his having been previously served with a threatening notice.

On the 20th ult. Mr. Murphy applied to the Master in Chancery on behalf of Mr. Thomas Joseph Eyre, to receive proofs of a certain bill of exchange for £17,000, indorsed by John Sadleir to his client, and accepted by William Kelly, manager of the Clonmel branch of the Tipperary Bank. He then produced the bill, which was at six months, dated the 26th of Nov., 1865, made payable at the County Bank, London, and purporting to be for money due and owing. There being no attendance on behalf of the official manager or his solicitor, the Master said that for the present he should only receive the document as exhibited to him. It was a monstrous thing that this bill of exchange should have been accepted by the manager in November, 1855, very shortly before the failure of the bank, for so large a sum as £17,000, when he knew perfectly well that John Sadleir at that time owed the bank some £200,000 or £250,000. In his opinion he ought to be indicted for fraud.

About twelve months ago, says the Clonmel Chronicle, a swarm of bees forsook a hive at the gardens of Kilcooly, and lodged in a crevice of the richly groined roof of the old Abbey on the estate. There they remained—strange inmates of that time-worn building—and during last summer the little colony busied themselves in forming their comb and filling its cells with their "luscious" hoard. Depending from the roof several flakes of white comb may now be seen, but it is so ingeniously worked into the crumbling ruin, that it requires a close observation before it can be discovered. Close to the Abbey the largest whitethorn tree, perhaps in this country, flourishes—it measures seven feet six inches in girth, and covers a wide area with its spreading branches. There are several others growing around of somewhat similar dimensions, and it is computed that they have stood for upwards of a century.

Saunders' News Letter reports that on the 17th of December, in Drogheda, a sale took place at the auction mart of Mr. Thos. Kelly of two chests of Pekoe tea, which were seized under a warrant of the Special Commissioners of Income tax, at the shop of Mr. Patrick Lynagh, grocer and spirit merchant. The sum claimed was £6 17s. 6d., being bought in for the original owner. A number of inhabitants attended the sale, who sympathised with Mr. Lynagh. Other seizures have been made for the same tax by the collector, and the goods distrained placed at the mart, to await the completion of the usual notice of sale. A strong feeling exists against the tax in Drogheda, and the collector has met with some difficulty in many quarters in raising it. A puplic meeting to petition against the tax is spoken of.

A more atrocious case of brutality than that recorded in our Police report of this day, says the Cork Examiner, we never yet heard of. A respectable man, whose double crime was that of poverty and sickness, was literally chained like a wild beast at his own fire-side, and thus dragged to the Cork steamer for transportation, in order that a Welsh parish should not be burdened with his support. God knows we can scarcely credit that such a deed of ruffianly violence could be attempted in these days. But there is the statement of its victim, and the admission of its perpetrator, to establish the atrocious fact. Talk of Negro slavery ; but what is the treatment of the Black by the American planter to the treatment of an Irish-born White man by an English or Welsh parish ?

Dr. Hayes, of Naas, held an inquest on the 20th of December, at Newbridge, county Kildare, on the body of a young man named Daniel Lalor, who was found dead under his car on the road from Newbridge to the camp. It appeared from the evidence that deceased was engaged at Newbridge by some soldiers to convey them to the camp about seven o'clock on the evening of Thursday last ; he returned to Newbridge immediately after leaving the soldiers at the camp, and was found dead lying under his car in a deep ditch at the side of the road, not far from the police barracks.

On the 20th ult. there was a fair in Tullamore, and in the night of that day a man named Joseph Delany was so badly beaten that his life is despaired of. Two men named James Maledy and John Maledy have been apprehended and fully committed to the County prison to abide their trial for the offence. John Maledy is a soldier belongining to the 21st Fusileers ; but James Maledy is a ticket-of-leave convict. He was sentenced to ten years' transportaion for a burglary at Tullamore quarter session, October, 1851, and he got his ticket-of-leave in October last.

On the 25th ult., the residence of Lieutenant Stoakes, R. E., Fermoy, was entered by a party of burglars, and a large amount of poperty, consisting of clothes, &c., to the value of £40, taken from it. One of the parties by whom the robbery had been effected left a tattered pair of pantaloons after him in the house, no doubt having supplied himself with a good substitute from the wardrobe of Mr. Stokes. This piece of bravado, however, led to the detection of two persons named Shea and Murray.

A child six years old, named Margaret Moylan, whose parents are in Australia, was burned to death on the 20th ult. in a field at Garbally, in the King's County.

The Kilkenny Journal states that Kilkenny is still a proclaimed district, and that no person is allowed to carry arms without the license of a magistrate.

It is with sincere regret, says the Cork Examiner, we have to announce the death of our brave and respected fellow-citizen, Lieut. James Martin Sullivan, formerly of the 34th, and late 19th Regiment of Foot, which took place at his residence in Queenstown. He was one of the bravest officers in his country's service, and one of the most ill-requited. Before joining his own regiment he was present in the Peninsula, as an attached volunteer, at the battle of Talavera ; he was present as Ensign of the Light Company of the 34th Regiment, commanded by Capt. Faunt, at the battle of Busaco ; and also present as Lieutenant of said company commanded by Capt. Fauncourt, with the second division covering the siege of Badajos ; also, at the surprise of the French division commanded by General Girard, at Arroya-de-Molina, on which occasion the Duke D'Aremberg, with the staff, band and drums of the 34th regiment of the French line, fell into his hands, he having had command of the advance guard on that occasion. The band and drums remained in statu quo for a considerable length of time, with the English 34th regiment, and on the occasion of Lieut. Sullivan having been honored by an invitation (many years after, the 34th Regiment having then quartered in Cork) to celebrate the above heroic action, the French band and drums were ordered into the room by Col. Stuart and played round the mess table, after the health of their old brother officer was drank, and a highly eulogistic compliment being paid him by Capt. Norcott, with whom he had served in the 94th Regiment for a considerable time. He was also at the storming of the forts and destruction of the tete du pont at Albuera, where he volunteered and led the forlorn hope against the fort of Mara Vita. After the Peninsular war he exchanged into the 19th Foot, and embarked for India, where he was present at the taking of Candy, in the Island of Ceylon, under the command of Lieut.-General Brownrigge. With this series of services (which alone should have commanded the common-place requital of a situation given every day by the red tapists to the relatives of those who never earned them) in conjunction with the services of his son in the trenches of Sebastopol, and at the Redan, he memorialed the late Commander-in-Chief for a commission for said son, and was most graciously refused, but kindly permitted to pay twenty pounds for his discharge. This refusal from a man who witnessed the bravery of the Lieutenant in the Peninsula!!! and almost at the same time promoted his own son, who never saw a shot fired, and promoted his nephew, the notorious and larking Ernest Vane Tempest, from the Infantry to the Cavalry, from which he was ignominiously dismissed, after the death of the Commander-in-Chief. Why was he thus refused ? Was it because in one of his son's graphic letters from the scene of action to the Press of his native city, the Times and Daily News, he merely stated the truth—that hundreds were sent to perform at the great Redan, that which thousands would have found difficulty in achieving. We had almost forgotten to say that he received the tremendously enriching reward of a medal and clasps for Peninsular bravery, as also did his son for his conduct at the great Redan.

Among not the least melancholy instances of the reverse, says the correspondent of the London Herald, which have overtaken members of all grades of society in Ireland during a few brief years, one has just come to light which has caused considerable regret here. Every one connected with the Dublin press at the time of the repeal agitation must remember the attention and undeviating courtesy of Mr. Francis Dwyer, the assistant secretary of the Association, and for some years private secretary to the late Mr. O'Connell. After fruitless endeavors to obtain employment of any kind, Mr. Dwyer, less fortunate than many of the patriots who figured prominently upon the stage of the Corn Exchange, is now, it seems, an applicant for admission within the cheerless walls of a Dublin workhouse. This is not creditable to the chiefs of the party—or clique, rather—who, in the hurry to provide for themselves, have altogether ignored the almost hereditary pretensions of a hard worked servant. Dwyer's father filled the post of Secretary to the Catholic Association up to the passing of the Relief Act of 1829, and had been previously one of the leading merchants in Cork.

The Revenue Police are actively engaged throughout Ireland in suppressing illicit distillation. At Swinford, county Mayo, under the command of Lieutenant Graves, they have succeeded in capturing three vessels containing about two hundred and thirty gallons of pot-ale They were hid under ground in the townland of Ballinaleck. Besides unearthing the above, the 33d party have detected several other places where illicit distilled liquor was usually hidden. Through the exertions of Lieut. Graves the system of defrauding the public revenue has almost been suppressed in the once notorious districts of Gallen and Costelloe.

At nine o'clock on the night of the 17th ult. the Brig Eliza, from Llanelly, for Cork, was driven in on Tramore Strand, close to the Race Standhouse : crew saved, and the cargo, (coal) will be landed safe. At ten o'clock same night the pilot cutter Gannet, and the brigantine Bolina were in collision off Waterford harbor, and both lost spars.

It was in consequence of the late decision of the Lord Chancellor in regard to Banks, that the run was made upon the National Bank in many parts of Ireland, but there was gold forthcoming to meet all demands.

A woman named Mary Donoghoe was recently arrested in Limerick on a charge of murdering her infant child, as well as concealing its birth. The woman is a widow and advanced in years.

Plunkett Kenny, Esq., has been appointed High Sheriff of the County Monaghan, and has given his brother, Mr. Charles Kenny, the appointment of Sub-sheriff.

The Rev. Dr. Cahill will visit Kilkenny on the 2d of February, 1857, when he will lecture for the Young Men's Society, established in that city.

Miss Catherine Hayes has in the kindest manner, promised to sing gratuitously for the benefit of the Musical Fund Association of Dublin.

A statement copied from the Limerick Chronicle into the Evening Post to the effect that the Rev. Mr. Doyle, of Ramsgrange had gone to Australia, is unfounded.

The inhabitants of Cootehill, county Cavan, under the Towns Improvement Act, have been allowed the privilege of electing nine commissioners.

A Gas Consumers' Company is being formed at Waterford—capital, £6,000, in £5 share.

John Malcomson, Esq., is appointed a Director of the Tramore Railway, in room of William Dargan, Esq., resigned.

During the past year, the deposits in the Waterford Savings Bank exceeded the withdrawals by the sum of £1,563.

Answers to Correspondents.

P Patrick of Canada West.—There are a class of men in every community, who take a peculiar interest in the honor and morality of their neighbors—who are always finding fault with somebody, and mourning over national degeneracy or individual depravity. Those carpers and moralists who are so exceedingly jealous of the honor and reputation of other men, are generally very lax regarding their own. The action of General Walker in Nicaragua, has been made the subject of severe censure by this class of pseudo philanthropists, and we ourselves have received an indignant protest from an unknown correspondent, against our support of Walker.

He calls him a "pirate," and his followers "assassins," and asserts that the same plea, put forward for Walker's entrance into Nicaragua, might be urged by "Cæsar and his Romans, to justify their invasion of Britain," and by "the Saxons to palliate their forcible occupation of that country" by the Danes, and the English for the invasion of Ireland. Our correspondent must be waking from a philanthropic dream. There is no parity in the cases he cites. The Britons did not send for Cæsar to relieve them from the incubus of an indolent and plundering aristocracy; neither were the Saxon robbers invited by any party to commit indiscriminate slaughter and robbery in Britain; neither were the pirate Danes solicited to invade Ireland, and Strongbow was sent to restore a petty king who fled from the vengeance of an outraged people. Strongbow was never elected President of an Irish republic, through the ballot-box by the almost unanimous vote of a grateful people, as Walker was in Nicaragua. Such comparisons are ridiculous. General William Walker—whose soldiers are not all "Yankees," as our unknown lecturer asserts, two-thirds of them being Irish—was invited by the democratic party of Nicaragua, to aid them in striking off the yoke of the aristocracy, or the landlords of the country, for which service certain portions of the public domain, the property of no individual, was to be granted to his followers. Right gallantly did he execute the work, and for the first time during a period of many years, civil strife had ceased in Nicaragua and an era of prosperity was about to dawn. But the jealous monarchical goverments of Europe, dreading the establishment of a strong republican state in Central America, incited the neighboring governments to make war on Nicaragua; and England dispatched a fleet to San Juan del Norte to superintend the Costa Rican invasion. The British Government supplied the Costa Ricans with rifles, and gave such other diplomatic aid and comfort as emboldened them to proclaim war against Nicaragua. The latest act of this British fleet was to aid, by the use of their gunboats, the Costa Ricans in capturing the steamers on the San Juan river, and stopping all legitimate and peaceful traffic across the Isthmus with California. This high-handed outrage upon vessels carrying the American Flag should not be allowed to pass with impunity. It demands the speedy action of our government.

As well might our correspondent say, if General Walker accepted an invitation from the Democracy of Ireland to aid them in overturning the present state of affairs in that country—of plucking up landlord tyranny by the roots—that he was a pirate and a robber. If, instead of going to Nicaragua, General William Walker had landed in the bay of Galway, and swept like a hurricane through Atherney's crumbling walls and over fortress-crowned Athlone, and planted the Sunburst on Dublin Castle, England would call him pirate, robber, filibuster; but Irishmen would, most undoubtedly, make him the first President of our Irish Republic, and reward his followers with a few of the located domains or shooting-grounds of the expelled landlords, and no Irishman would be base enough to re-echo the cry of pirate, rebel, filibuster.

If the doctrine of our correspondent were acted upon, the world would soon be reduced to a state of barbarism, and old wrongs would remain for ever unredressed. Columbus should never have discovered a new world—the Spaniards never occupied South and Central America, the war-paths and hunting-grounds of the Red Indians. Where savages scalped and butchered each other, should be war paths and hunting-grounds still, and the golden harvest which supplied aid to Ireland in the hour of her tribulation should have never ripened in the sun.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1857.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Captain Maurice Walsh, of New-York, having set out to travel through America, is authorized to collect advertisements and subscriptions for this paper. Captain Walsh has our written authority, which he will present to those who may not be personally acquainted with him. A list of the subscribers' names, together with the respective sums paid by each, will be published each week.

THE FIGHT FOR FREEDOM—SWITZERLAND IN ARMS—THE WHITE CROSS OF THE ALPS—THE BLACK EAGLE OF THE RHINE.

Once more comes the shout of Liberty from the heart of Europe. Once more the arming of the People is announced from the defiles and summits of the Alps. Once more, as in Rutli of old, do the men of the Finsterwalden lakes and forests raise their right hands to Heaven, and swear to do as Tell of Burglen did. And once more the huge masses, lying dumb and stricken under bayonet and padlock, in workshop, mine, and dungeon, wake up everywhere, for the night is past and the day hath come again.

All other questions lose their interest in presence of this supreme one, which renews the heroic spirit and historic glories of the Swiss republic. The Isle of Serpents is of no more importance than the Isle of Man. Canton may be strewed in ashes all over the Flowery Kingdom, and no one heed the waste. Ferdinand of Naples might be flung down the throat of his own Vesuvius, and the accident excite little more than a paragraph, an ambiguous sigh, or a shrug of the shoulder. The plundering expedition against Persia—the red storm sweeping down the Gulf of Ormus upon the bearded Shah, with all the perplexities it portends is forgotten. The independence of Switzerland is menaced—the menace is trampled under foot, as the Bavarians were trampled in the Tyrol—and for Republicanism the game is once more a-foot. This is the event which overshadows every other. This the event which concentrates the gaze, the sympathies, the enthusiasm, the hopes of millions.

But with Switzerland it is an old story. Ever since the Duke of Austria made peace with the ancient Cantons of Schwytz, Uri, Unterwalden, Sevyern, Zurich, Glaris, Zug and Berne, over the grave of Gessler, and the wreck of his nobility, Switzerland has had to stand many a fierce blow from prince and pirate. The trophies of Miltiades disturbed the sleep of his rival on the field of Marathon. The homely wealth, virtue, happiness, and freedom of that beautiful nation seated among the Glaciers, has for centuries provoked the envy, cupidity and hatred of the crowned heads that fume and glitter about it, along the rivers to which it gives birth, and in the wide plains below. They hate it as Lucifer cursed the sun. It is to them a perpetual reproach and admonition. To those they hold in check—whose life and limb they own—it is an imperishable lesson, ever in the grandest tones inculcating manhood, the worthlessness of courts and King-craft, the wise economy, and productiveness, the comeliness, and pure glory of Republicanism.

Hardly had this Duke of Austria been eaten by the worms in the royal grave-yard at Vienna, when his son Leopold, laughing at his oath, as though it had been a drunken promise, renewed the war which his father had begun. Ravaging the country as he went along, he appeared before the walls of Sempach. Rutschman of Reinach, who commanded the advanced guard, mounted on a cart full of ropes, threatened to hang all the Burghers before sunset. How this threat was met, the world has been told. Every schoolboy knows it. Until the moon turns to blood, and the seas give up their dead, it will be recited in the schools. Orators—the precursors of revolution—kindling the people into heroism—have many a time recited it. Generation after generation, for the same high purpose, it will be repeated.

The Swiss confederates did not muster 1,300 men. They were miserably armed. Long swords and halberds were their only weapons. Leopold headed upward of 5,000 knights and noblemen. They were the pride of Austria—as gallant gentlemen as ever flung a gauntlet down. Yet, with all their grace, and strength and splendor,—with all their jewelled trappings and coroneted helmets—the hot July sun which blazed that day over Sempach, went down upon their death-bed. Two days after, 2,000 of them slept in their shrouds at Konigsfelden, with Leopold, their leader. Once more, over the Matterhorn, over the black peaks of Mount Pilate, over the eternal snows of St. Gotthard, went the cry of victory, and for a century no robber hand was raised against the white eagle of the Alps.

In 1496 Maximilian, Emperor of Germany, addresses himself to the Swiss deputies who accompany him to Inspruck.

"You are rebels to the Empire," quoth his Imperial Majesty, "and will oblige me at last to pay you a visit in person, sword in hand."

"Your Majesty," the Deputies made answer, with singular composure, "should abstain from such a visit, for the Swiss are rude-fashioned men, who have not yet learned the respect due to crowned heads."

Maximilian was too thickly covered with gold and velvet to take the hint. He was stupefied in purple. Not until he had lost 20,000 men, and hundreds of towns and villages, did he mend his manners. In a tone far different from that he had used at Inspruck, he yielded to the Swiss the high judicial power in Thurgau he had up to this disputed, and acknowledged, unequivocally, their independence as a nation. From this time and for three centuries after, neither Austria, nor the German Empire, nor any other Absolutism or Kingship, asserted any pretensions against the liberties of the Swiss Commonwealth. During those three centuries, that healthy and robust Commonwealth stood proudly up in the midst of the European nationalities, without stain, domestic calamity, or foreign insolence to hurt it.

The Thirty Years' War passed over it. Not a pine upon its mountain-slopes was shaken by that tempest. It was not until the French Directory was installed, that its peaceful and prosperous integrity was disturbed. The possession of the Swiss Alps, as a military necessity, was the ostensible object of the French invasion of 1799. Historians deliberately assert, that the robbery of the treasuries of Berne, Zurich, and Basle, where it was notorious considerable sums had been accumulated, instigated the Directory to the violation of the soil which should have been held sacred by them. Whatever the motives, the French and Austrians fought for foothold, inch by inch, upon it, and it was not until 1801, after terrible havoc had been dealt, that, consequent on the peace of Luneville, the independence of the ancient Helvetic Republic was by France and Austria recognized.

And so, striding over epochs and centuries, we come to 1836, when Severin, the Representative of Russia, and Bombelles, the Envoy of Austria, conspired against the only citadel of Freedom on the broad waste of Europe. According to Louis Blanc, the indifference of Morier, the English Minister, and the imbecility of M. de Montebello, permitted that conspiracy to prevail. Switzerland, these conspirators said, must no longer be the asylum of political refugees. It is in Switzerland, said Bombelles, that the enemies of Monarchy hold their regicide school, and this bloodthirsty school must be closed without delay.

The end of it was, that the Refugees—Louis Napoleon amongst the number—had to cross the border. "Never"—exclaims the splendid writer of the Dix Ans—"was the independence of a free State more openly set aside, more shamelessly trampled under foot." Justly did the Bons Sens of Paris write, that the Swiss Diet, when appealed to by M. de Montebello in support of the demand of Austria and Russia, might have reminded the Ambassador of Louis Phillippe, that his Master, when a sufferer under revolutionary tempests, was too thankful to find food and shelter in those tranquil valleys, which all parties, conquerors or conquered, ought alike to respect as a sanctuary, protected by the conscience of mankind.

And thus has that noble little Commonwealth—that only true Society in all Europe—been worried, age after age, under some one pretext or another, by the brigands and despots that surround it. Yet so, has it faced, repelled, and triumphed over all. For the good God, without whose knowledge the sparrow does not fall, has given unto the people of Switzerland—to her maids and matrons—to her youths and old men—the heart and arm of the giant, and their home among the mountains is impregnable.

And so shall the White Cross be seen high in the Heavens above the Black Eagle of the Rhine, should the day of battle come again.

FABENS ON NICARAGUA.

The friends of Nicaraguan Liberation, as well as those merely desirous for information on the subject, who looked forward to to Mr. Fabens' lecture with feelings of satisfactory anticipations, were not disappointed. The distinguished lecturer, lately United States Charge d'Affaires to Nicaragua, is peculiarly well qualified by education, personal observation and sympathy to make a reliable statement, and to do justice to the higher necessities of his theme. Consequently, the discourse was an exceedingly pleasant and timely one, furnishing us with points which we shall freely give for our readers.

Nicaragua has an area of about 100,000 square miles, equal to 64,000,000 of acres, being more than double the extent of territory comprised in the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Her population is estimated at 250,000 souls, 10,000 of which are whites; the the remaining 240,000 are composed of mixed races. The surface of Nicaragua is agreeably diversified with hills and valleys, rolling plains, rich table lands, broad lakes and numerous rivers. Between the Great Basin and the Pacific, the chain of the Cordilleras sinks to an almost imperceptible ridge. On the Atantic side of the lake, the peak of Ometepec, rising near the centre of the lake itself, is said to have an altitude of six thousand feet. Approaching Nicaragua from the Atlantic, long before we catch sight of the low, swampy and heavily timbered lands of the Mosquito coast, we behold the peaks of Chontales and Costago, in Costa Rica, towering in the hazy distance. But on landing in San Juan we are saddened by the change of view. As far as the eye can reach, one beholds nothing but the low, sandy or alluvial tracts covered with an almost impenetrable mass of vapor, shrouding tropical vegetation. British filibusters, nicknamed merchants and mahogany cutters, with their marauding bands of Carib Indians, have fought successfully the wild beasts and the wilderness, and have obtained for themselves luxuries and opulence.

San Juan de Nicaragua, is not only the sole Atlantic seaport of Nicaragua, but also of Costa Rica, and a road is now in process of construction which, when completed, will bring all the produce of Costa Rica to San Juan, in lieu of Punta Arenas, on the Pacific, where it has heretofore been sent. A great drawback to the commercial prosperity of Nicaragua is her lack of good roads, bridges and canals. The only road in the country worthy of that name is the one constructed by the late Accessory Transit Company, from Virgin Bay to San Juan del Sur, a distance of twelve miles. It is now complete and in admirable order and it proves what may be done by native labor, directed by Northern intelligence and energy.

In the low lands on the Mosquito shore, as well as in the dense forests along the banks of the San Juan and Indian rivers, there is, more or less, intermittent fever and ague to be expected by new settlers. Mr. Fabens believes, that by proper attention to diet and other sanitary precautions, a Northerner may soon become acclimated, and in nine cases out of ten, escape an attack of fever. The attacks are ordinarily slight, easily broken, and very seldom attended with fatal results. During his two years' residence in San Juan de Nicaragua, Mr. Fabens found the inhabitants usually as healthy as in the North.

The atmosphere of the Lake is buoyant, and exhilarating.

The seasons in Nicaragua are the wet and dry, their limits varying according to the locality. In the larger portions of the state the wet season may be set down as commencing in May, and continuing till November; this, however, is ordinarily interrupted by a period of clear weather in the months of July and August, the showers during the first period are less intense and of shorter duration than the latter. During the dry seasons the heat upon the plains and lowlands is severe. A great mistake has been made by many in supposing that the country is more unhealthy during the rainy than dry season. Capt. Henderson, of the British navy, wrote home—"The wet season, as it is emphatically denominated, is not considered the season of disease here; it is totally otherwise in the whole of the West Indies. At the beginning of November, northers begin to blow, and last, with little variation, till March, during which time the mornings and evenings are of a pleasant coolness, and what in this country is understood to be a wet month, might be considered as a November day in England."

Mr. Fabens characterizes the commercial and agricultural resources of the State as "immense." The vegetable and mineral kingdom are equally dazzling to the view. There is an abundance of horses, cows, bullocks, sheep and goats, which are chiefly raised for the value of their hides. There are numerous wild animals whose skins are commercially valuable. Birds and fish of almost every kind abound. Among the staple articles of production may be mentioned sugar, cotton, coffee, cocoa, indigo, tobacco, rice and Indian corn. The sugar cane is a native product of Nicaragua, and differs from that of Asia or the West Indies, and is said to be equally as good and productive. The cotton of Nicaragua is very good and productive; the same with the cocoa. The indigo and tobacco are equal in quality to those of Brazil. The mines are of fabulous richness. Gold and silver is found in great quantities. Such is Nicaragua —the "star of empire," which had reached its western limit in golden California, has entered upon its returning march. There are homes for the homeless; peace, order and contentment will take the place of strife, anarchy and terror; there are new fields for our pent-up capital and enterprise; independence and competency for ill-paid laborers. Mr. Everett, in his speech in the Senate on the first of March, 1853, said that if it had not been for political dissensions in Nicaragua, and if she had been occupied by a population like that which turned the waters of Lake Erie into the bed of the Hudson river at Albany, there would have been at that moment three-masted vessels of twenty feet draught navigating the Lake of Nicaragua on their way to the Pacific Ocean.

TREACHERY IN THE CAMP—DEFEAT OF COLONEL FORNEY.

In the great contest for the Presidency which terminated last November so triumphantly for the Union, of all the eminent men who fought in the Democratic ranks, none rendered such effective service as Colonel Forney, of Philadelphia.

The State election, which immediately preceded the Presidential, was the event on which the national destinies depended. The result of that election being determined, it was easy to foretell the issue of the more momentous conflict which was to follow. Both parties admitted this. Both parties, we say; for Mr. Fillmore and his handful of followers were of no account. No one thought of them. Buchanan and Fremont were the only antagonists in the field.

Had the Pennsylvania State election resulted in favor of the Black Republican ticket, the Fourth of March would have given the Hero of the Rocky Mountains possession of the White House. The bravest troops yield to a panic. The defeat of the Democracy in Pennsylvania would have inevitably spread dismay among the Democracy throughout the States.

To avert this catastrophe, efforts the most assiduous, generous and vehement, were required. By the concentration of his forces upon a given point, Napoleon acheived his greatest victories. The safety of the Union demanded, that upon the Northern Sectionalists in Pennsylvania the whole power of the Democracy should be brought to bear. The result proves that the necessity was adequately met. To that result, Colonel Forney, as we have said, with an incomparable ability contributed. Deprived of him, the Democracy might not have been beaten. The American Democracy depends for its vitality on no one man, whatever be his spirit, activity or genius. But, it is not only true, but essentially just to say, that without him—without Colonel Forney—without his experience, indomitable industry and pluck, the influence he exercises and the eloquence of which he is the master—the victory in Pennsylvania would not have been so thorough and complete.

For his services at so critical a moment, in a contest so vital and eventful, he deserved well of the Republic. Praises, it is true, fell fast and thick upon him. The people, everywhere, spoke of him with enthusiasm. Amid the huzzas, the artillery, the torches and triumphal music, which published to the world the national victory of November, his name was heard. It was the burden of many a song. It was the toast of many a Thanksgiving feast.

But the popular acknowledgments should not have stopped here. It is a shallow gratitude which votes funeral-cars and monuments to public men when dead, and is silent or reluctant whilst they live, and have the ripe intellect to appreciate high positions of trust, and other rewards for acts of paramount utility to the State. An opportunity a few days ago occurred, which enabled the Democracy of Pennsylvania to reprove this practice. of posthumous compensation.

Now, when he is in the flower of life, they might have sent their favorite Champion to the Senate. This would have been a distinction commensurate with his services, his masterly intelligence, and the promise he gives of a fruitful career in statesmanship. The opportunity has been scandalously abused.

Not by the Democracy of his State. Far from it. The perfidy by which Colonel Forney was victimized at Harrisburg has been replied to by the Democracy—from the Delaware to Lake Erie, from the Chestnut Ridge to Damascus—with a shout of execration. It is not alone the Democratic candidate for the Senate who has been betrayed. The entire Democratic party of the Union has been infamously swindled. Three traitors sold themselves as slaves to the Black Republicans—sold the pass, and over their yoked necks let in the enemy.

Thus has the stream of public honors been diverted from its course. Thus for a time, has it been made foul. Thus has it borne down through Pennsylvania Avenue, to the gates of the Capital, a certain Crœsus of the Quaker City, who, with all his argosies would have never got there, had honesty and patriotism willed it.

EUROPEAN INTERFERENCE.

LETTER FROM GEN. CAZNEAU, OF TEXAS, TO A DISTINGUISHED SENATOR, ON THE COURSE OF ENGLAND IN NICARAGUA, AND THE SUSPENSION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAWS.

Dear Sir—The steamers on the San Juan River, belonging to the Nicaragua Line to California—and entirely owned by American citizens—have been seized by the Costa Ricans and probably destroyed. They were taken while in the peaceful and lawful prosecution of their business as passenger boats, under the protection of the flag of the United States, and of treaty guarantees of the most unequivocal distinctness.

If Costa Rica was not under any obligation to respect the property and commercial rights of our citizens, the Clayton-Bulwer treaty most emphatically defines that it was the duty of England to defend the free navigation of the river San Juan, with her whole force then present, for it is an important section of the Nicaragua inter-ocean transit which she is bound to "protect from interruption and detention."

In return for the vast and unwarrantable concession made to England in that treaty in the abandonment by our government of the Monroe doctrine, and our solemn pledge never to occupy or take possession of any part of Central America, that Power bound itself in the strongest terms, to protect all the Isthmus transits from "delay, detention, interruption or confiscation." Her own commerce demanded an open and secure passage to the Pacific; but as Panama is sufficient for her uses, it is possible that feeling sure of holding that transit in her own command, she is more than willing to have the Nicaragua route suppressed. This transit is nearer the United States, and liable to be controlled by American institutions, interests and policy; and this annoys England.

Whatever the British Cabinet and the habitual defenders of the British system of anti-American policy may say in excuse of the fact, it is undeniable that this route to California has been three times assailed by the Costa Rican allies of England, and that on this last occasion American steamers were piratically seized, the route broken up, and the transit passengers turned to Panama from this their direct and lawful path to California. This outrage on American citizens was undoubtedly arranged under the cover of the British fleet, at the mouth of the river.

It is not supposed that the commander of her Britannic Majesty's fleet was imprudent enough to lend open aid to the plunder of a quarter of a million of American property, and the destruction of a commercial route, which his government was pledged, by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, to protect from "interruption or confiscation." He only applied the requisite assistance, and lent his judicious connivance to the perpetration of this bold robbery, of which he knew—if he did not plan the details—long in advance. This plan was whispered in New-York, and I have good reason to believe was also perfectly understood, and many think warmly approved, for personal and pecuniary reasons, at Washington, by at least one member of the Cabinet. We know the means to effect it were permitted to leave this city, while honest emigrants, who anxiously desired to accept the free farms offered to them on the rich public domain of Nicaragua, were compelled by threats of legal persecution to forego this ready path to an independent home.

If England was inclined to respect the obligations of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, her fleet would have been charged to maintain the freedom of the Nicaragua transit, instead of conniving at its destruction; and our citizens have reason to appeal to their representatives in Congress, as we now do to you, to cause inquiry to be made whether our lives and property on the Isthmus are to be protected, or whether the Clayton-Bulwer treaty —and still more the Marcy-Palmerston treaty now before the Senate—means an absolute and unconditional surrender of every class of American rights in Central America to the will and policy of England.

Costa Rica was armed and incited by England to invade the soil of Nicaragua upon the plea of driving out Walker, when the whole country was in a state of perfect repose, and its hopes and industry had begun to revive under the Walker-Rivas administration. That this obedience to the new government was not the result of fear or force, is evident, as Gen. Walker had then but a few hundred Americans—all told—in the country, and the Costa Ricans were repulsed from the Transit, with the assistance of the native citizens.

The second attempt, in November last, to intercept and plunder the California treasure-train, was in very deducible connection with the recommendations forwarded by H. B. M.'s Consul, Mr. Manning, to H. B. M.'s "allies" in Guatemala and San Salvador. Even the bold assumptions of England were silenced by the discovery of their intrigues, and the withdrawal of Mr. Manning's exequatur and his expulsion from Nicaragua by Gen. Walker were submitted to without a word, rather than take the chances of the exposures of British complicity in these assaults on the United States commerce which this correspondence might betray to the world.

The seizure of the Transit river steamers under the eyes, and with the positive connivance of the British fleet at San Juan, is the seal of this war on American interests. There is a double object in this robbery—it is intended to cut off supplies and reinforcements to Walker, and so leave him and all the Americans in Nicaragua to be "crushed out," and at the same time destroy this American Transit.

There are many Texans among them, and we ask and expect Senator Rusk to demand of our government, in their name, and in the name of humanity, and in the name of American honor and interest, to protect our trade and travel on the Isthmus, and check this banditti system of wholesale robbery and murder.

Why is it that after having conceded to England the right to interfere and dictate in American affairs, we have no Minister on the ground to watch over and defend the few rights our government has left us? At this crisis the presence of Mr. Wheeler is most necessary on the Isthmus of Nicaragua; and it is the manifest duty of the President to send him back to his post by steam, and to force a clear passage for him up the river. Not to do this, is to deliberately doom to death two or three hundred women and children who have followed the fortunes of husbands and fathers to the scene of conflict. The inexplicable recall of our Minister at the critical moment, when the life of every American on the Isthmus was openly threatened by the "allies" of England, and when such as fell in their hands were instantly butchered, is in itself a gross neglect of duty, and may well be suspected as the premeditated withdrawal of the only check on the "crushing out" of the Americans in Nicaragua. There is now present no inconvenient witness, nor official defender, if American interests are outraged and American citizens murdered in mass by the open ferocity of Costa Rica or by the secret artifices of England.

Our unoffending travellers are entitled to this protection, even if we abandon our fellow-citizens, now serving under Walker's banner in Central American regeneration, to the knives of the Costa Ricans. These men are no lawless oppressors. They were invited by Nicaragua to assist in redeeming her from the convulsions of civil war, and the misery of an anarchy that had covered the land with blood, ruin, and desolation. The state lay a helpless and hopeless wreck on the ocean of civilization, and if the skill and courage of Walker saves the shattered craft, he is well entitled to salvage.

The war against the Americans was not made by the Nicaraguans, but by the states around it upon European instigation. And the entire British press, with a certain portion of our own, maintain the necessity of checking American progress on the Isthmus, and it becomes the representatives of the American people to inquire, how far it is politic and proper for our government to sustain this European plan of operations.

Let Congress meet this European interference, and the hostile atrocities of Costa Rica and the other barbarous "allies of England," by a suspension of our neutrality laws of 1818. Simply suspend these pro-European laws, until this class of unfriendly states—for whom they were expressly framed to serve—shall themselves respect the obligations of an honorable neutrality, and give us ample reparation for the past, and such guaranties for the future as will evermore secure the lives and interests of our citizens from a repetition of these outrages in our American waters and highways. WILLIAM L. CAZNEAU.

POSTCRIPT.

Dr. Shelton Mackenzie is now engaged in writing the Life of Henry Grattan, the Father of Irish Independence. It will include sketches of Grattan's illustrious contemporaries, with a strong infusion of anecdote. It will be published by Redfield, New-York, in one volume, to correspond with Dr. MacKenzie's edition of "The Life of Curran."

F. W. Pollard, A.M., will lecture before the Catholic Library Benefit Society, at Hope Chapel, on the 27th inst. The subject of the lecture has had an European reputation, unequalled, perhaps, in the annals of Church or State. The lecturer lifts the curtain which conceals from the common gaze the historic panorama of by-gone centuries, and brings forth one of the great bulwarks of the Church, the humbler of king's, the trampler upon royal privileges, Pope Gregory the Seventh—the great Hildebrand.

On Thursday evening, January 29, Doctor Ives will lecture at the Broadway Tabernacle on "Church and State charities," for the benefit of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul. It is a subject of deep interest to the community at large of interest to the philanthropist and the statesman, It involves questions that have been long debated by able men in both hemispheres. Apart from the ability of the learned and popular lecturer. and the intrinsic merits of the subject to be discussed, the charity to whose benefit the proceeds are to be appropriated cannot fail to attract a crowded audience.

The Royal Mail steamship has brought us dates from Europe to the 3d inst., being three days later than those received by the Washington. The Overland mail to England confirms the report of the bombardment of Canton by the English fleet. The U. S. ship Portsmouth had also opened her broadsides upon a Chinese fort in consequence of an insult upon the American flag. If England be determined to have a slice of China, in addition to her other Eastern appropriations, the United States are determined to have their own share also.

The Congress at Paris have re-assembled, and the Prussian-Swiss difficulty remained unsettled, but hopes were entertained of an adjustment without a resort to arms. The crumbling despots cannot afford to make war upon Republicanism, even in Europe. There is no other news of importance.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

AN ELECTION SCENE IN AUSTRALIA—ARISTOCRATS AND DEMOCRATS—AN APOTHECARY THEREABOUTS—THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH UPON WHEELS—FAT AND LEAN CELEBRITIES.

"Whose colors are these?"

"The blue, sir?"

"Yes," I continued, "whose are the blue?"

"Young Mr. Wagstaff's," said the hostler, "and his Committee-room's here, if you like to walk in."

"Presently, John."

"You'll have as much drink as you like, sir," said John, "if you'll only pin the blue rosette to your coat."

Saying which, John took a crumpled favor out of his waistcoat pocket, and, handing it to me, led off the pony (which had, by-the-by, a blue rosette under each ear,) to the stable.

The front door of the Scotch Thistle hung back, wide open. It was an unusual circumstance, and one denoting some great event; for, generally speaking, it was half closed; the entrance most used being the one in the gable-end, which led to the tap or bar-room. In the passage were prodigious signs of life. There were countless gentlemen in various costumes. Some in black broadcloth; others in blue flannel shirts; others in plaid shooting-jackets of different patterns. Some in shining silk hats of the latest importation; others in white felt wide-awakes; and a large proportion in knowing little straw hats, bound with black tape. But all were wearing the blue sash and blue rosette; and were tumbling out of one parlor and into another; and rushing up stairs and out to the yard at the back, where a great red coach was being put through a toilet worthy of the day.

Two strong partisans were knotting a number of streamers to the low iron railing of the roof; a postillion, in drab velveteen knee-breeches, was lashing the Union-Jack to the brass handle of the boot; whilst the old post-master of the village, with the assistance of the local coffin-maker and pound-keeper, was making fast a tall pole, with the flag of the Australian League mounted on it, to the back of the coachman's box. Sitting on the large stone trough, with his back against the pump, was Bill Cooper, the carpenter, shaping a cross-piece for a banner of white glazed calico, which bore the motto,

"Alexander conquered! So shall we."

And beyond, near the dog-house, (with the old dim-eyed mastiff, his chain quite slack, drowsily looking out with one eye across his nose at the entire proceeding) was Mr. Redwig, the barber, stuffing a red hunting-coat, and a pair of doe-skin knee-breeches with straw; and with such graceful auxiliaries as a cocked hat, a goose's wing, a pair of Hessian boots, very much worn at the heels, completing an effigy of his Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony—that distinguished officer, a great lover of field sports, being generally considered hostile to the interests of young Mr. Wagstaff.

Whilst these and other preparations were occupying the attention of the busy and excited parties in the yard at the back of the Scotch Thistle, the crowd in front of that hospitable establishment, and, indeed, all through the village, was growing more bulky and alarming every instant. Over the bridge—across the Macquarie river, and down the main road from Tunbridge, and in from the Bush, from beyond Beaufront, and Syndal, and Ellinthorpe—farmers, and sheep-owners, and shepherds, and sawyers, and kangaroo-hunters who had not been down in a settlement for a twelvemonth, and the wives and daughters of the wealthier settlers for miles round, were flocking in. Some in bullock-wagons, fitted up with cosy sofa-cushions and pillows for the ladies. Some in carriages, London built, with griffins and apes, and mermaids (all indicative of family descent) and other enigmas on the door panels. The carriages, for the most part, drawn by Bob, or Dick, or Towzer, the plough-horses; the fair occupants shining in ribbons and bonnets brought out from England by the last old London liner. Some again, in great old family gigs, or chaise-carts, or dog-carts. Most of the shepherds trudging through the sand and dust, in their steel-shod ankle-boots, smoking short black pipes, with red and yellow neckerchiefs swinging loosely about their broad brown throats and faces. The kangaroo-hunters afoot, too, in their coarse leather leggings, and brown jackets turned up with fur. And then, the young settlers, on their stock-hunters, swinging their heavy-lashed riding-whips, throwing their legs out of the stirrups—in the easiest, freest, wildest fashion, coming down upon the town. Young, handsome, hearty, daring fellows—fellows who could ride with a Cossack any day, and fear little to meet a Camanche with his rifle.

Then there is Mr. Gibson, the store-keeper, and "dealer in general merchandise" over the way, in his shirt-sleeves and spectacles, putting up his shutters, having made every other arrangement for a complete holiday. And there is old Tom Tucker, the blacksmith, locking up his forge, and bidding for a front seat in Billy Bolton's, the rich farmer's, four-wheeled gig, which had just pulled up to ask for letters at the post-office—the post-master having left his eldest daughter, Aloysius Josephine, in charge, for the day, of her Majesty's mail. And there is Mrs. Bolton herself, who always prefers riding, mounted on Poll, (Poll that has been on the farm at Jacob's Sugar Loaf these sixteen years)—the jolly old lady all in blue! Blue skirt, blue bodice, blue gloves, and a superabundance of blue ribbons in her bonnet—the bonnet being a dusky white beaver of capacious proportions.

Macduff, the baker, has a blue flag flying from the roof of his bakery, and so has the sexton of the Established Church, for young Mr. Wagstaff is one of the most respectable of the churchwardens; and so has Mrs. Cecilia Bunn, the Temperance lecturer, who, on Sunday evening last, delivered a most touching discourse in the vestry, concerning the three missionaries "that were baked," she said, "early last spring by the 'eathens of the Veegee hilands." Mrs. Cecilia Bunn is a widow (a widow these three months only), but, nevertheless, remains true to the principles of her ever-to-be-lamented and never-to-be-forgotten husband, whose principles were identical with those of Mr. Wagstaff—Mr. Wagstaff having employed Mr. Athanasius Bunn, as shoemaker, upwards of six years.

But the Wagstaff party has not entire and undisputed possession of the village, nor does the Wagstaff color prevail to the exclusion of every other.

At the further end of the street (the only street in the village) the Griffin party musters pretty strong. There is Mr. Clipper, the tombstone-cutter, for instance, out in his chaise-cart these two hours, with his wife and daughter and two sons. Mr. Clipper being the great organ of the Griffin party in the village and the surrounding country for a radius of two miles, the rest of the party wait for him to move on, before they think of it themselves.

There is Chester, the carrier, who wears cross-belts of red, and green, and yellow—the colors of Mr. Griffin, the Government candidate—and in front of his hat, just over the crape, (he's in mourning for his wife), displays an enormous cockade of the like complexions. The disconsolate but patriotic Chester has made up his mind to walk, for his best horse is lame since his last trip from Launceston, and the other wants shoeing; and old Tom Tucker, who enjoys a monopoly of the business, has sworn not to drive a nail for him till the election is over, and Wagstaff returned. Chester, though no speaker, is of vast service to his party. His accomplishments, as a long established ornament of the ring and cock-pit, are universally pronounced to be of a very high order; insomuch, indeed, that the public attribute his temporary absence in England to an injudicious exhibition of the same, some time during the Reform-bill agitation.

In one important element, however, the Government party is miserably deficient. It wants music. Wagstaff's committee has bought up every purchasable musician in the district, besides sending to Hobart Town for the Brothers of St. Cecilia, who, in marine blue jackets turned up with yellow, are destined presently to occupy, in full force and blast, the roof and back seats of the great red coach.

It is a grievous drawback for Griffin. Under the British Constitution, a band of music is an indispensable element in a parliamentary election. The nomination is dull without it; the contest ill-sustained; success impossible. The brightest lights of the British polling-booths and hustings have laid it down, that the chances of election are decidedly in favor of the party commanding the biggest drum.

Did time permit, it would be easy to dwell at some length upon the eminent advantages which, on such occasions, a band of music possesses, and the innumerable services, in various ways, it is competent to render. The instruments themselves are an invaluable addition to the force of enlightened opinion on either side, and, if skillfully employed, will be sure to elicit many notes and otherwise produce striking effects, far beyond their usual compass and attainment. I have seen an able and judicious drummer, somewhere in the south of Ireland, beat time effectively with the left drum-stick, whilst with the right hand he crushed the white hat and bewildered the brains of a portly Collector of the Port. A bassoon tightly grasped, is effective in a charge. The cymbals are speedily convertible into shields. Whilst a glance at one of the illustrations of the Pickwick Papers convinces us, that a good tenor trombone, pumped by a strong hand, is most effective in opening a passage or driving back a crowd.

With other elements of success, however, the Griffin party were well supplied. The district Constable was committed in their favor. The night before, he had, with his own hand, arrested and locked up three of Mr. Wagstaff's voters, insisting they were incapable of taking care of themselves, and recording that opinion in the fatal book, which, like the gates of the doleful region, lies open day and night for all such entries. In the eyes of many he seemed to bring the whole power of the law to bear against the interests of the Blue Cockade. Many, therefore, whose past careers peculiarly exposed them to his influence, were less enthusiastic in behalf of the Blue Cockade than they would otherwise have been; and some were known to compromise their principles and cheer against their convictions, when he was present or his approach announced.

Besides this formidable gentleman, the Griffins had secured the vote and countenance of the Medical Superintendent of the Government hospital and prison, and had also secured the vote and countenance of the Episcopalian chaplain attached to the same institutions.

The Medical Superintendent was a scholar, kept a gig, spoke precisely, and had danced at the Government House on three successive anniversaries of her Majesty's birth-day. In politics, a disciple of Mr. Canning, in religion, a staunch Romanist, in literature, a strict copyist of Dr. Blair, he was a model of moderation, morality and good taste. Republicanism he abhorred. On the floor of his hospital, he would have waved his last crutch and have died in bandages and blankets, protesting against the pernicious institutions of America. Delivered into his charge, with power to treat them as he thought fit, Cobbett, and Hunt, and other Radicals of that stamp, would have met with a fate similar to that of the Prisoner of Chillon, or Maroncelli at Speilberg. Raspail, Ledru Rollin, Kinkel, and all the more rapid progressionists of the revolutionary school, would have appropriately incurred a speedier fatality. Their mortal remains would have been, in a few days, devoted to the advancement of science. Given the colony to govern, this exemplary gentleman would have eclipsed the austere splendors of Dr. Francia, of Paraguay, and have left to Mr. Carlyle another instance of immutable severity to canonize.

As it was, his sphere and powers were unfortunately limited. His subjects were, for the most part, cripplers; and his disposable force, for carrying out his ideas of government, reduced to three watchmen, a matron, and a messenger.

His knowledge of the Scriptures (the Douay vesion) was pro-found—his knowledge of the Fathers no less profound. He took a deep interest in the Oxford movement, and had the Puseyite tracts all by heart. In controversy his efforts were incessant. Not a Bible-Meeting ever started in the colony, but the worthy doctor, putting on his spectacles, followed on the track. A dozen letters, pointed and barbed with the deadliest texts, tough with passages from Jerome and Tertulian, winged with the spirit of a Templar, went whizzing after the Chairman, and every other speaker on the occasion, through the columns (the gratuitous shooting-galleries) of some highly independent journal. On Sundays, he walked to mass, at the head of his numerous family, with an illuminated volume of hymns and meditations (bound in brass and brown velvet) in one hand, and a black walking-stick, embellished with the head of St. Dunstan, of Durham, in ivory, in the other. The Griffins had just reason to hail his accession to their ranks with the loudest canticles of joy.

The Chaplain was a man of a different type. The Doctor was thin—the Chaplain was fat. The Doctor was pale—the Chaplain was red. The Doctor above the middle height—the Chaplain five inches below it. Physic and poison, consumption and cholera, the chill of the winding-sheet, the constraint of the coffin—all were expressed in the former. Brown stout and beef, prodigious good health, the genial warmth of the English summer, all the choicest things (together with the powerful fragrance) of the English larder—all were blended in the latter. With divinity he was little troubled; still less with general literature; incomparably less with the love of the fine arts. He had the care of a motley flock; and he tended the lambs, and the ewes, and the wethers, with the easy punctuality with which the dull shepherds in the Bush watched over the sheep of a less celestial pasturage.

In early life he had broken his left leg—it had never been properly set—hence his walk was somewhat peculiar. His salary enabled him to purchase a pony phæton; enabled him, moreover, to keep a horse, a livery-servant, a coach-house and stable. The phæton was purchased at auction, and though very old and rusty, was sure and serviceable. It was a double gig, fitted up with a seat for two before, a seat for two behind, four wheels and two pair of springs. Before the Chaplain bought it, a Baronet of the United Kingdom owned it. For several years, the Baronet had been at the head of the Commissariat department of the colony, and having yearned at length for the white cliffs of his native land, had broken up his colonial household, and left his furniture and other chattels to be disposed of by auction. On the back panel of the phæton he left the heraldic Red Hand of his Order, flaming out through cracks and wrinkles. The Chaplain did not disturb it. He had an idea that it made him a Bishop.

On the morning of the election, a minute or two before the red coach turned out of the yard of the Scotch Thistle, the Chaplain turned the corner of the main street in his phæton, with his white horse before, and Tim, his livery-servant (a robber from Ceylon), in top-boots, drab coat, bulged hat and cockade, behind him. The white horse (he had a black tip to one ear, and a broad yellow patch on the right flank, as if from a burn) was covered with ribbons, special favors from Mr. Griffin himself. The horse, in fact, looked as if he had lost his head, and an entire milliner's shop was exuding from his throat. The Chaplain was embossed in ribbons; his whip bound round with ribbons; the splash-board of the gig festooned in like manner. As for the livery-servant! He was a perfect triumph of decorative art.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkins had to pass the Scotch Thistle. He did so rapidly, and through a storm of indignation.

"There goes the Bishop!" shouted the coffin-maker.

"Hurrah for Church and State" cried the post-master.

"How do you sell the ribbons?" roared the barber.

Tremendous cheers follow these exclamations, in the midst of which three dogs assail the white horse and phæton, and a large cauliflower hits the livery-servant between the shoulders. The Chaplain reserves his resentment for a more favorable opportunity. He continues his journey without stopping—flourishes the whip—cries out "Hurry on, Bob,"—whips Bob smartly—blushes and perspires furiously, and, without looking behind to see if the robber from Ceylon is safe, rattles down the street, amid the waving of hostile blue banners, and the beating of drums, and the most opprobrious outcries, and a squall of cauliflowers, turnips, deceased cats, and other ignoble missives. Greatly disturbed in mind and body, he arrives at Griffin's head-quarters—the decorated robber from Ceylon doubled up, half dead, behind.

The Medical Superintendent, more provident than the Chaplain, evades the main street by a circuitous route of half a mile; coming upon the ground the same moment as his dearly beloved brother, but in a far more stylish turn-out, and a serener condition of mind and shirt-collar. The Griffins receive him with loud cheers. He acknowledges the cheers with a sedate bow, and a painful smile. The Clergyman is too bewildered to return the compliments intended for him.

Some few other distinguished people having joined them, the friends of the Government candidate, after a good deal of picturesque disorder, fell into column, and headed by the Medical Superintendent and Chaplain in their respective gigs, proceeded to Campbell Town, a distance of six miles, at which place the election was authorized, by royal proclamation, to take place. In the absence of instrumental music, they enlivened themselves with copious whistling and shouting—Rule Britannia and Nix my Dolly being the anthems in which they most joyously indulged.

In the meanwhile, young Wagstaff's party hed been mustering fresh forces. The red coach had turned out with six gray horses in front of the Scotch Thistle. The Brothers of St. Cecilia had taken their seats. The most stirring airs had already roused to the highest point of exultation the adherents of the blue cockade. Bill Cooper, the carpenter, had completed the banner on which he had been at work, near the pump in the stable-yard; and with the inspiring intimation on it, that as Alexander conquered so should Wagstaff, it now flapped in the light breeze, borne by a brawny bullock-drover from Mona Vale, amid "the fluttering of kindred devices and the cheers of thousands." So, at all events, the Campbell Town correspondent of the Launceston Wallaby stated in his letter three days after the election.

TO BE CONTINUED.

LE DERNIER ADIEU DU SOLDAT.

From the French of Jack Hinton the Guardsman.

[Our clever correspondent says he does not know the author of the French song of which he transmits the following spirited translation. Lever gives it in Jack Hinton as characteristic of the French in its uniting deep pathos with heartless recklessness of tone.]

Rose, this letter will inform you,
There is need of no alarm;
The French army is victorious,
Although I have lost an arm.
We have gained in glorious battles
Broken bones in each attack,
Captured arms and ammunition,
Of which two balls are in my back.

I inclose ten francs the surgeon
Gave to me to-day in bed,
Which he paid me for my body
For a "subject" when I'm dead.
As my Rose must lose her lover,
I shall die a happy elf,
As I know she'll have my value,
When she will not have myself.

I hope in God my poor old mother—
Who was in a dying way,
When I left her, now is sleeping
Calmly in her bed of clay.
'Twould break my heart if she were living,
With her love for me so great,
Ah! the shock of grief would kill her
At her son's untimely fate.

Take good care of, dearest Rosy,
My good faithful dog for one,
Never breathe a word unto him
That his master's dead and gone.
How he'd jump at my returning
Home, a corporal so fine;
If he knew he'd never see me,
Like a fool he'd whine and pine.

There is one thing sadly grieves me—
Dying in a foreign land:
When we die among our kindred,
Friends in sorrow press our hand,
And our names in village churchyard
Carve upon a wooden cross,
Where sometimes the kindly peasant
Comes to pray and weep our loss.

Adieu, Rose adieu, take courage,
Don't, for my sake, yield to woe,
Tho' the regiment now enrolls me
Ne'er again will let me go.
There go all things round me turning—
Ah! 'tis past—no more I see—
I'm receiving marching orders—
Farewell, Rose, remember me.

Phila. GARRYOWEN.

THE DRUID'S PROPHECY.

"Caicer the Druid, a famous prophet among them, foretold long before, that their (the Gadelian's) descendants, should be possessed of the most westerly country of Europe."—Keating.

"Far to the westward, rests an isle,
Of verdure bright and beauty fair;
From morn till eve the sunbeams' smile,
In balmy fragrance loads the air;
Clear, cool, and bright, the countless streams
Through verdant meadows seek the tide—
With flowering shrubs, the land of dreams
Blossoms and blooms on every side:
Clear inland seas reflect the hills,
The mountain peak and towering crag;
Through vales all musical with rills,
In careless freedom bounds the stag.
This isle, so rich in Nature's charms,
Is yours to conquer and possess.
O'er the dark Danan's* mystic arms
Shall flash the swords of righteousness,
And from your loins a race shall spring,
Whose fame through distant lands shall ring.
For valor, truth, and wisdom's smile
Shall light this consecrated isle;
While countless generations boast
The deeds of famed Gadelian sires,
Their might and prowess fondly toast,
Till Time grows old and Memory tires."

'Twas thus the Druid seer foretold,
To Scota's† sons their destined home;
Then launched their barks those warriors bold,
And steered into the trackless foam.
A westward course the chiefs pursue,
Till joy lights up the fearless band,
When to their distant watchful view,
Appears the green and beauteous land:
They joyous shout, "'Tis Innisfail!"
'Home of the fearless and the free!"
With rapture crowd the fluttering sail,
That bears them on to victory. KINCORA.

* The Fautha de Danans dealt in magic.

† Scota—the wife of Milesius, and mother of the Scoto—Milesian conquerors of Ireland.

NEW MEXICO.

El Gringo; or, New Mexico and her people. By W. W. Davis, late United States Attorney. Harper & Brothers.

Mr. Davis remarks there is no country protected by our flag and subject to our laws so little known to the people of the United States as the Territory of New Mexico. Those who will give this entertaining volume a careful perusal, will at once perceive the interesting nature of the subject and receive sufficient information on it as will in future obviate the want, to meet which the Author has devoted his knowledge and resources. The work is an authority, being mainly written from a diary kept by Mr. Davis during a residence of two and a half years in the Territory. In addition, the historical portions are almost wholly obtained from official records in the office of the Secretary of the Territory at Santa Fé. The illustrations are from drawings by Brevet Lieut. Col. Eaton, U. S. A., on duty in the Territory, and F. A. Percy, Esq., of El Paso, Texas.

New Mexico embraces an area of two hundred and seven thousand square miles; its boundaries being Utah and Kansas on the North, Texas and Mexico on the South, Arkansas River on the East, and the Colorado on the West. The Territory was obtained from Mexico by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, with the exception of a strip on the southern border purchased under the Gadsden Treaty. The physical formation, says Mr. Davis, "is a type of the whole of that extensive region known as the great American Central Basin, whose distinguishing features are extensive and arid plains, lofty and barren mountains, and narrow valleys along the water-courses. The middle portion is drained by the Rio del Norte and its branches, and the other principal streams are the eastern tributaries of the Colorado, and some of the western tributaries of the Arkansas."

This country was first known to the Spaniards of Southern Mexico about the year 1530. An Indian in the employ of Naño de Guzman, Governor of New Spain, attracted attention by the marvellous accounts of an extensive and rich country on the north with which, he stated, his father had formerly traded. He raised the adventurous ambition of the Spaniards by his descriptions of the country which contained, he said, seven large and beautiful cities, and abounded in precious metals.

Mr. Davis gives a short but interesting record of the early expeditions of exploration in the "country of the seven cities," which we must pass over to the year 1581, when Augustin Ruiz, a Franciscan Missionary having been murdered by the natives, the Viceroy of Mexico despatched Don Antonio Espejo with men and provisions to protect the missions. The accounts transmitted by Espejo, led the Viceroy to determine upon the permanent colonization of the settlement.

Mr. Davis translates the following passage from De Larenandière's History of Mexico, which gives a comprehensive view of the manners and customs of the people at the time of Espejo's expedition:

"The people were somewhat advanced toward civilization, with many manners and customs similar to those of the Aztec. Many of the men and women wore long gowns of cotton, tastefully painted, and some had coats of cloth colored with blue and white, similar to the manner of the Chinese. They were adorned with feathers of different colors. One of the chiefs gave him four thousand bolls of cotton. One of the tribes, called Jumanes, painted the face, arms, and legs in ridiculous figures. Their arms were great bows, with arrows terminated with sharp-pointed stones, very hard, and wooden swords armed on both sides with sharp-cutting stones, similar to the swords of the Aztecs. The latter they use with great dexterity, and could cut a man's body in two at a single blow. Their shields were covered with untanned bull-hide. Some of the nations lived in houses of stone four stories high, and walls very thick to keep out the cold of winter. Other slept under tents during the heat of summer, or lived in them all the year. There were found villages where luxury and comforts were noted. The houses were whitewashed, and the walls covered with pictures. The inhabitants used rich mantles with similar pictures, and subsisted on good flesh and corn-bread. Other tribes were somewhat more savage: they covered themselves with skins of animals, the product of the chase, and the flesh of the mountain bull was their principal food. Those nearest to the banks of the Del Norte, whose fields appeared well cultivated, obeyed chiefs whose orders were announced by public criers. In the pueblos of all the Indians were seen a multitude of idols, and in each house there was a chapel dedicated to the genius of mischief. They represented, by means of pictures, the sun, moon, and stars as principal objects of their worship. When they saw the Spanish horses for the first time they were no less astonished than the Mexicans, and were on the point of worshipping them as superior beings. They subsisted them in their most beautiful houses, and entreated them to accept the best they had. There were found in that great region abundant harvests of corn, flax similar to that of Europe, vines loaded with grapes, and beautiful forests filled with buffaloes, deer, stags, and every species of game."

The Viceroy therefore furnished an expedition to aid Espejo, at the head of which he placed Don Juan de Oñate, a native of Zacatecas, a man of note in his day, and the originator of the idea of planting colonies in New Mexico; but whether he moved in the matter before or after he conducted the re-inforcements for the protection of the missions, Mr. Davis has not been able to determine.

Oñate, however, presented a petition, dated September 21, 1595, asking permission to colonize; pledging himself to introduce "two hundred soldiers, horses, cattle, merchandize, and agricultural implements" into the country. He demanded as remuneration large grants of land, the ennobling of his family, a heavy loan of money, a fat salary, arms and ammunition, a supply of "six priests with a full complement of books, ornaments, and church accoutrements," and the right to reduce the natives to obedience. The petition, with some curtailment of its most extravagant demands, was granted.

The first mission was established at a place called El Zeguayo, and up to the year 1608, eight thousand Indians had been baptized. With the desire for gold, so characteristic of the Spanish pioneers, agriculture was neglected; mines were discovered in which the Indians were compelled to drag out a miserable existence from year to year. Oñate obliged them to embrace his religion, and in a short time the ancient rites were prohibited, the temples closed, the heathen gods destroyed. Several unsuccessful attempts at rebellion followed, until the year 1680 when an able and eloquent Indian of the pueblo of Taos, named Popé, united all the villages for a general rising. The Indians, although betrayed two days before the appointed time, succeeded in laying waste the country, in hunting the Spaniards from Santa Fé, which they occupied, and in rëestablishing their own religion. The following year an expedition under Governor Otermin, failed. The war continued for several years, and it was not until 1693 that the Spaniards under Bargas, regained possession, and until 1698 that the Indians were completely reduced. The history of New Mexico since, is the history of all the Spanish possessions—Indian warfare, domestic tyranny, internal conspiracies, fruitless revolution.

For a series of very bright and picturesque chapters on the manners and customs of the people, the natural outlines and resources, and many interesting, historical, and personal sketches, we must refer to Mr. Davis' book.

Tit for Tat. A novel by a Lady of New-Orleans—Fourth edition. Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald.

To call the attention of those tender-hearted creatures who shed unmeaning tears on the pages of "Uncle Tom," to the barbarous cruelty of allowing human beings scarcely more than infants, to climb chimneys for the purpose of abusing them, is the object of this work. Here is more food to nurse their susceptible natures; for although these little slaves were originally white, they are soon black enough not to be excluded from the sympathy of the scrupulous Lady Stafford and those who harmonize their emotions with her. That those "chummies" or "chimney-sweepers," are however, excluded from the tender mercies of philanthropic English Dukes and Duchesses, the author of this book sets himself out to show. These benevolent people are too busy with Mrs. Stowe and the Black Swan. They are so deafened with shrieks for freedom three thousand miles away, that they have no ears for the wretched children who shriek for relief from torture on their own very hearth-stones. "Tit for Tat" is founded on fact, and created a sensation when published in England. The author acknowledges her obligations to the entire press of Scotland for its endorsement of her statements, and expresses her gratitude to the English Press for its unmitigated abuse. The London Athenæum, attributing the work to an American in London, and being slightly overbalanced by dogmatism and vanity, presumed to make such allusions as led to a suit for slander, in which the paper was forced to make a public apology and pay costs.

The author has from infancy believed that "the English Press could see no wrongs" to poor humanity, save such as were inflicted outside of Her Majesty's dominions; that if suffering from famine, it would cry, "This is a land of plenty," and that while injustice, oppression and cruelty stalks through the land, it blindfolds itself with a bandage it calls the British Constitution, which it looks upon as a sort of disinfecting fluid, against all social evils."

It will be seen that the author's opinions, so early formed, and so boldly luminated, recommends her book to a candid perusal.

The political and benevolent assumption of the British, is flung back to the necessities for it "at home," where charity ought always to begin; the facts of that wretched class of black beings, in illustrations of whose tortures the work is written, are woven into the details of a story of English fashionable life. Some well-known people are struck off under characteristic titles; and the story in terests a reader as a story. As a specimen of the author's style, we make an extract. A poor little "chummy" is stuck in a chimney. An attempt has been made to extricate him in vain; and the master-sweep is requested to try once more.

"Well, I will, sir; but I don't know how to manage it. When I was up last time, I hung to the young beggar's feet the whole of my weight, and that didn't pull him away. Perhaps you'll be kind enough when I sings out, to catch hold of my feet and hang on to me, and I will hang on to his, and that will be two men's weight hanging on to him. If that doesn't pull him down, nothing will."

"Very well. Up you go, then," said Mr. Hammersley.

And once more Tom went up the chimney, and, having arrived at the "strait place" where the unhappy Sam had stuck fast, he grasped in his relentless paws the little, slender, emaciated legs of this poor child. Then hanging the whole of his herculean body with its full weight to them, and finding that the poor, delicate child was not moved by it, he sung out, "Now, hang on me, below there, carpenter."

Quick at the word, the carpenter, a full-sized man, stepping up into the chimney and catching hold of Tom's foot, hung to him.

"Oh! oh! oh!" screeched the poor little creature, torn by this terrific violence, bleeding, bruised, and mangled by the sharp edges of the bricks, between which he had stuck.

"Hurra! he's giving way! Here he comes," cried Tom, and, with a violent sound, down all three came rolling into the grate.

"Pick him up—pick him up," said Mr. Hammersley.

Well might he say, "Pick him up!" Taking the poor child in their arms, streaming with blood, cut, insensible, and the life all but crushed out of him, they laid him on the kitchen-floor and sent for a surgeon.*

In a few minutes the surgeon came.

"You must take this case to the hospital," said he. "Do what we can for it, there's very little hope, and be as quick in taking him there as possible."

"Please, sir, hospitals won't admit sweeps, sir," said Tom.

"No, they won't as general patients; but this is a case of accident—violent death. They will take this child in under the circumstances. Put him into your donkey-cart, and drive him off directly, and I will run beside you."

*For the harrowing details of this case, Samuel Whitt, see Lords' evidence, Answer 216, in Appendix.

Once more the donkey-cart came into requisition, and Sam, who had so lately sat there, in life, but not in health, was carried—a fainting, insensible, bruised, torn, mangled apology for humanity—into the accident ward, where, before long, he ceased to enable his fellow-man to trade upon his mortal agonies.

Tom waited near the hospital until the porter came out, and told him that "his boy was dead."

When, getting into his cart without a word, he drove off slowly, saying, as he drove away, "Well, I'm blowed if I arn't down upon my luck! What does the boy mean by dying off in this way?"

"Ah, what did they mean, Richard Cobden? What did they mean, John Bright—Arthur Roebuck, of Sheffield, immaculate member!—Hastie, honorable member for Glasgow—Phinn, thou learned and liberal member for Bath—Hutchins, thou oracle of Lymington—and Bass, thou pale maltster for Derby? What did they mean? You, perhaps, can explain—you who threw out the bill for the relief of these poor wretches? Perhaps you will be good enough to explain to the British public what did they mean. Perhaps you will explain to the American nation what they meant by dying off in this most inconsiderate manner—little helpless wretches of eleven years of age! No! Will you not explain—at present? Perhaps, most honorable member of the House of Commons, you will prefer explaining this interesting matter to the English mothers of your constituencies at the next general election—and also the claim it gives you to their votes and confidence, and the honor you have brought upon your country by your conduct in Parliament!

We doubt if the work is written by a "Lady of New-Orleans," or any other lady; not that we mean to say that it is too well done for a woman; but that it bears those marks which rather inform us of a male hand in the book; at the same time that the dialogues between the fashionable ladies in London are written with a great deal of womanly knowledge of the weaknesses of her sex.

A NEW WORK FOR CARPENTERS.

The "American House-Carpenters' and Joiners' Assistant," by Lucius D. Gould, architect, Newark, must be of immense value to those for whose benefit it was undertaken. The book—which is a handsome quarto, illustrated with no less than forty-four pages of fine engravings of plans, sections, instruments, &c.—embraces a new and easy system of lines for cutting every description of joints, invented by Mr. Gould, and founded on geometrical principles; a new system of stair-building which certainly possesses the rare recommendation of being comprehensible and even interesting, on geometrical grounds, to one not used to handle "edge tools." The author also gives a complete treatise on mathematical instruments, mensuration, the weights and cohesive strength of the several materials used in the construction of buildings, &c.

Mr. Gould's object in publishing this elegant work is to furnish House-Carpenters with practical directions necessary for their occupation, lessening its labors, at the same time making the duty more intellectual. We think the author deserving of the best thanks of all people engaged in the business. He says "many a journeyman carpenter has found himself suddenly thrown out of employment, simply because he was ignorant of the rules by which he could perform some required task." To "post up" such individual sthe work is invaluable.

For more than twenty years, the author has applied the rules he now gives to the world, to the framing and connecting of timbers, the constructing of roofs, the mitring of planes and irregular surfaces at any angle, the mitring of circles, and to finding the joints in every variety of splayed work—thus the work has the stamp of experienced authority to recommend it. It is published by Ivison & Phinney.

A volume, entitled "Leoni di Monota and Other Poems. By James Barron Hope," has appeared in Philadelphia. The author, we learn is a Virginian. A correspondent of the Richmond Examiner says of the principal poem, "It is a dark tale of revenge and death, which will compare very well with Byron's Parisina. The interest of the legend commences at once and does not flag to the last line. The diction is smooth and polished, and many of the passages are highly poetical." Of the smaller pieces, the same writer says, "some of them are exquisite." Strong praise which may or may not be warranted for all we know up here. If Alexander Smith or Belshazzar Brown, or Hannibal Jones, or Nebuchadnezzar Robinson, or any cousin-german—or German cozen—of John Bull's family, writes on Life-Dramas, or Drams of Life, we are sure to know all about him, thanks to the publishing machinery that exalts frenzied versifiers into "new poets." In these matters, our critics are inclined to be generous before they are just. A young Virginian is surely not less entitled to the courtesies of the press than a young Englishman, Scotchman or Irishman. Let him be judged by his merits. If he is a poet, drag him out then. If the contrary, prove it, and squelch him.

Attention has been directed to another poetic publication, by the appreciative critic of the New-York Daily News. "The Arctic Queen," is the title of an "epic and heroic poem" of fifty-two pages, which has been received at the office of that journal. The most remarkable thing about it, next of course to the intrinsic merit of the production, is, that it is unhonored by the author's name, unadorned by title-page, and unindorsed by a publisher. The Daily News devotes nearly two colums to a review of the poem, and gives several extracts, which exhibit great force and picturesqueness of diction. The Daily News critic is probably a little excited on the matter, but he has the advantage of writing under the inspiration of the entire production; and we are willing to give him full credit for the generosity he exhibits in making so prominent a feature of what he believes to be good, even though by an unknown and unindorsed writer. It is clear, however, that the author of "The Arctic Queen" is by no means a "new hand." Our daily cotemporary and namesake talks thus:—"We are not aware of any recent production of the kind which surpasses it; and there are many passages in it which have few equals in any language. Germanic in its conception, and full of fabulous and mythical, yet perfect and tangible creations, the beautiful and startling grandeur of the author's handiwork calls to mind—as if it were the unconscious concentration and perfection of all of them—the heroic legends of Scandinavia and the universal North, holds one captive by the witchery of its transcendent portraiture of nature in her most awful aspects, and human life in all its depth of passion and height of aspiration."

A NEW-YEAR'S COGITATIONS.

The Baton Rouge Advocate publishes the following "off-hand and take-off" address for the new year, in which the author sums up the labors of the press and the multitudinous demands upon the moral and physical resources of its conductors in keeping pace with the politics, ethics, inventions, costumes, amusements, men, women, children, writers, fighters, and humbugs of the day. The author is an old friend, "Shamrock," (Dr. R. D. Williams), who—as the editor of the Advocate says—"wrote himself into notoriety and Newgate in the short space of four weeks very snugly," in Dublin, in '48:

The joyous Christmas brings to all repose—
A pause to sorrow, and a balm for woes;
All bosoms glow with gratitude and mirth
Once more to celebrate the Saviour's birth.
Man for a season shakes off earthly dust,
And he is generous who was scarcely just.
At such a time our simple words may win
That audience vainly sought amid the din
Of business, politics, ambition, strife,
That daily checquer the routine of life.
Thro' fiery heat, thro' storm, or rain, or snow,
From door to door, we silent gliding go;
Scarce named or heard, despite the gems we bring,
Like those who dive for pearls to crown a king.
Yet think of all we daily lay before
The lawyer's office and the merchant's store,
To soothe, instruct, amuse, inspire, adorn—
In peace advise, in public danger warn.
Glance at the page we drop within your door,
With varied chronicles illumin'd o'er.
Lo! speeches, leeches, articles and guns,
The price of cotton, the most pungent puns;
Electric telegraphs and talma cloaks,
A Sumner scarified, a score of jokes;
Some northern mania—table-knocking witches,
Men turned old women, women sporting breeches;
Rifles and Kansas, Mormonism, Greeley,
And Freedom-shriekers using "Free-love" freely.
See warlike parsons, 'stead of David's harp,
Lauding the organ patented by Sharpe,
With stranger antics of that land where still,
A new religion or a newer pill
Is surest road to affluence and fame,
And pigeon-plucking is the general game.
See, on a throne of wooden nutmegs stands
The goddess Humbug! At her false right hand
Great Barnum leers and winks, profane and coarse,
But devilish pious on his woolly horse.
Hear canting Beechers and tuft-hunting Stowes
Howl o'er the South's imaginary woes,
While thirty thousand girls in cold New-York,
Starve on four cents for sixteen hours of work!
Or seek, despairing. the remorseless tide,
The lapse of virtue, famine-struck, to hide!
There's "News from Walker," "Thugs in NewOrleans,' Critiques before and rows behind the scenes;
Picnics, explosions, engines off the track,
A broken banker and a broken back;
Stump speakers, quacks, new hair-dyes and buffoons,
The fall of stocks, ascension of balloons;
"Militia muster," "Freemen's grand procession,
Collapse of hoops, a "Murderer's whole confession;"
A song, a sermon, Congress fights in session;
Tales, crimes, and accidents; "Despair and Mirth,"
"Gigantic skeletons," "Astounding Birth."
Fantastic fashions, marriages and death—
Regattas, races, skirts of awful breadth—
"A Buried City," the "Artesian Well"—
"A diplomat bamboozled by a Belle!'
Monongahela—Temperance—Splendid Boat—
"Arrest of forgers"—"Strayed, John Tompkin's goat;"
"A lady's bracelet lost or else mislaid,"
"Hurrah for Buck!" "Rip Sam!" and "Who's afraid!"
"New tax on chambers," and "decline of trade"—
"Last dodge of Palmerston," "the Czar's ukase,"
"Hell frozen out!" "All Europe in a blaze!"
"Sam Slick on Natur"—"Barnum's latest bam;"
"Chaotic Emerson"—"Carlyle on Sham."
All these and more, a hundred-fold we lay
Before the expecting public every day;
Bringing daguerreotypes of all that passes,
Whether concerning emperors or asses.
Surely the workers who supply the mind
With banquets bounteous, varied and refined,
In storm or sunshine, through the long year's round,
At this glad season will be worthy found
To share the fairy gifts and golden sand
Which Santa Claus is showering o'er the land.
Meanwhile we wish you from our hearts sincere,
A happy Christmas and a glad New-Year!

A glass has been discovered at Pompeii about the size of a crown piece, with the convexity which leads to the supposition that it is a magnifying lens. Now, it has been said that the ancients were not aware of this power, and the invention is given to Galileo by some, to a Dutchman in 1621 by others, while a compound microscope is attributed to one Fontana, in the 17th century. But without a magnifying glass, how did the Greeks and Romans work those fine gems which the human eye is unable to read without the assistance of a glass? There is one in the Naples Royal Collection, for example, the legend of which it is impossible to read without a magnifying glass.

M. Michelot, the celebrated comedian of the Theatre Français, died at his residence at Passy, in his 71st year. Mitchelot was with Talma, Fleury, and Mesdesmoiselles Duchesnois, Mars, and Georges, one of the glories of the French stage. He was equally successful in tragedy and comedy. His last great characters were the Jeune Marie in Henri III, and Don Carlos in Hernani.

The National Academy of Design has engaged its old rooms at No. 663 Broadway, for its next annual Exhibition, the thirty-second of the institution. The exhibition will open in May. T. S. Cummings, the artist, is engaged in writing the history of the Academy. Of the twenty-five artists who in 1825 were the founders of this institution, only five are now living.

Literary and Artistic News.

Sculptors in Rome.

From a letter by a sojourner in the Eternal City, we make some interesting extracts.

In one of the quiet streets leading into the Babuino, in the midst of a dreary expanse of blind wall, there is a porte-chère, with the word "Gibson" printed on it. Pulling the bell, the door soon opened, and revealed a little bit of fairy-land, forming a complete contrast to the dull and sleepy street outside. From amidst gleaming marble statues, we looked into a courtyard-garden, where the spray of the fountain was discernible amidst camelias rising to a tree-like height, orange flowers and roses. In sheds opening into this, the workmen were busy on statues in every stage of being, from the shapeless block of marble, to the perfect figure they were now cording in the packing-case which was to go to England to-morrow. Mr. Gibson soon came, all courtesy and kindness, as truly all the Roman artists are in showing their works to strangers. Nothing could be more obliging than the way in which he showed us his beautiful productions, and his explanations and descriptions were particularly valuable, as coming from the acknowledged head of living English sculptors. He is a Welshman by birth, but has been so long at Rome, (thirty-five years), that he speaks English with a foreign accent, and is little acquainted with his own country. He is not tall, has black hair turning iron-gray, piercing black eyes that look right at you, a low voice, and quick sharp manner. His conversation is extremely amusing; the words came forth in a continuous stream, seasoned with odd pithy sayings and a vein of satire. I was glad to see that he was dressed like a gentleman, and in this particular he does not give way to the vagaries of ordinary artists.

After showing us some statues, chiefly portrait-busts, which were just going off, he took us to another room to see the great work he was then engaged on. This was the colossal statue of the Queen, seated in a chair of state, with Justice and Clemency on each side. It is intended for the House of Lords. The figure is exceedingly graceful and dignified, and the face a very good likeness.

He was kind enough to explain the process of statue-making, which was rather more in the manufactory line than I expected, so different from the work of a painter, who has to do everything himself—the sculptor, on the contrary, takes very little charge of the marble. He begins by making the original model in clay, and then his work is pretty nearly over—at the beginning, as we should say, and he has then only to overlook and direct the workmen. From the clay-model a plaster-of-Paris cast is taken, and then the block of marble being selected, some of the men begin by roughly chiseling it into the general idea of the figure or group. When this is done, other and more skilful workmen proceed with careful measuring, and by degrees to make it exactly like the cast—the skill employed being of a higher character as it nears completion. "Look at that man," said Gibson, "he does nothing but the crown and ornaments: he is a very delicate worker." Thus the finished statue becomes a very costly thing, not only because of the expensiveness of the material, but also from the amount of labor bestowed on it. The sculptor comes at last, chisel in hand, to survey the completed work, and to give the last touches. It is evident that any number of copies may be made equally well from one clay-model; and in the studios, frequent repetitions of the same subject are seen. Mr. Gibson now took us into a room apart, where his chefs-d'œuvre are, to show us a statue we had heard talked of ever since we had been at Rome—his colored Venus, evidently the pride and darling of his heart. It is a Venus victrix, with the apple in her hand—truly a noble statue. The coloring is very, very slight—a faint flesh tint; a suspicion of gold in the hair, and tinge of red in the lips; the eyes are blue. It is undeniably an improvement there, for it gives life to the eye. Of course, it approaches nearer to life than the pure white we are accustomed to see; but there is something strange and unearthly in it. Gibson turned it round on the pedestal for us to see, and told the motives that had induced him to make the experiment, chiefly the example of the ancient Greeks who, he said, invariably colored their statues as well as their buildings. He spoke almost with pleasure of the violent opposition he was encountering from his brethren in the art, and seemed quite certain of eventually triumphing over all opposition, and that his method would be generally adopted.

The Queen's statue is to be colored, for she had given him permission to do as he liked. It will be the first of the kind seen in England. In the same room, there was a beautiful bas relief, the marriage of Cupid and Psyche. Such sweet faces! It was the duplicate, he told us, of one in the prince's possession, and had been ordered by the Queen as a birthday surprise for him. The generosity with which Gibson spoke of other artists was very pleasant. On taking leave, he gave us the address of Mr. Spence, a rising young artist, whose studio was close by, and we proceeded there.

The principal statue here was Highland Mary, which is very popular, and of which we saw several copies in different stages of development. There was an engraving of this in the Art Journal a few years ago. It represents the well-known scene of the parting, so familiar in painting, though this is the only instance in statuary: "The lovers met in a sequestered spot, near the banks of the Ayr, one standing on each side of a small brook, in which they laved their hands, and holding a Bible between them, they swore to be faithful to each other." The story is well told: the sweet Scotch lassie stands with a plaid over her head, the Bible clasped in her hand, and in her face, slightly bent forward, is the sad shadow of approaching doom, as she thinks of the lover she is never to see again, while a thistle in the rock at her feet marks the spot as Scottish ground. There was, too, an interesting monumental statue, or rather its plaster-cast—we saw the original a few days afterwards, in the burial ground which lies so pleasantly in the shadow of the Aurelian walls and the pyramid of Cestius. It is erected to the memory of an English officer, who died at Rome, and is hewn in stone.

We were anxious to see the studio of an Italian sculptor, to contrast the works of native artists with those of our countrymen. We were told that one of the first artists now living was Benzoni, and we found his works well worth seeing. He is a tall and handsome man, dressed in exactly the same way as his workmen; he kindly showed us round, describing the different statues in beautiful language. He seems a man of a devout and religious spirit. His allegorical figures of Religion with the Gospel, is thoroughly Christian in sentiment. Many of his productions are in England; among others, some copies of his beautiful Eve. He spoke of his early years, and pointing to a touching group of an old man raising a forlorn and tattered child, said he had sculptured it as a grateful memento of the support afforded him during his obscurity by a wealthy marchese. Benzoni excels in children. Few who saw the Great Exhibition in 1851, can forget two groups of his there, though possibly they may not remember the sculptor's name. I allude to Fidelity, the dog protecting the sleeping child from the snake; Gratitude, the same child taking a thorn from the dog's foot. These were portraits; and though merely trifles of art as compared with some of its grander inspirations, they attracted as much attention by their grace and ease as any sculpture in the Exhibition. The morning's pleasant occupation left us with the impression that sculpture is in a very promising state at Rome. It is true that there is no one name prëeminent, as Thorwaldsen's was some years ago; still the works now produced may vie with those of any age in modern times.

Some old Mortality has been roaming the graves of the Poets. He tells us that Chaucer was buried in the cloister of Westminster Abbey, without the building, but removed to the south aisle in 1555; Spenser lies near him. Beaumont, Drayton, Cowley, Denham, Dryden, Rowe, Addison, Prior, Congreve, Gray, Sheridan and Campell, all lie in Westminster Abbey. Shakspeare as every one knows, was buried in the chancel of the church at Stratford where there is a monument to his memory. Chapman and Shirley are buried in St. Giles' in the Fields; Marlowe in the churchyard of St. Paul's, Deptford; Fletcher and Massinger in the churchyard of St. Saviour's, Southwark; Dr. Donns in old St. Paul's; Edm Waller in Beaconfield churchyard; Milton in the churchyard of St. Giles, Cripplegate; Butler in the churchyard of Paul's Covent Garden; Osway no one knows where; Garth in the church at Harrow; Pope in the church at Tickenham; Swift in the St. Patrick's, Dublin; Savage in the churchyard of St. Peter's Bristol; Parcell at Chester, where he died on his way to Dublin; Dr. Young, at Walwyn, in Hertfordshire, of which place he was the rector; Thompson, in the churchyard at Richmond, in Surrey; Collins, in St. Andrew's church at Chichester; Gray, in the churchyard at Stoke-Pogis, where he conceived his Elegy; Goldsmith, in the churchyard of the Temple church; Falconer, at sea, with 'all ocean for his grave;' Churchill, in the churchyard of St. Martin's, Dover; Cowper, in the church at Dereham; Chatterton, in a churchyard belonging to the parish of St. Andrews, Holborn; Burns, in St. Michael's churchyard, Dumfries; Byron, in the church at Hucknall, near Newstead; Crabbe at Trowbridge; Coleridge in the church at Highgate; Sir Walter Scott in Dryburgh Abbey; Southey in Crossthwaite church, near Keswick; Shelley 'beneath one of the antique wood-grown towers surrounding ancient Rome;' and Keats beside him, 'under the pyramid which is the tomb of Cestius.'

It will be remembered, says the Mining Journal, that in 1854 Dr. Sullivan, the chemist to the Museum of Irish Industry, made a careful inspection of the works of the Irish Peat Company at Kilberry, and published an elaborate report upon the products of the elaborate distillation of peat. In that report it was stated that a proposition had been made for preparing paraffine from the tar, which was one of the resulting products, and for obtaining from the aqueous liquor naptha, sulphate of ammonia, and acetate of lime. In the separation and purification of these products heat would naturally play a very important part, and a considerable quantity of fuel would be required, but by a very happy arrangement the fuel would be supplied by the gases which would otherwise be wasted. These waste gases it was proposed to employ as the sole fuel for raising steam to work the blowing cylinders for distilling the tar, in the purification of the oils and paraffine, and in the separation of the other products. It was anticipated that the paraffine could be advantageously used as a substitute for spermaceti in the manufacture of candles and a number of marketable oils. So far as regards the manufacture of candles, considerable difficulties were experienced in obtaining the requisite amount of whiteness and transparency. Messrs. Field, however, have succeeded in overcoming all obstacles, and were enabled at the recent meeting of the Irish Peat Company to exhibit candles made from the paraffine produced by that company, which had every appearance of the most superior sperm, whilst it is believed that they can be manufactured at a much lower price. The paraffine oil, which appears to be solid paraffine dissolved in an isomeric oil, is a highly valuable lubricator for machinery, and is coming into extensive use in the manufacturing districts.

The chair of archæology in the University of the Sapientia, vacant by the death of M. Orioli, has been filled up by the appointment of the Commander H. Visconti, a name well known. M. Visconti is a Commissioner of Antiquities, and Permanent Secretary of the Pontifical Academy of Archæology, and it is under his direction that the excavations at Ostia and the restoration of the Basilias of St. Alexander are being carried out.

The Nottingham Review states that steps are being taken to erect a monument to the late Fergus O'Connor, in the form of a statue, which will be a perfect representation of Mr. O'Connor, as he appeared in the place of O'Connorville.

Mr. Burke, proprietor of the Cork Theatre has presented Miss Lucy Escott with a splendid bracelet, in testimony of her high genius as a member of the National Opera Company.

Lord Palmerston has granted Mrs. Laurie, the widow of the author of "Foreign Exchange Tables," and other commercial works, £100 from the Royal bounty fund.

The Berlin journals state that a manuscript of about 100 pages of the philosopher Kant, which has hitherto remained unknown, has just been discovered in that city.

La Piccolomini has not sustained the hopes called forth by her first appearance. She has not much voice, nor was she trained in a good school. All her charms lie in her little face, and in her patrons. So says the Paris correspondent of the Post.

DECLINE AND FALL OF ENGLAND.

From the New-York Tribune.

That France is rapidly taking the leadership of Europe, and that the star of England pales before that of her ambitious neighbor, is now generally admitted. The one gained position in the recent war, while the other almost wholly lost it; and yet the events of the war itself are scarcely so significant as are those of the peace that since has followed. The Conferences of Paris are now reopened, and at whose dictation? That of France. England has yielded an assent at last, and while doing it most ungraciously, her journalists seek to amuse the world with assurances of the continuance of an entente cordiale wholly repudiated by those of France. Forty years since the latter was floored at Waterloo, and England reigned almost supreme in Paris. Now, the course of things is altered—the law being given by France and received by England. The change is great, but not, as we think, greater than is to be accounted for by the following facts.

In 1821, the official valuation of the real property of France was 39,514,000,000 francs, or nearly $8,000,000,000. In 1850 the Legislative Assembly ordered a new valuation, which was made in 1851, and the results of which are now, as we believe, for the first time given to the world. There results are found in the wonderful fact that in the short period of 30 years the money value of real estate has more than doubled—its present amount being no less than 83,744,000,000 francs, or above $16,000,000,000. Power having grown in every country with the increase in the value of land, we are led to find in this extraordinary growth a key to the changes that are now taking place. But forty years since, the total annual value of the land of Great Britain and Ireland was £49,850,000. Thirty years later, England showed a slight increase, but so recently as 1851 the total change effected amounted to only £3,000,000. Ireland, in the mean time, had greatly fallen, and the total value was probably even less in 1851 than it had been in 1813.

It will, however, be said that the French returns include houses in cities as well as land, while those of England are confined to land alone, and that some compensation may thus be found for the extraordinary difference above established. Such, however, is not the case. The increase of the population of the United Kingdom in the thirty years was little more than 33 1-2 per cent, and the number of houses grew in nearly the same proportion. Great Britain, however, is certainly richer than she was in 1821. She has more ships, steam-engines, railroad and other stocks. She has these; but how little they can be relied upon for bringing her movements up to a level with those of France will be seen by the following statements. The total annual value of lands, houses, factories, canals, railroads and other fixed property in England in 1815 was fifty-two millions. Twenty-eight years later, in 1843, the amount was eighty-five millions of pounds. In the same period there had been so great a decline in Ireland as to warrant us in assuming the increase not to have exceeded 50 per cent, in a period of nearly the same duration that gave in France above 100 per cent. Again, the total amount of capital that passed by will, subject to legacy and probate duty in 1817 and 1818, was £63,200,000; giving an annual average of £31,600,000. In 1847 and 1848, the average was £44,000,000; giving an advance of about 40 per cent. Taking the difference of these two quantities, and allowing that property passes by descent only once in three and thirty years, we obtain abot £400,000,000 or $2,000,000,000. In the same period the personal property of France has probably quite as much increased; but even if it has failed to do so, the small difference that can exist is no set-off against the extraordinary increase in the value of land that has been shown.

These facts prove conclusively that France is increasing in wealth at a rate twice more rapid than that of England, and wealth is power. The causes of the difference are, as we think, to be found in this: England has been gradually consolidating her land, and expelling small proprietors, whose places are now filled by day-laborers, whose condition is universally described as being a very wretched one. France, on the contrary, has been dividing her land, and adding to the number of men who own the soil they cultivate. The different effects of these two systems are fully established in the returns now before us—proving that while large proprietors have increased in their money value but a third or a fourth, the smaller ones have been quadrupled and quintupled in their money value. England has been changing her proprietors into hireling slaves, while France has been creating free proprietors. Such men as Ireland once produced are now no longer to be found. The hardy Highlander has been first starved and then transported—to make room for sheep. Hence it is that when France calls for soldiers she obtains the men who storm the Malakoff, while England, in return to a similar call, obtains those who fall before the Redan.

England now reaps the bitter fruits of a mistaken policy. Seeking to compel all other nations to limit themselves to the cultivation of the earth, she destroys her own agriculture, and expels the people who once gave value to her land. Her people are driven to the factory and the workshop, there to underwork the poor Hindoo, or they are forced to seek a precarious existence by means of trade. France, on the contrary, pursues a policy, by help of which mines are opened and factories built, thus bringing the market home to her farmers, giving value to her land, and creating men fitted for service in the field or in the workshop; for storming Sebastopol, or uniting with their fellow-men in the peaceful pursuits of an agriculture that improves from hour to hour and from day to day. Such are the results of the thirty years from 1821 to 1851. What are to be those of the thirty years that will close in 1881? The answer to us is clear: France is to take and hold the lead of Europe, and the power of England is to pass away.

LOCAL CHANGES AND LOCAL FACTS

OF OLD NEW-YORK.

BY JOHN F. WATSON,
Author of the Annals of Philadelphia.

NO. IV.

INCIDENTS OF THE WAR AT NEW-YORK.

Our officers had far better fare; they had money or credit; could look about and provide for themselves—could contrive to make themselves half gay and sportive occasionally. Captain Graydon, of Philadelphia, who has left us amusing and instructive memoirs of sixty years of his observing life, having been among the officers and men (2,000) captured at fort Washington, near New-York, and held prisoners, has left us many instructive pages concerning the incidents at New-York while held by the British, which ought to be read by all those who can feel any interest in such domestic history as I have herein endeavored to preserve.

Having thus introduced Capt. Graydon to the reader, I shall conclude this article with sundry observations and remarks derived from him, to wit:—

After our capture, (says he,) we were committed, men and officers, to the custody of young and insolent officers; we were again and again taunted as "cursed rebels," and that we should all be hanged. Repeatedly we were paraded, and every now and then one and another of us was challenged among our officers as deserters—affecting thereby to consider their common men as good enough for our ordinary subaltern officers. Unfortunately for our pride and self importance, among those so challenged was here and there a subject fitted to their jibes and jeers. A little squat militia officer, from York county, with dingy clothes the worse for wear, was questioned with "What, sir, is your rank?" when he answered in a chuff and firm tone, "a keppun sir;" an answer producing an immoderate laugh among the haughty Britons." There was also an unlucky militia trooper of the same school, with whom the officers were equally merry, obliging him to amble about for their entertainment on his old jade, with his odd garb and accoutrements. On being asked what were his duties, he simply answered, "it was to flank a little and bear tidings." It must be admitted, however, that there were, at the same time, several gentlemen of the army into whose hands he afterwards fell, or with whom he had intercourse, who were altogether gentlemanly in their deportment and feelings.

At this beginning period of the war, most things on the American side were coarse and rough. Maryland and Philadelphia county put forward young gentlemen as officers of gallant bearing and demeanor; but New-England, and this, then seat of war, was very deficient in such material. In many cases subaltern officers at least could scarcely be distinguished from their men other than by their cockades. It was not uncommon for colonels to make drummers and fifers of their sons. Among such the eye looked around in vain for the leading gentry of the country. Gen. Putnam could be seen riding about in his shirt-sleeves, with his hanger over his open vest; and Col. Putnam, his nephew, did not disdain to carry his own piece of meat, saying—as his excuse—"it will show our officers a good lesson of humility."

On the whole, Captain Graydon says, "I have in vain endeavored to account for the very few gentlemen, and men of the world, that at this time appeared in arms from this country, which might be considered as the cradle of the revolution. There was here and there a young man of decent breeding in the capacity of an Aid-de-Camp or Brigade Major; but any thing above the condition of a clown in the regiments we came in contact with, was truly a rarity." Perhaps the reason was, that when the people had the choice of their officers, they chose only their equals or comrades. A letter of Gen. Washington to General Lee, makes himself merry with such mean officers; and General Schuyler, who was of manly and lofty port, was actually rejected for that reason by the New-England troops as their commander. [Vide Marshall's Washington.] Even the Declaration of Independence, when read about this time at the head of the armies, did not receive the most hearty acclamations, though ostensibly cheered for the sake of a favorable report to the world. Some under voices were heard to mutter, "Now we have done for ourselves." It was a fact, too, that at this crisis, Whigism declined among the higher classes, and their place was seemingly filled up by numbers of inferior people, who were sufficiently glad to show uniforms and epaulettes as gentlemen who had never been so regarded before.

As the prisoners were marched into the city, they disparagingly contrasted with their British guard. Our men had begun to be ragged, or were in thread-bare flimsy garments; whereas every thing on the British soldier was whole and complete. On the road they were met by soldiers, trulls, and others, come out from the city to see "the great surrender of the rebel army." Every eye and every person was busy in seeking out "Mr. Washington."

"There he is!" cried half a dozen voices at once. Others assailed them with sneers. When near the city, the officers were separated from the men, and conducted into a church, into which crowded a number of city spectators. There the officers signed paroles, and were permitted afterwards to take their lodgings in the city. The men were confined in churches and sugar-houses, where they suffered much.

The number of American officers who were thus brought into New-York, was considerable, and many of them boarded together at Mrs. Carroll's, in Queen-street, a winning cheerful lady, who had enough of influence and acquaintance with Col. Robertson, the commandant of the city, to get hold of a good deal of news calculated to interest and serve her lodgers. In the city at this time were such American officers as Colonels Magaw, Miles, Atlee, Allen, Rawlins, &c.; Majors West, Williams, Burd, De Courcey, &c.; and Captains Wilson, Tudor, Davenport Forrest, Edwards, Lennox, Herbert, &c.

Such officers took full latitude of their parole, in traversing the streets in all directions, with a good deal of purposed assurance. One of them, on one occasion, wearing his best uniform, to the great gaze and wonderment of many, actually ventured disdainfully to pass the Coffee-House, then the general resort of the British officers.

At other times, when the Kolch water was frozen over, and was covered with British officers, who thought themselves proficients in skating, it was the malicious pleasure of some of our officers to appear and eclipse them all. The officers occasionally met with cordial civilities and genteel entertainment from British officers with whom they came in contact; for, in truth, the latter valued their personal gentility too much to seem to be in any degree deficient in politeness and courtesy when they met with those whom they thought sufficiently polished to appreciate their demeanor. Yet it was obviously the system of the British army to treat them as persons with whom to maintain an intercourse would, on their part, be both criminal and degrading.

Our officers, it 'seems, but rarely visited their countrymen-prisoners, saying, as their reason, "To what purpose repeat our visits to these abodes of misery and despair, when they had neither relief to administer nor comfort to bestow? They rather chose to turn the eye from a scene they could not ameliorate." It was not without remark, too, that there was an impediment to their release by exchange, maintained by the American rulers themselves, who were either unable or unwilling to sustain a direct exchange, because they foresaw that the British soldiers, when released, would immediately form new combatants against them; whereas our own men, especially of the militia, were liable to fall back into noncombatants, and perhaps, withal, dispirit the chance of new levies. Perhaps the stoical virtues of the rigorous times made apathy in such a cause the less exceptionable. On the other hand, the British wished the prisoners to apostatize; and nothing was so likely to influence defection as the wish to escape from sickness and starvation.

Latest from Europe.

By the arrival of the Washington at this port we have additional news from Europe to the 31st inst, being four days later than what was previously received by the Asia. The Cunard steamer Arabia arrived at Liverpool at 9 A. M., on the 28th of December. Intelligence had quite unexpectedly been received from China, that on the 24th of October, the British fleet under Admiral Seymour had commenced the bombarding of the city of Canton. The bombardment had continued two days, and it was reported that the city walls had been breached and the Basque forts taken. Commerce was completely paralysed, and in the British markets a considerable rise in teas, equal to 1d. a 1 1-2d per pound had taken place. The cause of the hostilities was the seizure of some British sailors. The difficulty between Switzerland and Prussia had assumed no new phase, but the latest rumors favor peaceable negotiations. The British government have appointed a new minister to Washington, the name is as yet secret. The American ambassador had convened the diplomatic corps of the several European courts, and proposed to them the project of making a joint demand on the Federal Government for the release of the royalist provinces of Neufchatel. Austria objected to any American interference, and thus was this unauthorized and impertinent proposition laid on the shelf. If an American minister interfere at all, it should be to prevent the forcing of such condition upon Switzerland.

LECTURE ON POPE GREGORY THE SEVENTH.
(THE GREAT HELDEBRAND.)
On Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857,
Before the Catholic Library Benefit Society, at Hope Chapel, 720 Broadway,
BY F. W. POLLARD, A. M.
Tickets 25 cents. For sale at the Catholic Bookstores, or at the door, on the above evening.
Doors open at 7. Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock. ja25

Ocean Express Company of London and Liverpool.
(ESTABLISHED 1851.)
Small Parcels forwarded by each Mail Steamer, to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales—the Continent, India, China, South America, &c.
 Persons wishing to send small packages to their friends at home, at a trifling expense, will please address ja26 1y COLLINS & MARSH, Agents, 29 Broadway, New-York.

THE VORTEX WATER WHEEL.

From the Farmer's Gazette (Ireland).

Some inquiries have been lately made as to the applicability of the turbine, or horizontal water-wheel, for threshing or other agricultural machinery, where water-power can be obtained, the general knowledge of which has not been as extensive as its utility demands. The question was first publicly mooted by Sir R. Kane in his "Industrial Resources," which he followed up by a translation of a treatise on the subject by Moritz Bublman; after the publication of which several turbines were put up in Ireland; but the general interest in them became in some degree obsolete till lately, when it seems to have been revived. An improved turbine was shown at the national show at Athlone, by Williams Brothers, Kendal, Westmoreland, said to be of three-horse power, suited for driving agricultural machinery. We have lately learned that the subject has for some years engaged the particular attention of James Thompson, C. E., Balfast, who has invented and patented an improved turbine, which he names the vortex water-wheel, a descriptive paper of which, accompanied by explanatory engravings, he read before the British Association in 1855, and published in their report. It now appears upon enquiry, that Mr. Thompson's vortex water-wheel has been in use for some years, and that it has given great satisfaction both in Ireland and the sister countries. Mr. Hunter, of Dunadry, near Antrim, has one erected at Islandreagh Bleach-green, of which he speaks highly; it has been working for upwards of four and a half years, driving 20 beetling-engines, and working efficiently in back water. He will allow it to be seen at work. Messrs. Herdsman & Co., flax spinners, Belfast, and Strabane, have one at work for some years, for the purpose of driving the mechanics' shop machinery. John Wakefield, Esq., Sedgewich, Kendal, Westmoreland has one at work for the last two years at his saw mills, where it can be inspected any time, driving several circular saws and other machinery; and James Cropper, Esq., Burnside and Cowan head mills, Kendal, Westmoreland, has one working at his paper mills. Rurnside, who speaks highly of it and states that it possesses great advantages in back water and in dry weather. The mill is able to work more hours than it did before the introduction of the Vortex wheel. So much has the character of Mr. Thompson's Vortex wheel been thought of, and its worth established, that the Messrs. Williams, of Kendal, who exhibited the turbine at Athlone have made arrangements for their manufacture, and have erected one for a gentleman near Kendal, for driving farming implements, and another eminent firm in Glasgow has made arrangements for their manufacture. Mr. Thompson, who is a very talented engineer, read a paper before the Royal Dublin Society, in the end of the session of 1855, on the jet pump which he invented for draining swamps and shallow lakes; working models and drawings of which he exhibited and used in the exemplification of his invention. Having been in attendance on the occasion we were much interested in the subject, and had Mr. Thompson's permission to publish the article in the Gazette, but the difficulty in getting up a suitable service of engravings from Mr. Thompsons's models and drawings compelled us to relinquish it for the time, though we have not lost sight of it, which we hope at no very distant time to accomplish.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The steamer "George Law" arrived on the 13th inst., with San Francisco dates to the 20th ult. The news is important. The Supreme Court had rendered a decision to the effect that, by the Constitution of the State, no public debt could be contracted by the government of California exceeding the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, unless previously submitted to and ratified by a direct vote of the people. As none of the existing State debt has been submitted to the popular action, the whole amount, except three hundred thousand dollars, is virtually thus declared unconstitutional and invalid, and a fair opening is made for State repudiation. The decision, however, meets with no response, either among the people or from the press.

A meeting of merchants and business men of San Francisco was held, at which resolutions were adopted declaring that the faith of the State was regarded as being involved in the just and true payment of her entire indebtedness, constitutional or unconstitutional. A man named Jose Y. Limantour had been arrested by the United States authorities for presenting false and fraudulent papers before the Land Commissioner, whereby his claim, under an alleged Mexican grant, to a large part of the county of San Francisco, including half of the city itself, was confirmed. The fraud had been fully proved, and Limantour was in the custody of the Marshal. Business was represented as being dull, but a demand had recently sprung up for real estate, which caused a rise. The George Law brought upwards of a million and a quarter in treasure.

The news from Oregon, Washington and Utah Territories is interesting, but not important. Another Indian battle had taken place at Puget Sound, when twenty-seven savages were killed and the encampment of the party burned.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

In St. Peter's Church, Michael Lalor, of Dublin, to Frances, daughter of the late Capt. Jackson, of Limerick.

Dec. 16, Marcus John, son of Leonard Bickerstaff, of Runnemede, Dundrum, to Annie, daughter of John Pollock, Upper Leeson-st.

James Thomas Williams, son of H. Trotman, of Barbadoes, to Julia Elizabeth, daughter of the late R. G. Scot, Waterford.

Dec. 22, at Mount Talbot, Roscommon, Thomas Pennefather, son of Edward Pennefather, of Marlow, Tipperara, to Katharine Jane, daughter of Richard P. Lloyd, barrister-at-law, Herbert-place.

Dec. 17, at Modreeny, Captain Lloyd, of the 57th regiment, to Ruth Stoney, daughter of the Rev. De la Pore Robinson, of Ballynavin Castle, county Tipperary.

At Ballyclog, county Tyrone, Henry L. Keilly, solicitor, College-green, Dublin, to Isabella, daughter of the Rev. Henry Greene, Rector of Ballyclog.

At Kilroman, Henry W. Mahon, surgeon in the Royal Navy, to Mary, daughter of the late W. Thompson.

In Belfast, Henry H. Bottomley, solicitor, to Marianne, daughter of Rev. J. Potter, Windsor, Belfast.

At St. Andrew's Church, Westland-row, Geo. Dunlevie, Captain in her Majesty's 88d regt., to Margaret, daughter of Richard Emerson, Great Brunswick-street.

Dec. 18, at Simmonscourt Church, Fanny Susan, daughter of Thomas Ryan, of Pier View, Merrion, to Frederick C. Harrington, Sydney Parade.

In Armagh, Rev. Jas. Macauley, to Margaret, daughter of the late Thomas Wynne, Lisiea.

At Castletownroche, Cork, F. Bolster, of Ballygregane, to Ellen, daughter of the late W. Furlong, Wallstown.

At Kilkeady, co. Clare, Nicholas Butler, of Wallerstown, to Anne Matilda, daughter of the late W. Butler.

P. Famalaro, of Cardiff, Glamorganshire, to Sarah, daughter of the late W. P. Hodgson, Sligo.

At Kensington, H. T. Erskine, son of the Rt. Hon. T. Erskine, to Eliza Sarah, daughter of the late H. W. Hore, Pole Hore, Wexford, Commander in the royal navy.

In Liverpool, Charles, son of Henry Doubleday, to Ellen, daughter of the late J. R. Norcott, Doneraile, Cork.

In London, Captain Henry MacNeill, of the 20th regiment, son of the late D. H. MacNeill Hamilton, Newgrove, Down, to Marie, daughter of the late Count Jos. Ladislas de Szeliska.

In London, William Fleming, late of the 45th regiment, to Anna Charlotte, daughter of the Lieut. N. Fishe, Royal Navy, of Rosbercon Castle, county Kilkenny.

Dec. 18, at Toddington, Bedfordshire, the Rev. David Dickson, of Hill, town, Newry, to Barbara Maria, daughter of the late Joseph Andrew Lautour.

At Swindon, Capt. Henry Verschoyle, of the Grenadier Guards, to Clarissa, daughter of the late A. Goddard.

IRISH DEATHS.

Dec. 2, at Arran-quay, aged 35, Francis Gardiner.

Dec. 18, George, aged 20, son of George Robert M'Grath, of Rutland-square Dublin.

Edward, son of J. M'Manus, 155 Great Britain-street.

Mrs. Drury, daughter of the Rev. D. Stuart, Temple-street.

In Synge-street, Eleanor, wife of Charles G. Place, daughter W. Whitaker, Montpelier-hill.

At Harold's Cross, Matthew Joseph Nolan.

At Parkgate-street, Charles Gibney, aged 35 years.

Dec. 17, Mrs. Croker, wife of John Croker, of Ballynegard, county Limerick.

In Tralee, John, son of the late Wm. Pembroke.

At Churchmount, near Manorhamilton, Leitrim, aged 90 years, Jason Abercromby.

At Castletownroche, county Cork, Ann, relict of B. C. Cooke, M.D.

At Drumguin, Hacketstown, Mrs. M'Ardle, mother of the Rev. Michael M'Ardle.

Dec. 16, in London, Ellen, relict of James Cowan, of Carrickfergus, county Antrim.

At Bishopsteignton, Devonshire, aged 82, Gen. W. H. Gardiner, Royal Artillery.

At Verdala, Lieut. J. N. M'Cartney, of the 57th rgt.

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Carefully revised every week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 20, 1857.

Flour—Com'n to Extra State	per barrel	$6.30 a	$6.90
Common to Fancy Western	do	6.45 a	6.90
Extra Western	do	6.75 a	9 —
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do	6.90 a	8.75
Mixed to Extra Southern	do	7 — a	9.25
Rye Flour—Fine and Super	do	3.50 a	5.25
Corn Meal	do	3.12½ a	3.75
Wheat—Canada White	per bushel	1.70 a	1.82½
Western White	do	1.70 a	1.84½
Southern White	do	1.70 a	1.80
All kinds of Red	do	1.40 a	1.62½
Corn—Mixed	do	— 72 a	— 75
Yellow	do	— 75 a	— 76
White	do	— 75 a	— 76
Oats—State and Western	do	— 48 a	— 52
Jersey	do	— 45 a	— 48
Southern	do	— 41 a	— 45
Rye	do	— 85 a	— 92½
Barley	do	1 — a	1.32
White Beans	do	2 — a	— —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels		— — a	4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb		— 12½ a	— 13½
Fair		— 13⅛ a	— 14
Rice, per 100 lbs		3.25 a	4.25
Hops, per lb		— 7 a	— 10
Pork—Mess per bbl		19.87½ a	20.87½
Prime, per bbl		17 25 a	17.87½
Beef—Country Mess		10.50 a	12.50
Prime		9 25 a	10 12½
Dressed Hogs, per lb		— 9 a	— 9¼
Lard, in bbls. per lb		— 12¼ a	— 12⅝
Butter—Western, per lb		— 14 a	— 20
State, per lb		— 20 a	— 25
Orange County, per lb		— 26 a	— 29
Cheese, per lb		— 10 a	— 10½
Potatoes—Carter's, per bbl		3 — a	4 —
Mercers, per bbl		2.50 a	3.25
Onions—Reds, per bbl		1.75 a	1.87½
White, per bbl		3 — a	4 —
Apples, per bbl		2.50 a	6 25
Eggs, fresh per dozen		— 28 a	— 30
Limed, per dozen		— 24 a	— 26
Feathers, Live Geese per lb		— 50 a	— 55
Seed—Clover, per lb		— 12 a	— 12½
Flax, per bushel		1.90 a	1 95
Timothy, mowed, per bushel		2.25 a	2.87½
Timothy, reaped, per bushel		3 — a	— —
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb		— 9½ a	— 11⅛
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl		— — a	— 80
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb		— 7 a	— 16
Seed Leaf, per lb		— 10 a	— 32
Wool—Domestic fleece, per lb		— 34 a	— 60
Domestic, pulled, per lb		— 34 a	— 50
Hemp—Undr'd Amer'n per ton		210 — a	215—
Dressed American, per ton		240 — a	260—
Flax—Jersey per lb		— 7 a	— 11
Hay, per 100 lbs		1 — a	1.12½
Tallow, per lb		— 11½ a	— 11⅝

Special Notices.

"Charity covereth a multitude of Sins!"

FIRST ANNUAL GRAND SOIREE

OF

ST. JAMES' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION,

AT THE

City Assembly Rooms, on Monday evening, Jan. 26, 1857. Shelton's Band.

Tickets can be had of the following committee:

Dr. Philip O'Reilly, cor. Madison and James sts., Dr. Purcell, do.; Dr. Richard Dillon, cor. Pearl and Rose sts.; Dr. E. D. Connery, 186 Henry st.; Judge Macarthy, 25 Oliver st.; Major R. Barry. 488 Pearl st.; Peter Kenny, 187 Allen st., John Kenny, do.; Andrew E. Mylott, cor 7th av. and 26th st.; J. J. Hanefri, 96 Oliver st.; Denis Hogan, 14 Roosevelt st., Michael Carroll, do.; G. W. Casserly, 60 do; Timothy Coleman, 29 do.; P. O'Neil, 48 do.; Edward Nugent, 48 do.; A. McCaffrey, cor. Catherine and Henry sts., Richard Walters, do.; Bernard Murphy, 4 James st.; John Lynch, 61 do.; Edward Hart, 74 do.; John Healy, 2 do.; John Kelly, 12 Monroe st.; Edward Hart, 27 do.; E. J. Kelly, 19 Oak st.; Thos. Hussey, cor. Madison and Oliver sts., A. C. Reel, do.; Geo. Carr, 90 Madison st.; James Reilly, 35 do.; Philip Lyons, 225 ditto; Michael J. Higgins, 42 do.; T. Cody, 32 Oak street.; Bernard McFeely, 144 Chatham st.; Francis Priest, 126 do.; John Donoghoe, 71 do.; Francis Hagerty, 8 Catharine st., J. Donnelly, 3 do.; John Marsden, 22 Catharine Slip; Edward Butler, 417 Pearl st.; Richard Fitzpatrick, 393 do.; Geo. Rice, 24 Vandewater st.; Bernard Duffy, 38 do.; Wm. Cleary, 11 Jacob st.; John O'Sullivan. 24 Rose st.; P. Mulvehil, 84 Oliver st.; Wm. Walsh, 84 do.; Denis Decourey, 8 Chamber st.. P. Crowe, 46 Frankfort st.; P. J. Tully, 38 do.; Michael Conroy, 36 do.; P. Hughes, 88 Cherry st.; John Oliver, do.; Thomas Fitzgerald, 14 do.; Edward Sweeney, 38 do.; Mich'l Hallinan, 109 do.; Stephen Lynch, 97 Gold st.; Chas. J. Dougherty, 261 William st.; Chas. Doherty 96 Cliff st., Geo. Hargan, 39 Henry st.; John Crowe, 15 Cherry st.; James Grady, 28 Catherine st.

P. J. DOWLING, Floor Manager. JOHN MARSDEN, Treas'r.
JAS. M. SHEEHAN, Sec'y. WM. O'DONNELL, Chairman.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Notice of Application for the discharge of an insolvent from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

James Grant of New-York City, Notice first published January 12th, 1857, Creditors to appear before the Hon. A. D. Russel, City Judge of the City of New-York, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1857, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at his Chambers No. 25 Chambers street, in said city, to show cause, if any they have, why an assignment of said Insolvent's Estate should not be made and he be discharged from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the Statute for the discharge of an Insolvent from his debts.

McCUNN & MONCRIEF,
jan17 6t Atty's. for Insolvent, 29 Wall st., New-York City.

GLORIOUS NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

MADAME PAULINE HELD, the wonderful Animal Magnetizer, has opened her Rooms, No. 20 HOWARD STREET, near Broadway, for the reception of patients. No matter how obstinate or severe their diseases (unless Consumption), she engages to cure them; ordinary cases in three, and extraordinary cases not more than twelve visits. One trial will satisfy the most incredulous of the efficacy of her treatment. She uses no medicine and the patient never suffers a relapse. Call and judge for yourself. Consultation fee, Two Dollars. Can be seen at all hours from 8 to 1, and 2 to 6.

MADAME PAULINE HELD,
jan17 3mos 20 Howard street, near Broadway.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellectual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes	50 cents.	Pit	12½ cents.
Gallery	12½ cents.	Orchestra Stalls	50 cents.
Private Boxes			Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7½.

MONTGOMERY GUARDS.

The Twentieth Annual Ball of this Company, will take place at NIBLO'S SALOON, on Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857.

Tickets—Two Dollars Each—may be had of any of the members, or of the Committee of Arrangements.

Henry Brenner, 71 Wall-st.,	Chas. Leary, 345 Second Avenue,
Mathew Riordan, 94 Wall-st.,	M. Maher, 133 Water, cor. Pine,
John Moore, 75 Oliver,	John Campble, 321 Water,

M. Reynolds, 45 Scamell.

HENRY BRENNER, Chairman.
CHAS. LEARY, Secretary. js 4t

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 839 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man.

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 136 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings:—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hehir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's. j8tf

L. SILLIMAN IVES, LL.D.,

Will Lecture on

"Church and State Charities Compared,"

For the Benefit of the

SOCIETY OF ST. VINCENT DE PAUL,

At the

Broadway Tabernacle,

On Thursday evening, January 29th, at 8 p. m. Tickets 25 cents—to be had at the Catholic bookstores and of the members of the several conferences.

Special Notices.

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furnishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
GERALD GRAY.
y10jan

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y. JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at corner of Center and Grand st. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J. OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey. WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport.

y21june

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 736 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 53 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARDS," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Special Notices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street, sept27 3mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring, by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfactiofi be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York.

Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete prcess (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,

423 Broome st.,

tf6dec New-York.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any order left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 3ms, 188 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicines.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtaincd. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENEUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bouud, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

FOR THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issned in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can snpply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18 tf

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING eurered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

---

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 18 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHS,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 28½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANBURY, Secretary. my31y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.

my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Impoitation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	3s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 3s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap19ly Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 35 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.

dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

---

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 18, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

THOMAS LYNCH,

Provisions, Wholesale and Retail,

NO. 22 ESSEX-MARKEV, NEW-YORK.

Fresh, Salt, Corned, and Smoked Provisions. Shipping orders punctually attended to. Goods delivered to any part of New-York, free of expense.

Special Notices.

VALENTINES! VALENTINES!

PHILIP J. COZANS, Valentine Manufacturer, 107 Nassau street, corner of Ann, New-York, respectfully announces to Booksellers, Stationers and Valentine Dealers, that his VALENTINES, ENVELOPES AND VALENTINE STATIONERY, manufactured for next Valentine season, February, 1857, is now ready.

Wholesale dalers and jobbers will find it to their interest to examine his stock as regards quality and prices. Liberal discounts will be given to them, according to the quantity ordered.

Parties ordering Valentines will please send their orders early, to insure their gbtting them in season. jan24 tf

---

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully reeeived by her mother.

Holloway's Ointment.—The vessels of the skin, under the renovating action of this great external remedy, rapidly discharge the poisonous particles which produce eruptions, sores, boils, or any kind of exterior irritation. Sold at Manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London; and by all Druggists at 25c., 62 1-2c., and $1 per pot or box.

Money Saved, in Buying Books on the Gift Principle.—All the $1 25 Books sold at one dollar. The Gifts consist of various articles; some of which are Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Rings and Pins, Ear-Drops, Sleeve-Buttons, Cashmere Shawls and Scarfs, Black and Colored Silks, Gold and Silver Watches.

A GIFT BOOK to be delivered at the sale of each Book, worth from 25 cents to 60 dollars.

Catalogues of the Books (containing a selection of the best works) sent to any address.

Any person sending an order for 10 Books, will receive a Book and Gift extra. J. S. ANDREWS, 140 Nassau-street, ja25 3m New-York City.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. steamer CONSTITUTION, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 24th day of January, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

jan24 ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California and South Pacific Coast, per U. S. steamer GEORGE LAW, will close at this office on TUESDAY, the 27th day of January, at 1 o'clock, P. M.

jan24 I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Wines and Liquors.

THOMAS RUSSELL,

209 Fulton Street, between Church and Greenwich streets, and across town at 111 Attorney street, corner of Rivington.

THE subscriber begs leave to imform the public, that he has opened the abovee stablishment for the sale of

PURE WINES, BRANDIES, &c.,

with an extensive assortment of

CHOICE CORDIALS,

by wholesale and retail, and would call the attention of buyers to his stock, consisting in part of

FINE COGNAC BRANDY.

The celebrated brand of Leger Freres, a superior article for medicinal purposes.

Pinet Castillon, vintage 1823 and 1842.

Otard, Dupuy & Co., vintages 1836 and 1840.

PORT WINE,

(J. & R. Osborn's Importation,)

COLERAINE AND DUBLIN MALT WHISKEY,

Imported by the subscriber, to which he invites the attention of the connoisseur.

HOLLAND GIN,

Meder Swan, and other favorite brands.

Together with a large assortment of

DUBLIN & LONDON PORTER, SCOTCH ALES,

and a seleet supply of genuine Havana Segars, of various brands.

Particular attention given to orders for families, and goods forwarded to any part of the City, Brooklyn, Jersey, &c. Country Orders, with remittance, immediately attended to.

Having engaged the services of Mr. Thomas Dillon, (late with Archdeacon & O'Conner, Wall street) customers can depend on all orders entrusted to his care being promptly and faithfully attended to.

Parties residing up town can procure the above articles of T. & J. Russell, corner 36th street, and 6th Avenue: T. Russell & Co., corner 4th street and 6th avenue, and at the corners of 13th Street, 8th and 10th Avenues.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY1 STREET,

8m18dec New-York.

ELIZABETHAN ALE.

MEDICAL men now very generally recommend the occasional use of pure ale to those who are in need of nourishment; and it is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage for general use that can be found. This is uot a new idea. In Queen Elizabeth's time our ancestors universally consumed it—from Elizabeth herself, in her palace, to the farmer in the field. In those days, adnlterated wines and fiery liquors may be said to have been unknown, and very heavy penalties were enacted against using anything except malt and hops in brewing. It is not at all extravagant to assert, that the average duration of the life of a large portion of our race is a third less than it was two or three huudred years ago, and this is chiefly attributable to what we eat and what we drink. Even now the heartiest people that can be found are from the rural districts of England, who yet follow the old fashioned diet.

All who use ale, whether as a beverage or for the purpose of nourishment, will find the Elizabethan Ale most excellent. Being made on the Scotch plan, it is as pure and wholesome, (if not equal in flavor) as the imported, while its cost is but little more than a common article. Families and retailers supplied at 120 WATER STREET, one door above Wall. oc4m3

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. y1aug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, ont of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 806 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. y1y26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on libberal terms. jly5 y

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.
JOHN SAVAGE, Literary Editor. JAMES ROCHE, Associate Editor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies Six Cents
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1857. NO. 43.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLIII.

Editorial.

Smith O'Brien and the London Press.
Congress and the New-York Press.
Gunpowder Tea in Canton.
Barney Williams at Home.
Catholic Library Association.
Siege of Granada—Gen. Henningsen's Report—Twenty-one Days in Granada.

Literature.

Personal Recollections.
History of the Catholic Church in America.
Sir William Don.
Malakoff.

Poetry.

Retrospections, by "Enul."

Miscellaneous.

John Banim's Interview with Moore—Old New-York—Military Resources of Ireland—Trade in the North of Ireland—Romantic Beauties of Fermoy previous to the British Invasion—Monument to Wallace—Irish news from all quarters—European news—American—City news, &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a private nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. Madden, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 37½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. Supple, 12 mo. wrappers, 37½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. Campion. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By Thomas Irwin. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

Dublin University Magazine, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

Dublin Penny Journal, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

Ready on Saturday,

Memoir of Thomas Devin Reilly.

By JOHN MITCHEL.

12mo, wrappers. Price 25 cents.

English-Irish Dictionary. 12mo, cloth. Price $1 25.

Orders from the trade solicited.

jan31 P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, John Mitchel.

Lady Morgan's National Stories.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: Second Series.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

Special Notices.

Brady's Gallery.—No. 359 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS.

In anticipation of the demand for Portraits during the ensuing Holidays, Mr. Brady has enlarged his facilities for the production of the

AMBEOTYPE.

The most perfect of pictures taken in an instant, durable, inexpensive, and elegant; the

MELAINOTYPE,

An entirely new style of miniature, equal to those on ivory, first introduced at Brady's Gallery; the

VIGNETTE PHOTOGRAPH,

Made at no other establishment in the world, are all executed promptly and in superior style.

COPIES

of old Daguerreotypes, Portraits, Crayons, Engravings, &c., produced by the Photograph, of any desired size, and in any number. A hundred, or a thousand Photographs produced from a single sitting. m1d20

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Valentines.

VALENTINES! VALENTINES!

Philip J. Oozans, Valentine Manufacturer, 107 Nassau street, corner of Ann, New-York, respectfully announces to Booksellers, Stationers and Valentine Dealers, that his Valenntines, Envelopes and Valentine Stationery, manufactured for next Valentine season, February, 1857, is now ready.

Wholesale dalers and jobbers will find it to their interest to examine his stock as regards quality and prices. Liberal discounts will be given to them, according to the quantity ordered.

Parties ordering Valentines will please send their orders early, to insure their getting them in season. jan24 tf

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

Pages of its History—By Henry de Courcy, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by John Gilmary Shea.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McClosky, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844, "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line" which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my8 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON, } Vice-Presidents.
HUGH KELLY,

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19ly Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap19ly Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.

☞ All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 18 tf

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 81 Park Row,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 31 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.

Give him a call by all means. my3 1y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tt

HERRING'S,

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,
Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

The British mail steamer Africa arrived at Liverpool at 6.30 P. M., on the 4th inst.

The nomination of Lord NAPIER as British Ambassador to Washington, is confirmed.

The Archbishop of Paris was assassinated, evening of the 3d, by a discharged priest named VERGRES, of the diocese of Meaux. The Archpishop was performing religious services in the Church of St. Etienne-du-Mont, when the assassin, in plain clothes, stepped forward, and lifting aside the prelate's cape, plunged a Catalan knife into his heart, exclaiming "a bas la deese!"—(down with the goddess!)—an expression which the murderer afterwards explained to refer to the doctrine of the immaculate conception. The Archbishop fell to the pavement, and faintly muttering "le mal heureux," expired.

The Paris Moniteur this day announces that the Conference has signed a protocol which put an end to the difficulties which have delayed the execution of the treaty of peace.

The provisons for the new boundaries are to take effect March 30, and at the same date the Austrian troops and the British fleet shall have evacuated the Danubian Principalities and the interior waters of Turkey.

The Commissioners of the Principalities will enter these provinces and proceed to the execution of their mission. At the conclusion of their labors, the Commissioners will report to the Conference, which will re-assemble and settle by a convention the organization of the Principalities.

The Duke of Saxe Coburg Gotha, brother of Prince Albert, has offered to mediate between Prussia and Switzerland. The Federal Assembly has issued a proclamation to the Swiss people. There are, it says, hopes of an honorable peace; but at all events, popular enthusiasm is prepared for the greatest sacrifice. The country will watch over the fate of the families and citizens it calls to its defence.

The London Gazette publishes official accounts of the hostile operations in China, confirming previous details. It is said that the French and English Governments have agreed to demand from China a satisfactory and ample treaty by which all countries will benefit, and which will enable them to have easy and regular communication with all parts of the Celestial Empire when necessary. The French squadron is about to proceed to the Chinese seas.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 4th January, says:—"It is said that the French government has determined to abandon Tahiti, finding that it costs much and produces nothing, but on the other hand it is seriously occupied with the creation of the newly-founded colony, New-Caledonia. The island is rich and the climate is healthy, and is appropriated to receive a portion of the French Colony of Guiana. A permanent garrison of 700 or 800 men is to be established there. The French Government is likewise much occupied with the development of the Colony of Senegal. An expedition has been sent from Algiers to ascertain the practicability of establishing a communication between those two colonies by land."

A letter from Constantinople of the 22d ult., in the Courier of Marseilles, says:—"Although England has declared war against Persia, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe went yesterday to pay a visit to Feruk Khan. This step on the part of the British Ambassador, has caused great astonishment; for it is known that negotiations were definitely broken off. His Lordship has employed all his efforts to prevent, or at least delay, the departure of Feruk Khan to Paris. At the beginning he treated the matter with a high hand, but afterwards became milder, and at last did not disdain to go in person to the Persian Legation. It is evident that he did not expect the resistance which he has met with from a Power which he esteemed so lightly."

The Montmorency, from Melbourne, after a journey of seventy days, had arrived in London with one hundred thousand ounces of gold on board.

The Liverpool Post of the 7th inst., says: "There is every reason to believe that the steamer lost on the Goodwin Sands, is the Violet, which was due at Dover from Ostend on Monday, at 12 P. M., but had not arrived at a late hour on Tuesday night. A telegraphic dispatch from Ramsgate, received at 7 P. M., says all hands were drowned. Three bodies were found attached to a life-buoy, and the wreck lies on the sand. The officers and crew numbered seventeen and a post-office guard. The number of passengers at this time of the year amounts to about five or six. No precise details have, however, been received."

Mr. Brotherton, M. P. for Salford, died on the 7th inst., between 10 and 11 o'clock. He was taken ill in an omnibus, in company with Sir John Potter and Sir Elkanah Armitage, and removed to the house of Mr. Southam, surgeon, where he immediately expired.

The Prusso-Swiss War Question.

On the 7th inst., so far as known, the Neufchatel question had advanced no further towards a solution. The last despatch from Berne, dated Jan. 3, states that an ultimatum from France and England was expected to be received there. The last Prussian note on the subject, addressed by M. Manteufel, on the 28th ult., to the representatives of Prussia at Paris, London, Vienna, and St. Petersburg, has been published in the Berlin papers. It sets forth that up to that moment the King had contented himself with demanding the preliminary and unconditional liberation of the Neufchatel prisoners; but, that if the prompt accomplishment of this condition, the only one insisted on previous to entering into negotiations, be refused, the order for the mobilisation of the army will be given, after which matters will present an entirly new aspect. However, in the hope of the friendly arrangement through the other Powers, the King promises to withhold the order of mobilisation up to the 15th inst., provided the Swiss authorities do not hasten the trial of the prisoners before that date. On the other hand, through Switzerland the greatest enthusiasm prevails. There is but one thought—the common country is in danger; and it is estimated that should war ensue, nearly 400,000 men will be under arms for its defence, the old and young seem ready to march, in so far as their health and strength will allow them. The cantonal government of Geneva being in want of 800,000 francs for armaments, the sum was subscribed at the Town Hall in twenty-four hours.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Among the stores found in the Resolute were several puncheons of fine old rum, which had been put on board in prime condition at the outset of her career from Woolwich. One of these puncheons has been sent by Captain Hartstein to Prince Albert, doubtless as a spiritual relic.

The French butcher's bill for the Crimean war shows 309,000 soldiers and 41,974 horses engaged. Of the former 76,000, or about one-fifth only, died or were killed; 9,000 horses returned, the rest, the mortality being comparatively small, were sold to the Turks. There were 1,700 guns and 4,800 wheel carriages, 2,000,000 cannon balls, 10,000,000 lbs. gunpowder, and 66,000,000 ball-cartridges; 920,000 sand bags, 3,000 wooden huts, 60,000 bundles of faggots, 80,000 baskets of earth, and 1,000,000 bags of earth. The food included 30,000,000 lbs. of biscuit, 50,000,000 lbs. of flour, 7,000,000 lbs. of preserved meat, 14,000,000 lbs. salt meat and lard, 8,000,000 lbs. of rice, 4,500,000 of coffee, 6,000,000 lbs. of sugar, 10,000 head of cattle, 2,500,000 gals. of wine, and 1,000,000 of compressed vegetables; 170,000,000 lbs. of hay, 180,000,000 lbs. oats and barley, 44,000,000 lbs. of fuel, 1000,000 suits of clothing and shoes, 800,000 horse shoes and 6,000,000 nails. The fleet and transports carried 550,000 men, 50,000 horses, and 720,000 tons of material. Some of the English papers think it strange that the unconsumed portions of these stores were sent to their markets to be sold, as if in direct competition with their own, and add, that both, glutting the market, were "given away" at nominal prices.

A letter from the Indian Seas, published in the Moniteur de la Flotte, announces that M. d'Montigny, the French Envoy, had arrived at Hue, on the 10th of December last:—Hue or Hoe, is the capital of Cochin China, and the residence of the Emperor. The town is one of the best fortified in Asia, and most advantageously situated. The Annamite government is preparing there a maritime expedition, which to judge from appearances, will be one of the most formidable ever seen in that part of the world. The expedition is, it is said, to act against China, and a descent is to be made on the coast of Pe-Tche-Le. The Cochin Chinese fleet is completely organised, and comprises 1,200 war vessels, of all sizes, divided into three different classes. The ships of war of the first class, which are the size of our frigates, and carry from fifty to sixty guns; the galleys, which are propelled either by sail or by the oar, and the ordinary transport ships. Each division of the fleet is commanded by an admiral, under the direction of Prince Khang, a relative of the Emperor, who fills the post of Grand Admiral. His flag-ship is called the Mensk Knong Sih (the Commander of the Seas), and carries 62 guns. Her masts are gilt, and her sails are bound with white satin and gold fringe. There are a hundred thousand operatives employed in fitting out the expedition, which will be ready to sail in April next.

Meetings against the Income Tax have been held at several of the provincial towns in England—Huddersfield, Rochester, Cheltenham, Plymouth, Devonport, and Stonehouse. At the Rochester meeting, the mayor, who is one of the local commissioners for the Tax, denounced it as being both unjust and despotic. From his experience as one of the commissioners, he said, he had long been of opinion that it afforded a premium for rascality, and was a curse to the country. At Huddersfield, the resolutions declared that now that the war had ceased, the tax should be reduced to the rate it would have been assessed at under the act of 1853, had the war not intervened; that the machinery for the assessment of the tax wss defective; a moiety of the general and additional commissioners should be periodically elected by those liable to the assessment; and that the inequalities of the tax should ce remedied by "differential duties upon different descriptions of income, according to their relative character of comparative permanence or precariousness."

Mr. J. A. Tobin, merchant; Mr. J. B. Brenicker, merchant; Mr. J. R. Jeffery, draper; Mr. Edward Heath, merchant, and Mr. R. Shiel, merchant, have been added to the list of magistrates sor the borough of Liverpool. The first two are Tories, and the other three ardent Liberals. Mr. Shiel is a Roman Catholic.

CAPTURE OF THE CHINESE FORTS.

From the Friend of China.

THURSDAY, OCT. 23.—This morning her Majesty's ship Barracouta, having a large party of marines on board, under the command of Captain Penrose and Lieutenant Burton, took in tow the boom boats of her Majesty's ships Winchester and Sybil and proceeded to the Barrier forts, followed by the Coromandel with flag, and having in tow some of the boats of the Calcutta. On reaching the Upper fort (Napier's), situated on a peninsula, she opened fire with shell, throwing them in first-rate style. The Winchester boats pushed in under shelter of her guns, and took possession of the fort. The Barracouta then shelled, first ino one, then the other of the forts, the Coromandel's had the boats' guns doing good work. Two forts opened fire, but it was of short duration, owing to the rapid movements of the boats. Lieutenant Dent, with boats of the Sybil, took possession of Howqua's fort. The guns (forty-five of them) were found loaded. They were spiked and the trunnions broken off, the carriages destroyed, and the doors of the embrasures torn from their hinges. A similar fate awaited the other forts. Promptitude and decision were the order of the day. The Winchester had some sharp firing with the braves, who wished to retain possession of the forts. Meanwhile the Barracouta steamed through Blenheim reach, shelled Blenheim fort, and anchored below the stakes near Macoa forts, the latter having already been taken by the boats of the Calcutta. The Coromandel, after the boats had finished by burning the buildings within the forts, took them in tow and proceeded to Canton. The officers engaged during the day were as follows: The Sybil—Lieutenant Dent and Chisholm, Midshipmen De Burgh, Price, Brooke and Hiperley; the Winchester—Lieutenant Bushnell, Mr. Mate James, Lieutenant Pellew, Mr. Midshipman Broome, and Assistant Surgeon Trerson; the Calcutta—Lieutenant Campbell and Beamish; Staff Surgeon Anderson on board the Coromandel.

FRIDAY, 24—This morning Commodore Elliot, in the Barracouta, crossed the barrier, and opened fire on the Bird's nest fort. This place was a mass of ruins in a short time. The Sampson soon followed, and took up a position opposite the Shameen forts. The Bird's nest fort having been taken possession of was left garrisoned, while the energetic Captain Hall, with the Sybil's and Winchester's boats, took possession of the Shameen forts.

SATURDAY, 25.—The greater part of the day was spent in destroying the guns of the Shameen forts. The Red fort being already in the charge of her Majesty's ship Encounter, in the afternoon the boats went down the river and gained the Dutch Folly without opposition, though a few hours previously there was close to it about twenty mandarin junks. These retired to a further distance and got rid of their guns. A strong party of marines was placed in the Folly, the boats returning to their former positions.

SUNDAY, 26.—A party of the Royal Artillery arrived, under command of Captain Rotten. They were stationed in the Folly with marines and blue-jackets, the latter to work two thirty-two pounders under command of Commander Rolland, of the Calcutta. The guns taken and destroyed were 437 in number, including some fine brass 24 pounders.

MONDAY, 27.—This morning, at 6 o'clock, the Barracouta proceeded to Sulphur Creek, about two miles and a half distant from the Shameen forts, where in the late war the troops disembarked to attack Gough fort. She succeeded in getting within shelling distance of the Tartar encampments. Some of the shells which fell on the Red Tower elicited cheers three times three from the people on the Factory housetops. The Encounter threw shells into the Viceroy's palace with unerring precision. The firing ceased at 6 P. M.

TUESDAY, 28.—The Hon Keith Stewart, with a strong reinforcement from the Nankin, arrived. The merchant Howqua requested an interview with his Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief. His Excellency declined treating with any but those high in authority. His Excellency, however, gave the Imperial Commissioner a little longer time to pause ere more blood should be spilt through his mulish obstinacy. The Encounter commenced shelling the palace, and the Dutch Folly opened fire at noon, clearing away the houses between the wall and water's edge. One of the houses caught fire, which spread rapidly toward the Chin-chew Hongs. This was subdued by midnight. During the day a strong party of the blue-jackets was employed in pulling down houses in Hog-lane. This lane is in dangerous proximity to the Factories in case of fire, and has been frequently a source of much terror to the foreign residents.

WEDNESDAY, 29.—An efficient breach having been made in the walls by the guns of the Dutch Folly—and no intimation from Yeh as to a wish for peace—preparation was made to attack the city by assault. The fort again commenced firing, the Encounter throwing in an occasional shell. At a little past one P. M., a party of 180 marines and some blue-jackets from ships embarked in boats; they were accompanied by two field-pieces, in charge of Lieutenants Bushnell and Twisden; the whole number being short of 300. After a short delay under the walls of the fort the boats disembarked the marines and blue-jackets, who were for shore duty. The ruins through which the men had to pass were still smouldering, and the air oppressively hot.

MONUMENT TO SIR WILLIAM WALLACE.

From the Dublin Nation.

Until within a few weeks past it was perfectly legitimate for a British subject to worship Wallace as a patriot hero. At this moment "Scots wha ha'e" is considered, South of the Tweed, to be more dangerous than the "Rans des Vaches," more revolutionary than the immortal "Marsellaise." Our fair neighbors who, at one time or another, wept their sweet eyes' full over Miss Porter's "Scottish Chiefs"—that dear delightful book, nearly as drenching to pocket-handkerchiefs as the "Children of the Abbey"—must be rather astonished to hear papa wishing the glorious creature who "waved the fatal sword," consigned to oblivion or—Rhadamanthus. In fact, should the present temper of Mr. Bull last a few weeks longer, the Prince of Wales must doff his tartan and Queen Victoria cut Balmoral, or the Guelph dynasty come to be in danger.

"What's a' the steer kimmir?" Why "growls the loud thunder from Printing House square?" Never did mountain so large labor more dreadfully in bringing forth so small a mouse. The natives of that part of Britain called Scotland are desirous of paying a debt of gratitude, long due, and rendered only more weighty by the accumulated interest of five hundred years. William Wallace did more for the Scotland of his day than Nelson or Wellington for the England of theirs. To lead the fleets or armies of a rich and powerful nation ready to lavish its unbounded treasures in the prosecution of its ambition—to marshal panoplied hosts, perfectly disciplined, with a national organization to supply money and material, commissariat and transport—to defend their country from foreign foe—to twine laurels around its banners—these have been the merits and achievements of the great men of whom Englishmen are proud. But to brave the outlaw's fate—to awaken to life and liberty a prostrate and despairing nation—to lead to the unequal but glorious combat, untrained bands of volunteers—to wage a great war without organisation or support, without money, without arms, without any of the necessaries of a campaign—yet without these to rescue the liberties of his country, to cover its name with glory, and pave the way for its ultimate freedom, and, finally, to lay down his life on the scaffold—a martyr for Scotland—these have been the deeds of him whom the men of Scotland fain would honor. Over this confessor and martyr for Scottish nationality, there rises neither ancient cairn nor modern monument. It is at length proposed to do what ought long since to have been done—Scots are about to raise a memorial to the Scottish Patriot. At this the English journals have taken alarm, and Wallace and the Scots have come in for as much of disparagement and abuse as previously it had been usual for them to receive sympathy and laudation. Now why do the English condemn at home that which they applaud abroad? Would a monument to Tell or Sobieski, be a praiseworthy or objectionable underataking on the part of those for whom these heroes bled? It is suggested as an excuse for the onslaught on Scottish nationality, that the Wallace monument must be insulting to England, since it was against England Wallace fought. It is not to insult England but to honor Scotland this movement has been set on foot; it is not because he fought against England, but because he fought for Scotland, that Wallace is now about to be decreed a national monument. Had any hero in Scottish history equally signalised himself and served his country in a war against Ireland, France or Russia, and that Wallace had been the more highly honored, then, indeed, the thing would wear the aspect of an anti-English movement. This is the point to be considered, and it destroys the semblance of analogy in the case cited by the Times—that of England raising a monument to Queen Phillipa who overthrew the Scots. Queen Phillipa, fills no such place in English history as Wallace in Scotch, such a selection would, therefore, be invidious and insulting; that of Wallace is a necessity, natural and appropriate. If, then, Englishmen would not have the Scotch destroy their national records, to efface from their breasts all trace of feelings held to be at all times powerful incentives to valor and progress, let them not decry this desire to pay the debt which Scotland owes to William Wallace. How far would the English carry such an idea as this just noticed? Why not do away with the highland costume—why keep up a national distinction in the army, instead of dressing the soldiers of North and South Britain in the same uniform?

It is to be remarked that the argument that insult to England is meant by the Wallace monument, is not applied by the English people in case of their own heroes. Was it to insult France, that the grand column was raised in Trafalgar square, London? Was it to insult France, Dublin blocked up the finest street in Europe with a Nelson pillar, and erected the overgrown milestone in the Park? "Oh! but Wellington is not long dead; Nelson belongs to the age in which his monument was raised," says an Englishman; "we do not go into the past to seek out victories to commemorate; if Wellington and Nelson were not honored in their own day, it would be foolish in a future generation to take the matter up." A great deal of this sort of argument has been used across the channel, but we would recommend Englishmen before they use it, to inquire whether it reflects great credit on their patriotism and morality, to satisfy themselves whether, judged by the true standard, the Scotch are not the people in a position to taunt and disparage the English in this respect. But in any case, who can see in this desire on the part of a people who have freely shed their blood in support of the British empire, to honor one who served them so well, aught to deserve the galling sneers and insulting taunts so needlessly and profusely indulged in by the English Press? Some of their statements are peculiarly interesting to us Irishmen. When we, without one of the many rights and advantages enjoyed by Scotland, asked for liberty to manage our own affairs, we were referred to Scotland as an instance of the prosperity consequent upon being governed from London. That country was described to us, by the English journals, as likely to outrival England itself, so great and rapid its progress in arts, science and commerce, since the abolition of a domestic legislature. To-day we find those journals declaring Scotland to be far gone in decline—a laggard in learning and commerce.

The real cause of antipathy to the Wallace Monument is not that it is insulting to England, but that Englishmen do not understand, and would appear to be incapable of appreciating the feeling of nationality to which this movement owes its birth. In all their history they have no parallel for Wallace; no hero who achieved for his country a similar task, unless we except Alfred. Whenever an invader planted his foot on Britain he remained—a conqueror. The Saxons came and held it until William I., a foreigner, with a foreign army, speaking a foreign tongue, touched the soil of England; his first battle was a victory, and made him King of England, Henry VII. overthrew Richard III. with an army composed, in point of fact mostly of foreigners. Williiam III., a foreigner, gained the English crown with an army of foreigners. If we are to argue from their past history, the English are so "practical" and regard nationality as so "absurd," that if a foreigner—say H. I. M. Napoleon III.—landed at Hastings to-morrow, many of them would, like "sensible business men," set to making cotton and smelting iron ore under his sceptre as readily as under Victoria's. Wallace was not a man of this stamp, and Glencoe was "cut off" and Culloden lost before the last foreign conquest of Britain was complete.

For our own part, we wish the Wallace Monument to be a success; although if any have a right to take offence at the language used by its promoters, it is we, as Catholics, and not our Protestant English neighbors: for assuredly "Popery" has received more "insult" from Professor Blackie and his fellow-orators than England or the English. But we are not only so un-English as to hold that the Scotch have a perfect right to honor, by monument or otherwise, those who served Scotland in council or camp, but we hold that of all such men, William Wallace is truly and richly worthy of the memorial it is proposed to raise.

American News.

Crime in Boston.

The Annual Report of the Boston Chief of Police, D. J. Coburn, Esq., is a voluminous document, from which the Bee of that city gleans the following facts and figures:—

The whole number of arrests during the year was 17,538. Of this number 8,979 were convicted; 13,700 were males, and 3,838 were females; foreigners, 14,067; Americans, 3,471; non-residents, 3,507; miners, 2,766.

The Tombs under the Court House were first occupied on the 22d April last, since which time 6,182 persons have been committed there from the several Police Stations.

The whole number of persons provided with lodgings at the various Police Stations was 9,537, of which number 7,114 were males, and 1,923 females; foreigners, 5,649; Americans, 2,388; non-residents, 5,263; minors, 1,541.

Among the persons arrested were for drunkenness, 6,780; assault and battery, 1,223; common drunkards, 935; simple larceny, 1,252; disorderly and noisy persons, 2,276; larceny from buildings and from the person, 598; suspicious persons, 319; vagrants, 282; violation of city ordinances, 199; stubborn children, 75; pickpockets, 92; robbery, 63; murder, 8; forgery, 14; idle and desolute persons, 118; escaped convicts, 11; adultery, 33; assaulting officers, 74; burglary, 285; assault with deadly weapons, 34; assault with intent to kill and murder, 27; and the balance for sundry offences, misdemeanors, &c.

In addition to the above, 5944 disturbances have been quelled without arrests; insane persons provided for, 130; fires extinguished without alarm, 93; injured persons provided for with needful aid, 148; persons assisted home, 681; persons rescued from drowning, 42; stores found open in the night time, 1,329; stray teams put up, 165; lost children returned to their homes, 467; sick persons provided for, 41; together with sundry other minor matters.

Amount of property taken from prisoners and lodgers while in temporary custody, and restored to the same subsequently, $44,802 44; amount of property reported stolen in the city, $60,795 01; amount of property reported lost in the city, $9,171; amount reported stolen out of the city, $53,014 43; amount recovered by the Police, $54,615 32; amount of property saved from fire by the Police, $3,344; amount of property now in possession of the Department, either retained as evidence or awaiting owners, $30,000; amount of fines imposed by the Courts on parties prosecuted by the Police, paid into the treasury, $23,490 04. Aggregate term of imprisonment by the Courts, 1255 years and 1 month. Amount of fees earned by the Police in the Courts, $4,641 40; amount received from the hack, truck and other licenses, $11,501 70; all of which has been paid into the treasury.

The people of Delaware have adopted an amendment to the constitution of the state prohibiting lotteries after January 1st, 1862. The governor has signed the amendment, and he asks the legislature to make the necessary legislation to carry the amendment into effect. In Maryland, lotteries will cease to exist on the 1st of April, 1859, in virtue of a provision of the state constitution.

Col. Matt. Ward, of Texas, was lately robbed of $12,000 on the Dangerfield road in that State, the thief having cut the straps of his trunk while the Colonel was driving through thick bushes. The same gentleman had his pockets picked of $1200 while in attendance on the Cincinnati Convention.

Mr. Neal, a Democratic member of the Iowa Senate, has introduced a bill in that body to repeal the Maine liquor law. The Democratic members of the Legislature are warmly in favor of the repeal of the law; but it is apprehended that the Black Republican majority will not allow the bill repealing it to pass, though the law is a dead letter in Iowa.

The St. Louis Democrat says the price of bread at Jefferson City, Mo., is raised this winter to $30 a week. The pay of the members of the Legislature amounts to only $21. The Legislature talk of adjourning to St. Louis.

The editor of the Worcester Bay State indulges in a little plain talk to his anti-slavery neighbors, and says of himself: "We wish them to realize that this paper is Border Ruffian throughout, from hoops to phylacteries."

Senator Harlan, of Iowa, has been re-elected to the seat which he lately vacated under the resolution of the Senate's Committee on Elections. He had 30 majority over his Democratic opponent.

The Indiana State Senate has been organized by the election of republican officers. The republicans are determined that no democrat shall be elected to the U. S. Senate, and will, therefore, not go into joint ballot.

The first negro brought into Virginia was landed from a Dutch ship in 1620. In 1623 there were about 1500 inhabitants in Virginia, of whom 20 were negroes.

In Buffalo, last week, an actor named Hill deserted his wife and children, and eloped with one of the most fashionable ladies of the place.

The two Houses of the Pennsylvania Legislature having failed to meet in Convention to elect a State Treasurer, it will require the passage of a new law to do so.

The Boston Concord and Montreal Railroad has been placed in the hands of Trustees, of whom J. M. Whiton is the agent. The road is indebted to the amount of $1,000,000.

A ride through the streets of Boston, just now, says the Bee, is rather productive of a sea-sickativeness in feeling. It is as billowy as the ocean.

Venison is selling from 5 to 8 cents per pound at Winona. At Dubuque it rates at 6 cents. Since the late snow it has been scarce.

The St. Paul (Minnesota) Times says that firewood is selling in that city for $9 a cord.

The scarlet fever is raging badly among the children of Springfield, Ohio.

City News.

Emigration in 1856.

The following table shows the ports whence passenger vessels have arrived in this city, together with the number of vessels and emigrant passengers from each port during the year 1856:

Ports whence sailed	No. of Vessels	No. of Pass.
Liverpool, Great Britain	215	69,499
London, Great Britain	49	8,875
Bristol, Great Britain	4	732
Newport, Great Britain	3	56
Cardiff, Great Britain	1	15
Sunderland, Great Britain	1	13
Southampton, Great Britain	1	222
Glasgow, Great Britain	14	2,032
Tralee, Great Britain	4	996
Belfast, Great Britain	3	436
Havre, France	78	17,091
Antwerp, Belgium	33	7,209
Amsterdam, Holland	1	15
Rotterdam, Holland	16	1,129
Hamburg, Hamburg	62	14,896
Emdem, Hamburg	1	80
Bremen, Bremen	76	17,671
Stockholm, Sweden	1	32
Gefle, Sweden	2	216
Gothenburg, Sweden	4	481
Leghorn, Italy	7	233
Genoa, Italy	4	296
Total	579	141,625

STATISTICS OF EMIGRATION.

John A. Kennedy, Superintendent of Castle Garden Emigration Depot, presented his annual report for the year 1856, on the 14th inst. It shows that 141,625 have been landed at Castle Garden, from 579 vessels arriving from twenty-one different ports of Europe. He furnishes the following tables:—

Table showing the Arrivals per Month, and Cash Means of Passengers.

Months.	Passengers.	Cash Means.
January	1,074	$38,155 84
February	2,229	103,947 14
March	5,707	227,895 11
April	7,033	521,586 08
May	19,905	1,875,953 11
June	19,538	758,914 24
July	16,292	773,802 14
August	16,295	1,285,782 33
September	14,483	1,133,994 04
October	16,765	1,524,837 00
November	17,836	1,127,103 00
December	4,378	210,104 00
Totals	141,625	$9,642,104 00

Table showing the Destination of Emigrants, their Cash Means, and the Average Means of each Man, Woman and Child.

Destination.	Passengers.	Cash Means	Av'ge cash per head.
Maine	148	$3,986 50	$26 93
New Hampshire	177	2,772 81	15 66
Vermont	250	5,357 50	21 48
Massachusetts	6,494	162,986 23	26 68
Rhode Island	1,354	29,921 69	22 09
Connecticut	2,262	99,581 39	43 44
New-York	55,055	2,101,656 80	38 17
New Jersey	3,242	295,430 66	91 12
Pennsylvania	11,749	694,785 48	59 13
Ohio	7,085	681,637 81	96 20
Indiana	1,388	150,184 72	108 20
Illinois	11,064	1,400,482 45	126 62
Michigan	3,296	331,076 38	100 44
Wisconsin	13,327	1,984,128 10	148 88
Iowa	2,380	3,42,583 75	143 94
California	778	167,608 25	215 43
Delaware	81	4,102 50	50 64
Maryland	1,164	60,704 28	52 15
Virginia	566	25,102 43	44 43
North Carolina	66	3,829 50	58 02
South Carolina	178	8,945 50	50 25
Georgia	47	8,207 00	174 61
Florida	12	667 00	55 58
Alabama	30	1,707 50	56 91
Louisiana	171	10,068 22	58 80
Texas	76	8,325 75	109 54
Arkansas	30	4,709 00	156 66
Missouri	1,064	109,122 19	102 55
Mississippi	14	1,380 00	98 57
Tennessee	178	11,308 50	63 51
Kentucky	460	25,317 75	55 03
District of Columbia	407	34,691 59	85 23
Kansas	11	3,288 00	298 81
Nebraska	2	300 00	150 00
Minnesota	427	56,043 00	131 24
Utah	1,574	32,036 38	22 82
Canada	8,526	652,328 35	76 51
Nova Scotia	2	15 00	7 50
West Indies	11	1,107 00	100 63
South America	30	1,722 50	57 41
Mexico	12	1,327 56	110 63
Australia	1	20 00	20 00
Uncertain	2,113	120,979 98	57 25
Unknown	4,187	— —	— —
Total	141,625	$9,642,104 00	$3,068 08

Two burglars entered a house in London terrace, between 8 and 9 o'clock on Saturday evening, and went coolly to work in picking up such valuables as they could find and placing them in a basket which they carried. The servant girl, who was in the back basement, hearing the noise, proceeded up stairs to the front room where the burglars were operating, and suddenly turned on the gas. The rascals fled precipitately into the street with their booty, and the girl followed closely after them, hallooing for help. The fellow who carried the basket had not proceeded many steps ere he was overhauled by his female pursuer who held him fast and snatched the basket from his hands. Not satisfied with this, she continued to hold and struggle with the fellow for several minutes, and would have compelled him to succumb, had he not artfully withdrawn himself from his overcoat and undercoat, both of which he left behind in the hands of the female champion, and then started off in his shirt-sleeves through the storm. The girl then returned to the house with the property and—fainted!

There were about a dozen fires in this city within the thirty-six hours ending midnight the 20th inst. A number of them were caused by the proximity of wood-work to pipes which were heated to an unusual degree in consequence of the cold weather.

LOCAL CHANGES AND LOCAL FACTS

OF OLD NEW-YORK.

BY JOHN F. WATSON,
Author of the Annals of Philadelphia.

NO. V.

MISCELLANEOUS FACTS.

"All pay contribution to the store he gleans."

The Indians, in the year 1746, came to the city of New-York in a great body, say several hundreds, to hold a conference or treaty with the governor. Their appearance was very imposing; and being the last time they ever appeared there for such purposes, having afterwards usually met the governor at Albany, they made a very strong impression on the beholders. David Grim, then young, who saw them, has left some Mss. memoranda respecting them, which I saw, to this effect:—They were Oneidas and Mohawks; they came from Albany, crowding the North River with their canoes; a great sight so near New-York; bringing with them their squaws and papouses (children); they encamped on the site now Hudson's Square, before St. John's church, then a low sand beach; from thence they marched in solemn train, single file, down Broadway to Fort George, then the residence of the British Governor, George Clinton. As they marched, they displayed numerous scalps—lifted on poles by way of flags or trophies, taken from their French or Indian enemies. What a spectacle in a city!

In return the governor and officers of the colonial government, with many citizens, made out a long procession to the Indian camp, and presented them there the usual presents.

The Indians were remembered by Mr. Bogert's grandmother to be often encamped at "Cow-foot Hill," a continuation of Pearl-street; there they made and sold baskets.

An Indian's remains, such as his bones and some ornaments, were lately found in digging at the corner of Wall and Broad-streets. Half-Indian Jack died at Hersimus, (N. J.,) on the 2d February, 1831, at the extreme age of 102 years. In the revolutionary war he acted as a spy for the British.

The palisades and block-houses erected in 1745, were well remembered by Mr. David Grim. There was then much apprehension from the French and Indians; £8,000 was voted to defray the cost. Mr. Grim said the palisades began at the house now 57 Cherry-street, then the last house out on the East River towards Kip's Bay; thence they extended direct to Windmill-Hill, [that is, near the present Chatham theatre,] and thence in the rear of the poor-house to Dominie's Hook at the North River.

The palisades were made of cedar-logs, of fourteen feet long, and ten inches in diameter: were placed in a trench three feet deep, with loop-holes all along for muskets—having also a breast-work of fuur feet high and four feet wide. There were also three block-houses of about thirty feet square and ten feet high. These had in each six port-holes for cannon—were constructed of logs of eighteen inches thick, and at equi-distance between the three gates of the city, they being placed on each road of the three entrances or outlets; one was in Pearl-street, nearly in front of Banker-street; the other in rear of the poor-house, and the third lay between Church and Chapel-streets.

This general description of the line of defence was confirmed to me by old Mr. Tabelee, aged eighty-seven. He described one gate as across Chatham, close to Kate-Mutz's garden, on Windmill Hill. The block-house on the North River, he supposed stood about the end of Reed-street.

The great fires of '76 and '78 are still remembered with lively sensibility by the old inhabitants. They occurred while the British held possession of the city, and excited a fear at the time that the "American Rebels" had purposed to oust them, by their own sacrifices, like another Moscow. It is, however, believed to have occurred solely from accident. Mr. Brower thought he was well-informed by a Mr. Robins, then on the spot, that it occurred from the shavings in a board-yard on Whitehall-slip; but Mr. David Grim, in his MSS. notes, with his daughter, is very minute to this effect, saying:—The fire began on the 21st of September, 1776, in a small wooden house on the wharf, near the Whitehall-slip, then occupied by women of ill-fame. It began late at night, and at a time when but few of the inhabitants were left in the city, by reason of the presence of the enemy. The raging element was terrific and sublime—it burned up Broadway on both sides until it was arrested on the eastern side by Mr. Harrison's brick house; but it continued to rage and destroy all along the western side to St. Paul's church; thence it inclined towards the North River, (the wind having changed to south-east) until it ran out at the water-edge a little beyond the Bear-market, say at the present Barclay-street.

Trinity church, though standing alone, was fired by the flakes of fire which fell on its steep roof, then so steep that none could stand upon it to put out the falling embers. But St. Paul's church, equally exposed, was saved, by allowing citizens to stand on its flater roof and wet it as occasion required.

In this awful conflagration, four hundred and ninety-three houses were consumed; generally in that day they were inferior houses to the present, and many of them were of wood.

Several of the inhabitants were restrained from going out to assist at night from a fear they might be arrested as suspicious persons. In fact, several decent citizens were sent to the Provost Guard for examination, and some had to stay there two or three days, until their loyalty could be made out. In one case, even a good loyalist and a decent man—sometimes too much inclined "to taste a drop too much"—(a Mr. White)—was by misapprehension of his character, and in the excitement of the moment, hung up on a sign-post, at the corner of Cherry and Rosevelt-streets. Mr. N. Stuyvesant told me he saw a man hanging on his own sign post, probably the same person before referred to by Mr. Grim.

Mr. Grim has given to the Historical Society a topographical map showing the whole line of conflagration.

The next fire, of August, 1778, occurred on Cruger's wharf, and burned about fifty houses. On that occasion the military took the exclusive management, not suffering the citizen-firemen to control the manner of its extinguishment. It was afterwards ordered by the Commander-in-chief that the military should help, but not order, at the suppression of fires.

The Slips, so called, were originally openings to the river, into which they drove their carts to take out cord-wood from vessels. The cause of their several names has been preserved by Mr. D. Grim.

Whitehall-slip took its name from Col. Moore's large white house, or hall. It adjoined the Slip, and was usually called Whitehall."

Coenties-slip took its name from the combination of two names—say of Coenract and Jane Ten Eycke—called familiarly Coen and Anties.

The Old-slip was so called, because it was the first or oldest in the city.

Burling-slip was so called after a respectable family of that name, living once at the corner of Smith's Vly (now Pearl-street) and Golden Hill.

Beekman-slip after a family once living there.

There was only one slip on the North River side, which was at the foot of Oswego-street, now called Liberty-street.

Corlear's Hook, which means a point, was originally called Nechtant by the Indians, and was doubtless from its locality a favorite spot with them. There Van Corlear, who was trumpeter at the fort under Van Twiller, had laid out his little farm, which he sold in 1652 to Wm. Beekman, for £750.

The Negro-plot of 1741, was a circumstance of great terror and excitement in its day. Aged parsons have still very lively traditionary recollections of it. One old man showed me the corner house in Broad-street, near the river then, where the chief plotters conspired. Old Mr. Tabelee says, new alarms were frequent after the above was subdued. For a long time in his youth, citizens watched every night, and most people went abroad with lanterns.

Mr. David Grim, in his MSS. notices, says, he retained a perfect idea of the thing as it was. He saw the negroes chained to a stake and burned to death. The place was in a valley, between Windmill Hill (Chatham theatre) and Pot-Baker's Hill, now Augusta-street, about its centre) and in midway of Pearl and Barclay-streets. At the same place they continued their executions for many years afterwards.

John Hustan, a whiteman, was one of the principals, and was hung in chains, on a gibbet at the south-east point of H. Rutger's farm on the East River, not ten yards from the present south-east corner of Cherry and Catharine streets. Since then, the crowd of population there has far driven off his "affrighted ghost," if indeed it ever kept its vigils there.

Cæsar, a black man, a principal of the negroes, was also hung in chains, on a gibbet at the south-east corner of the old powder-house in Magazine-street. Many of those negroes were burnt and hung, and a great number of others were transported to other countries.

We must conceive, that on so dreadful a fear as a general massacre, (for guns were fired, and "many run to and fro,") the whole scenes of arrest, trial, execution, and criminals long hung in chains, must have kept up a continual feverish excitement, disturbing even the very dreams when sleeping. Thank God, better times have succeeded, and better views to fellow-men.

"I would not have a slave to tremble when I wake,
For all the price of sinews bought and sold!"

Roman Catholics, and the cry of "church and state in danger," was often witnessed on election and other occasions in New-York; also, "high and low church" were resounded. "No Bishop" could be seen, in capitals, on fences, &c. A man did not dare so avow himself a Catholic; it was odious. A chapel then would have been pulled down. It used to be said, "John Leary goes once a year to Philadelphia, to get absolution."

Hallam's company of players—the first on record—played at New-York in 1754.

William Bradford, fifty years government printer at New-York, died at the age of ninety-four, in the year 1752. He had been printer a few years at Philadelphia in the time of the primitive settlement.

In 1765, two women, named Fuller and Knight, were placed one hour in the pillory, for keeping bawdy-houses. If this were again enforced, would not much of the gaudy livery of some be set down?

A gazette of 1722, hints at the declining whalery along Long Island, saying, "There are but four whales killed on Long Island, and little oil is expected from thence."

But they have, soon after, a generous recompense; for in 1724 it is announced that at Point Judith, in a pond there, they took 700,000 bass, loading therewith fifty carts, 1000 horses, and sundry boats.

In the old Potters-field there was formerly a beautiful epitaph on a patriot stranger from England, a Mr. Taylor, who came to join our fortunes, to wit:—

"Far from his kindred friends and native skies,
Here mouldering in the dust, poor Taylor lies.
Firm was his mind and fraught with various lore,
And his warm heart was never cold before;
He loved his country, and that spot of earth
Which gave a Milton, Hampden, Bradshaw birth—
But when that country, dead to all but gain,
Bow'd her base neck and hugg'd the oppressor's chain
Loathing the abject scene, he droop'd and sigh'd,
Cross'd the wild waves, and here untimely died."

TRADE IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.

From the Belfast Ulsterman.

When the insane revocation of the Edict of Nantes forced thousands of French Huguenots into exile, a number of them—the were linen weavers—found a welcome refuge in Lisnagarney, a little town within a few miles of Belfast, and now known by the name of Lisburn. At the same time a linen manufacturer of Picardy, named Louis Crommelin, a man of great talent and energy, who had taken refuge in Holland, was induced to come to Lisnagarney, and join his exiled countrymen. Rich and accomplished, he soon became the guide and head of the little colony. The still backward condition of the Ulster linen manufacture attracted his attention, and supported by the favor of of the king, he proceeded to apply to its advancement all his superior knowledge and higher modes of working. This French Celt introduced new and improved looms and other apparatus from Holland, devoting his mind to every detail connected with the trade, from the growing of the flax to the weaving of the thread and the bleaching of the cloth; and he induced his brother-in-law, Nicholas de la Cherois, and other countrymen to come and join him in his labors. To these strangers King William gave the support of royal favor and protection; and as the silk trade of Spitalfields owes its origin to the French exiles settled there—as the cloth trade of France received a powerful stimulus from the skill of the Irish workmen who went thither after their own manufacture had been destroyed at home—so is the progress of the linen trade of Ulster mainly attributable to the Huguenot weavers of Lisnagarney.

Fifty years ago there was only one small flax spinning mill in Ulster (built by a native of Cork)—and there are now eighty such mills in Ulster, forty of which are in and around Belfast alone—employing between 30,000 and 40,000 hands,

In the year 1777 it occurred to a benevolent citizen of Belfast, named Joy (father to the late Chief Baron of that name), that if some sort of occupation were found for the inmates of the local poor asylum, the creatures might be enabled to pass the listless hours more cheerfully. He set them to spinning cotton yarn, and taught them to weave cotton cloth, the produce of which contributed to their support, for, as good luck would have it, Mr. Joy was happily ignorant of political economy, and had no fear of the consequences of pauper labor—as the scientific cant is—competing with skilled industry. Now, when the Belfast philanthropist began his task there was not a single cotton loom in all Ulster. But very soon the new branch of productive labor spread beyond the walls of the workhouse; and it grew so fast that, in less than twenty-four years the number of weavers had multiplied to 13,500, and in a radius of ten miles round Belfast, upwards of twenty-seven thousand persons were getting employment one way or the other from this branch of trade.

As far back as the thirteenth century, by the tidal waters of the Lagan, about ten miles from where that dirty stream, flowing over a bed of mud, is discharged into the Atlantic, there stood a castle which formed one of the fortresses of the English pale. It was a most important position (the mouth of the ford, as its name is said to signify); and many a bloody fight was fought there, and more than once did this rude fortress change owners from Norman to Celt, and from Celt to Norman again. In 1604 Sir Arthur Chichester, King James's deputy became lord of the fortress of Belfast. The deputy brought over a little colony of peasants from his estates in Devon, and soon a small town grew up around the castle. The general plantation of Ulster, which took place four years after, quickened the progress of the town; and before a single generation had passed away, that marshy tract, where so many a bloody combat had been fought, became the home of a thriving community. The town got a charter, a corporation, and the privilege of sending two representatives to the Irish Parliament. Admirably placed, the mart and outlet of the wealthiest districts of Ulster, Belfast, in half a century from Chichester's first possession of it, became the foremost town north of the Irish metropolis.

ROMANTIC BEAUTIES OF FERMOY PREVIOUS TO THE BRITISH INVASION.

This manor, says a correspondent of the Dublin Telegraph, was the property of the Church, and the adjoining principalities in the possession of The O'Keeffe, who built those noble ruins, extant, in the deserted Glanworth, where the copious and serpentine Funchen displays crystal clearness and great beauty, and is surrounded by the luxuriant fields that adorn that rich vale. Count Fleming, a Norman general, who accompanied King John, after the barbarous murder of his nephew, Prince Arthur, into Ireland in 1199, was rewarded with lands on the banks of the Blackwater, and carried on a bloody war with O'Keeffe and his faithful retainers. The son of Count Fleming was enriched by King John with the great manor of Slane, on the banks of the Boyne, in Meath, and became the ancestor of the Lords of Slane, which the heirs of that illustrious house retained till forfeited for their adherence to the House of Stuart at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. The daughter of Count Fleming, who married Fitzhugh De Rupe, a Norman Baron, brought those extensive and fertile manors to the first of the name who flourished in South Munster. De Rupe built those magnificent but shattered ruins, known as Bridgetown Abbey, at the enchanting confluence of the Blackwater and the beautiful Awbeg, which Edmond Spenser, of Castlepookey, near Doneraile, panegyrized in his Fairy Queen in 1598. Edward the Fourth, in 1461, raised Richard De Rupe, who assumed the name of Roche, to the peerage as Baron and Viscount Fermoy, which honors that ancient family enjoyed till plundered and expelled by that scourge of God, Oliver Cromwell, and his mercenary regicides, freebooters, in 1649, and the patrimony of this puissant house was patched between an ignoble group of rapacious intruders, whose unrelenting and monopolising persecutions baffled the days of Nero, but as the chief of these British heroes are gone to give an account of their unjust stewardship and sacerdotal ravages, I don't wish at present to make this paragraph too long for your invaluable and historical journal.

Fermoy could at one time boast of a splendid Abbey and College. It is much improved through and by the assidious industry of the respectable inhabitants without any assistance from their new landlord, a Scotch absentee. Nature enriched it with wood and water, mineral springs, never-ceasing brooks; its Elysian fields adorned with fertility, perpetual verdure, and exuberance, that enhance its estimation as a garrison, market, and post town. A magnificent cathedral church, two splendid nunneries, a rectorial mansion, a sacerdotal glebe, an episcopalian church on the plan of Luther, an evangelical meeting-house, dedicated to that modern saint, Wesley; a Calvinistic canticle, dedicated to that day-star of piety, Jack Knox, who aided Lord Ruthvin in the murder of David Rizzio in 1553.

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

All the ammunition that will be required will be ball cartridges, and too much of them cannot be prepared beforehand. Every man should have a bullet-mould to match his piece, so as that the bullet would exactly fit; if too large, it will not do at all; if too small, when fired it will diverge from its proper direction, and will not carry more than half distance. The same may be said of balls for all arms, from the pistol to the cannon. The balls must not be too big nor too little, but must so fit that they can be driven home with the same rod, and be fired off with a sufficient charge of good powder—bad powder won't do at all, for a rifle particularly. The powder and bullets must be converted into serviceable cartridges, and scrupulously kept dry and safe until required. In running the bullets, they should, while the lead is in a fused state, add a little flour of sulphur, which will make the metal more dense and hard, and prevent air cavities; it will abstract more metal and leave less dross—a saving to be looked to when the metal is scarce; besides, a bullet intended to shoot a general, having air cavities, would be sure to go crooked, and hit some other fellow who, perhaps, might be in no way desirous of being shot. There should be arrangements made in every camp for making powder and gun-cotton. The component parts of powder are 75 parts of nitre, 10 of sulphur, and 15 of charcoal. Cylinder powder is made from charcoal burnt in an iron cylinder, and pit powder from charcoal burnt in common pits; but powder, to be excellent, should be made in a powder-mill. Equal bulks of nitric acid of a specific gravity of 1.50 and the strongest oil of vitriol of a specific gravity of 8.40, are the ingredients which make gun-cotton fit for springing mines. Fuzes should also be procured for this purpose. Intrenching tools are picks, crows, spades, shovels, hand-barrows, bill-hooks, saws, hatchets, and cross-cuts.

I have, from time to time, witnessed many discussions on the subject of accoutrements, and, from my own experience and judgment, I would be inclined to prefer for our infantry, accoutrements similar to those now used by the pensioners or the police; but their pouches must be capable of containing, at least, as many cartridges as the pouches of the infantry of the line. Any leather that will not draw out with wet, or shrink in with drought, will answer for the belts. Strong plain buckles are the best. The cartridge pouches must be covered with strong waterproof leather, in order to preserve the cartridges secure, dry, and serviceable. The percussion-cap pouches must be worn, fastened with runners on the waist belts, to the front on the right side, and well replenished with serviceable caps, which must be kept dry. Any shoemaker or harness-maker, or, in fact, any handy man capable of using an awl and an end, by having a pattern, can easily make the accoutrements, except the tin compartments of the cartridge pouches, which can be made by a tinker for 3d. or 4d. each. When leather cannot be obtained, the waist and cross belts can be made of sacken bound at the edges. The accoutrements for all the gunsmen should be similar, and their scabbards should be shod with brass at both ends, or with tin at least. The pikemen will wear waist belts, on which will be fastened, with runners, their cartridge and cap pouches; and their pistols will be placed in holsters attached to the waist belts, as already described. The gunsmen will all require to attach under their guns, by swivels, leather straps called slings, with buckles in the centre that will allow them to be made long or short at pleasure, in order to protect the fingers of the left hand from being injured in returning their ramrods, and that the men may sling their pieces on their backs in scaling rocks, escalading fortifications, or bursting through hedges or thickets. The haversack suits as a substitue for the knapsack, and is more simple, economical and complete, particularly for our men.

With regard to the officering of our army, I have now a few words to say. Generally, the armies of Europe are officered by men who obtain their commissions not for their integrity, genius, or talent, or for any practical experience essential to the discharge of their duties, which practical experence can only be acquired from serving in the ranks; but, simply because they belong to that class in society called the aristocracy—men full of themselves, and adorers of their imaginary consequence; ever great as Alexanders at home in the drawing room, but always puerile, effeminate, and exquisite ninnies in battle; a circumstance which they consider elevates them above integrity, genius, talent, manhood, and experience, and so high above the private soldier and non-commissioned officer, as not only to command them, but of right to command to themselves the respect and admiration of the world. What a pity that the men are not so vain and worthless as the officers? If they were, we could, with a few thousand hardy peasants, re-conquer Europe to-morrow, and establish justice as the first rule of European society. But such being the established etiquette of European armies, our men will have to conform their manners to it, or run the risk of having their urbanity doubted. They must, therefore, pay the most marked attention to the enemy's officers, and always mind to shoot them in preference to the privates or non-commissions. To shoot a private soldier, or even a non-commissioned officer, in preference to an officer, would be treating the officer with too much inattention and disrespect, and be in itself considered the grossest mark of vulgarity. Therefore, circumstances oblige our men to attend to the enemy's officers first; particularly when they are fatiguing their stuck-up, perfumed, deocrated, and self-esteemed persons, scrambling through our hedged ditches, to kindly save them such un-lady-like trouble, by politely knocking them over like cock-robins to gasp upon beds of thorns. Our army must, indeed, be officered upon very different principles. The efficiency of an army depends in a high degree upon the efficiency of its officers. Effeminacy, self-sufficiency, and absurd notions about one's birth, or the possession of riches, are precisely the first and greatest disqualifications for the exercise of command; but integrity, genius, talent, cool courage, and indomitable energy are, and should be always, the passports to military leadership. In truth, and in short, in order to be a good, able, and intelligent officer, the man should first be a good, able, and intelligent private. If the officer is not conversant with the duties of the private and non-commissioned officer, he must be incapable of superintending and directing the execution of such duties. But, in addition to a knowledge of the duties of the privates and non-commissioned officers and the superintending of them, there are various other duties which devolve upon the officer. He has not only to superintend the men in the execution of their duties, but he must look after the men themselves; and not only see that they are well fed and cared, that their arms, accoutrements, and ammunition are in serviceable order, but that they are well clad, wear good boots or shoes, and gaiters to protect their legs from thorns; that each man on duty wears a slung haversack, divided into two compartments, to hold bread or biscuit and other necessaries, and be always provided with needles, thread, twine, and an awl. The officer cannot pay too much attention to these petty details, as the neglect of these and similar precautions might cause the loss of a battle. The better the men are cared, provided for, and kept in health and in working order, the more numerous and effective they will remain, and be the more able to accomplish great feats of arms. In fine, both officers and men should feel an equal interest in constantly and sedulously laboring to bring every circumstance in life, every contingency of the times, every possible phase and atom of earth and air, and every principle and phenomena of nature and art, as auxiliaries to their united physical exertions. Invariably the young men of Ireland have some leisure time, more or less, which is not devoted to business, and this leisure time should be employed in the study of military matters. Study is the natural parent of knowledge, and knowledge is power; but of all species of knowledge, than military knowledge none is more capable of endowing the people with power. With this power they have unity of action directed by system, and can neither be conquered, wronged, nor oppressed. Hence, I count military knowledge as a paramount element in the education of the man, and none but an enemy to the people would deprecate or decry such knowledge. To these congenial facts I would wish particularly to call the attention of farmers' sons in the country, and the sons of business men in town, who, from the invigorating nature of their daily avocations, are physically qualified to act as officers; and to fit them for the discharge of such duty in a mental sense, they absolutely need but to bring the large share of common sense they possess to bear upon the study of war, which, after all, it must be seen, is but a common-sense affair. From my own knowledge, I can speak for these men; and no matter what slanders may have gone abroad against them, the unconquerable spirit of liberty yet abides in their breasts, and the oracles of their conscience have not been silenced in the temple, nor their energies impaired, by the gloomy pall which seems to overspread the depression of the times. The spirit of liberty is immortal, and can never die; and wherever honest Irishmen live, we behold in them its chivalrous votaries, men of solid common sense, patriots of the highest cast, soldiers of the sternest mould, who, to-morrow, if necessary, with lion hearts, would welcome and excite wars, storms, and battle's thunders, and, in the full pride of Ierna's pristine chivalry, eagerly mount the gory whirlwinds, and ride them above the vanquished foe, through vales of fire, above the devil and his imps, into the ensanguined harbor of victory and glory. Such men are designed by holy nature to lead the way to fame, to be the evangelists of liberty, and the deliverers of mankind; whose very tones express the manly pathos of their nature; whose words give utterance to the grandest poetry of the soul, and the sweetest anthem of the heart—the sacred and soul-elevating language of liberty; that spirit-moving sentiment which evokes inspiration, and sends the floating flag of freedom in triumph through the foeman's adamantine ranks and opposing forests of blazing steel. There is no difficulty in selecting such men as these—they are easily known, and there can be no mistake about them. They can be distinguished by the general characteristic of great and good men, by their unassuming demeaner, by that chaste garb of commendable humility peculiar to themselves, which, while it always covers, always betokens the great attributes of the internal man—attributes which lie dormant, hidden, unparaded and unsuspected, until the magic touch of necessity's wand calls them forth in the full force of their native might and dazzling splendor.

Having thus necessarily pointed out the leading characteristics, and the fitting qualifications of the candidates for command, I will now discharge another essential duty, by pointing out the marks and characteristics of the men whose presence or meddling should not, for a single instant, be tolerated in any movement. Generally, the men of Ireland richly deserve the high character I have given them; but, I am sorry to say, there are exceptions existing amongst them, called snobs by some, and puppies by others; and, in order that these dark and base specimens of humanity may be known at the first glance, avoided and spurned, I will make a selection and give a definition of it:—Gold rings on its fingers, a moustache on its upper lip, a florrydoll watch-chain (gaudy and strong, as if intended to chain a convict, no inappropriate hint to the wearer) woven round its stay-bound waist; its hair outlandishly shaped, frizzled, perfumed, and bedevilled with pomatum; a gold pin in its breast, not entirely so long or so coarse as a harrow-pin; a distressing sidey on it, like a fighting-pig; always trying to talk grand, and its dull pate packed brim-full with an extraordinary high opinion of its worthless self. These are the infallible marks and signs of the fop and the fool, the unmistakeable indexes to the proud, puffed-up puppy, visible to the eye; but there are others of a stronger, and if possible of a more detestable and injurious character, visible only to the understanding, namely, a quantity of Christian names, as John James Laurence William Snooks, and a regular army of strange and absurd nicknames, which they cannot get, but which they wish they may get, and which they worship with all the blind, base, mephitic, and decomposing enthusiasm of idolaters, such as, Sir, Lord, Earl, Marquis, Duke, King and Emperor, called, in depraved and barbarian circles, the symbols of civilisation. At first sight, we might be inclined to ascribe downright idiocy to the wearers of such silly decorative baubles, and to those who glory in worshipping, or in assuming such mischievous, nonsensical, and repulsive titles; but, upon a nearer and more tangible view of these baubles and epithets taken together, and the circumstances which invariably environ them, we soon discover them to be the component parts of that flimsy veil, which eternally covers vanity and pride, malignance and perfidy, cowardice and baseness, folly and crime, sin and sorrow; the indubitable emblems, by which the slaves and sattelites of Satan upon earth are distinguished. Surely, after this, I need say no more to aid the people in making their election of officers, and scornfully flinging the culls aside.

Having explained, in detail, that which in reality are the military resources of the country, I will now, with a view to their practical developments, succinctly sketch the system by which these resources should be organised; simplicity and detail being the marked features of the system. The elements of war, as they exist in Ireland, to be concentered and efficiently organised must be taken in minute detail, and collected and organised by localities. There is neither mystery, difficulty, nor complication in the matter. Each parish should organise itself, and do so by townlands, in this manner:—The men of the military age in each townland who are equipped and supplied with arms, and who are willing to take part in the war, should form themselves into as many bands as there are species of arms, viz: pikemen, riflemen, musketeers, and fowling-piece men, in separate and distinct bands; each band appointing its own officer, each officer in return appointing his subordinates to act under him. Towns act similarly to townlands. This done, they get as many horses and carts as will compose a proportionate transport for their commissariat and munitions, which must be collected and carefully stowed on the baggage carts; and all the townlands comprised in the parish should act similarly and simultaneously with this.

The next move is to select a site for an encampment, which done, the several townland divisions, in regular order of march—baggage moving in the van, under the care of the baggage guard, riflemen in front, pikemen in the centre, and the musketeers and fowling-piece men bringing up the rear—will proceed to the ground selected for encampment, and on arrival each division will take up the ground allotted to it, and commence putting up its tents, or erecting huts. These sites should be selected with a view to convenience; but more especially on account of their natural strength of position, than any other advantage they may confer. The best and most convenient positions are towns or villages situate on commanding eminences. Towns or villages situate in hollows, or even on high ground, if commanded by neighboring heights within range of cannon are untenable; but, when a town or village is commanded by an adjacent eminence, affording room, accommodation and natural strength of position, this eminence should be seized upon as an excellent site for encampment, because it would give us command of the resources of the town or village, which would be of incalculable service, and there is generally a junction of the roads of the district at every town or village—a circumstance which would give us possession of the roads, and, therefore, absolute command of the district, and also give us the option of adopting, at pleasure, offensive, defensive, or obstructive warfare, or each in turn.

The boldest, most prudent and most capable man will be chosen parish chief, who will assume command of all the forces assembled on the ground of encampment. The first duty of this chief will be to make the following appointments:—A person to act as adjutant, to superintend the armament, drill, and discipline of the men; a person to act as quarter-master, who will look after march routes, cantonments, camp equipments, and munitions of war; a person to act as commissary to ensure the supply of rations to the men, make requisitions, and provide efficient transport; a person to act as engineer, to project such fortifications as may be necessary: and a medical officer for the hospital department. These should be selected according to their capabilities for their respective duties, be well mounted, and furnished with an adequate but limited staff. Aides-de-camp and orderlies should also be well mounted. This systematic division of the labors attendant upon such movements into so many defined departments, and the heads of these departments composing the staff of the chief, will lighten and facilitate his otherwise herculean labors, reduce them to order, and thereby enable him to carry on operations against the enemy with ease and success. The order of encampment should be as follows:—The riflemen, musketers, and fowling-piece men will form three separate divisions of tents or huts, the officers' tents being in rear of their own divisions. The tents for the chief and his staff will occupy the centre of the encampment. In one or more lines in rear of these will be the pikemens' tents, and in rear of these will be the station for the commissariat, military chest and camp magazines, over which a guard will be placed. The carts will be drawn up, heeled up if empty, behind which the horses will be provided for. The tents or huts for the vanguard and picket will be pushed forward to the front, the tent or hut for the rearguard will be placed a distance backwards, and the tents and huts for the flank-guards will be a distance from the flanks. The arms will be piled round the tent-poles inside the tents. The adjutant will choose a suitable parade ground in front of the encampment for the purposes of parading drilling and instructing the men. Should the position be an important one, it must be fortified. Should a town or considerable village become the position, the public buildings should be cleared out and converted into barracks for the use and accomodation of our men.

The first routine of duty will devolve on the quarter-master, which will be to ascertain the number of men and horses on the ground, and to calculate the quantity of provisions and forage that will maintain them for a given period; and on the receipt of this estimte the adjutant will supply the commissary with an armed party and a fatigue party unarmed, at the head of which he will proceed to make the first requisition. The best argement that can be made is that each parish will support its own forces. Therefore the commissary will operate within the limits of the parish, causing as little inconvenience and loss to the contributors as possible, giving his proper receipt for, and fair valuation for everything he receives, which he enters in his book, which must be paid for with interest by the nation at the conclusion of the war. The parish will be enjoined to supply the camp with fire-arms and powder, and every other camp requisite: as, fat cattle and sheep, bread, meal flour, and other articles of food; tarpaulins, oil-cloth, canvas for tents; bedding, cooking utensils, and camp equipments; horses and wagons for transport, and for officers and orderlies. Cattle and sheep can be driven, horses led, and loaded wagons conducted to the camp, under escort.

In camp, while no enemy appears, the different tradesmen, or as many as can be spared from drill in turn, must be set to work at their different occupations: hedge and house carpenters making pike handles, erecting huts, planting palisades, chevaux-de-frise, and placing lines of abatis. Blacksmiths must become armor-sergeants, make pike-heads, and learn to examine and repair arms, and perfect such other iron and steel works as may be necessary. Tinkers must be got to make the compartments for the cartridge-pouches, camp kettles, other tin vessels (air tight) for biscuit, and for the use of the camp, these being light, portable and convenient. Shoe and harness-makers will make and repair accoutrements for men, and harness for horses. Coopers will make and mend kegs and casks for holding ammunition, salt pork, beef, and spirits. Bakers will make bread for present use, and biscuit for the future. It is to be observed that the excellence of biscuit consists in the skill in kneading it, so as to express all the water, and it should be thoroughly dried in some room or secure place, near or over the ovens, and then cooled before packing.

In contemplating active or expeditionary operations, the commissariat will issue, at the least, three days' provisions (biscuit) to each man, which will be carried in their haversacks, and these haversacks ought to be covered with patent leather or painted canvas to keep out the wet. This was the habit of the Romans; it is now the practice of the French, each man of whom, on some occasions, carries 14 days' biscuit, and this enables them to make bold and sudden movements, thus placing within their reach the completest and most superb victories. Bread occupies too much space, and is in no particular so valuable a necessary as biscuit in war. Therefore the chief desideratum of the commissariat is biscuit. 100 lbs. of flour will produce only 90 lbs. of biscuit, while the same quantity of flour will produce 140 lbs. of bread, thus saving in biscuit one-third the space, a most important point for the bearer of the haversack. Besides biscuit is more wholesome, and is less perishable and precarious than bread; while in 90 lbs of biscuit there is more food than in 140 lbs. of bread. Neighboring wind and water-mills should be used to grind oats and wheat into meal and flour when necessary.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE GREATNESS THAT NEVER DESCENDS TO READ NEWSPAPERS.

From the London Examiner.

A respectable man has been defined one who keeps a gig, but a cut far above your respectable man is the man who does not read a newspaper. Members of the two Houses of Parliament never read newspapers They would not, indeed, touch a newspaper with a pair of tongs. No great man, no one pretending to importance, ever avowed that he read anything of which he had to complain, or upon which he had to comment, in a newspaper. It is always "brought under his notice," or his "attention was drawn to it." Never does it come naturally in his way in the course of his daily reading. The fact is always brought to his knowledge, as his articles of dress and use are brought to his hands. He is waited on with the news concerning himself, and would no more think of learning it by the use of his own eyes than he would think of brushing his own clothes or cleaning his own boots. All great folks have got friends who read for them. We are always mightily impressed when we see or hear that some one "has had his attention drawn to certain comments," which every one else has read with his own eyes; but seldom have we been more struck than by this commencement of a letter to the Daily News, bearing the signature of Morris Moore:

Sir: Certain passages of your first leading article of the 29th of November have been brought to my notice.

How grand this is! Certain passages brought to my notice! How high and mighty! A man of consequence, above all of no self-consequence, would have been searching all the newspapers for every syllable concerning himself, but Mr. Morris Moore, who has had a whole police after him, is waited upon with "certain passages" on a silver salver. After all, Mr. Morris Moore ought to be thankful to the abominable Prussian police, for if they had not laid hands on him, and made for him a grievance, the noise of which resounds through the world, rivaling the walls of Sir C. Napier, he never could have assumed the sublime airs of his address to the Daily News. He woke in the Berlin watch-house and found himself famous, and past reading newspapers on his own account. In his incarceration, he scorned the couch on which "delators" might have stretched themselves, but now he has his own "delators" to denounce to him passages in newspapers unpleasing to his self-love. This is a step in greatness well worth a night in the watch-house.

Irish News.

The annual meeting of the subscribers and friends of practical art and design, says the Waterford News, was held at the savings' bank, George-street, on the 22d ult., to receive the report of the past year, to audit the accounts, and to appoint a general committee. William Christmas, Esq., occupied the chair. There were also present—The Bishop of Cashel, the Very Rev. the Dean of Waterford, Hon. D. F. Fortescue, Thomas Dillon, John Coombe, Dr. Cavet, Dr. Carroll, Councillor Ryland, &c. There were also a number of ladies present, owing, perhaps, to the fact, that on this occasion, the distribution of the medals and prizes obtained at the recent examinations was to take place. The secretary read the report of the committee for the past year, which showed that the finances of the school were in a most satisfactory condition, there being a balance of £14 10s. to the credit of the school. The report then went to show that art education had within the past year been greatly diffused in consequence of the master's services having been engaged at the model school, and that nearly twenty medals, awards, and prizes, had been obtained by the pupils at the recent examinations. It further stated that six paintings had been forwarded to London by the inspector, to be exhibited as specimens of art, and that a gratuity of £20 had been voted to the master (Mr. M'Cloy) by the committee as a token of their appreciation of his zealous and efficient teaching.

The linen trade during the month of December was a dull one in the sales of goods; bleached linens have accumulated, but the average amount of stocks does not exceed that held at the close of the year 1854. In the damask and diaper trades there has been a steady demand for all medium and coarse fabrics, with a moderate inquiry for fine goods. Manufactures of this class of work have had very good orders all season, and the hands connected with the fancy trade were all busy at good wages. Cambric handkerchiefs have been made to better advantage, but the market is still quiet. At the several bleach fields in the north of Ireland the people are at full work, and large quantities of linens in the finished state are weekly turned out of the principal establishments. Brown markets were very fully supplied with goods at the commencement of the week. Armagh had a large share, and buyers took off immense lots of the white as well as the brown finish.

Mr. Thomas J. M'Carthy, son of Dr. M'Carthy, J. P., Kenmare, has been appointed to a junior clerkship in the office of the Solicitor of Inland Revenue, Custom-house, Dublin. Mr. M'Carthy's examination, which occupied three days, took place before Dr. Ball at Dublin Castle, and comprised, in addition to the leading English branches of knowledge, the first works of the principal French aud Latin authors, an extensive acquaintance with the latter being regarded as indispensable in this important department of the Irish Civil Service. So particular are the Civil Service Commissioners in requiring a high standard of qualification for this office, that upwards of a dozen candidates were at various periods during the last year and a-half (for which time this office has been vacant) rejected after an arduous examination.

While Mr. John Bland, builder, was being wound up on a scaffold for the purpose of examining the work he is getting done to the tower of Shinrone Church, diocese of Killaloe, the cable rope broke, and he fell a height of about 20 feet, escaping without any injury, save a broken leg.

William M'Caulay, a native of Ballaghy, near Antrim, says the Belfast Mercury, was deposited on the quay in a helpless and destitute state, from the Scotch steamer. This man lived for the long period of eighteen years in Glasgow, and was no portion of this time chargeable on any poor institution. Towards the latter portion of his time, he enlisted in Glasgow in the East India Company's service, and proceeded to India, when a severe course of duty, under a varying climate, brought on a disease in one of his legs, which ultimately ended in paralysis. He was in consequence disabled for duty, and was discharged without pension or emolument. The poor fellow returned to Glasgow and threw himself on the generosity of the poor-law authorities, who kept him for six months; but from their repeated taunts to him regarding his maintenance, he took himself to work, and for this purpose left the union. He tried to toil for his living in vain, his leg became worse, and he fell at his work, losing at the same time all power of moving. He now goes on crutches. M'Caulay was taken back to the union, but despite all remonstrances on the part of a sympathising friend, he was pushed away with a warrant in his hand, and transported to Ireland. He arrived in quite a destitute state, without a farthing to pay for his breakfast, and when found by Captain M'Bride, he was shivering with cold.

An accident, says the Coleraine Chronicle, of a very melancholy nature, occurred at the Derry Railway Station. A man named M'Beth, a fireman on the goods-train, was cleaning his engine, which, at the time, was a short distance down the line from the platform. As the five o'clock train for Derry moved away, he somehow got on the line in front and was knocked down, the engine and all the carriages passing over his body, in a slanting direction, from the right shoulder to the middle of the left limb. The lower part of his body was completely shattered, and his arm and both legs broken. His fellow-workmen gathered up his mangled remains, and laid them out in the waiting-room, when the Rev. Mr. Flanagan, P. P., performed the last rights of his church over the unfortunate man, who still breathed. Death, however, in a short time put an end to his sufferings. He was a native of Strabane, and was for some time employed on the railway.

A few days ago, says the Armagh Guardian, Osborne Kidd, Esq., of Tullymore House, in the vicinity of this city, received through the post, a sealed envelope containing three ten pound notes, accompanied by a slip of paper, on which the words "An Old Debt," were written. Neither the name of the party who sent it, nor the nature of the debt was communicated; but Mr. Kidd, while ignorant of both, is perfectly satisfied that the money was justly due, and will not have the least objection to the discharge of any similar "old debts" which may be outstanding.

There are at present in our county-jail, says a Louth paper, only twenty-nine prisoners of all classes. There is not even a solitary case for trial at the assizes; and the offences for which prisoners are paying the penalty of confinement, are generally such as are incidental to the best regulated community. At no antecedent period for the last ten years were there so few inmates of the work-house. At Christmas nearly all the local poor outside of the work-house were enabled to fare comfortably out of their own humble earnings, and there was no necessity for urgent appeals to the rich.

At an inquest held in Drogheda, on the 30th ult., the jury returned the following verdict:—"We find that Patrick Byrne died on the 26th of December, and that his death was accelerated by injuries received on the night of the 24th December, after leaving a dance-house in Magdalene street, by exposure to cold and falls received while under the influence of intoxicating drinks, he being of a diseased constitution. And we recommend the interference of the authorities to suppress dancing in public houses, it appearing to us that many evils result therefrom."

On the night of the 22d ult. as a cattle-dealer, named Smith, a resident of Kingscourt, was returning from the fair of Mullacrew to his residence, he was waylaid by a party of ruffians who beat him in a most unmerciful manner with bludgeons. Two persons named Dorman and Halfpenny, have been arrested for the assault.

At the Enniscorthy fair on the 23d of December, cattle brought from £10 to £14 each. One beast was sold for £17. Steers and heifers of good quality were sold from £6 to £10 a head; fat sheep from 30s. to 45s. each; stores from 20s. to 38s.; pigs from 50s. to 55s. per cwt.

A man named Middleton engaged in a drunken fight in Thomas-street, Armagh, with some men, was so cut and wounded, as to render his death almost certain. Two men named McKenna and Stuart, have been arrested for the offence.

A shoemaker named Heaney, residing in Brown-street, Cork, became suddenly indisposed, and died in the course of a few minutes. He was out walking in the early part of the day, and appeared in the enjoyment of excellent health.

On Christmas night a vessel, moored at the Kilkenny side of the Suir, at Waterford, was observed to be on fire. Prompt measures were taken to subdue it, but in vain. It then was deemed advisable to scuttle her, which was accordingly done.

The Rev. P. McKenna, for five years Catholic curate of Castleblayney, died recently at the house of the pastor, the Rev. Mr. McMeel.

A public banquet to George H. Moore, Esq., the Tenant Right member for Mayo, was to have taken place at Castlebar, on the 25th inst.

Lough Erne has been so deepened at Portora, that the steamboat Countess of Milan, can pass freely up and down to the lake.

Michael George Harrington, who was arrested on the charge of having murdered Mr. Little, Cashier of the Midland Great Western Railway company, has been discharged.

A public meeting has been convened in Cork for the purpose of taking measures to have a monument erected to Father Mathew.

Owing to the intensity of the frost, a portion of the rock-cutting at the north face of Goggin's Hill, on the Cork and Bandon Railway, fell in.

A boy named Wm. Hutchinson, of Belfast, had his hand so fractured by the discharge of a pistol, that amputation became necessary.

A man named Martin Walsh, his wife and two children, were poisoned at Tully, county Galway, by eating unsound mackerel.

Four men recently engaged in knocking down an old house in Hospital, county Limerick, found 100 sovereigns in the wall, of the reign of George the Third, and dated 1791.

At the petty sessions court of Carlow, three men were brought up charged with having carried off a young woman, named Catherine Hurihan, from her parents, under extraordinary circumstances. The case excited the greatest interest in the town and neighborhood, as during the investigation the court was crowded to excess by persons of both sexes; as usual the fair sex preponderated. Indeed the bench appeared to take no less deep interest in the proceedings, as no less than twelve magistrates were present. Since the attempted abduction of Miss Arbuthnot by Mr. Carden, the people have not heard so of systematic and well arranged a plan for carrying off a female, although in the present case the parties move in the humbler walks of life. Mr. Butler, the sessional prosecutor, attended on the part of the crown. The parties accused, who were undefended, were Thomas Dunne, James Keefe, and John Burn. Mr. Butler having stated the facts of the case, which will be found detailed in the evidence, and referring to the statute which bore on the case, proceeded to call the witnesses. Catherine Hurihan, an interesting young girl of 18 summers, was the first witness examined. She stated that on Saturday morning last, about six o'clock, she was proceeding to Carlow in a donkey's cart, accompanied by her mother and grandmother; when a short distance from the town her attention was arrested by observing a covered car secreted under a railway bridge, near which were three men. On coming near the vehicle, the prisoner Dunne, who was a servant in her father's employment, approached and dragged her off the cart; in his efforts to do so she pulled her grandmother along with her; she screamed and roared for help, but her parents being overpowered by the other men, they were unable to give any assistance; Dunne being unable to force her into the car, was assisted by a person whose name she did not know; when flung into the car, Dunne followed her, closing the door behind him, whereupon Keefe drove off as fast as he could, the third person keeping off her mother and grandmother; she remained insensible until they reached Athy, a distance of ten miles; her clothes were much torn and injured in the struggle; when they drove to Stradbally, three miles from Athy, Dunne, on recovering her self-possession, frequently asked her to marry him, but she declined indignantly to comply with his request. In answer to the bench the witness said it was against her will and desire to be dragged away from her friends and home. The prisoner Dunne here remarked that the witness had agreed on Friday night to elope with him. The prosecutrix repudiated the statement. Mary Hurihan, mother of the last witness, corroborated the testimony of her daughter; in her information she swore that John Burn was the third person engaged in the attack, but she believed she was mistaken as to the identity; with reference to Keefe, the car driver, she positively swore that he assisted Dunne in forcing her daughter into the covered car. The prisoners were sent for trial.

Justly celebrated as Muskerry ever has been for its fox hunting, says a correspondent of the Cork Examiner, yet never did it see a day where the blood of horses or the pluck of men went through so severe an ordeal as on Thursday, the 25th ult. The meet was at Clashanure, which having been skilfully drawn blank, Captain Rye proceeded to Farran, the beautiful residence of William Clarke, and scarce were the hounds in cover, when a noble old fox was found and broke away to the rear of the house through the lands of Ballineadig, in the direction of Elm Park, but suddenly changed his route and made for Clashanure; and here the few moments the "old gentleman" required to find out his quarters being denied him by those crashing hounds, he was forced to skirt along the banks of the Lee, and determinately laid himself down from Nadrid, but again finding his position so critical, he changed his course, and made for Aglish. At this stage of the run, to a spectator on the hill, the sight was truly magnificent, as the sun shone on the gay uniform of the hunt, and as I noticed Captain Rye in the front rank, as he always is, on his favorite horse "David," closely followed by the following gentlemen, who, never better than on the present occasion, sustained their well-merited character for pluck and determination in the field, and around the earth, where old Reynard found a place of safety, may be seen standing under the shadow of the old church of Aglish, Thos. B. Herrick, Chambre Baldwin, Quaile Hawkes, Captain Morgan, M. Popham, D. Hawkes, F. Harding, and E. E. Ashe, V. S., on "Pick-me-up," whose jaded appearance clearly told that in Muskerry fox hunting under the management of the worthy Captain, is nothing short of steeple-chasing, when we see a run of six miles, and which I have poorly attemped to describe, accomplished in the extrordinarily short space of fifteen minutes.

The persons who have been taken up charged with firing at Mr. Joynt, near Clonvara, in the county Clare, on Saturday evening, were on St. Stephen's day removed from Kilnavane Bridewell to Clonvara for examination before the bench of magistrates, but on arriving at the latter place, they were informed that their case would not be heard before that day fortnight.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant has, on the recommendation of the Right Hon. the Earl of Kenmare, appointed the Rev. Benjamin Jordan to the living of Cahircorney and Kinsellane, in the diocese of Cashel.

David Lynch, Esq., Q.C. of the Leinster Circuit, has been appointed Assistant Barrister for the county Louth, in place of J. Perrin, Esq., who is obliged to retire in consequence of continued severe indisposition.

A girl named Ellen Regan, of Bandon, was recently sentenced to a month's imprisonment for an attempt to poison herself.

There is a decrease of pauperism in the Armagh Union. The number of inmates last year, was 343 in Christmas week; and this year it is only 268.

On Christmas Eve a man named Faherty, from Moycullen, fell into the canal at Galway, where the Swivel Bridge should have been long since, and was drowned.

On the 20th ult. the Marquis of Waterford met with a fall from his horse, which severely cut the noble Marquis's head, and rendered him insensible for nearly half an hour.

A man named John Egan, of Cavan, died a short time since from abscess of the jaw, caused by the extraction of a tooth.

A young lad named Horgan, of Macroom, was recently killed by the accidental discharge of a fowling-piece.

A man named Richard Groce, was killed by a fall from the window of a house in Fishamble-street, Cork.

A man named Jas. Hurley was drowned at Cork on the 19th ult., having fallen out of a barge into the river.

Patrick Feale, a laborer, was found hanging on a tree in the woods of Castletown, in the county Cork. It is supposed he was insane.

On the 26th ult. Lord Fermoy's hounds had their meeting at Knockeen; the gallant pack were scarcely thrown into cover, when they discovered their fox, and, after a short time, made two of them break, and went off in sporting style on a noble old fox, which gave them about twenty-five minutes of as fast a run as had been seen for many years, without a single check, facing first for Monenanig Mountain, traversed, and came back through Ruperah, Minane, Braziers' Pond, and into Michelsfort, where he had just time to go to ground; after which the hounds drew Fisher's cover, and to the delight of all, found a sporting fox, which led them a dance of eight miles, through Ballyvatta Bog, Ballina, Glengariff, Lemlara, through Kirby's Bog, facing towards Ledington, Ballinash and Naskenagh; finding the pace too fast and his position critical, he changed his course and traversed for Knockeen on to Carrig an, then going through Dunkelerick, when they ran into and broke him amidst the delight of the noble owner and all present. Thus ended this day's sport, to the entire satisfaction of a large field, amongst whom were some of the best fox-hunting gentlemen in the country.

Persons not having license to carry arms, are prohibited in Kilkenny to enjoy that privilege of freemen. The following is the clause in the arms' act which empowers the police to arrest any person who may carry a gun without the magisterial permission:—"And be it enacted that it shall be lawful to or for any person or persons whomsoever, to seize and apprehend any who shall be found carrying any gun, pistol, or other fire-arms, or any part or parts of any gun, pistol, or other fire-arms, or any sword, cutlas, pike, or bayonet, or any bullets, gunpowder, or ammunition, contrary to the provisions of this Act, and to deliver such person as soon as may be into the custody of a constable, or a peace officer, in order to his or her being forthwith conveyed before some justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law."

At the Ballybay Christmas fair of horses the show was considerable, and many excellent nags were paraded, some selling so high as £70; average price from £15 to £30 each, and a smart business was effected. Fat cattle, according to quality, brought from £9 to £15 each; dry cattle were a meagre show; £9 to £11 were the figures for three years old heifers, and two years old, £5 to £8 per head; yearlings £3 to £5 each; store bullocks from £5 to £9 per head. The supply of springers and milkers was excellent, and the demand very brisk; the former rated from £10 to £15 per head according to quality, and a good number exchanged owners. Bacon pigs maintained a high figure, from £2 15s. to £3 per cwt. being obtained; stores ranged in prices from £2 to £2 10s. each; sucking pigs £1 to £1 5s. each, an average of £2 5s. per couple. Milled flax from 8s. to 9s. per stone; hand-scutched do., from 7s. per stone downward.

We regret, says the Derry Sentinel, to find that a regular conspiracy against the letting of mountains in the county of Donegal to Scotch or English farmers has appeared in the northern parts of this county. Lord G. Hill, Mr. Olpherts, Mrs. Russell, Mr. Woodhouse, and other proprietors, have been disposing of their mountains to persons from England and Scotland for sheep grazing, and this has given great offence to the Glenswilly Decree men. It appears by sworn informations that on the 10th of December, instant, about 40 men, armed with pistols, sticks, and other weapons, attacked the house of Mr. Wright, at Alton, where they found James Sillico, his shepherd, and required him to quit the place in eight days. They told him they would not allow any Englishman or Scotchman to take mountains in that country, and would put a stop to such work, and to warn his countrymen not to come there.

S. Hewitt and Samuel Kidd, the only male convicts that were in Down jail, have been sent to Mountjoy Prison, Dublin. They were convicted at the last Downpatrick Quarter Sessions of burglary, and sentenced, the former to six years' penal servitude and the latter to four.

Nicholas Mahon Power, M.P., Faithlegg House, has given £5 towards the erection of the new churches in Wexford; and in sending the remittance he informed the Rev. Mr. Roche that only he was suffering from an attack of rheumatism he would go amongst his tenantry to collect for the same purpose.

Tradition says of Dunbrody Abbey, situated on the banks of the Suir, that it was built by the monks of Dunbrody, not only as a toll-house, but as a curing establishment for the fish taken for the use of the abbey.

The Earl of Clare ordered a very large supply of blankets and warm clothing of the best description to be distributed at Christmas among the poor and laboring classes in and about Mount Shannon.

Measures are on foot for the immediate establishment of an Agricultural Society in Limerick. The plan proposed is to revive the old Agricultural Society, and conjoin it with an Agricultural Club at the Athenæum.

Several sudden deaths and accidents occurred in Belfast on Christmas day, from apoplexy and other causes. One man was choked by a piece of meat sticking in his throat while taking his dinner.

It is stated that Wm. Johnston, Esq., Ballykillibeg House, Downpatrick, and proprietor of the Downshire Protestant, has addressed the electors of Downpatrick, as a candidate for the representation of his native town in Parliament.

The Rev. Ogle Moore, Rector of Blessington, has been appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, Dean of Cashel. The new Dean has been the uniform and disinterested supporter of the National Education System from its commencement.

The brothers of the Society of "Our Blessed Lady of Charity and Refuge of Sinners," Dublin, beg to acknowledge the receipt of the sum of £2 from Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams.

A beautiful young lady, the daughter of the possessor of one of the best estates in the county Limerick, is to be married to a young gentleman of extensive property in England.

The Directors of the Midland Great Western Railway have headed a subscription list, in aid of the family of their late cashier, Mr. Little, with the sum of £200.

The Dublin Corporation have unanimously passed a resolution calling for the total abolition of the Income tax.

The High Sheriff of Tipperary has been called on to convene a meeting for the purpose of seeking a reduction of the Income tax.

Francis Brodigan, Esq., of Pilton House, county Meath, has been appointed High Sheriff of Drogheda.

Richard Kelly, Esq., Chairman of the Tuam Town Commissioners, has got the commission of the Peace.

Three persons named McTeague, McDaniel, and Gough, have been arrested in Drogheda on a charge of coining.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1857.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Captain Maurice Walsh, of New-York, having set out to travel through America, is authorized to collect advertisements and subscriptions for this paper. Captain Walsh has our written authority, which he will present to those who may not be personally acquainted with him. A list of the subscribers' names, together with the respective sums paid by each, will be published each week.

SMITH O'BRIEN AND THE LONDON PRESS.

Silence has been spoken of as a great talent. In many instances it keeps people out of trouble. In some few cases, it has been known to work miracles. If it does not actually disarm hostility, it baffles criticism. If it fails to excite friendship, it usually propitiates respect. When one says nothing, it is easy for the most querulous to tolerate him.

The compliments with which Smith O'Brien was welcomed back to Europe by his enemies were too ostentatious not to be remembered easily, even now. The gifted gentlemen who enlighten the public mind of England with their indelible ink and elastic gold pens, were profuse in their commendations of the many traits and virtues our friend uniformly exhibits.

His equanimity was admirable. His urbanity, most gracious. His dignity, incomparable. His integrity above reproach, temptation, or suspicion. He was a perfect character. Worthy a chapter in some modern edition of Plutarch's Lives. If he had not the gorgeous genius, he certainly possessed the great heart of Henry Grattan. Without the dignity, he manifested all the courtliness of Charlemont. He was not less bold and brave than Curran, where humanity appealed to him, and wrongs cried for redress. In the midst of Irish agitation, he rose above it, uncontaminated. Popular and beloved, he did not debase his intellect by an obsequious concurrence, on every question and occasion, with those who cheered him. Independent of the Government, he maintained himself with a severe propriety and truthfulness before the people. Judged by the loftiest examples of public worth which history furnishes—judged by the maxims of an heroic and pure morality—O'Brien infinitely excelled O'Connell.

These, and many other praises did the gentlemen of the London Press offer as frankincense and myrrh to the illustrious scion of Kincora, as he turned his steps homeward from the mountains of Tasmania. With such anthems of adulation did these sweet choiristers of the Strand go forth to meet the Exile, to the bitterness and ignominy of whose banishment they had contributed with a plenteous scurrility. Foremost of them was the Times.

And this continued, more or less audibly, with more or less flourishes of poetry and rhetoric, so long as Smith O'Brien held his tongue upon public questions affecting Ireland. Just in the same way as, even here, it comes to pass, that "distinguished strangers" are public favorites until they venture an opinion upon public matters. Up to their doing this, not a word of offensive comment assails them. Up to their doing this, one might infer they were choice exceptions from the rest of creation, such graceful notices accompany all their acts. Their reserve in public life is applauded everywhere. It shows such good sense, the papers say. It is so discreet, so amiable, so dignified. Even high officials—stars of the first magnitude in Washington—speak of it as an admirable abstinence indicative of singular force of mind and wisdom. A primrose path the "distinguished stranger" treads, so long as he walks like a mute at a funeral, looking neither to the right nor to the left, nor uttering the faintest syllable on the way.

Once let him speak out, however, and the enchantment ceases. The favorite, once burdened with caresses, becomes a target at which every pedlar of the Press—every reeling spouter at a Ward-meeting thinks it his privilege to discharge any weapon, foul or fair, he can lay his scurvy hand upon. He declares himself a Democrat. The turbid flood of Black Republicanism opens on him. Abolition howls at him. All that is dangerous and traitorous in the Union precipitate themselves upon him, as did the noisome sea-birds of the Strophades upon the banquet of Æneas. From this time out, in the eyes of those who politically differ from him, he is the direct reverse of what they so glowingly described him to be whilst he was dumb, and opened not his mouth. But these are the penalties which every man, who desires to be something more than a statue of wax-work in a tailor's or peruquier's window on Broadway, has to encounter. Vulgar and cowardly as they are, he must accept them as inevitable.

That Smith O'Brien has incurred such penalties since his return from Australia, it would not be true to say. The storm is yet to come. Only the first mutterings—only the first premonitory spatterings—have been heard. But they are black. Black as Erebus. They portend a savage tempest. Proudly they will prove their hearts of Irish oak, if the woods of Chairmoyle bend not one of those days to the coming blast. Let the haughty master of these woods look out. He is no longer patronized by the British public. He has lost the confidence of the London Times. Viscount Palmerston wishes him back in the forests of the Derwent. The Queen already deplores her clemency. The contumaciousness of this ungrateful Rebel is too much for her maternal heart. So did Tyrone vex the soul of Elizabeth. So did his wild doings disturb the sleep of the Virgin Queen.

Devoutly we pray, that Smith O'Brien may continue to incur the displeasure of the English Press. Incurring this displeasure, he gathers round him, more and more, the love and homage of the Irish Race.

CONGRESS AND THE NEW-YORK PRESS.

On more than one occasion, the Editor of the Irish News has disclaimed, incidently perhaps, and not with the gravity and earnestness the importance of the subject required, all personal irresponsibility for what he may write or publish. As a journalist he has refused to accept any rule of conduct, in his relations with society, or with individuals, save such as is recognised between man and man, when face to face, and on equal terms. A subject has recently sprung up, social indeed, and ephemeral in itself, but important in its supposed or assumed connection with the "press," which renders a repetition of the disclaimer proper and necessary.

We embrace the occasion, then, to reiterate distinctly and emphatically, that we acknowledge the fullest responsibility for every thing appearing in this journal. On entering the sanctuary of journalism we have not hung up our manhood at the door, nor discarded the obligations which the exercise of its functions are liable to. We claim no exemption from the laws of decorum, the decencies, and amenities of social intercourse, the obligations of honor and propriety, or that great canon of religion, law, and reason, which assumes the innocence of even the deceived, until his guilt be proved. If we claimed exemption from the requirements of logic in our arguments, of accuracy in our information, and truth in our facts, the claim would be laughed at as utterly preposterous; and if we invoked the independence or irresponsibility of the press, we would be branded as fools by a sentence of universal contempt. There is no reason surely, why the "press" should confer irresponsibility on blackguards any more than on fools, and if it cannot shield the latter from ridicule, it cannot protect the former from resentment. On the contrary, insolence as well as folly, is more reprehensible on that very ground. If under cover of an editorial mask you stab your neighbor, and take shelter from his resentment in your "irresponsibility," you merely add cowardice to crime, and prove yourself an assassin instead of an inflexible or upright judge.

These are our opinions—our convictions—and they shall be our rule.

Let it not be supposed that we desire to derogate from the lofty claims of the "press," or deprive it of one of its legitimate privileges. By no means. Journalism is the noblest profession among, men it can only be practised among enlightened men, and its functions are the more exalted and sacred, when they are the reflex of high culture, and inflexible moral tone, and irreproachable loyalty of conduct; nor can true liberty exist where they are subject to arbitrary legal constraint. At a time when the editor of the Irish News could not possibly entertain the idea of claiming for himself the privileges he vindicated for the "press," one of his cherished aims was to secure its freedom not only from the restraints of a narrow law, but from the control of faction and the influence of prejudice. In his own country, and in this, whenever he has had a voice, he has claimed for "the press," as a sentiment, one of the first to which popular loyalty is due. It is not likely, therefore, that having aspired to its honors he would detract from its dignity, its utility, and its pre-eminence as an agency of progress, and a mediator between the conflictin g passions and interests of mankind. On the contrary, he would extend its rights and secure them in their full integrity.

But the press has duties and responsibilities as well as "rights." Unfaithful to the former, it inevitably forfeits the latter. The Press is an institution whose original function it was to convey information. By degrees it assumed the formation of opinion and then its control, and finally the direction of affairs of state, morality, religion and jurisprudence. First it was an instructor and a guide, lighting men in the path of progress by its intelligence; now it is a power, assuming to control them from the cradle, and exercising sometimes a mild and salutary, and sometimes a brutal and merciless espionage over their lives, their actions and even their inward thoughts and motives.

All power is grasping, usurping and tending perpetually to transgress its proper limits. Hence Executive functions, and those of legislation, jurisprudence, and even the municipality, are regulated and limited by positive laws. But the "press" is no creation of law, and should not be subject, except in cases of flagrant abuse, to legal restrictions. It is the creation and the embodiment of public opinion and public sentiment, and is legitimately controlled by their obligations. To criticise a fault, to denounce a misdeed, to stigmatise crime, is the "right" of the press within these obligations. But to criticise through malice, to denounce without adequate cause and through factious motives, and to impute a crime without actual proof, is a violation of its duties, and a sacrilege in the temple of reason at whose altar it ministers. Equally so is it, to enter the circle of a man's family, to expose his irregularities, his excesses or misfortunes. But if there be a superlative degree in the dereliction of the "press," it is when it recklessly assails, by averments, Legislators, Judges, Courts, and not only ruthlessly stigmatizes them, but imputes to them without exception and without proof, the foulest motives. It is painfully disgusting to see how far this has been carried of late. Let a case be submitted to a court, and the "press" will not only anticipate the decision, but discover its motives, and exhibit them in all their hideous deformity. Let a law be passed obnoxious to the faction a journal supports, and the "press," scorning to discuss its propriety or impropriety, justice or injustice, policy or impolicy, calculates with amazing minuteness, the bribes received by the law-makers. And so on through the whole range of executive, legislative, judicial and municipal duties, from the President to the Policeman, the "press" can see no cause for which it condemns, but personal motives and sordid aims.

Confining ourselves for the present to the imputations on the members of Congress, we come to the subject we alluded to at starting. A Mr. Simonton, a reporter or letter-writer of one of the New-York journals, wrote to that paper charging Congress with universal corruption, and intimating that an offer of a bribe had been directly made to him. The House of Representatives appointed a committee of inquiry, to investigate the truth of the charge, and they summoned the accuser to testify before them. Falling back on the "independence of the press," and what he was pleased to call the sacredness of "private confidence," he refused to testify. They ordered him into custody for contempt, and forthwith faction sets him up as a puppet, for the vulgar to gape at. He is feasted, lauded, lionized, for being convicted by himself of complicity with a suborner, or being a reckless calumniator.

The office of letter-writer at Washington is of recent creation and doubtful morality, His business is not to report what the members say or do, but to track their footsteps, to creep behind their chairs, to dog their associates, to ply their guests and their hosts, to give its proper construction to the tie of their cravats or the fashion of their coats, by any and all means to detect their motives or impute to them his own, and expose their eccentricities, follies, and excesses. To this there are of course honorable exceptions, and it is barely possible that the duties of the position may be discharged by honorable minds. But the duties themselves are more in accord with those of the informer and the spy. And if ever these functions are more disgusting and revolting than otherwise, it is when the floor and lobby of Congress, and the hotels of the members are the theatre of their exercise.

The irresponsibility of the letter-writer is a refinement on the irresponsibility of the "press." The editor is a thousand miles away, perhaps, but known—the libeller is unknown, and may occupy the next chair to his victim at dinner, or share his latest symposium. Then, Congress is the body entrusted with the honor, well-being, and virtue of the country. It fulfills the highest functions ever committed to the integrity of man. In its relation to the mighty interests of this country, its importance can scarcely be over-estimated. But in its moral relation to the struggles, aspirations and destiny of the human race, it should be of far higher significance, and far more sacred from the tooth of the slanderer and the evil eye of the spy. In proportion to the enormity of infidelity in a member of Congress, is the turpitude of accusing him without sufficient proof; and baser still, if possible, is the turpitude of withholding the proof if it be in the accuser's possession.

The fable of the boy crying "Wolf," "wolf," "wolf," so often that no one heard him when the wolf came, is sufficiently old and well-known, without this paltry repitition of it. But this is its least evil. The licentiousness of the "press," the groundless accusations of its correspondents, bring Congress, the Constitution, the Republic, and Liberty itself into disrepute. They are iron on the despot's heel, wherewith he grinds the bones of prostrate men, they are the darkest clouds looming on the patriot's eye. At home they mar our aspirations and chill our confidence. We feel as if under the influence of a hideous nightmare, in which all forms of things are distorted and discolored and all sounds inharmonious.

Turn we where we will, we see in the Presidential chair, in the Senate chamber, on the bench of justice, in the magistrate's room, nothing but ghouls and vampires; instead of officers, gaunt images of perjury and treason. If men could but believe what the "press" says of the administration of justice, the enactments of law, the motives and aims of all officials, the utter corruption of public sentiment, and the complete want of faith in every department, they not only should be indifferent to the disruption of the Union, but should evidently desire as the most needed of blessings, the ruin of the Republic, root and branch, so as that even its ashes would not remain. Nor could its destruction satisfy the stern requirements of virtuous indignation. To that end it would be needful to blot its name from the records of the world, so that its very name may never pollute the tongue or jar upon the ear.

GUNPOWDER TEA IN CANTON.

The morning and evening papers, for the last week, have been heavily laden with accounts of the bombardment by Admiral Seymour of this Celestial city of bamboo and porcelain. In a military point of view, these accounts are uninteresting. As much so as the accounts we had, a couple years ago, of the demolition of Greytown by the gunners and incendiaries of the Cyane. Gunpowder tea is stronger than Bohea. The mortality produced by it is fearful. Fearful, certainly, among those devourers of opium and assiduous caltivators of crippled feet and pig-tails, who with hideous hieroglyphics on their gaudy banners, and boots stuffed with silver pieces to pay their passage across the River of Death, come tumbling head over heels, spear in hand, against the British.

Most of the public instructors of New-York—the Tribune with special emphasis and eloquence—condemn the butchery and havoc of which the British Admiral before Canton was the remorseless author. Clearly, it appears, there was no reason before Heaven for this terrible work of blood. The reply of the Chinese authorities to the Admiral completely exculpates them. They were guilty of nothing whatever—guilty not even of a venial infraction of any right or privilege belonging to the British.

But the British purse is somewhat diminished in bulk since that game of ball before Sebastopol. It is necessary for John Bull to recuperate his finances somehow, somewhere. Considering all things, it is easier to knock an Indemnity out of China, than out of Russia, or any other people nearer home. China, too, having made herself obnoxious to the civilized world, any outrage offered her—any robbery committed upon her—any truculent barbarity of which she may be made the victim—will be easily overlooked. On philosophic grounds, it will be justified. In the name of humanity, it will be pardoned. For the sake of civilization, it will be eminently sanctioned.

Besides, there have been memorable precedents for such doings as Admiral Seymour has initiated. The whole history of the British colonial empire is made up of such exploits. The conquest of Scinde—the conquest of the Punjaub—the confiscation of the kingdom of Oude—the Burmese war—these, and a thousand other chapters, tell the same story of successful rapine and triumphant ruffianism upon the most splendid scale.

And this is the superlatively moral and enlightened country, which with the myriad tongues of its huge Press, perpetually deprecates what it calls the aggressive spirit of the American Democracy, and anchors a whole squadron, under the Red Cross, in the harbor of San Juan, with a view to paralyze the generous efforts now made by that Democracy, under the auspices and genius of General Walker, to reconstruct, upon a true republican foundation, one of the finest countries in the world. The Devil quotes Scripture for his purpose. When Great Britain denounces Fillibusterism, she does so with her hands red with the blood of plundered nations, and with the spoils of India heaped upon her back—a tower of ivory and gold which yet shall crush her life out. To such a virtuous preceptor, the American Democracy are bound to pay the most pious and dutiful attention.

BARNEY WILLIAMS AT HOME.

New-York will be glad to hear that her favorite at the Broadway has achieved a complete success in Dublin. Since the days of Tyrone Power, there have not been such cheers heard in Hawkins st., as those that have greeted Barney Williams. Not a paper in the beautiful city of Corinthian columns and Italian domes, but writes pages in his honor. His success in London was wonderful; his triumph in Dublin is astounding. There's not from Cyprus to Iceland a more exacting audience than that of Dublin. This is true of the Forum. It is peculiarly true of the Theatre. The world knows it. Even Belfast—the Athens of Ireland—with the magnanimity of Aristides concedes it. And so, wearing a crown of green bays and shamrocks, handed him by the queenliest and proudest patron of the Drama, our friend returns to us before many days are over.

Improved by his trip, there's no doubt he will be. There's an elasticity in the old sod which imparts itself to every heel and toe which lovingly tries a jig upon it. There's a delicious moisture—a mountain dew—floating all over the darling island, from Killiney to Caranthual, which fertilizes the heart and brain, and brings out exuberantly all their worth and wit. From the sweet city of Cork, with the bells of Shandon pealing after him across the ocean, he'll be sure to bring a load of honey on his tongue. Whilst from the misty hills lying between Glengariff and Kenmare, and from the Arbutus woods of Glena Bay, and from the noggins of goat's milk and potheen to be found at the foot of O'Sullivan's Cascade or the Eagle's Nest, a wealth of poetry and inspiration will have transfused itself all through his genial nature.

As for his wife, they're all in love with her from Howth to Black Head.

The Yankee Gal has won a million hearts. She rivals her husband, the enthusiastic reporters of the Dublin papers say; and they tell us, that her Mary Anne was demanded again and again, the occupants of the galleries—the Immortal Gods themselves—catching up the spirit of the air, and chorusing with a vigor which must have astonished the performer. Both are Born to Good Luck, and whilst Mrs. Williams prospers with her Connecticut Courtship, we heartily pray that her husband may long continue to play the Happy Man. The brightest of welcomes awaits them on their return to America.

THE SIEGE OF GRANADA---GEN. HENNINGSEN'S REPORT.---TWENTY DAYS IN GRANADA.

The news from Nicaragua, by the James Adger, brought us, amid other matters of exciting interest, Gen. Henningsen's Report to President Walker, giving graphic details of his operations in Granada, from the 22nd of November, the day on which he took command of the Nicaraguan force in that city, to the 12th of December, on which he made good his escape. Henningsen's orders from President Walker were to destroy the place. On the 11th of December, a placard on the highroad, fronting the ruins of the last house of the city, held this ominous intelligence, "Here stood Granada."

For seventeen days, Henningsen's command was surrounded by the allied forces of Guatemala, Salvador and the Nicaraguan Rebels. For seventeen days it fought this force, which has been variously stated at from 2,000 to 2,800 men, the latter being their own estimate, though Gen. Henningsen doubts whether at one time the enemy had more than 1,500.

Our loss—writes Gen. Henningsen—amounted to, officers and men killed and wounded, about 120 officers, citizens, women, and children swept off by the pestilence; but of those he thinks that two-thirds would, at all events, have died if they had remained in Granada. The loss of the enemy cannot be less than 800 killed and wounded. Henningsen either saw or authenticated 200 dead and allowing only three wounded for one dead, which is at least forty per cent. less than experience warrants, it comes to the above results. We were informed by prisoners that they suffered severely from cholera and pestilence and desertion, and all the natives in the camp were taken sooner and more rapidly prostrated and carried off than the Americans.

The details of the report are marvellously interesting. The daily journals, have given it at length; and the effect produced by it, on men heretofore opposing or callous to Nicaraguan Liberty, is the greatest evidence of the force by which the exciting and heroic facts are conveyed. Presuming that our readers have carefully read the document in extenso, we aspire to do no more than present as a future aid to memory, a daily historical summary of the eventful period.

22nd November, (Saturday), being informed that he would be attacked on Sunday, Henningsen established two lines of barricades—one parallel with Mercedes church, the other below the Cathedral—and commenced burning the city up to that point. On the 23rd he erected a new line of defences, covering the plaza, and burned the surrounding block. Capt. Hesse, of the Sappers, charged to fortify the Guadalupe church, did not fulfil his orders.

The works at Guadalupe not being begun by daybreak on the 24th, Hesse and his lieutenant were removed; with little effect, however, as Capt. Green's company, sent to aid the Sappers, united with them in getting drunk. While thus situated, at 2½ o'clock, the allies suddenly appeared at two points; and while Henningsen and Lieut.-Col. O'Neill were respectively attending to the defence of these points, the allies surprised the Guadalupe, and massacred about twenty of the Sappers. Meanwhile a brilliant charge made by O'Neill upon a body of over 300 men, checked with prompt severity, the advance of the enemy. His brother, Lieut. O'Neill, fell; two riflemen were wounded; but the enemy were broken and pursued, with great slaughter, for over a quarter of a mile. The allies had over 50 killed and 150 wounded.

On the 25th, some house fighting; O'Neill and Capt. Green distinguishing themselves. On the 26th, Henningsen and O'Neill, after three attacks carried the ruins of the church of Esquipulas, and occupied them; Major Caycee having previously carried the huts opposite. On the 27th was continued the destruction of the city. An attack by Henningsen on the Guadalupe was not successful; the enemy gained the plaza; but Henningsen after blowing up the tower of the cathedral, which fell among the enemy, retook the church of Guadalupe, into which he removed all the sick, wounded, guns, men, &c., and made it his memorable head-quarters, leaving a detachment in the ruins of Esquipulas. The storming of the church was effected by three columns of twenty men each; the first led by Lieut. Col. O Neill, the second by Major Caycee, and the third by Major Schwartz, Gen. Henningsen accompanying the latter. "After occupying Guadalupe Church we found," says Gen Henningsen, "twenty unburied bodies of the Sappers, and Green's company; one charred, and with the hands tied, supposed to be Capt. Hesse; ten or twelve unburied bodies of the enemy, and some thirty graves of their men, covered only a few inches with dirt, and all killed in the preceding day's attack." Several of the sick and wounded died, and with a view of preventing disease an intrenched camp was established close at hand which the soldiers called Fort Henry, after the gallant major of that name.

They had at this time seven day's rations of flour and plenty of coffee, to eke out which they commenced to slaughter mules and horses. On Saturday 29th, the first ration of horse flesh was distributed.

On the 28th an epidemic broke out in the church; twenty of thirty cases died with cholera. Henningsen continued intrenching at Fort Henry, to which he removed his head quarters. This day a fugitive brought news of the landing on the lake having fallen into the hands of the allies. An invitation to surrender was received. It offered protection and passports to the garrison if they would deliver themselves up. Henningsen would not parley with men he knew to be liars, and offered to spare the lives of the allies if they laid down their arms within two hours, else within six months he would hang them up as high as Haman. The enemy made two unsuccessful attacks on the church.

On the 1st December, the intrenched camp being completed the heavy guns were removed thither, also the sick and wounded. The force was now stronger than before; for those who recovered from sickness exceeded the number of those who died. The enemy continued to make daily attacks on Henningsen's position, but were as usual beaten back. The general, under the cover of earth works now began moving towards the shore, and during the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th of December continued to make in that direction. On Sunday, the 8th, Capt. Grier, taken prisoner at the capture of the wharf at the lake, was sent by the allies with a letter from Gen. Zavala, Major General of the Guatemalan force, in which Zavala desired a conference with Henningsen, as he was anxious to save the life of the latter and his soldiers, and showing (after his fashion) that there was no hope for the forces of Walker. General Henningsen sent a verbal answer declining all parley except at the cannon's mouth.

On the 9th, the steamer appeared, but soon retired. "By this time we had cut up a small chain cable and cast round shot, by pouring into the mould, round the chain, lead, derived from breaking up the spare cartridges, for which we had no caps." In this manner, though they entered the Guadalupe with only twelve rounds of shot and shell and about ninety canisters, they raised the number of rounds to one hundred and seventy-five.

For seven days they had been without flour, were short of salt, and reduced to four horses and one mule. A dangerous panic began to spread, the men thinking that General Walker must have met with some great reverses. Many desertions took place. Henningsen's position was now very gloomy, and to keep the spirits of his men up, he found it necessary to attack some of the works of the allies, which did not prove very successful. On the 10th, Wednesday, the steamer Virgin came in sight, with which communication was effected at night.

Avoiding the principal intrenchments of the allies, Gen. Henningsen succeeded, after some hard fighting and the loss of about forty men, in forcing his way to the church, after which the allies abandoned and set fire to their works on the wharf, and during the night of the 11th, the embarkation of the united forces was accomplished.

Such is a mere index to those glorious twenty days, days that, however the horrors of their painful scenes may appal, shall be long remembered for the military achievements which, as Henningsen truly says—"have not many parallels in the history of irregular armies."

CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

A very complimentary invitation informs us that the Erina Society of New-York, held their annual ball, in the City Assembly-Rooms, the 18th of February, for this most useful Association. The Honorary members of the Erina Society are men of excellent station in the community. Some of them possess great wealth. Others of them enjoy civic honors or grave commercial trust and consequence. All are eminently respectable in the best sense of the word. The names on the Committee of Arrangements are positive guarantees for the complete success of the Ball. Shelton's Band has been engaged. That's another brilliant fact prophetic of the occasion. We write so much apropos to the contemplated Ball of the Erina Society, for it is cheering and delightful to find one Society coming so generously and chivalrously to the assistance of another—the old nobly helping the young—and with the weight of its long-established influence and prestige recommending the latter to the warm friendship of the public.

THE STORM BLOWS OVER.

The Prusso-Swiss affair has been arranged. The royal Neufchatel prisoners are to be discharged from custody and banished. France, in return for this act of timely grace, guarantees the independence of Neufchatel. The great powers could not afford to make war on Switzerland at this juncture of European affairs—what a homage this to the power and spirit of Republicanism!

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

MORE ABOUT THE CAMPBELL TOWN ELECTION—AN IRISH DOCTOR—AN IRISH WIDOW—THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE AND THE ISLE OF MAN.

The candidate himself, however, had not yet arrived. Whilst they waited his arrival, the susceptible multitude took note of every new comer, and hailed him with an enthusiasm proportionate to the popularity he enjoyed, his station in society, or the amount of services which, in a pecuniary or any other form, he was likely to render. The very wealthy proprietor of Ellinthorpe Hall (who had subscribed £100 to the election fund, and had promised £50 more, in case it was necessary) was vehemently greeted as he jogged in upon the ground, astride of his bay pony, and stripped his bald head to salute the banner of the League. There was great applause, too, when Mr. Mackelwhite, the influential Scotch farmer, drove in; and there was loud and long-continued cheering when Captain Skelton, formerly of the barque William of Normandy, and now the owner of 30,000 sheep and Skelton Castle, dashed up in his open barouche and four.

But the applause which welcomed these gentlemen was nothing to that which broke out, and rang again and again, and over and over, when Dr. McGillicuddy, the ould Irish doctor, spurred across the bridge, mounted on his famous race-horse, Garibaldi, and drew up with magnificent fuss, close beside the big red coach—Garibaldi proudly fretting and foaming, and the McGillicuddy himself gasping violently to get out a cheer.

The doctor was an immense favorite. True, upon all occasions, to the honor of his native land; overflowing ever with the eloquence of which it is said to be the exhaustless fountain; retaining, in its full force and flexibility, the mellifluous brogue, which, even in the din of war, has won the hearts of stern old soldiers, and bade them, in more peaceful campaigns, turn in winning gratitude to the people whose peculiar privilege it is; full of genial, generous, rollicking, headlong fun; an enthusiastic Catholic, ever ready to resent the slightest insult flung upon the religion of St. Patrick and St. Bridget—if need be to fight a dozen duels on their account, and, like Gallagher, the devout ventriloquist, to bless himself with the sign of the cross before he pulled the trigger; Irish in name, in heart, in voice; Irish in every mood, syllable and tense; Irish from the tip of the crown to the sole of the foot; Irish before and Irish behind, the doctor was the idol of his countrymen—their oracle and champion.

He was proud of his pedigree. He had a map of the McGillicuddys tacked to the door of his dispensary; and the silver drinking-cup of his grandfather stood, full of dust and cobwebs, amongst the graduated glasses and compounding mortars on the chimney-piece. His library was small, but contained "The Annals of the Four Masters," "Walker on Irish Costume," "O'Connor's Dissertations," and a mildewed edition of "the Cambrensus Eversus." After dinner he loved to recount the glories of the ancient days, when the white-robed bards were in full play, and the red deer were plentiful, and the veils of the beautiful daughters of Findalve were bound with a golden bodkin, and the princes of Ulster appeared at the English Court with their Galloglachs, bareheaded, armed with hatchets, and in yellow surplices dyed with saffron.

The calls on his professional services being few, he devoted most of his time to the growing of wheat, the sports of the field, and the business of the race-course. Not a kangaroo-hunt took place within miles of him, but James McGillicuddy was there, in his red coat, doeskin breeches, blue bird's-eye cravat, and top-boots. Foremost in the field, nothing failed him, nothing scared him. No scrub too close; no ground too broken; no fence any way too trying; he dashed through the worst; tore through wattle trees, and rocks, and swamps—cleared everything before him—left everything behind him—and what his horse baulked at, he did himself.

On the race course he was not quite so successful, though fully as adventurous. In six years he won but one race. The year before this election, he had entered a favorite horse for the Governor's Cup, at Green Ponds (the doctor, by-the-by, had called this horse after St. Lawrence O'Toole, a deceased archbishop of Dublin); had trained him at great expense; staked considerable sums upon him, and, with the certainty of his winning, had speculated deeply in poultry and tulip roots. The heavenly horse, however, broke down, and the doctor, who was a staunch O'Connellite, peremptorily changed his name, in derision and disgust, to that of Young Ireland.

Young Wagstaff, the popular candidate, was the eldest son of Robert Wagstaff, Esq., of Mona Vale. The old gentleman hailed from the Isle of Man; had been born there; had realized a handsome fortune there, or thereabouts, by privateering in the Napoleonic war, (his political opponents averred it was by the basest smuggling,) and having emigrated shortly after the Treaty of Vienna, to Van Diemen's Land, had purchased a vast tract of land along the Macquarie river, two miles above the town of Ross—the busy scene of this day's great proceedings. On this property he had built a commodious house, popularly known as Wagstaff's Warehouse; and on the extreme point of a high, beautifully-wooded hill behind it, he had built a tall, round tower, in which it was his intention to be buried, and which the public alluded to invariably as Wagstaff's Lookout.

He was a man of few words, few ideas, but great muscular action. A severe blow from a cutlass had left, across his left temple, an indisputable token of hs early difficulties and pursuits. His friends spoke of it with levity as his letter of marque. Brought up in the midst of such rude fellowship, and having had few opportunities of acquiring the graces of social life, his wealth was to him rather an incumbrance than otherwise. He was completely at a loss how to make use of it.

He bought carriages, and hammer-cloths, and silver-plated harness; gold hat-bands, yellow velvet knee-breeches, white stockings, plated buckles, cravats, pomatum, and powder for his footmen, butlers, and coachmen; he bought dinner-services, which it was a feast in itself to look at; tea-urns and tea-pots, egg-spoons, fruit-knives, fish and soup-ladles—any one of which would have been a sumptuous testimonial to the greatest benefactor the world ever saw; he had his carpeting and furniture designed from the bath-rooms (so the upholsterer persuaded him) of Louis Quatorze; he had his walls panelled and frescoed in imitation of the Villa Pamfili (so the painter and glazier, a profound sycophant, convinced him) and, to crown all, as he never could discover what crest, motto, or heraldic device specially belonged to his family, adopted that of his native land. Hence it was, that on the handles of his knives and forks, his soup-tureens, hammer-cloths, livery-buttons, bed-linen, table-cloths, and family Bibles, the Three Legs of Man figured away as Wagstaff's coat-of-arms.

People laughed at him, to be sure; and, reverentially thought no more of his grandeur than they did of her Majesty's mail-coach, with all its crimson blazonry, post-office authority, and music. He was rich, and the Golden Calf, even with a chosen generation, was an object of adoration. Devoted to agriculture in all its branches—devoted to subsoiling, thorough-draining, fencing, sheep-washing, tobacco-raising, and stall-feeding—he employed a multitude of hands, and so secured the interest and sympathies of the laboring population. He gave large dinner-parties. He gave balls and pic-nics. He occasionally ventured on private theatricals. Thus he secured the favorable consideration of all the genteel or pretentious people of the neighborhood—the consideration of all who were unable to compete with him in the splendid profusion of his entertainments, and derived from his patronage (from the fact of their being invited from time to time to his festivities) the reputation of being highly respectable and thriving.

Thus strengthened, old Wagstaff determined that the Legs of Man should move another step up the social ladder. Political events favored the experiment. The colony had just received a new constitution. Under certain restrictions regulating the franchise, etc., the colonists of Van Diemen's Land were empowered to elect a given number of representatives to a Legislative Assembly; which Assembly were to pass whatever laws they deemed fit for the improvement, and, to some extent, for the government of the country. These laws were to be subject to the approval of the Privy Council in London. Two-thirds of the Assembly were to consist of members chosen by the popular vote; the other third of members appointed by the local vice-regal Executive. Heretofore the laws immediately affecting the colony had been made by a Council, nominated solely by the crown.

A crisis had arrived. The eyes of Europe were upon it. The world stood still to watch it. So the orators and editors of the young colony declared. The ambition, the patriotism, the political influence of the free colonies had now an opportunity for development; and men, who, for various reasons, had declined the privileges with which the colonial government had previously offered to invest them, now came forward, hat in hand, soliciting those same privileges from the new power—the electoral body which the Parliament of Great Britain, amidst the loudest babble and confusion of tongues had called forth. Even now, trained as they had been, in the austere school of mere Red Tape officialism; trained as they had been to look exclusively to the nominees of the Crown for every assistance, favor and advantage, a healthy spirit had broken out among the principal men of the colony, and, with thorough earnestness and enthusiasm, many of them, as has been said, aspired to be the representatives of the peope, where they had, in times past, with contemptuous indifference or positive hostility, refused to be the representatives of the Crown. That which the popular vote would give them, was esteemed to be the higher and nobler order of representation. It would be the measure and expression of their social influence; the good opinion in which they were held; the position, weight, and power, which openly, amongst their neighbors, their friends and foes, they had fought for and acquired. The representative aspect given to them by the Crown, or rather, by the second-rate subordinates of the Crown, might give the measure only of their obsequiousness and gentility.

Besides, there was now a grave question pending between the free colonists and the servants of the Crown. The latter were obstinately in favor of the continuance of convictism in the colony; were obstinately in favor of the colony still being, and for years continuing to be, the depository of the crime which the ermined authorities at home had shipped off, or might find it, hereafter, expedient and wholesome to export. Their salaries, in truth, depended on the perpetuity of the curse. Their stipend was in a dunghill. The same flood that would wash away the foul garbage, would leave them without a penny. Hence, we have seen the Medical Superintendent in his gig and grim inflexibility, devoting himself to the cause of Mr. Griffin: whilst his dearly-beloved brother, the disabled chaplain of the Government hospital and prison, disguised himself, and his old horse and equipage, in the cockades and sashes of that gentleman.

To this system—to this forced importation of idleness, mischief and wickedness into a fair island, which Nature had made so inviting to all that was active, manly, most excellent and beneficent, and which latter would have flowed in spontaneously but for the coerced intrusion of the former—the free colonists were vehemently opposed. Against it they had been at war upwards of ten years; against it they had petitioned and protested; against it they had held meetings all over the country; eaten innumerable dinners; drunk incalculable toasts; against it they had signed pledges, binding themselves solemnly to the disuse of convict servants; and, in the spirit of this pledge, they had gone so far as to break off all social and private intercourse with the Government officials, from the Lieutenant-Governor down to the Medical Superintendent, who had declared themselves, or were known or suspected to be, the friends of Transportation; against it, last of all, they had organized themselves into a formidable League—a League embracing the colonies of New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia, in Australia Proper—which League was designed and sworn to resist, by every possible constitutional means, the introduction and settlement of fresh convicts in the country.

To give efficacy to this League, a treasury of £50,000, two local secretaryships, and a Parliamentary agency had been established; whilst a flag—five stars on a blue field—had been adopted as a popular type of the Confederacy. It was this flag which now floated from the roof of the big red coach in front of the old Scotch Thistle. And this, the first election for members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the colony, was too important an occasion for the members of the League to contemplate, without a demonstration of their force and a contest for supremacy.

Consequently, in every district, empowered to return a representative to the Assembly, a member of the League had published an address, pledging himself against the Government, and, for the honor and happiness and good name of the colony—their adopted country—calling on the constituency to elect him. In most instances, a candidate on the Government side, also, appeared. The friends of the former were called Abolitionists; friends of the latter, Pollutionists. In no instance, however, did the two parties so rancorously meet and so desperately fight, as in this of the Campbell Town election. The League had put forward its best man. The Government had done the same.

Cambell Town, (in Van Diemen's Land,) though a very small town when compared with Edinburgh, or Dublin, or Brussels, or Madison in Indiana, is important enough, considering the size and interests of the country in which it is situated. It is the fourth largest in the Island, Hobart Town, the seat of Government, being the first; Launceston, the northern port, being the second; Oatlands, the capital of the midland districts, ranking as the third. Pridden's "Australia," or West's "Tasmania," explains all this.

The town consists of one entire flourishing street, and three broken and very languid ones. The former is ornamented with three hotels, two butcher shops, several tailors' and milliners' establishments, half a dozen private residences (the doctor, the principal lawyer, a Parisian daguerreotypist and professor of languages, a widow from Wales, along with a retired color-sergeant and a Baptist preacher, inhabit them), and, last of all, the Episcopalian church, in a green field, speckled with white headstones and tombstones, hemmed in with a frail fence of the native oak and gum tree. The Police office is situated in one of the smaller streets. It is the vital institution of the place. Without it, Campbell Town would expire.

The principal hotel is kept by an Irish widow. She is broad, mature and sprightly. She has radiant round cheeks, black eyebrows (finely pencilled) the snowiest teeth, a mighty arm, a noble waist, and a ponderous foot. She prides herself on having the most fashionable hotel in the country.

"Sure," she says, "the Governor stops here, and the Members of the Council, and his Lordship, the Bishop, and that's what Mrs. Morrison, above at the Blue Bear, can't say.

The Widow's name is Kearney. She left her native town of Prosperous, county Kildare, Ireland, fifteen years ago, and, with much composure, buried her husband two years ago last June. She has been busy for the last six months, superintending the completion of a monument, destined to make known to an ignorant and heedless public the countless virtues he possessed. The monument is composed of green and gray marble. It represents an ancient shield, has the name of James Kearney in the centre, and the consolatory ejaculation of "Erin go bragh!"

in gilt letters at top.

Mrs. Kearney is a patriot. She tells everybody she was born in Prosperous, and boasts, with swelling heart, that Prosperous was the place where the "boys" burned the barracks over the heads of the North Cork Militia, in '98. She wears a profusion of green silk and satin, going to mass every Sunday; has likenesses of Brian Boroimhe, Daniel O'Connell and Father Tom Maguire in her principal parlor; and entertains several friends (including the priest) at a sumptuous dinner, on Patrick's Day. This feeling decides her course on the present occasion. She sides with Griffin and the Government, just for the sake, she says, of the green they have mixed up with the red and yellow. A large flag, in which those colors have been set forth, swings from the middle window of the second floor, whilst the widow's cap is enlivened with delicate little tricolor ribbons, corresponding with the flag. Some people hint it is, because the Governor stops there that Mrs. Kearney avows herself a Griffin. But Mrs. Kearney repels the imputation; and those who know her best receive it with a smile. That she is not actuated by base considerations, the fact of her being on the unpopular side of the contest should be a sufficient evidence. Five panes of glass broken by the public, and her front door defaced with contemptuous inscriptions, in chalk and charcoal, bear witness to the brave disinterestedness of her conduct. But some people hint, again, that the popular side is not, after all, the paying side; and that the Government party, small as it is, runs up a larger bill at Mrs. Kearney's, in the course of the year, than ten thousand of the Great Public would have the means or the disposition to do in the course of ten years. But it is thus that, in every age, in every clime, the noblest sacrifices are explained away, and virtue, here below, fails to reap its due reward.

The hotel, at the other end of the town, is kept by a gentleman, one time a burgher of Liverpool. Some difficulties, however, of a trivial nature, brought him face to face with an enlightened jury of his countrymen; to which circumstance his residence in the fairest island of the South Pacific is somewhat logically ascribed. The fact is, in a bewildered moment, he had the infelicity to mistake an old Colonel's boots for his own, and never having discovered the mistake until a certain very grave functionary awoke him one morning from the delusion, he was indicted for an illegal appropriation of goods, to which it appeared he could lay no reasonable claim. His name is Engle-bert. Long since emerged from the discolored mist in which his early labors in the colony were enveloped, he now shines in the genial light which encompasses ever and pervades the temple dedicated to the refreshment of the traveler. He has spanned his doorway with an effulgent rainbow, and, under that arch of promise, he looks complacently on the fast subsiding waters of his affliction, and, far off, ahead, beholds the gladsome peaks of a new creation, tipped with gold, jutting up and glittering in the recovered sunshine. He is a reformed man, is Englebert. And of such a one as he, whose penitence, the gentlest, noblest Teacher of the world has said, "the Angels weep with joy to celebrate," it is not altogether too profane for us thus to speak. Not even though this paper gives but the lighter impressions of a scene, which to a young community was one of no slight moment, and, with all its oddities and grimaces, had much sound worth and goodness, in hidden veins, branching out and vibrating through it.

The Rainbow was a handsome building—had, at all events, a handsome face. It was built of stone—a light brown stone; had two front doors; one opening backwards into the main hall and office—the other the same way, into a large room, used occasionally for public meetings, public dinners, subscription balls, agricultural exhibitions, and Ethiopian serenaders. Outwards, these two doors opened upon a stone platform, running along the entire front of the house, and descending to the level of the street by six tiers of steps. On this platform, the nomination was to take place.

The Returning Officer, the Police Magistrate of the District, had already come upon the ground. He had the proclamation authorizing the election, under his right arm, in a brown paper portfolio. Fidgetty in the quietest of times, his restlessness this morning verged upon delirium. With short staccato steps, in a sparkling little boot, he beat up and down the platform, pulling off and putting on his hat, a white one, with very broad brim, turned up with green; pulling his wig, a brown one, with long flat side curls, sometmes in the rear and sometimes by the forelock; pulling up his shirt-collar; tightening the cravat; now buttoning up his coat, (a claret colored dress-coat, with very stiff, short tails,) and then ripping it all up again; by every conceivable operation, impetuously endeavoring to ease the irritation which a keen consciousness of the greatness of the occasion, acting on a highly impressionable nature, had produced. The Head Constable was likewise at his post. His stout figure, red face, gray hairs, short legs, short neck, glazed cap, brass buttons, canary-colored walking-stick, and capacious waistcoat, (the pattern copied from a draught-board) were all there. A strong detachment of his force, in blue flannel shirts and black leather waist-belts, was close at hand; whilst on the little bench, outside the Police office, a special messenger, smoking his pipe, and writing his name with his bayonet in the brick-dust before him, sat ready to swing himself into the saddle at a moment's notice, and speed away to the neighboring stations, to call in reinforcements, in case any serious violation of the peace took place. The arrangements of the Head Constable were admirable. It was clearly impossible that any attempt to throw off the crown of England, and substitute the red bonnet of Republicanism, could that day succeed. So strong was this conviction, that quite a number of ladies (the Baptist preacher's wife and others equally fashionable) had taken up a position inside the church-yard, right opposite the platform, and were now, with various emotions, awaiting the arrival of the candidates, and their respective forces.

But it was past two o'clock, past noon, when they came in sight, and as the serious proceedings of the day then commenced, and as they continued to a late hour that evening, we must hold them over for a week.

RETROSPECTIONS.

In this gray eve of the opening year,
What shadows around me throng!
The years of my childhood re-appear,
Dim faces remembered long;
They speak in the tones I knew so well,
Their soft touch is on my hair,
And visions of sunny glade and dell
Come brightly around me there.

Sweet is their speech of the lanes and trees,
Green lanes where the primrose grew,
Of soft June days and the hum of bees,
And the lark's song up the blue;
Of rushes around the reedy marge,
Of a lake all blue and calm,
Where often we launched the mimic barge
In the summer breeze of balm.

But I said, oh! years ye have come and past,
And we cannot stop to grieve,
Afloat on a river rushing fast,
For the sunny spots we leave;
They may be fair with the morning's sheen,
With the dew on grass and bough,
But down the stream there are glades as green,
And as soft airs fan the brow.

There are roses floating on the tide,
We can see them even here,
And the lovely shore on either side
Shines up through the waters clear.
A breath as of aromatic woods
Comes floating upon the air,
And many a shallop skims the floods
With fluttering pennon there.

They say there are rocks and shoals before,
And none, where they wait, may tell;
But we lift in the sun the flashing oar
And trust to the river's swell.
We will not escape the peril dim,
Looking back with a dreamy eye,
To where some shores in the distance swim
To a fading line of sky.

ENUL.

HISTORY OF CATHOLIC AMERICA.

The Catholic Church in the United States: A sketch of its Ecclesiastical History. By Henry de Courcy. Author of "Les Servantes de Dieu en Canada," etc. Translated and enlarged by John Gilmary Shea. Author of the "Discovery and Exploration of the Mississippi," "History of the Catholic Missions," etc. Dunigan & Brother. (J. B. Kirker.)

SECOND ARTICLE.

In a previous article we have outlined, from the writings of anti-Romanists, the necessity of the history of the Church of Rome in Europe to the history of the world. We have shown—irrespective of the sectional feelings which have agitated Christianity since the time of Luther—the might, power, extent, and intellectual influence of that church, when—as Novalis (Freidrick von Hardenberg) says—Rome was a second Jerusalem—"the holy residence of Divine government upon earth;" when—says the same forcible and comprehensive German, in his brilliant fragment entitled "Die Christenheit oder Europa"—Princes referred their disputes to the Father of Christianity, and willingly cast down their crowns and dignities at his feet—and when monarchs, like Charles the Fifth, "as members of this sacred society," deemed it glorious "to pass the evening of their life in heavenly contemplation within the walls of some retired monastery." Speaking of the influence of the Church on the human mind, Von Hardenberg enthusiastically continues, "How salutary, how comfortable to the inmost nature of man was this govrnment, is sufficiently evident from the powerful expansion of his mental powers, the harmonious development of every talent, the vast height to which individuals arrived in every branch of art, and of the knowledge of life; and above all, the flourishing commerce that was carried on, in spiritual as well as temporal matters, from the confines of Europe to the remotest shores of India. These were the beautiful natural features of true Catholic or Christian times."*

The continuation of Catholic history into the United States is a subject of surpassing interest.

From the early struggles of the missionaries among the wild savages of the untamed forests, to the wrecking of the Catholic chapels in St. Louis, Philadelphia, Newark, and other places by the savage Know-Nothings of our own day—from the martyrdom of Father Padilla and Brother John of the Cross, who were pierced with arrows on their mission in what is now the diocese of Santa Fé, only half a century subsequent to the discovery by Columbus, to the riding on a rail of Father Bapst in the Christian and civilized state of Maine—from the days when the Dutch settlers of New-York paid a ransom of one hundred golden pieces to the irate Mohawks, to excuse the generosity of Arendt Van-Corler, the Commander of Fort Orange (Albany), under whose sheltering arm Father Isaac Jogues escaped from the barbarous treatment of the Iroquois Indians, only to meet death at the stake in 1646—from the early baptism of the Onondagas, Senecas, Oneidas, Cayugas and Mohawks of New York by the Jesuits, the conversion of the Red Men of the Rio Grande by the brethren of St. Francis of Assissi, the begging of the powerful tribe of the Abenakis of Maine in 1646 for a French "black gown" to be sent among them; the advent of the Spanish Dominicans into the hunting-grounds between Florida and California; the perishing of Father Menard in 1661, amid the primeval forests west of Lake Superior, on a mission he projected to the Sioux; the eloquent and energetic labors of his follower, Father Alluoez, around the Great Lakes; the planting of the Cross amid the Illinois by Father Marquette, after discovering and exploring the Mississippi in 1673; the laying of the corner-stone of the State of Maryland by the Catholics in 1634; the erection of the first nucleus of a settlement in such States as Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois, by those early settlers who gathered round the humble missionary posts of the Jesuits:—from the days of those heroic men and heroic deeds, to the days and deeds among which we live—from the first raising of the humble house of Christ in the shadow of the Indian temples in New Mexico to the consecration of Father Maginnis's noble church of St. Mary, the Star of the Sea, under the heights of Flatbush, Long Island, the struggle of the Catholic Church in America is replete with the most marvellous adventure, devotion, suffering, glory, and success.

Its early history is without parallel in the heroic self-sacrifices by which it is ennobled and handed down to us. With the new field presented by the discovery of America, the sons of the Church seemed to have received a strength, capacity and endurance, prophetic of the future greatness of the mighty Confederacy into the recesses and grand wilds of which they were among the earliest pioneers.

It is a noble ambition to disentomb the records of these struggles; to collect the histories of the brave and pious men who undertook to bring the effulgence of the Holy Cross into the pagan twilight of the dense forests; to set up the Altars of Christianity amid the lurid flames of sacrifice offered to the Great Being, in the "high places" and hunting grounds of the Red Man; and to consolidate, by peaceful and loving exhortation, the labors of the pioneers, who were made reckless by the dangers they wooed and overcame.

To be such an historian, to condense faithfully and in no partisan spirit the annals suggested by the brief outline we have given, demands a combination of intellectual requirements and acquirements the possession of which is rarely vouchsafed to one brain.

To do justice to such a theme, the historical enthusiasm of Louis Blanc, as exhibited in his "Ten years," and the analytic breadth displayed in Augustin Thierry's "Norman Conquest," the loving earnestness of Thomas Davis, and the picturesque pen of Prescott; the chivalrous force of Michelet and the Indian erudition of Schoolcraft; the clearness of Bancroft, and the power of grasping details like Napier, the fervid antithesis of Lamennais, and the rapid grace of Macaulay,—these qualifications, welded together and surrounded by the piety of Fenelon, the purity of Bourdaloue, and the eloquence of Bossuet, are necessary to do full justice to the splendid theme—could alone fitly measure the ever-various and still crowding phases of that exciting history.

Having such an idea of what the Catholic history of America ought to be, and of the ability essential to compile it; it will not be thought remarkable when we express an opinion unfavorable to the work before us. It is a failure, without anything to recommend it, save the collection of certain facts, the importance of which is marred very much by the unartistic and rude manner in which they are flung together.

One who has given more study to the subject than we could, and who has an opportunity of consulting many original documents for a Catholic history—Bishop Spalding—says that materials are abundant, but they are scattered, unconnected and often vague. "The inquirer who wishes to trace the origin and progress of our various missions has to contend with many difficulties," for the missionaries themselves labored much more than they wrote.† In his life of the excellent Bishop Flaget,—who was identified with the early history of the Church in the West and South for forty years, and though the first bishop sent to the West, lived long enough to behold eleven new Dioceses spring up within the territory over which he once solely exercised episcopal supervision—Spalding has attempted to indicate a history of the West, such as might be judiciously adopted and improved by other writers respecting other portions of the Republic.

The memories of Friar Mark, Padilla, Marquette, Jogues, Rasles, Marest Le Moine, Ménard, Brebenf, Lallemand, White, Altham, Brock, Carroll, Lewis, Cheverus, Flaget, Neale, Alice Lalor, Foundress of the Visitation Nuns of America,* Elizabeth Bayley Seton, Foundress of the Sisters of Charity in the Unite ‡ Egan, England, Devlin, Concanen, Conelly, Dubois, Power, and the long line of missionaries, bishops and pastors, coming down to Archbishop Hughes and Doctor Pise in our day; and embracing every nationality, linked under the mighty symbol of salvation,—these memories are worthy to be embalmed and enshrined in the prolific history of a country which, though but in premature manhood, rivals and overtops the nations of Europe, which centuries of experience and "policies" have not consolidated.

The divine unity of feeling and harmony of purpose exemplified in the public labors, if not in the private lives of these men, well indicates to the historical student the philosophic equanimity which should be a leading feature of any work, however imperfectly, devoted to their memory. This beautiful guide-mark the author of the present work has allowed himself to rudely neglect. Hence, the spirit of the work is not Christian. A History of Catholicism!—it is most un-Catholic in humanity, unity, and genius. Pretending to re-illume the labors of good men, it affords most reasonable grounds for discontent (in a historical sense) by the narrow-mindedness of the author, who, assuming to review the pillars of a common church, sacrifices all sense of Christian love and justice, by insinuating a doubt as to the strength, beauty, or symmetry of any, save that one pillar against which he has taken it into his little head to lean.

As that one pillar supports our author's body, our author becomes ecstatic as to the grandeur of that especial prop, and will scarcely, not even vaguely, recognize the other pillars which actually keep the roof of the Temple over him. Thus, we are presented with Mr. De Courcy's examinations of the stuff of which this one pillar is built, as a history of the complete Temple; than which a more audacious piece of business could not have been expected from a professed "Know-Nothing." We are given a badly written and mentally-attenuated French view of French labors for religion in America as a sketch of the Catholic Church.

The grandeur and force of the French Missionaries deserve more than M. De Courcy could imagine of them; and he should not have touched their sacred memories to isolate them from the fraternity for whom and with whom they struggled for one end. It exhibits a daring enthusiasm which, from its sectionality, is deprived of the commendation which occasional recklessness in a good cause favorably solicits. It was unkind to one party and unjust to all the others. Frenchmen, Spaniards, Englishmen, Belgians, Italians, Poles, Russians, and last, but as Brownson says, "certainly not least," Irishmen, have shared the dangers and glory of struggling for and building up the Catholic Church of America; and it is an unlovable office, a cold, heartless, frivolous and rebellious office to disrobe and dissect any one party, to the insinuated discountenance of any other. One might as well inquire who made the priest's vestments while the sacrifice of the Mass was being performed; or put one bead on a string and call it a rosary. Browns on says well: "No nationality has the monopoly of the glory of founding and promoting Catholicity in the United States. The writer who provokes invidious comparisons between the various nationalities of which our Catholic population is composed, is our enemy and not our friend."

In other respects this volume is exceedingly objectionable.

* Die Christenheit oder Europa. (Christianity, or Europe.) By Novalis (Freidrick von Hardenberg.) Translated from the German by Rev. John Dalton. London, 1844.

† Life of Bishop Flaget, by Bishop Spalding. Preface.

* This lady, we learn, (page 79) was born in Queens county, Ireland, about 1766. She was brought up at Kilkenny, and was early distinguished by her great devotion. She counsulted Bishop Lanigan on her desire of adopting the religious vows in Ireland, but her family, emigrating to America, would not part with her. She landed in 1797, confided her projects to Father Leonard Neale, and under his counsel devoted herself to the praiseworthy duties with which her name is associated.

‡ Rev. Charles J. White has written an interesting life of this devoted woman, published New-York, 1858.

The style of thinking in which the author indulges is provocative of those feelings which it is the aim and province of Religion to quell. Numerous pages are taken up with an examination of what the author calls "the efforts of infidelity to thwart the temporary mission of Archbishop Bedini" to this country. Just imagine a man engaged in compiling a serious outline of Catholic history, forgetting his duty in the unattractive foolery of abusing the mountebank Gavazzi aad refuting the diatribes of the New-York Express; going away from the boundaries of his subject to give his version of the doings of Carbonari lodges in Italy, the murder of Ugo Bassi, and a general commentary on European revolutionary movements under Kossuth, Mazzini, Garibaldi, &c. What have such things to do with a Catholic history of America? What? only to prolong or re-arouse the wild feelings, which just such unscrupulous and vindictive scribblers as this one, more than any other cause, created in the hearts of political hawks, ever on the watch to pounce on what seems easy prey.

The body of this plethoric "sketch" of the ecclesiastical History of the Catholic Church in the United States is composed of the decomposed or very dead letters of Mr. Henry De Courcy, while in America, to the Ami de la Religion, the Univers, we believe, and other French periodicals devoted to a discussion of Catholic and controversial matters. These letters have been translated, enlarged, and hitched together by Mr. John Gilmary Shea, who unfortunately challenges criticism by taking part of the burden of authorship upon himself. Whoever advised Mr. Shea to this rash act, does not deserve that gentleman's friendship. Mr. Shea more obviously is entwined in the deadly clasp of these pages. In the dedication to Monsignor Cajetan Bedini, DeCourcy recognizes him as the accomplished associate of his labors; and in the preface Mr. Shea gives us a commendatory notice of Mr. DeCourcy, and says, "from the close friendship which united us, and our daily intercourse during the progress of the work, it would be difficult now for me to state what portions are exclusively mine."

One thing, however, is certain, Mr. de Courcy, from whatever source he derived his items, wrote letters to the Ami de la Religion; and more unconnected, higgle-de-piggledy contributions to French journalism and American Catholic history could not well be concocted.

The style suggests the sensation experienced on looking at a Negro sawing pine knots with a rusty tool. It is at once rough, squeally, convulsive and spasmodic; the author, in the one paragraph, bringing dates together, the last of which should only be reached after a consecutive series of necessary facts; and frequently putting allusions in the text, which should be given in notes.

Of the numerous facts which have fallen into such unfortunate hands, the following, referring to a clergyman who commands the respect and admiration due to personal suavity and mental accomplishments of great elegance and extent, has the merit of being a candid recognition of the useful labors of Dr. Pise; a recognition the more to be noted and reproduced, inasmuch the peculiar audience he wrote for has been tardy in awarding that full meed of credit which this paragraph indicates.

"Among the clergymen who joined the Diocese of New-York during the Episcopate of Bishop Du Bois, we cannot omit to mention the Rev. Charles C. Pise, so well known by his popular writings in prose and verse, and as an accomplished scholar and preacher.

"Before coming to New-York, he had published a succinct Church History, and subsequently wrote the Lives of St. Ignatius and his companions, several volumes of poems, tales, a work on the Doctrines of the Church, and several minor treatises. In fact, he first endeavored to give the young Catholics of America reading which would be attractive and innocent. Like many good works, this at first found many assailants, and, borne down by the fierce criticism of the Catholic reviewers, the publisher of these popular Catholic works was compelled to stop the publication. All, however, now admit the necessity of a literature of this kind, of which Dr. Pise must be considered the founder." Pp. 407–408.

This paragraph, to the good intentions of which we subscribe, is about as fair a specimen of the style as may be found in the volume. Yet the incoherency of it must be apparent at a glance. The writer twice uses the word popular, referring to works which had to be stopped. If they were popular as they deserved to be, all the Catholic reviewers in Christendom would not have forced the publisher to interdict the pen of so good and so able a man as Dr. Pise. Cash, not criticism, is the publisher's index.

In leaving this fat pamphlet of 600 pages, we do so very willingly, admitting at the same time that a reading of the facts here so jumbled, has given us a strong desire to see some man who has ability, mental and documentary resources—a genial heart and a sound head—say Dr. Pise for instance—take hold of the subject. If a history cannot be produced such as the talent we indicated above would ensure, let us have a decent, loving, comprehensive tribute to the founders and fathers of the American Catholic Church.

Sir William Don was, by the last mail, playing in Limerick. The Observer of that city makes his appearance the opportunity of writing on the misfortunes of the Haute Noblesse of France beggared by the first revolution. Of the late Louis Phillippe and his ponderings, wanderings, and school-teaching in England and America; and although regarding young Don's misfortunes as less romantic and less national, still it views his conduct as not the less commendable, in that, finding himself ruined, he had the courage and the industry to turn to material account those accomplishments which had obtained the plaudits of refined audiences when exhibited for mere amateur amusement.

"The young baronet worth £6,000 a-year who, when aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant, drove his four-in-hand through the streets of Dublin, was not a more honorable or respectable man than is the actor who attends his morning rehearsals at ten o'clock, works until all is perfect, appears again before a public audience at night, and gains their loud applause by his legitimate labor and genuine genius, pays off his creditors by the fruits of his honest toil, and lays by for himself a future store, the foundation, we hope, of another fortune, which, although it may not, and cannot equal the first, will bring to its enjoyment the gratifying thought that it was hardly, and fairly, and honorably won."

"Malakoff" gives some illustrations of the Prince Napoleon's sayings and doings as a man of science and antiquary. As President of the great exhibition of 1855, he "oh'd" and "ah'd" from object to object, saying that was not the one he desired to see, after which two large volumes of Scientific Journeys of Prince Napoleon to the Great Exhibition, written by somebody else, recorded his exceeding knowledge. Next, the Prince, to the amusement of the Academy, undertook the protection of the Aluminium discovery, and lately presided at a smelting of this metal, sixty miles from Paris. Then he took a scientific, choreographic and bacchic voyage (for they danced and drank enormously) to the North seas. From thence he has brought back a museum of cric-a-brac of a supreme mediocrity which if they had been bought in the curiosity shops of Paris, where they seem to have come from, nobody would give himself the trouble of a visit to the Museum of the Palais Royale. All this—says "Malakoff"—is to be crowned by a magnificent two-volume quarto work of designs and letter-press on this same voyage and its results, as seen in the Palais Royale Museum, to be paid for out of the public treasury, so as to help the Prince on towards the door of the Academy of Sciences. If the Constitutionnel is yet alive when the Prince's scientific voyage appears, we hope it will not forget its criticism published a few days ago, on Commodore Perry's Voyage to Japan, in which it claims that the 550 pages of long-drawn-out matter which that book contains, would have been much more profitably contained in two columns of a journal, or in fifty pages of a pamphlet.

In addition to these arduous labors, the Prince is building a palace in the Avenue Montaigne, which exteriorly is in the style of Herculaneum and Pompeii, interiorly gothic, and the structure of which in general, is a straggling attempt over a large space of ground, to reproduce a something that indistinctly recalls to mind the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. As an experiment in the introduction of a new style of architecture the Government of course pays the expenses.

Literary and Artistic News.

Mr. James, the novelist, and H. B. M.'s Consul at Richmond, has written the following letter to the Editor of the Southern Literary Messenger:

My dear Sir: In some late numbers of the Southern Literary Messenger, I have seen renewed a discussion which began and terminated in London many years ago, in regard to the originality of the celebrated poem of Mr. Wolfe on the Burial of Sir John Moore.

The poem is undoubtedly his own, and was never denied but in jest.

Not long after Mr. Bentley, the well-known publisher, started his Miscellany, the very beautiful French imitation, (for translation it can hardly be called) which you have reprinted, appeared in that periodical, with a few lines in prose impugning Mr. Wolfe's claim to originality. Most people moving in literary circles well understood that the whole matter was a mere joke; but it gave pain to some of Mr. Wolfe's surviving friends; and happening to sup with the author of the imitation, known to the public by the name of Father Prout, I mentioned the fact to him. I know not whether he has ever given his real name to the world; but suffice it that he was a clergyman of the Church of Rome, a most erudite, and also a most amiable man, the last person in the world intentionally to inflict a wound upon any one.

He told me he had been grieved to hear some time before that he had given pain; and he proposed to correct any wrong impression, not by a bold avowal of the jest, but by carrying it on to such a pitch as to make it refute itself.

His plan was to write several notices of the poem in the character of different literary men, each claiming the origin for a different nation, and each giving a version of Mr. Wolfe's poem in a different language. He showed me two, if not three of these versions, which he had already written. One, if I remember right—for I speak of things that occurred many years ago—was in German and one in Greek; and each was as perfect and as spirited as the imitation in French. Whether he ever carried out his intention of publishing these in the way proposed I do not know; for a few days after that pleasant and memorable evening, I left England and was absent for some years; but the marvellous combination of learning, genius and wit in Father Prout, can never be forgotten by

Dear sir, your's faithfully,

G. P. R. James.

"Father Prout," of Water-grass Hill, is the famous nom de plume of the Rev. Francis Mahony, who—said O'Connell, in Feb. 23, 1843—"ought to have been a Liberal, but who has long been a contributor to Fraser's Magazine." In the Liberator's opinion Mahony had not written anything worth preserving, except the "Bells of Shandon," from which, however, all who do not allow their political feelings to over-rule literary justice will differ.

Father Prout, née Mahony, is about the age of the years in this century. For many years he has ceased to exercise the functions of the priesthood. His chief literary labors have been as a journalist. He is known as one of the Editors of the London Globe and the sometime able Roman correspondent of the London Daily News. In the Augustan days of Fraser's Magazine, when it was chiefly written by Dr. Maginn, Thomas Carlyle, Thackeray, and Father Prout, the contributions of the latter were among the most attractive articles which made that periodical famous. "Father Prout" unites, in an eminent degree, great learning and great facility. He is a ripe scholar, a brilliant wit, a writer at once terse, rich, whimsical and deep, and is equally at home in prose and verse.

A new Society, by the name of the "Boston Ancient Music Society," has been formed in Boston, for the purpose of cultivating more fully a taste for the old songs. The Society numbers among its members many of the first singers in Boston.

The Scotch press (says the N. O. Delta,) has always supplied a liberal element in British politics. Since Jeffrey first pitched into the old abuses, aided and backed by Sidney Smith and Brougham, down to the present palmy days of the Edinburgh Herald, its influence has been always in favor of popular reform. It has been tinctured overmuch—the Scotch literature we mean—with religious and controversial animosities and characteristics, but even the High Tory bigotry of Blackwood, the bitter conservatism of Christopher North and his associates, was relieved by many social traits of the most amiable and attractive kind. If John Wilson assailed every species of liberalism, he attacked every species of snobbery too, and so far as his political writings were concerned, assuredly Emerson's theory was applicable—for there was obvious "compensation in nature." In return for every reform he opposed, he suggested a hundred others equally valuable, and while he sneered at the revolutionary spirit of the age, he was actually carrying out a hundred revolutions, marked, unmistakable and decisive in their character. The best intellect of Scotland, Whig or Tory, is opposed to the centralising principle of the English Government, though it sometimes manages to express itself in a ludicrous way, as in the recent construction of a national platform by the English party. The people recognise and adhere to the grand principle of States' Rights, and are still as independent, practically speaking, of the Central Government, as they were in the days of Bruce. Their poets, philosophers and papers are intensely Scottish, and rarely or never accommodate themselves to the opinions, style or idiom of any other nation; and perhaps in that very fact consists the secret of their remarkable influence on the political projects and social theories of England.

A writer in the Evening Post, seeing the statement that the "long-disputed question, whether Purcell or Handel was the author of the grand music of the Old 100th, has been set at rest by a discovery made a few days since in the Lincoln Cathedral Library, of a French Psalter, printed in 1546, containing the identical music of that tune," says that neither Handel nor Purcell was the author, was demonstrated so long ago as 1776, when Sir John Hawkins published his History of Music, and Dr. Charles Burney issued his equally celebrated work. Since their day, it has been common to attribute the tune to Luther; but that he is not entitled to that credit, is amply demonstrated in Haresgal's History of the Old Hundreth Psalm Tune, (published by Mason, Brothers, New-York, in the spring of 1854, in which the venerable tune is traced to an English Psalter, of the date of 1681, preserved in the library of St. Paul's Cathedral, London.)

Homer was a beggar; Plato turned a mill; Terence was a slave; Bœthius died in jail; Paul Borghese had fourteen trades, yet starved with them all; Tasso was often distressed for a few shillings; Camoens, the writer of the "Lusiad," ended his days in an almshouse; and Vaugelas left his body to the surgeons to pay his debts. In England, Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Sir Walter Raleigh died on the scaffold; Spencer died in want; Milton sold his copyright of "Paradise Lost" for £15, and died in obscurity; Otway perished of hunger; Lee died in the streets; Dryden lived in poverty and distress; Steele was in perpetual war with the bailiffs; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" was sold for a trifle, to save him from the grasp of the law; Richard Savage died in prison for a debt of £8; "Hudibras" Butler lived in penury and died poor; Chatterton, the child of genius and misfortune, destroyed himself.

From Weber's experiments on the electric conductivity of copper, and from measurements made by Professor Thomson on specimens of the cable now in process of manufacture for the Atlantic Telegraph, he thinks it highly probable, that with an alphabet of twenty letters, one letter could be delivered every two seconds between Newfoundland and Ireland, which would give, without any condensed code, six words per minute; and that to perform this, no higher battery than from 150 to 200 small cells of Daniell's (perhaps even considerably less) would be required.

A letter from Paris, says:—"Mr. Thackeray, who was here lately, but who is now delivering lectures in Edinburgh, has a contract from a publishing-house in London, for the writing of a volume of a certain length, at £6,000. Mr. Thackeray was calculating lately how much this could come to per line, and estimated it at three shillings, (English.) And yet he was so lazy, that he held the contract several months without writing a line. It is a romance, and as he intends to kill off his hero in America, you may expect a certain amount of criticism on American manners and customs."

MILITARY NEWS.

The eleventh annual ball of the first Company, New-York Emmet Guards, was held at the City Assembly Rooms, 448 Broadway, on Monday evening, January 19th.

The Company made a splendid appearance, and the ball, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, was well attended. The services of the Washington Cotillion Band were secured for the evening.

The dancing continued until a late hour, when a sumptuous supper was served—after which Captain Kennedy prefaced the toasts of the evening, by the following remarks:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am happy to have this opportunity of greeting so many valued friends and fair ladies this night to do honor to the Emmet Guards, by their presence, and in welcoming them to our festivity.

The flourishing state of the Company, gives increased zest to our meeting, and I know there has been nothing wanted on our part, to make it as pleasant as any it has yet celebrated.

It is unnecessary for me to detain you longer, as there are many gentlemen present to address you, who will give a more eloquent exposition of our principles.

I will now read a letter received from the former Commander of this Company; one who fills a position which his ability and integrity adorn, and who in this, as in every position he has filled, proves himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him.

House of Representatives, Washington, Jan. 10, '57.

Dear Sir:—The invitation of the Emmet Guards to me to be present at their annual ball to take place at the City Assembly-rooms, New-York, on the 19th inst. is received.

I regret that my duties here at the period for which the ball is to take place, will prevent my accepting the honor and pleasure I am sure it would afford me.

Having been many years a member of the Company, and spent many of the happiest days of my life in the association of its members, I can speak from practical experience of their universal kindness towards myself and those who have had the pleasure of their company.

Therefore, I regret the more that I cannot avail myself of being personally present, that I might spend an hour or two with those whom I esteem so highly. But, if not present in person, I will be with you in feeling and friendship.

While perusing these lines, my memory reflects back upon the scenes that have happened since the time when I first enrolled my name as one of your members, while those whom we loved and respected, have passed away, we cannot but cast a sorrowful look at the many pleasures we enjoyed in their presence. "Peace be to their ashes." And may a kind and beneficent Providence show them mercy and love.

Please excuse my apparent melancholy, for I should dwell on livelier subjects, and those more fitting for the social and pleasant time of your evening's enjoyment. Therefore I trust that nothing may occur to mar the festivity of the evening, and that all may go on as merry as a marriage-bell, and each and all present may enjoy themselves to their heart's content.

In conclusion, allow me to give you "the Emmet of Ireland's wrongs," who sought by his patriotism and invincible bravery, to place her foremost among the nations of the earth; and though he failed, he has left upon the hearts of his countrymen, and the lovers of liberty throughout the world, an imperishable love for his memory, that the milleneum alone can efface from them. His dying speech stands equally with anything of a literary character for purity of thought and manly courage that is now upon the world's history, and like our own "Declaration of Independence," breathes the pure air of Heaven's inspiration.

Please convey to the menbers my warmest regards; and it is the desire of your humble servant, I can assure you, that their path may be the straight one to immortality.

Respectfully yours.

JOHN KELLY.

JOHN KENNEDY, Captain of the Emmet Guard, New-York.

When the applause, consequent on the reading of this letter had subsided, Captain Kennedy, in compliance with the request of the honorable gentleman, gave as the first toast of the evening—

"The Father's of the American Revolution."

Mr. John Boyd spoke as follows:

Captain Kennedy, Ladies and Gentlemen—The Fathers of the American Revolution need no laudation. The fruits of their wisdom and their patriotism surround us, and the increasing tide of prosperity that has succeeded them is their noblest panegyric. In no other country do the laborer, the mechanic, the man of letters, and the man of mercantile pursuits, after their daily occupations of labor, of study, or of profit, unite in a common brotherhood by festivities such as this. In misgoverned countries, from the circumstance of wealth, of birth, or the action of an unnatural law in society, they are the almost exclusive enjoyments of a class. Through the Revolutionary Fathers, we also enjoy the blessings of rational freedom, and the inheritance of a nation, teeming with all the gifts bestowed by the God of nature for the temporal happiness of man. They have revived the brightest examples of the ancient and modern world, and proved to oppressed humanity that it had not—that it has not yet become incapable of regeneration. Though they were the descendants of the most intolerant nation on earth, and with few exceptions the inheritors of that intolerance, the most cherished of her subjects, and the best judges of her motives and her policy, yet they were the first to rebel against her domination, and sink their intolerance in the cause of liberty; and so have left to the enslaved nations—particularly to Ireland, the victim of that same domination—a justification of rebellion, an incentive to perpetual disaffection, and the example of their religious toleration, by which alone she can ever be exalted to nationhood.

It may, indeed, be said, that once rebels, their tolerance and philanthropy were the offsprings of necessity. This may be so, yet it does not render the example they have left us the less worthy of imitation; and how different would be the condition of Ireland to-day if our forefathers, who had a ten-fold necessity for such a policy, had adopted it?

We are all aware that Ireland has given to the cause of liberty men as learned, as exalted, as chivalrous as they; men who, like them, pledged at its altar "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors," and who, through every peril, sustained as nobly the vows they had registered; but for want of this saving principle, their sacrifices were vain, and their fruits but noble epitaphs, the sad and ever-recurring memories of exile, ruined homes, severed kindred, and broken hearts. It is said that the first glorious thing is to conquer in the cause of liberty, and the second glorious, to die for it. If this were so, fame would attribute different niches in the temple of liberty to the Fathers of the American Revolution, and to the martyrs and patriots of Irish liberty. But the characters of true patriots should not be judged by the effects of their actions, and the generous people of Ireland will never believe in Scotch utilitarianism;—who die for liberty,—"do well, act nobly, angels can no more," is the emanation of another poet, not less known to fame than the former. So, leaving the sentiments of the poets to cancel each other, I do assert that if the lapse of ages finds this country as it now is, "free, sovereign, and independent," and Ireland in the enjoyment of the national happiness prophecied for her by her poets, her saints and her sages, it will be by the maintenance, on the one hand, and the adoption, on the other, of the charter of human liberty established by the Fathers of the American Revolution.

"Ireland a Nation." Judge B. O'Connor responded.

"The prosperity of the American Republic." Mr. Thomas Boyle responded as follows:—Captain Kennedy, ladies and gentlemen: I feel some diffidence in obtruding on an assemblage such as this; yet, sir, as you have seen fit to call on me, in obedience to your call, I rise, more for the purpose of declining your kind notice than of saying anything on a subject so far beyond my capacity. The prosperity of the American Republic, our country, is happily a subject that has never failed to elicit the best and warmest feelings of her citizens; and such feelings united with the energy and industry we every day witnees around us, are the best guarantees of that prosperity. In a nation where the people are frugal, industrious, liberty-loving, and able to defend liberty, it may be said, under divine auspices, that that people must needs be free and prosperous, and such would be the conclusion if the word liberty were understood alike by all. But what appears liberty to one, may seem the reverse to another. Difference of opinion begets difference of action, and so we see in this country, beloved no doubt by all its people, its social happiness, its prosperity, aye, even its very liberty in apparent danger. And this state of things so often arising in this envied land gives hopes, no doubt, to the monarchies of Europe, particularly to our ancient implacable enemy, that this great example of man's capacity for self-government is yet but an experiment, that may, and at no distant period, terminate in anarchy and all the evils consequent on such an event.

But, thank God, no difficulty has yet arisen that has not been corrected in a proper manner by the sound action of constitutional majorities, and in the recent political, sectional, and sectarian strife through which we have so lately passed, we have damped the ardor and darkened the hopes of these enemies—vigilant and meddling agents. The rights of suffrage enjoyed here by naturalized citizens, has been exercised with such discrimination, as to have won for them the confidence of the wisest and best of the land. And if the men whom they have assisted to place in power, exercise their functions with as much moderation, and foresight, we may look forward to the increasing prosperity of the Republic, until most of us present shall have been reckoned with the past.

To you, Sir, as Captain of a company, bearing a name that calls up the history of his country's wrongs in the mind of every Irishman, a few words on the relative condition of Ireland and her oppressor may not be out of place. If Ireland be humbled, England is not the more exalted. If Ireland lost her late throw for liberty, England has lost that prestige which made her name greater than her actual prowess. If Ireland has parted with a portion of her people, they are not entirely lost to her; they are still here, in the press, and before the councils of the nations, the accusers of her oppressive and odious policy; and taking these things into account, with the constantly increasing difficulties of England, it may be questioned whether Ireland, if even now excited to revolt, wouldn't be as much a match for her as at any time that she essayed her independence. And though there is nothing in the present aspect of Irish affairs to excite our pride or immediate hope, neither is there any reason why we should for a moment abandon the political faith and spirit that guided our forefathers through darker periods of her history.

"If conquest o'er the conqueror still Shall be without one unbeliever,
A creed to mock the torturing skill
And shake the soul of the bereaver,
A people's hope, a nation's will,
Is not a renegade deceiver.
Even now is bent no suppliant knee,
But tyrants feel their turn to falter;
The very ashes of the free
Gives rapid growth to Liberty;
What marvel happier times shall see
The nameless grave and altar?"

"The Militia of the State of New-York.

Major Minton, of the 75th Regiment, being called on to respond, made a very eloquent speech, touching on the services of Militia, not only in this country but all over the world.

"Civil and Religious Liberty." Captain James Huston briefly responded by stating that the subject was too comprehensive a one for the occasion, and that the Emmets required no instruction on the doctrines of civil and religious liberty as long as they kept the young martyr in their memory. In conclusion, Captain Huston called on his friend, Lieutenant Lyons, for a song, who sung, "The wish of the True," a song of '48, by Francis Davis, the weaver poet of Ireland. The song was rendered with surprising effect, and elicited the warmest applause; when Captain Lyons proposed the health of T. F. Meagher, Esq., who after returning thanks in a few brief and eloquent remarks, proposed the memory of the late lamented Judge M'Grath, first commandant of the company.

"The Ladies." (Lieutenant Lyons.)

"Captain Kennedy."

After this the company adjourned to the ball-room, where the dancing was kept up for several hours with unabated pleasure. On the whole, there has been no military ball this season, which for order and unalloyed pleasure was comparable to the Eleventh Annual Ball of the Emmet Guard.

DIED,

On Sunday morning, the 25th inst., at the residence of her mother, 8 Clinton Place, Brooklyn, KATE ROSE, eldest daughter of the late Richard Lalor, of Cascade, County Kilkenny, Ireland.

On Tuesday morning she was interred in Cavalry Cemetery.

May she rest in peace.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

July 7, at Tasmania, Van Diemen's Land, Herr Gustavus Adolphus Gulliermus Ziegler, of Berlin University, to Caroline, daughter of the late Capt. Mark Kerr, of Bracklow, Granard, Longford.

Capt. C. W. Elgee, to Maria Emma, daughter of John Doner, Lower Mountstreet.

In Londonderry, Wm. Hancock, to Mary, daughter of the Rev. W. S. Escott, Foyle College.

John, son of the late T. Dunn, to Eliza Seymour, daughter of the late P. Lambert, Galway.

Thomas, eldest son of Wm. Mooney, late of Dublin, to Ann, daughter of G. Tissington.

James Alexander Weir, to Sophia Mary Anne, daughter of the late John Whaley.

John Mettam, of Trinity College, to Isabella, daughter of Edw. B. Smith, Dublin.

In St. Thomas's Church, Ths. Ringwood, Castlepierce, county Tipperary, to Maria Elizabeth Christianna Perry, only child of William C. Perry, of Queen's county.

At Clontarf, Monsieur Henri Hoenar De Mamiel, late Captain in the French Army, to Sarah Emma, third daughter of Molloy M'Dermott, Esq., of Roscommon.

In St. Peter's Church, Marcus John, eldest son of Leonard Bickerstaff, Esq., of Runnemede, to Annie, daughter of John Pollock, Esq., of Upper Leeson-street.

At Newport, Lieut. Wm. M. D. Alderson, to Josephine Rachel, daughter of Rev. J. J. Spear.

IRISH DEATHS.

In his eighth year, William Joseph, eldest son of W. A. Franklin, Esq. of the G. P. O.

At Portmahon House, David F. Mitchell, aged 72.

At Mountmelleck, Margaret, wife of Rev. H. M'Manus.

In Kingstown, Mrs. Speer, relict of Dr. Speer, Royal Navy.

In Great Charles-st., aged 88, Edward Archer, Esq.

At Glasnevin, Wm. Marble, Esq., aged 74 years.

Mary, relict of Moses Pim, Esq., Lucks, Queen's county.

Katherine Jane, relict of Rev. Francis Gervais.

Lucretia, wife of Wm. Burleigh, county Antrim.

Jan. 2, in Dundalk, the Rev. J. H. Alpress.

Emily, daughter of the late Dr. Thompson.

In Dundalk, Harriet, wife of Mr. John Pooler.

At Water Eodge, Catherine, mother of Michael Kelly.

In Tralee, Jane, relict of Geo. Dwyer, solicitor.

At his residence, Lahinch, Clare, Mr. Thomas Blood.

The Rev. Patrick M'Nally, Monaghan, aged 29.

Bridget, relict of John Tighe, of Coote Hall, Roscommon.

At Marbury Hall, James Hugh Smith Barry, of Cork.

Jan. 2., in Belfast, John Young, aged 82.

Roger Curtis, Esq., Commander in the Royal Navy.

Louisa, wife of Michael Creagh.

At Garville avenue, Mr. Stephen Morrin aged 35 years.

At his residence, Sir John's Quay, Mr. John O'Dowd.

At his residence, 35 Marlborough-street, Bernard John M'Loughlin

At Corkamore, Kate, sister to Rev. Michael Coghlan.

In Dundalk, Lt. Col. Thomas Purcell.

At Nottingham, Leonora, wife of Geo. Scales, and daughter of the late John Johnston, of the county Armagh.

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Carefully revised every week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1857.

FLOUR—Com'n to Extra State	per barrel	$6.25 a	$6.85
Common to Fancy Western	do	6.35 a	6.75
Extra Western	do	6.75 a	9 —
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do	6.90 a	8.75
Mixed to Extra Southern	do	6.90 a	9 —
RYE FLOUR—Fine and Super	do	3.50 a	5.25
CORN MEAL	do	3.12½ a	3.75
WHEAT—Canada White	per bushel	1.70 a	1.82½
Western White	do	1.70 a	1.82½
Southern White	do	1.70 a	1.80
All kinds of Red	do	1.45 a	1.62½
CORN—Mixed	do	— 72 a	— 75
Yellow	do	— 75 a	— 76
White	do	— 75 a	— 76
OATS—State and Western	do	— 50 a	— 53
Jersey	do	— 46 a	— 49
Southern	do	— 42 a	— 46
Rye	do	— 90 a	— 95
Barley	do	1.02 a	1.32
White Beans	do	2 — a	— —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels		— — a	4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb		— 13½ a	— 13¼
Fair		— 13½ a	— 14½
Rice, per 100 lbs		3.25 a	4.25
Hops, per lb		— 7 a	— 10
Pork—Mess per bbl		20 — a	21 —
Prime, per bbl		18 — a	— —
Beef—Country Mess		10.50 a	13 —
Prime		9 50 a	10 25
Dressed Hogs, per lb		— 9½ a	— 9¾
Lard, in bbls. per lb		— 12½ a	— 12¾
Butter—Western, per lb		— 15 a	— 22
State, ordinary to choice, per lb		— 20 a	— 29
Cheese, per lb		— 10½ a	— 11½
Potatoes—Carters, per bbl		3 — a	4 —
Mercers, per bbl		2.50 a	3.25
Onions—Reds, per bbl		1.75 a	1.87½
White, per bbl		3 — a	4 —
Apples, per bbl		2.50 a	5 25
Eggs, fresh per dozen		— 29 a	— 31
Limed, per dozen		— 25 a	— 26½
Feathers, Live Geese per lb		— 50 a	— 55
Seed—Clover, per lb		— 12 a	— 12½
Flax, per bushel		1.90 a	1 95
Timothy, mowed, per bushel		2.25 a	2.37½
Timothy, reaped, per bushel		3 — a	3.25
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb		— 9½ a	— 11½
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl		— — a	— 80
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb		— 7 a	— 16
Seed Leaf, per lb		— 10 a	— 32
Wool—Domestic fleece, per lb		— 34 a	— 60
Domestic, pulled, per lb		— 34 a	— 50
Hemp—Undr'd Amer'n per ton		210 — a	215—
Dressed American, per ton		240 — a	260—
Flax—Jersey per lb		— 7 a	— 11
Hay, per 100 lbs		1 — a	1.25
Tallow, per lb		— 11½ a	— —

COMPLIMENTARY BALL.

WILL BE GIVEN TO

MR. JOHN McPARTLAND,

At the PACIFIC-ROOMS, 600 BROADWAY, on THURSDAY EVENING, January 29th, 1857.

The Floor will be under the direction of Professor BRODERICK, assisted by the following

COMMITTEE:

J. STILLWELL JONES, THOMAS PLUNKETT, PHILIP MALONE, JOHN DOLAN, A. H. TRENCHARD, JAMES DUNCAN. ja31

LECTURE ON POPE GREGORY THE SEVENTH.

(THE GREAT HELDEBRAND.)

On Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857,

Before the Catholic Library Benefit Society, at Hope Chapel, 720 Broadway,

BY F. W. POLLARD, A. M.

Tickets 25 cents. For sale at the Catholic Bookstores, or at the door, on the above evening.

Doors open at 7. Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock. ja25

GAS! GAS!! GAS!!!

W. H. CAREY,

Manufacturer of Chandeliers, Pendants, Brackets, Pillar and Mantel Ornaments,

And every variety of Gas Fixtures, No. 6 ESSEX-MARKET, Grand-street, New-York.

Hotels, Churches, Stores, and Dwellings fitted up, and everything appertaining to the business of GAS FITTING, attended to by competent workmen, with promptness, and at satisfactory prices.

Old Chandeliers, and all kinds of Brass-Work, Bronzed, Re-Gilt and Re-Finished, in every style, and restored to its original appearance. ja31 3m

Ocean Express Company of London and Liverpool.

(ESTABLISHED 1851.)

Small Parcels forwarded by each Mail Steamer, to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales—the Continent, India, China, South America, &c.

 Persons wishing to send small packages to their friends at home, at a trifling expense, will please address

COLLINS & MARSH, Agents,
29 Broadway, New-York.
ja26 1y

Money Saved, in Buying Books on the Gift Principle.—All the $1 25 Books sold at one dollar. The Gifts consist of various articles; some of which are Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Rings and Pins, Ear-Drops, Sleeve-Buttons, Cashmere Shawls and Scarfs, Black and Colored Silks, Gold and Silver Watches.

A GIFT BOOK to be delivered at the sale of each Book, worth from 25 cents to 60 dollars.

Catalogues of the Books (containing a selection of the best works) sent to any address.

Any person sending an order for 10 Books, will receive a Book and Gift extra. J. S. ANDREWS, 140 Nassau-street, ja25 3m New-York City.

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

JOHN BANIM'S CHILDHOOD—HIS INTERVIEW WITH MOORE.

From the Irish Quarterly Review.

Although not a very idle boy, Banim loved to study in his own way and at his own time; and his chief pleasure was to steal away from school, and lying under a hedge or beneath the shelter of a haycock, to pore over some prized volume of "romance of fairy fable." Hans Andersen, in all his dreamy youth, never longed to hear the lore of fairy land more earnestly than did little John Banim, and his ready memory enabled him to retain the subject of each narrative of wonder. From admiration, however, the future novelist soon aspired to imitation, and in his sixth year, having listened in silent delight to a fairy fiction of more than usual interest, he resolved to write a story, his own sole composition.

He was not sufficiently tall to write conveniently at a table, even when seated, and having placed his paper upon his bedroom floor, he lay down beside it and commenced the construction of his plot. During three months he devoted nearly all his hours of play to the completion of his task, and when at length he had concluded, the writing was so execrable that he alone could decipher it. In this dilemma he obtained the assistance of his brother Michael, and of a schoolfellow. They acted as amanuenses, relieving each other when tired of writing from John's dictation.

When the tale was fully transcribed, it was stitched in a blue cover, and John determined that it should be printed. But here the important question of expense arose to his mind, and after a long deliberation the youthful author thought of resorting to a subscription publication. Accordingly the manuscript was shown to several of his father's friends, and in the course of a week the subscribers amounted to thirty, at a payment of one shilling each. Disappointment was again the lot of our little genius; for in all Kilkenny he could not get a printer to undertake the issuing of his story. This was a heavy blow to his hopes; but honorable, even as a child, he no sooner found that he could not publish the tale than he waited upon his subscribers, for the purpose of restoring to them their shillings. All received him kindly and refused the money, saying that they were quite satisfied with reading the manuscript.

His literary efforts did not end with his fairy story. We have seen a romance in two thick manuscript volumes, written in his tenth year; and have looked through several manuscript poems, particularly one extending to over a thousand lines, entitled "Hibernia," written about the same period.

This early authorship is not unusual amongst those who have afterwards distinguished themselves in literature, as most students of literary history are aware. Cato and Hobbes, Bacon and Descartes, Boyle and Alfieri, Cowley and Pope, with a hundred others, were, in childhood as in manhood, philosophers, or poets, or statesmen. Like these last, Banim longed to be a poet, even in early days; and amid his stolen rambles in the summer fields felt all that joy in Nature, that Pantheism of poetry, which Byron so nobly expressed, when he makes the boy Tasso cry:

———From my very birth
My soul was drunk with love, which did pervade
And mingled with whate'er I saw on earth;
Of objects all inanimate, I made
Idols, and out of wild and lonely flowers
And rocks whereby they grew, a paradise,
Where I did lay me down within the shade
Of waving trees, and dreamed uncounted hours,
Though I was chid for wandering.

The poetic faculty indeed, appears generally to have developed itself in early life, and whilst Tasso, Ariosto, and Lope de Vega were even in schooldays poets or romance-writers, Boccaccio tells us—and the analogy of his case with that of Banim is striking—"Before seven years of age, when as yet I had met with no stories, was without a master, and hardly knew my letters, I had a natural talent for fiction, and produced some little tales."

But neither in the biography of Boccaccio, nor of any other man of genius, can we discover efforts so ardent and persevering, to secure self-improvement, as those exhibited, even in childhood, by Banim.

Whilst in his ninth year he began a strange birth-day observance. About a week before his birthday he commenced the arrangement and perusal of all the verses, and pieces in prose, composed during the preceding year; when all had been read and duly criticised, he generally found that one set was puerile, —he himself being but a child,—another set was turgid—a third portion was dull—a fourth lot was forced or unnatural, and the boy Banim was as fastidious in self-criticism as, in grave manhood, were Gibbon or Campbell. The evening of the birthday arrived, the condemned manuscripts were gathered in a pile, to which a match was applied, and as the blaze mounted high, the little author danced, gleefully, around the holocaust.

He felt no regret in thus destroying his compositions. He was resolved that the productions of his intellect in the succeeding year, should be superior to those of the past, and fancied the pieces condemned to the flames would but disgrace the more finished efforts of the months to come.

Banim, from early youth, had all that adoration of Poetry which is characteristic of genius; and his love for "The pleasing cadence of a line, Struck by the concert of the sacred nine,"

was only equalled by his admiration of a Poet. A good example of his self-estimate, and of this poetic feeling, was exhibited in his tenth year. The Private Theatre of Kilkenny was then open, and Banim was admitted to witness one of the performances. He was delighted with all he saw. Everything around was so unusual: the audience all in full dress, a brilliantly lighted house, the glittering costume of the actors, the beauty of the scenery, all rendered the spot a fairy realm for the child-poet.

He did not, however, attend so much for the purpose of seeing the play, as for that of observing his idol, Thomas Moore, who was one of the performers. He was then in the first glory of his success, and formed the theme of general conversation. On the occasion of Banim's visit to the theatre, Moore recited his own Monologue on National Music. It was encored, and Banim was the loudest in demanding the repetition. The beauty of the poetry struck the fancy of the child, and so profound was the impression made by it upon his memory, that he, the following morning repeated the entire with almost perfect accuracy, and with the gestures and inflections employed by Moore in its delivery. After having breakfasted, he was observed to dress himself in his best clothes, and the family saw him leave the shop, and, with a roll of papers under his arm, walk towards the house in which Moore lodged: he was about to introduce himself to Moore as a brother poet, and the roll of papers was the manuscript verses by which he meant to prove his right to the "honorable name." Moore, remembering probably the trembling anxiety with which he had, in his fourteenth year, sent "the attempts of a youthful muse" to the editor of the Anthologia Hibernica, and the "honor and glory" which he enjoyed when he found himself shortly afterwards called "our esteemed correspondent, T.M.," received his odd little visitor kindly. He read a few of the verses, enquired as to his progress at school, advised him to be attentive, and closed the interview by asking, if there was anything he could do to oblige "his brother poet." To be called his "brother poet" was quite sufficient for Banim; but the offer of obliging him was too flattering to be slighted, so, after some consideration, he told the good-natured bard that there was nothing in the world he should like so much as a season ticket to the Private Theatre where he could see Mr. Moore on the nights of performance. This request was at once granted, and, for the remainder of the theatrical season, little John Banim was happy as his heart could desire,—the same ticket which opened the theatre to him was, he considered, a tribute to his poetic ability. And how the boy's soul would have swelled could he then have known that but twenty-two years later his own fame would be fully acknowledged; that this same great poet whom he was now so anxious to please, would, when in Kilkenny, call upon old Michael Banim, and, finding that he was from home, write, as a card, and leave for the old man, these words—"Mr. Thomas Moore called to pay his respects to the father of 'The O'Hara Family.'" Literary pursuits, however, were not the only ones by which Banim's attention was engaged: he frequently devoted his play hours to mechanical inventions. He formed a complicated machine which was to realize that dream of philosophy—perpetual motion. Having read Rasselas, he fancied that the philosopher of the happy valley must have been a very unskillful artificer. He, accordingly, of wicker work and brown paper, formed three pairs of wings, and fastened one wing to each wrist of his brother, and his younger sister; having mounted with his two companions upon the manure heap, he fastened the remaining pair of wings to his own wrists, and all three, jumping from their eminence, found themselves, in place of soaring to the clouds, deposited in the "verdant mud" which formed their lake. His next attempt was the construction of sky rockets, intended to mount to a most extraordinary height, but which only blazed along the ground, burning the pyrotechnist and almost destroying the house.

This last exploit developed a very remarkable trait in his character. His father was so much offended by the danger to which the family and the building had been exposed, that in one of his outbreaks of passion he ordered the child to leave the house and seek his fortune in the world. John took his cap, and went forth;—it was a winter night, dark and cold, with a roaring wind abroad. Away the boy went; Mrs. Banim was silent, knowing that remonstrance could conduce to no end, save that of increasing her husband's anger, and even he seemed anxious, but was too passionate to recall the offender. A quarter of an hour elapsed, and a sturdy knock was heard at the door; it was opened, and John reappeared. He approached his father, and taking off his cap, said, "As I am to go, I'll thank you, sir, for the sixpence I lent you the other day;—this was the last remaining sixpence of the thirty shillings subscribed for the unprinted fairy tale, and with it he was as willing, though a child, to commence his way in the world, with as self reliant a confidence, as when, in later years, he went forth with his young wife to venture on the troubled tide of literature. The sixpence was repaid him, but in addition a second was given, and he was ordered to bed, his father having forgotten all his anger in the surprise of the moment.

The deans of faculty in the Catholic University of Ireland for the session 1856–'57, are in theology, Very Rev. Father O'Reilly; in Medicine, Mr. Thomas Hayder; in Philosophy and Letters, Mr. E. Butler; in Science, Mr. Wm. K. Sullivan.

Special Notices.

"Charity covereth a multitude of Sins!"

FIRST ANNUAL GRAND SOIREE

OF

ST. JAMES' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION,

AT THE

City Assembly Rooms, on Monday evening, Jan. 26, 1857. Shelton's Band.

Tickets can be had of the following committee:

Dr. Philip O'Reilly, cor. Madison and James sts., Dr. Purcell, do.; Dr. Richard Dillon, cor. Pearl and Rose sts.; Dr. E. D. Connery, 186 Henry st.; Judge Macarthy, 25 Oliver st.; Major R. Barry. 488 Pearl st.; Peter Kenny, 187 Allen st., John Kenny, do.; Andrew E. Mylott, cor 7th av. and 26th st.; J. J. Hanefri, 96 Oliver st.; Denis Hogan, 14 Roosevelt st., Michael Carroll, do.; G. W. Casserly, 60 do; Timothy Coleman, 29 do.; P. O'Neil, 48 do.; Edward Nugent, 48 do.; A. McCaffrey, cor. Catherine and Henry sts., Richard Walters, do.; Bernard Murphy, 4 James st.; John Lynch, 61 do.; Edward Hart, 74 do.; John Healy, 2 do.; John Kelly, 12 Monroe st.; Edward Hart, 27 do.; E. J. Kelly, 19 Oak st.; Thos. Hussey, cor. Madison and Oliver sts., A. C. Reel, do.; Geo. Carr, 90 Madison st.; James Reilly, 35 do.; Philip Lyons, 225 ditto; Michael J. Higgins, 42 do.; T. Cody, 32 Oak street.; Bernard McFeely, 144 Chatham st.; Francis Priest, 126 do.; John Donoghoe, 71 do.; Francis Hagerty, 3 Catharine st., J. Donnelly, 3 do.; John Marsden, 22 Catharine Slip; Edward Butler, 417 Pearl st.; Richard Fitzpatrick, 393 do.; Geo. Rice, 24 Vandewater st.; Bernard Duffy, 38 do.; Wm. Cleary, 11 Jacob st.; John O'Sullivan. 24 Rose st.; P. Mulvehil, 84 Oliver st.; Wm. Walsh, 84 do.; Denis Decourey, 8 Chamber st.. P. Crowe, 46 Frankfort st.; P. J. Tully, 38 do.; Michael Conroy, 36 do.; P. Hughes, 88 Cherry st.; John Oliver, do.; Thomas Fitzgerald, 14 do.; Edward Sweeney, 38 do.; Mich'l Hallinan, 199 do.; Stephen Lynch, 97 Gold st.; Chas. J. Dougherty, 261 William st.; Chas. Doherty 96 Cliff st., Geo. Hargan, 39 Henry st.; John Crowe, 15 Cherry st.; James Grady, 28 Catherine st.

P. J. DOWLING, Floor Manager. JOHN MARSDEN, Treas'r.
JAS. M. SHEEHAN, Sec'y. WM. O'DONNELL, Chairman.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Notice of Application for the discharge of an insolvent from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

James Grant of New-York City, Notice first published January 12th, 1857, Creditors to appear before the Hon. A. D. Russel, City Judge of the City of New-York, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1857, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at his Chambers No. 25 Chambers street, in said city, to show cause, if any they have, why an assignment of said Insolvent's Estate should not be made and he be discharged from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the Statute for the discharge of an Insolvent from his debts.

McCUNN & MONCRIEF,
jan17 6t Atty's. for Insolvent, 29 Wall st., New-York City.

GLORIOUS NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

MADAME PAULINE HELD, the wonderful Animal Magnetizer, has opened her Rooms, No. 20 HOWARD STREET, near Broadway, for the reception of patients. No matter how obstinate or severe their diseases (unless Consumption), she engages to cure them; ordinary cases in three, and extraordinary cases not more than twelve visits. One trial will satisfy the most incredulous of the efficacy of her treatment. She uses no medicine and the patient never suffers a relapse. Call and judge for yourself. Consultation fee, Two Dollars. Can be seen at all hours from 8 to 1, and 2 to 6.

MADAME PAULINE HELD,
jan17 8mos 20 Howard street, near Broadway.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellectual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes.....50 cents. | Pit.....12½ cents.
Gallery.....12½ cents. | Orchestra Stalls.....50 cents.
Private Boxes.....Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7¾.

MONTGOMERY GUARDS.

The Twentieth Annual Ball of this Company, will take place at NIBLO'S SALOON, on Tuesday Evening, January 27th, 1857.

Tickets—Two Dollars Each—may be had of any of the members, or of the Committee of Arrangements.

Henry Brenner, 71 Wall-st., | Chas. Leary, 345 Second Avenue,
Mathew Riordan, 94 Wall-st., | M. Maher, 133 Water, cor. Pine,
John Moore, 75 Oliver, | John Campble, 321 Water,
M. Reynolds, 45 Scamell.

HENRY BRENNER, Chairman.
CHAS. LEARY, Secretary. j3 4t

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 889 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 3 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man.

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 136 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings:—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hehir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's.

j3tf

L. SILLIMAN IVES, LL.D.,

Will Lecture on

"Church and State Charities Compared,"

For the Benefit of the

SOCIETY OF ST. VINCENT DE PAUL,

At the

Broadway Tabernacle,

On Thursday evening, January 29th, at 8 p. m. Tickets 25 cents—to be had at the Catholic bookstores and of the members of the several conferences.

Special Notices.

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furnishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
fy10jan GERALD GRAY.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening.
JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at
—— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y.
JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street.
JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at corner of Center and Grand st. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery.
JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn.
JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y.
MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J.
OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey.
WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill.
CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C.
EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport.
y2ljune

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themseives and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 53 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARES," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Special Notices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street,
sept27 3mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring, by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfaction be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York.

Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete process (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,

423 Broome st.,

tf6dec New-York.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any order left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 8ms. 188 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicine

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtainecd. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENÆUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bound, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

For THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

Two COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issued in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	3s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 3s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 18 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 28½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

Medical.

THE Cause of Consumption—BRONCHITIS—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?—FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

Costiveness is the first link that connects disease to the system. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency. Nevertheless, it has laid the foundation of that destroying disease without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches, or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim than that formidable and insidious leveler of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold—through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites any attention or alarm in the mind of any person until it has sown the seeds of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely: If the culverts and sewers of the city were chocked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What then is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations, and irritations all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shoulder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly, of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period, the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid, in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublesome symptoms through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the pattent draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and the mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their rooms. Hence, the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out, and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull and heavy, loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and softness of the gullet of the throat.

This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at length aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption, ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis, and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheep-skin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle: by cutting the tonsils and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister and Croton Oil externally to the throat or neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose, (what blind philosophy!) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the patient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opportunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physicians and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one until the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby; the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold upon the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or on awakening from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attack of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an early period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution, which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

The above remarks will prove sufficient to the simplest observer, in comparing it to his own feeling; also, the nature and cause of this insidious disease that slays thousands of thousands of the most blooming of our population annually, on account of catching colds on the slightest exposure, which excites coughing through the diseased condition of the blood, and which could be easily remedied by applying to me and obtaining my remedies while the disease is in the first and second stages, but when the disease has progressed to the third stage, and those fatal symptoms fully developed, a cure is impossible.

Consequently, to relieve the deubts of those who are sufferers, and hoping to snatch them from the grasp of death, I have made an arrangement, at a sacrifice on my part, of sending medicine all over the United States and Canada at a trifling expense through the request of those patients who are completely restored to perfect health by a few weeks' use of my medicine and were despaired of when I commenced to treat them, as their testimonies before the public will show, and have deeply interested themselves toward the suffering public. Through the universal satisfaction given by this medicine, I am compelled to comply to the wishes of the thousands of the laboring classes exclusively, who are more exposed to the ravages of this treacherous disease, in giving them an opportunity of testing the efficacy of my preparations in the above specialities, and which I shall guarantee to the sufferer the amplest satisfaction in less than forty-eight hours of its use by obeying my directions, unless there is immediate death, by enclosing five dollars, and on receipt I shall send medicines, with all directions, per express, to their address. No letters answered without the above inclosure.

This privilege is extended to those persons who addressed me previously on this subject.

I have made it my rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time I give up the patient as lost and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

J. D. DURKIN,
Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
jan31 1y No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

Business Directory.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

Post Office.—NOTICE.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, per U. S. Steamer Atlantic, will close at this office on Saturday, the 31st day of January, at half past 10 o'clock, A. M. I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Wines and Liquors.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY1 STREET,

8m18dec New-York.

ELIZABETHAN ALE.

MEDICAL men now very generally recommend the occasional use of pure ale to those who are in need of nourishment; and it is undoubtedly the most wholesome beverage for general use that can be found. This is not a new idea. In Queen Elizabeth's time our ancestors universally consumed it—from Elizabeth herself, in her palace, to the farmer in the field. In those days, adulterated wines and fiery liquors may be said to have been unknown, and very heavy penalties were enacted against using anything except malt and hops in brewing. It is not at all extravagant to assert, that the average duration of the life of a large portion of our race is a third less than it was two or three huudred years ago, and this is chiefly attributable to what we eat and what we drink. Even now the heartiest people that can be found are from the rural districts of England, who yet follow the old fashioned diet.

All who use ale, whether as a beverage or for the purpose of nourishment, will find the Elizabethan Ale most excellent. Being made on the Scotch plan, it is as pure and wholesome, (if not equal in flavor) as the imported, while its cost is but little more than a common article. Families and retailers supplied at 120 WATER STREET, one door above Wall. oc4m8

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES,

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. ylaug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, ont of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 806 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. y1jy26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on liberal terms. jly6y

---

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 13, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

THOMAS LYNCH,

Provisions, Wholesale and Retail,

NO. 22 ESSEX-MARKEV, NEW-YORK.

Fresh, Salt, Corned, and Smoked Provisions. Shipping orders punctually attended to. Goods delivered to any part of New-York, free of expense.

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 35 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.

dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR. JAMES ROCHE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES SIX CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1857. NO. 44.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLIV.

Editorial.

CONGRESS AND THE PRESS.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

THE BOND STREET MURDER.

GENERAL WALKER.

ST. PATRICK'S BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.—More of the Campbell Town Election—The Government Candidate—A worshipper of Napoleon—The Geese of Fontainebleau—The Dodd Family at Home—Records of the Heart—The Stage in Romance and the Stage in Reality—Wit and Humor—Loved and Lost—Magazines for February.

Miscellaneous.

European and Irish Provincial News—Funeral of the Archbishop of Paris—The Military Resources of Ireland—The Pope on Spiritualism—Ruins of the Ancient House of Barrymore—Marriages between Catholics and Protestants—The Governor's Message—Irish Nation not dead—Reminiscences of '98—Cabinets, Past and Present—Military News, Meagher Guard of Charleston—Reminiscences of the French Revolution, Irishmen at the Barricades—Marriages, Deaths, &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $8.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. MADDEN, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 87½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

English-Irish Dictionary. 12mo, cloth. Price $1 25.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

Ready on Saturday,

Memoir of Thomas Devin Reilly.

By JOHN MITCHEL.

12mo, wrappers. Price 25 cents.
Orders from the trade solicited.
jan31 P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: SECOND SERIES.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

Special Notices.

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a danghter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Money Saved, in Buying Books on the Gift Principle.—All the $1 25 Books sold at one dollar. The Gifts consist of various articles; some of which are Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Rings and Pins, Ear-Drops, Sleeve-Buttons, Cashmere Shawls and Scarfs, Black and Colored Silks, Gold and Silver Watches.

A GIFT BOOK to be delivered at the sale of each Book, worth from 25 cents to 60 dollars.

Catalogues of the Books (containing a selection of the best works) sent to any address.

Any person sending an order for 10 Books, will receive a Book and Gift extra. J. S. ANDREWS, 140 Nassau-street, ja25 3m New-York City.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Valentines.

VALENTINES! VALENTINES!

PHILIP J. COZANS, Valentine Manufacturer, 107 Nassau street, corner of Ann, New-York, respectfully announces to Booksellers, Stationers and Valentine Dealers, that his VALENTINES, ENVELOPES AND VALENTINE STATIONERY, manufactured for next Valentine season, February, 1857, is now ready.

Wholesale dalers and jobbers will find it to their interest to examine his stock as regards quality and prices. Liberal discounts will be given to them, according to the quantity ordered.

Parties ordering Valentines will please send their orders early, to insure their getting them in season. jan24 tf

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

PAGES OF ITS HISTORY—By HENRY DE COURCY, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by JOHN GILMARY SHEA.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McClosky, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844. "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $180; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following fine magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.

☞ All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 13 tf

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 31 PARK ROW,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

GAS! GAS!! GAS!!!

W. H. CAREY,

Manufacturer of Chandeliers, Pendants, Brackets, Pillar and Mantel Ornaments,

And every variety of Gas Fixtures, No. 6 ESSEX-MARKET, Grand-street, New-York.

Hotels, Churches, Stores, and Dwellings fitted up, and everything appertaining to the business of GAS FITTING, attended to by competent workmen, with promptness, and at satisfactory prices.

Old Chandeliers, and all kinds of Brass-Work, Bronzed, Re-Gilt and Re-Finished, in every style, and restored to its original appearance. ja31 3m

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emration, 31 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.

Give him a call by all means. my3 1y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD:

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, NOS. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,

Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

The arrival of the U. S. mail steamer, Arago, on January 28, brings European news to the 14th ult.

France and England have settled the Prusso-Swiss difficulty. Switzerland is to set the Royalist filibusters at liberty, on the guaranty of the two Western Powers that Prussia shall renounce all claim to Neufchatel, acknowledge its independence and suspend her military preparations.

A very strong feeling prevails in London against the exclusive manner in which the Atlantic Telegraph Company has been got up, and the exclusive machinery with which it is clogged. Another Company is being organized, with the intention of going direct to the shores of the United States, instead of passing through English Colonial possessions. This will place England and America on an equal footing, in a political point of view, and it is hoped that both the Government and people of the United States will give the new Company their best support.

The War in China.—The Chinese excitement takes the place of the Swiss difficulty.

Private telegraphic despatches received in England, in anticipation of the overland mail, bring the accounts from Canton down to the 24th of November. These advices state hostilities continued, that the Americans had already engaged in the struggle, and that trade remained consequently at a stand still. This much is known for certain. Rumor adds, in explanation of the engagement of the Americans in the strife, that the price offered by the Chinese Governor for the heads of the English led to some heads of Americans being sent in, in mistake for those of Englishmen.

The London Mercantile Gazette of the 13th January has the following on the subject :

It appears from intelligence fourteen days later than that already received from Canton, that the fighting had continued up to that date, and that the American force has been co-operating heartily with that under the command of Sir Michael Seymour. It will be remembered, of course, that High Commissioner Yeh replied to the last demand of the British authorities for an apology, or at least, an explanation of his conduct, by offering a reward of thirty dollars for the head of any Englishman, and that the British Admiral thereupon directed the bombardment of the town. The Chinese, it appears, in their eagerness to carry out Yeh's command, and to strike terror into the "Foreign devils"—the complimentary phrase by which they distinguish our people—decapitated some American persons in mistake for Englishmen, and stuck their heads upon the city walls. A mistake of this description was not likely to improve the relations of the foreigners generally, and of the Americans in particular, with the Chinese authorities. It will hardly occasion wonder that the Americans—who showed every disposition from the first to strengthen the hands of the British authorities—should have made common cause with us after this wanton act of barbarity. It was also reported, at the time the last account left China, that Shanghae had been attacked by the Chinese rebels, and that the town had fallen into their hands, This rumor, if confirmed, would seem to indicate that the insurgents availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the present collision to secure an advantage which they hope with our assistance to turn to account. But the policy which the British government should pursue has no reference to the internecine struggle which has so long raged in the Chinese Empire. It is with sincere pleasure we perceive that the East India and China Association have addressed Lord Clarendon on the present crisis in China, and press upon the government, in language at once respectful and convincing, the necessity of seizing the occasion which now presents itself of putting our relations with China on a settled footing, and securing, by means of a new treaty, those commercial advantages for which we have already stipulated in vain, and which are demanded by the vastly increasing extent of our trade with that country. The reply of Lord Clarendon leads us to believe that her Majesty's government are quite alive to the importance of the opportunity pointed out by the association, and are every way desirous to avail themselves of it. If so, we fancy we shall find that the recent bombardment of Canton is but the starting point of a new era in our trade with China; perhaps also a new era for that singular country and people.

The Daily Times of this city received private advices (written on board the San Jacinto at Whampool, November 12) which, though twelve days older than the news given above, is interesting. The writer says :

"We shall be at the seat of war to-morrow. The Portsmouth and Levant are both there. Their officers and crew are doing duty ashore, protecting American residents and their property. Near all of the foreign population are now at Macao. We left Macao at about 4 o'clock this morning. At 8:15 we beat to general quarters as we were nearing the noted Boca Tigris Forts which command the river and are garrisoned by the Chinamen. They have here upwards of three hundred and fifty guns mounted and an immense number of men in the forts. We expected that they would fire into us, and our guns were shotted and all in readiness to return 'good for evil.' They had their guns manned, and all hands to quarter, but not a shot was fired. There were five British vessels of war lying off the forts, three steamers and two sailing vessels, in all mounting some 120 guns. The steamers were under steam, and it was supposed that to-day the forts were to be shelled."

Russia.—By the telegraph, via Trieste, news had been received in England of a great battle near Bayuk, between the Russians and Circassians. The former retreated with a loss of 2,000 and several guns, the attack being made by a Circassian corps of 10,000 strong.

France.—The great event in political society is the marriage of Count Morny to a Russian princess of the house of Tubetski. Morny, the illegitimate half-brother of Napoleon, his minister at the time of the coup d'etat, and present Ambassador at St. Petersburg, has great influence with his Emperor, and therefore his matrimonial alliance is very unpalatable to the English politicians, who regard it as precursory to a political alliance between Russia, France and Prussia, with the object of establishing a kind of suzerainty over all the Continental States, by the solemn declaration that those three allied powers will not allow any war to be waged in Europe, and offering their mediation in any possible dispute between the different Governments. These views, says the Tribune correspondent, have been ably expounded in a letter of a Russian statesman, which makes the rounds through all the European papers, and excites considerable attention. It is one of the most clever documents published, and deserves, in spite of its length to be copied into your widely-spread paper, as it contains the expression of the aspirations of the Russian Foreign Office. Napoleon, who has lost his former reckless daring and becomes day by day more cautious, has not yet made up his mind about this scheme, since he fears to give up his English alliance, lest the reckless Lord Palmerston may countenance the conspiracies of the Republicans, and foster revolution in Paris.

The French Government has received accounts from Senegal, dated Dec. 5, announcing the death of Mohammed Sidi, Chief of the Bracknas, one of the most determined enemies of the French domination.

Austria.—The Emperor continues his journey through his Italian dominions, without meeting any hearty enthusiasm. He is to visit Parma and Tuscany from Milan, and then to make a pilgrimage to Loretto to the celebreted image of the Virgin, where the Pope is to receive him and his homage. Pio Nono is now perplexed by the rather awkward pretensions of Napoleon, who desires to be crowned by the Pope. Pio Nono declined the proposition, pointing out the inconveniences of a journey to Paris; but Napoleon is not so easily baffled, and offered himself to come to Rome, to be crowned at St. Peter's, where Charlemagne and his successors were crowned. It requires all the astuteness of the Roman See to get out of this dilemma; so much the more as there is yet another Emperor aspiring to be crowned by the Pope, viz : Francis Joseph of Austria.

Turkey.—Redschid Pasha is supported by England, and his influence seems to gain ground, in spite of the deadly hatred of the courtiers and of the harem—for Redschid openly attacks the peculation and lavish expenditure of those about the Court. It is well known that he himself is no saint, and that he managed to amass enormous wealth by dishonest means; but indulgent toward himself, he is severe to those around him. He aims at a monopoly of peculation, and reverses the well known words of the late Emperor Nicholas, who said he knew but one man in Russia who did not steal—that is to say, himself. Redschid, on the contrary, insists that there shall be but one man in Turkey allowed to be a thief—that is to say the Grand Vizier—and that only as long as he himself holds the post.

Persia.—No news had been received of the Persian Gulf expedition. The force under Major Chamberlayne had nearly reached Cabul.

The Patrie announces the arrival at Marseilles of Feruk Khan, the Persian Ambassador. His suite is said to be composed of 100 persons, among whom are some of the noblemen of Teheran, who solicited as a great favor to be permitted to accompany him. The excellency is expected in Paris to-morrow, or the day after at the latest.

Prussia and Switzerland.

The Independence Belge says that a conference will shortly assemble at London, with the consent of Prussia, to "regularize a departure from the acts of the Congress of Vienna,"—in other words, to approve of the settlement of the Neufchatel question. Switzerland will be represented in this Conference.

Under the heading "An Honorable Peace is Assured," the Bund, the semi-official organ of the Federal Council, contains the following article :

"France and England have proposed conditions to Switzerland for the pacific arrangement of the Neufchatel question, and the Swiss Federal Council has unanimously resolved that these conditions are acceptable. The Federal Assembly is consequently called together for the 14th instant, and we have no doubt that the Federal Assembly also will find the conditions acceptable. The King of Prussia demanded that the Neufchatel prisoners should be released unconditionally. Switzerland will set them at liberty on condition that nothing in the details of the arrangement shall be contrary to the independence of Neufchatel, and France and England give us the assurance that after the enlargement of the prisoners, the King of Prussia will renounce all pretensions to Neufchatel, and that the complete independence of Neufchatel from foreign ties shall be recognized by international law. After being liberated, all the prisoners, as well as the accused not in custody, must quit the Swiss territory and will remain banished until the King of Prussia shall have renounced Neufchatel.

The Emperor of the French assured us some time back that after we had released the prisoners he would use all his endeavors to obtain the renunciation of Neufchatel from the King of Prussia. He now takes upon himself the formal engagement, that when they are set at liberty, the complete independence of Neufchatel shall be recognised. At first the Emperor desired to render this service alone; now he does it in concert with England, and it is expected that Austria and Russia will adhere to the arrangement. France and England guarantee further that Prussia shall immediately suspend every military demonstration against Switzerland. We consider these conditions honorable for Switzerland. We trust that the Swiss people will be content with them, for they are of their conquering. After having unanimously and resolutely risen against unbecoming assumptions, the Swiss people has acquired the esteem of Europe, and with that esteem an honorable peace, and the independence of the Republic of Neufchatel."

The Suisse, another Berne paper of by no means radical opinions, says :

"The proposals of France and England are only acceptable, in so far as the assurances given by those powers are equivalent to the assurances proceeding from Prussia herself—only in so far as they are so clear, so positive, that they constitute for Switzerland a guaranty as certain as if they came from Berlin, and as complete as the guaranty which Switzerland gives up by releasing the prisoners."

The Paris Presse thinks itself enabled to state that the assurances given by France and England are really as full and strong as the Suisse would demand.

A letter from Vienna of Jan. 3, in the Frankforter Zeitung, says :

The Austrian Government has not concealed from itself that the peculiar situation of the probable seat of war in the south of Switzerland, would require the occupation of the five defiles on the side of the Valteline, the galleries of Lecco, and other passages as far as the the Tessin. Of the 26,000 men who are now in the Province of Milan, 10,000 have received orders to hold themselves ready to march. It is not contemplated that there should be either a declaration of war against Switzerland, or a demonstration against Prussia. Austria has a last word to say upon the question of Neufchatel, and will back it up with troops collected on the frontier of the Canton of Tessin.

The Pays of Saturday evening says :

"Our special correspondence from Berlin assures us that the Prussian Minister of War has just given orders provisionally to supersede those for the execution of the measures of military preparation which had been decided upon in consequence of the difference on the subject of Neufchatel."

Funeral of the Archbishop of Paris.

The funeral of the murdered Archbishop of Paris took place on the 10th inst. in the cathedral of Notre Dame, with great pomp, and amidst throngs of people. The trial of the assassin is expected to take place about the 25th of the month.

"Malakoff" writing to the Daily Times from Paris, Jan. 13, gives the following account :

The funeral of the Archbishop took place on Saturday, under the most unfavorable circumstances possible for the weather to invent. A cold Winter rain, with a strong wind, poured incessantly the entire morning, the streets were muddy, and umbrellas afforded but little protection from the chilling rain. For several days the body of the Archbishop had lain in state, exposed to the view of visitors, and many thousands of the faithful had availed themselves of this occason to pay a last pious tribute to the memory of their deceased prelate, by visiting his dead body. Many of the poorer classes bought small church ornaments, and requested the priests who stood guard over the body to touch the corpse with the ornament, which was then transformed into a sacred relic, capable of protecting the wearer under all difficulties. Lying in state, the body of the Archbishop was dressed in his sacerdotal robes, and reclined on a vast bed of black velvet and violet satin. The sombre drapery, the burning tapers, throwing out a vascillating light; the cross, the crosier, the coat of arms, emblems of the archiepiscopal jurisdiction; and the clergy, reciting the service of the dead, gave to the Chapel of the Archiepiscopate a lugubrious and imposing appearance.

The funeral train was very long, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, and was mostly composed of official bodies, of which the church took the lead. The line of procession was held by soldiers, and a large crowd pressed on all sides to witness the passage of the cortege. As the funeral bier passed, the populace uncovered and crossed themselves.

The remains of the Archbishop were placed in the vault of Notre Dame. This vault is situated at the entrance of the choir; the descent is by a door made in one of the sides of the sacristy. Up to the present moment this vault has contained but five coffins, all those of Archbishops deceased since the Revolution of '89, as follows : M. de Juigne, deceased after the first revolution; M. de Belloy, retired in 1808, who preceded the former in the archiepiscopal chair, but who gave in his resignation at the epoch of the Concordat, and who died in 1811; M. de Perigord, deceased in 1821; M. de Quelen, deceased the 31st of December, 1839; and M. Afire, killed at the barricade of 1848.

The ceremony of the reconciliation, (or purification,) of the Church of St. Etienne-du-Mont, where the assassination of the Archbishop occurred, has taken place, and since this formality, the ordinary service has been resumed. The heart of the Bishop, one of the cavities of which was pierced by the assassin's knife, has been placed in this church, and it needs now but the canonization of the deceased prelate, to make this tragedy one of the most remarkable in the history of the world.

The "reconciliation" is said to have excited an unusual sensation in the neighborhood in which the church is situated. An immense crowd was collected on the Place de Pantheon, and the old church, while the ceremony of purification was going on. The ceremony itself was imposing and elaborate, and was conducted by the Abbe Surat, the same who caught the dying Archbishop in his arms, and the same who received in his arms the Archbishop Affre, shot on the barricades in 1848. It is given as a coincidence worth mentioning that just as the bells of Notre Dame tolled for the entrance of the body of the deceased bishop into the vault of the church, Verger was entering the doors of the Conciergerie prison near by, where he had been transferred from the prison of Mazas, previous to trial.

The priesthood are making a powerful effort to have Verger, the assasin, declared insane. They wish to avoid the scandal of seeing one of their number mount the scaffold. On the other hand, Verger is determined to show by his calmness and the ability of his defence that he is not insane. The third trial, which commences on Saturday next, will be before a jury, and in this connection, a word of Verger's pronounced some time ago on juries in general, will not be misplaced. He was declaiming against the general practice of composing juries from shopmen, and from that class of men only capable of judging a financial question. "May it please God," he said, "that my head may never be placed at the mercy of such a jury." Verger is nothing more nor less than a man of violent passions and disappointed hopes, who had a vengeance to wreak against the Church, and who chose the head of the Church as his victim. He is not insane, neither is he a fanatic.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says :

"Among the candidates believed to have the best chance of succeeding to the vacant See of Paris, the names of Monseigneur Salines, Bishop of Amiens, (Ex-Legitimist, but present Bonapartist,) and Monseigneur Mazenod, Bishop of Marseilles, are mentioned. The latter is said to have the best chance. As he is in years, the young Prince Canino, (son of Prince Charles,) who has been lately ordained priest, and who, I presume, is to be the Cardinal Fesch of the second Empire, is spoken of as likely to be his coadjutor.

"It is reported that a letter was found on Verger addressed to the Emperor personally, and which was immediately given to His Majesty. The conclusion is said to be, 'L'Archeveque est perdu, gare a vous.' Verger is also said to have left at his late rectory, in the diocese of Meaux, a sort of testimentary paper, which has been transmitted to the police by the Bishop. The paper says, 'Je lègue mon âme à l'Immortalité, mon corps à la guillotine.' ('I bequeath my soul to immortality, my body to the guillotine.')"

Further European News.

The arrival of the Arabia with three day's later news from Europe, brings no fresh intelligence of import. The Arago's advices are confirmed. In addition to the fact that the Swiss difficulty was settled, we learn by a dispatch from Berne, January 16, that the National Council adopted the propositions of the Commission by 91 votes against 4; one member abstaining from voting. The Council of States has not yet voted. On the part of Prussia no formal engagements have been made, but it is understood that the King of Prussia renounces all claim to the sovereignty and revenue of Neufchatel. The two castles of Neufchatel and Lochle will, however, remain the king's private property, and display the Prussian flag, and the revenue derived from their domains is to be disbursed in local charities. The revenue amounts to $15,000 a year. A dispatch from the Russian Government to the Russian Envoys, of date December 13, respecting the Neufchatel affair, says : "The King of Prussia has remained within the strict limits of his rights, and therefore that the slightest restraint should not be put upon the freedom of action of His Majesty."

China.—The China Mail, giving Canton dates to November 24, has been received, and furnished four days later intelligence than that brought by the last mail. The principal incident during the week was the proceedings of the United States squadron, consequent upon the unjustifiable attack made by a party of Chinese upon the Americans occupying the barrier forts, and which was likely to involve the Americans, much against their will, in a quarrel with the Chinese.

The London Times' city article, on the evening previous to the sailing of the Arabia, alludes to the continued obstinacy of Governor Yeh, who, notwithstanding the destruction of the Bogue Forts by the English, and the Barrier Forts by the Americans, had issued a proclamation threatening martial law to any of the people who might venture to speak of peace. The news has caused an increase of firmness in the London Tea market. Shanghae exchanges on this occasion are less unfavorable.

TURKEY.—Constantinople letters of January 6, say that the diplomatic conferences relative to the Danubian Principalities continue; the third had been held at Lord Stratford's house. The point on which the dissension chiefly had turned had relation to the political classification of Boyards or noble proprietors of lands. It was the proposition of the Porte to establish two classes of Boyards: Great Boyards and Small Boyards; but the Ambassadors objected to the division, and resolved that only one uniform class of proprietors of land is to exist. The division would have been a great weapon in the hands of government. The Porte has approved of the financial negotiations respecting the new Bank, which will therefore commence operations at once at Constantinople, with a capital of eight millions of piastres. It is rumored that Mr. Layard has obtained a concession for a Railroad from Rustchuk to the Gulf of Sands, which the French and English Governments favor with a view to military purposes. General Cheney has obtained the concession for the Euphrates Valley Railroad. A Commission of Generals is appointed to prepare a plan for the reform of the Turkish Army.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Notes and Queries gives the following account of the origin of the Malakoff: "Some ten years ago a sailor and rope-maker, named Alexander Ivanovitch Malakoff, lived in Sebastopol, and by his good humor, jovial habits, and entertaining qualities, became the centre of a select circle of admiring companions. Like many great conversationalists and wits, Malakoff contracted most intimate relations with Bacchus; and, under the influence of the latter, he participated, in 1831, in some riots which broke out in the town, and which had one result—that of the dismissal of Malakoff from the dockyard in which he was employed. Being incapable of turning himself to any more reputable trade, he opened a long wine-shed on a hill outside of the town, and introduced into practice the theoretical notions he had acquired by a long and zealous study of the nature of beer houses and wine shops. His trade prospered; his old admirers crowded around him, and in their enthusiasm, christened the wine shed, which soon expanded into a decent public-house, and the hill on which it was built, by the name of the popular host. In time a village grew around the public house, and was likewise called by the name of Malakoff. But the entertaining and imaginative founder of the place, in his deepest cups, could never have dreamt that one day his name would be in the mouths of all men, and that one of the heroes of a great war would esteem it as an inestimable title of honor."

On Tuesday night Mr. Ernest Jones gave another political soiree, at St. Martin's Hall, Long-acre. As on the previous occasions, the political portion of the entertainment was preceded by a concert. Mr. Jones' address commenced with the praise of that portion of the press which was liberal enough to open its columns to the reports of his lectures, and the condemnation of those papers which misrepresented them. He then went into an arithmetical calculation to show that every laboring man in the country ought to have at least £145 per annum. This is to be accomplished by the simple process of doing away with a territorial aristocracy, with the Established Church, with the factory owners, and with royalty itself. The address, which was delivered with a good deal of oratorical effect, was enthusiastically received by the audience.

The session of the Portuguese Cortes for 1857 was opened on the 1st inst. by King Don Pedro V. In the course of the royal speech, his Majesty expressed his thanks to the governments of England and the United States, for the succor given by them to the inhabitants of the Cape Verde Islands.

Spain and Greece are still infested by gangs of robbers. The governments, paralyzed by court intrigues, cannot attend to the personal security of the people, and the countries present the spectacle of medieval anarchy in our century of railways, telegraphs and steamers.

Jane Garbutt, died December 10, at Wellburg, county of York, England, at the age of over 109 years. She was an inveterate smoker, and a visitor asked her how long she had smoked, to which she replied, "very nigh a hundred years."

A hurricane was experienced at Malta on the 4th inst., during which some ships sank, and 300 boats were dashed to pieces against the quays.

The English residents at Java have transmitted the sum of 4,525 francs for the relief of the sufferers by the inundations in France.

The Royal Naval School at Richmond, England, was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 11th inst. No person was injured.

Intelligence from the Cape of Good Hope to November 11, was of a pacific character, and the colony throughout was tranquil and improving.

A missive from Rome had arrived at Madrid. Every difficulty between the Holy See and the Spanish Court is said to be at an end.

The snow-storms in the Asturias had been so violent that all communications, and even the mails, had been interrupted for several days.

A dispatch from Liverpool, dated January 14, states that the ship James Buchanan, of Portsmouth, N. H., has been totally lost on the Irish Coast.

The steamer Arago has made the best Winter passage of the season.

Meetings continued to be held throughout England against the continuance of the tax on incomes at the war standard.

The Bishop of Amiens had been appointed Archbishop of Paris.

American News.

The San Antonio Times says:—The camels, twenty-two in number, have just past through our city, loaded with about 600 pounds each, returning to their place of rendezvous, which is some seventy miles from here. There are dromedaries also with them, and seated on the top of these camels and dromedaries are Arabs and Turks, dressed in the costumes of their own respective countries. Texas is a great country, and San Antonio is a great city. We have among us people of every nation and religion, and around us every specimen of the animal kingdom, with, perhaps, the exception of the woolly horse, which can now only be found near the source of the Salt river.

A bridge is now being built across the Upper Mississippi, at St. Paul, Minnesota. It is to be 1,300 feet in length, resting upon nine piers, the highest of which are seventy feet above high water mark, so as to enable the largest boats to pass under without difficulty. The greatest span will be two hundred and twenty feet; sufficiently wide to allow the largest rafts to pass without coming in contact with the abutments. The whole cost of the work will be near $120,000.

Oyster eaters having greatly multiplied of late years, we have been greatly puzzled to determine by what procreative process the increasing demand has been supplied. Luckily for our curiosity, and for oyster gourmands, this solemn fish "shells out" very prolifically. It is said that the common oyster deposits 1,200,000 eggs, which, if they were to progress to full-sized oysters, would fill 1,200 barrels!

Wm. A. Newell, the newly-chosen Governor of New Jersey, was inaugurated on the 20th inst. in the Capitol at Trenton. Preparations had been made for a great display, but that was prevented by the storm, which blockaded the railroads and the Governor was obliged to walk twelve miles through the snow in order to be there in time.

Five women, candidates for admission to the Baptist Church, in Bristol, R. I., were baptised in that place on Sunday week, at half past 12 o'clock in the afternoon. The thermometer stood at seven degrees below zero, and a boy stood by the cut that had been made for the baptism, clearing it of the floating masses of snow and ice.

A Chillicothe paper states that the new State House of Ohio will yet require two years to finish it. The building has already cost about two million dollars, and was commenced as far back as 1839.

Quite a laugh was raised in the Supreme Court, not long since, by an official, who, when the Judge called out for the crier to open the court, said, "May it please your Honor, the crier can't cry to-day, because his wife is dead."

The Platteville American says that the Madison Journal is "free from personalities and blackguardism," on which the Madison Argus and Democrat says, "That man cannot be a reader of the Journal, or else he has a queer idea of these articles."

A monument is about to be erected in Shelby County, Ky., to Col. John Hardin, of that State, who was killed in 1792, while bearing his country's flag of peace to the Indians northwest of the Ohio.

The first wife of Judge Daniels, of the Supreme Court of the United States, died from fright occasioned by a fire in the vicinity of their residence, and his second wife was recently burnt to death.

One thousand and twenty-eight marriages were celebrated in the Cincinnati Catholic Churches last year, and the baptisms in the same were four thousand two hundred and twelve.

The government registers kept at Oswego show the water on Lake Ontario to be eight inches below low water mark, and one foot four inches lower than at this period last year.

The last surviving daughter of Patrick Henry, Mrs. Sarah Scott, died in Halifax County, Va., on the 10th ult. She was seventy-seven years old.

A bill has passed the Wisconsin Legislature excluding negroes, mulattoes, Indians and black persons from being witnesses in that State.

Several petitions were presented in the Legislature of New Jersey on the 28th ult., to extend the New Jersey Central Railroad from Elizabethport to the Hudson River.

Hon. Joseph R. Williams, formerly of Constantine, Mich, but more recently editor of the Toledo Blade, has been appointed President of the Michigan Agricultural College.

A young man who was recently bathing in the Mississippi river, seeing a number of ladies approach, drowned himself from motives of delicacy.

The Boston Post says that Dr. Kane could enlist a crew in that city, for an Arctic voyage, very easily, from those who are desirous of seeking a milder climate.

Commander Rowan has been dismissed from the navy, and not cashiered. The latter would forbid his restoration to the service.

In Louisville, Kentucky, one cold night recently, a man named John Brown, the father of five children, ducked his wife in a wash-tub, and then thrust her out of doors.

General Lane said at Indianapolis, in his speech after dinner, that he was too full for utterance.

The gas has been shut off from the street lamps at New Albany, Indiana, in consequence of the scarcity of coal.

Florida papers say that the orange and lemon crops in that State will be good this season.

It is estimated by the Ohio Farmer, that the profits of the wool crop in that State the past season were $6,000,000.

A company of sixty Gipsies have their tents pitched in Culpepper county, Va.

Nathaniel Davis, one of the oldest citizens in Albany, fell dead in the street on the morning of the 20th inst.

Mariposa, Col. Fremont's great estate, is about to be sold for taxes.

The Trenton, N. J. Society for the relief of indigent widows and single women, have funds to the amount of $6,500 invested.

It is said that Gen. Houston will be a candidate for Governor of Texas at the next canvass.

The opposition in Pennsylvania talk of running David Wilmot for Governor.

Mr. Stringer, runner for the Bank of New Orleans, has absconded in the steamship Cahawba, for Havana, with $50,000.

The estimable and venerable widow of the late William Wirt died at Annapolis, Maryland, on the 24th ult.

City News.

THE TREASURER OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC ORPHAN ASYLUM, Mr. Hugh Kelly, gratefully acknowledges the receipt of the Christmas Collection from the following churches:—

St. Francis Xavier, $851 71; St. Mary's, $759 73; St. Ann's, $711 50; St. Joseph's, $692 20; St. Peter's, $534; St. Patrick, (Cathedral), $504; Nativity, $460; Holy Cross, $429 75; St. James', $400; St. Bridget's, $378 32; St. Andrew's, $306; St. John the Evangelist, $265; St. Columbia, $250 83; Immaculate Conception, $218; Transfiguration, $202 9; St. Lawrence, (Yorkville), $160 42; St. Vincent de Paul, $159 36; St. Paul's, (Harlem), $40 88; St. Nicholas, $38; St. John the Baptist, $23; St. Stephen's, $— —; Church of Annunciation, (Manhattanville), $170 82. Total, $7,555 61.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 17, 1857.

The President of these United States, not having the fear of the Lord, or Lloyd Garrison, or Wendell Philips, or yet of Theodore Parker, before his eyes, did, in his late Message, declare and announce as follows:

"The President represents the aggregate population of the United States. Their election of him is the explicit and solemn act of the sole sovereign authority of the Union.

"It is impossible to misapprehend the great principles which, by their recent political action, the people of the United States have sanctioned and announced.

"They have asserted the constitutional equality of each and all of the States of the Union as States; they have affirmed the constitutional equality of each and all of the citizens of the United States as citizens, whatever their religion, wherever their birth or their residence; they have maintained the inviolability of the constitutional rights of the different sections of the Union; and they have proclaimed their devoted and unalterable attachment to the Union and the Constitution, as objects of interest superior to all subjects of local or sectional controversy, as the safeguard of the rights of all, as the spirit and the essence of the liberty, peace and greatness of the Republic.

"In doing this they have at the same time emphatically condemned the idea of organizing in these United States mere geographical parties; of marshaling in hostile array toward each other the different parts of the country, North or South, East or West."

Upon this statement, thus irreverently hazarded, the Tribune of December 2, descants thus:

"By the choice of this minority President we are told the people have asserted the constitutional equality of all the States as States, and of all the citizens as citizens, as well as their unalterable devotion to the Union and the Constitution."

The President, it seems, had the audacity not alone to aver that, "the people of the United States had sanctioned and announced a great principle," but that the "schemes" they had rejected, were fraudulent in their inception, and false and delusive in their appearance, a conclusion it would be impossible to avoid—thereanent the Tribune discourseth in this wise:

"This is not the diction suited to a grave public document—it is the slang of a reckless demagogue on the stump. It degrades the Presidential office, and will only serve to exasperate those whom it assails, misrepresents and defames. No man ever stood more self-condemned than Franklin Pierce, when, after having hurled at the objects of his malevolent abuse all the foul charges he could imagine, he finally accuses them of "unreasoning intemperance of thought and language."

I have already fully exposed the wanton falsification of facts and figures, involved in the conclusion, or rather assumption, that Mr. Buchanan was a "minority President." I have shown conclusively that upon the issue presented by the "Republicans," upon the only issue admitted by the Tribune, he not only was not a "minority President," but that his popular majority was over three quarters of a million, or nearly one-fifth of the entire vote of the Union. Notwithstanding this fact, a fact of which the Tribune could not be ignorant, the "minority" of Mr. Buchanan was converted into a mirror, reflecting the most fraudulent and shameless delusions. The Washington correspondent, the Kansas correspondent, the Wisconsin correspondent, the Harrisburg correspondent, and even the London correspondent, all discovered the fact of the "minority," and all concluded from it, that Buchanan was already extinguished and the Democrats dead and buried, and for that matter, damned by the curses of all mankind. If we were to believe these correspondents, we would not have left of the Democratic party or Democratic statesmen as much debris as remained ungnawed of the great Kilkenny cats. Among them the maxim, "Degustibus non disputandum est" ceases to have any application—their tastes, appreciation, opinions and criticisms are identical. According to them, the Democrats in the House, in the Senate, in the Cabinet, in Kansas, are "feeble," "foolish," "unintelligible," "false," "corrupt," "grasping," "ignorant," and the "Republicans," "able," "forcible," "unanswerable," "incorruptible," "overwhelming."

I know I may be told that journalism, of a certain ilk, is fallen so low or risen so high as to be indifferent to everything but success. "Get readers, if you can, honestly, if not, by lying," is now the maxim; and "once you lie, never retract—never acknowledge an error—never confess the truth," are the commandments of that press.

I have been led into these observations by the cry of "The North!" "the North!" We hear this cry on every breeze, from every quarter. It is the burden of the "journals," the parrot gabble of the disunionists, and the blind but of the London Times. And yet they know, these false teachers and false prophets, that "the North," the "mighty North," the "progressive North," has pronounced, by a popular vote of near a quarter of a million, against the miserable pretence which the "Republicans" struggle to misrepresent into the dignity of a principle.

But the journalist is irresponsible, the demagogue is irresponsible, the caucus and the convention are irresponsible; and, above all, party is irresponsible. They are, all alike, beyond control. It is different with those who succeed in attaining power and executive position as their representatives. Such is the case with Mr. King, Governor of the Empire State.

In his retirement at Jamaica, Mr. King may play "fantastic tricks" at his pleasure, and indulge his aspirations for superiority of position as the inheritance of purity of blood, without making "angels weep," or even men feeling any emotion but pity or contempt. But, in his announcement from the chair of State, his word is not the only thing at stake; he pledges, as far as he can, the faith of the State of New-York in its sovereign capacity. On this faith then, and as the official exponent of the public sentiment of New-York, the Governor first calls the President to task for imputing certain motives to the "Republicans" as unbecoming his lofty position, and then denounces the imputations themselves as "groundless." Forgetful of his own reproof the Governor immediately proceeds to discuss the whole question of slavery agitation, and pledges his "position and office," to charges of "false pretenses," not against factions or agitators or disturbers, but against the President and Congress of the United States. He pledges his position to a charge of fraud against the Governor, and of "corruption" and "cruelty" against the Judges of Kansas. And all these charges he seems to found on the assertion with which he starts.

"I have yet another duty to perform—a duty, the obligations of which I am not at liberty to neglect, even if I were so disposed—and the performance of which, in my judgment, is rendered imperative by the respect which is due to the sentiments and votes in the recent Presidential election of a great majority of the people of this State and of the other free States."

This is partly apologetic and partly assumptive, the latter being the groundwork of the former. Even if the assumption were true the apology would be insufficient and inapplicable. But the assumption is illogical and untrue, wholly untrue in every possible aspect of it. The Governor assumes that "The sentiments and votes of a great majority of the people of this State" were in favor of the view which he says he owes it to them to enforce.

I am willing to let the "sentiments" go by the board, because if they be not in accord with the "votes" they are valueless; but the great majority of the "votes" being cast not only against him, but expressly against the policy he thus recklessly enforces would, on his own showing, imperatively command his silence. The majority against him is over 41,000, and that majority is not factitious, not made up of conflicting opinions on this issue, but a solid unit, utterly incapable of being explained or lied away.

But were it otherwise, the fact would be no apology for the introduction of a topic into the Governor's Message which could not possibly come within the scope of legislative action, jurisdiction or duty. Even if the President discussed the subject wrongfully, his wrong would not justify wrong on the part of Mr. King. But the President did it rightfully. His duties and jurisdiction embraced the Union, and the subject was one ranging within the control of the body he addressed. Not so with Mr. King. His functions and surveillance are confined within the limits of this State. He is her executive officer. To see that her honor is untainted, her obligations fulfilled, her integrity maintained, her resources developed, and her laws faithfully and fearlessly executed, are the duties intrusted to his fidelity. They are responsible, honorable, and of magnitude enough to occupy his vigilance and task his capacity.

I shall not imitate the vulgarity of saying that his introduction of a foreign subject was "the slang of a reckless demagogue on the stump;" but I claim that the only result it can attain, and I am therefore justified in assuming that such result was intended, is to foster agitation, to embitter sectional animosity, and to array in deadly hostility to one another the North and the South.

But whatever pretext there may be for introducing this topic within our State, how bald soever the pretence on which a specific line of duty may be recommended to our legislature in reference to it, they will satisfy the needs of faction. But is there any pretext ever so frivolous, any pretense ever so fraudulent, for assuming that the sentiments of the other free States are a justification for violating the duties of the gubernatorial office, and degrading its dignity by a factious harangue?

But the "votes and sentiments" of the free States were not in favor of the Governor's view, any more than those of New-York. The popular votes were against him by nearly a quarter of a million majority. The electoral votes were against him by twenty-one majority. His assumption is contradicted by the votes, by the figures, by the facts and the undoubted knowledge of whoever wrote the message; for I will do him the charity to suppose that he allowed himself to be imposed on, and that the misstatements and false conclusions and pretenses in his message belong to some unknown and irresponsible demagogue. But again; granting that the votes of the Free States sanctioned the Governor's policy, which they did not—would that even palliate the unscrupulous sacrifice of his office to partisan purposes? Is he the legitimate and delegated exponent of the free States? Does he assume that there is already in esse a confederacy or conspiracy of the free States against the peace, well-being, and stability of the Union? Does he promulgate it as his behest from the State House of New-York, that the Legislatures of the several States shall forget or overlook the duties they owe their constituents and the interests of their States; shall treat the development of the resources of which they are the guardians, the purity and efficacy of the laws of which they are the founders, the liberty and security of the citizen of which they are the sentinels—all, all as subordinate to a factious and parricidal cry, to be drowned only in the din of civil war and the ruin of their common country?

ARISTIDES.

THE IRISH NATION NOT DEAD.

From the Dublin Nation.

We are entreated—which is almost as hard to swallow—to believe by the Times that within the aforesaid last eight years we have become to our great contentment and advantage, an integral portion of the United Kingdom? How, when, where? The country has fallen low enough, God knows. The prospects of independence appear to be, humanly speaking, indefinitely postponed.

Many of the best and truest of our politicians have given up the battle in despair, believing that in this generation, nothing can be accomplished worth the personal sacrifices the cause entails. But if you separate the mass of the Irish nation from those who are English by birth, interest, connection or expectation—and if you go to their opinion, not the conventional varnish which a corrupted public opinion and the inbred sycophancy of a race damned for centuries by an infamous slavery of the conscience, out of which they have not yet quite learned to stand erect and speak the truth,—and if you ask them do they love England? they will tell you they hate her name with the blackest hatred of their hearts. Not her people, generous, upright, free-spirited, as manly men as God ever breathed breath into—but her Government, "always hostile to Catholicity," a crushing tyrant to the weak, a truckling toady to the strong—that evil demon with which England is possessed, which makes her the horror and the hatred not of Ireland alone, but of every colony sprung from her loins, and every country which she has conquered, and every other government and nation in the world, from the Czar to the Pope, from Pekin to Naples, from Berlin to Teheran. Subjects to this power we are de facto—and we pay more than our share of its taxes, while we get none of the legislation our state requires in return. Many of us, millions of us, far more than remain at home, have gone away from the bondage—a bondage of soul far more than body—have gone to other countries, and have lost no opportunity there—are likely to lose none—of signalizing our sympathies. Mr. Crampton can testify to that for you.

The attempt to found an Anglo-Saxon Policy for the whole world, will be a still greater demonstration of our thorough identification with you. For us at home here, dull and dormant, loitering about our lakes and mountains, making such money as keep soul and body together out of the war prices, you have been giving for corn and cattle—and wondering why all Mr. John Sadleir's followers do not insist on place, or take bitter almonds—in the words of a good old cheerful Russian proverb, "We sit by the shore, and we wait for the wind." But spare us the conceit of condescending to class us with the ready and cheerful subjects of the Queen of England. Outside of your Pale towns—they still retain their servile garrison spirit—don't speak of your glorious British Constitution to a meeting of Irishmen, or you may be hooted—at least laughed at.

In the reign of King Henry the Eighth, a remarkably clever pamphleteer tells in the State Papers, how the Irish peasant of that day used to take great delight in speculating on the chances of the Emperor of Germany and the King of France going to war with His Grace's Majesty, and used to hear with vast internal unction of any likely defeat or disaster to His Grace's arms. We are afraid, if Ireland has changed so much as the Times says, in other respects within the last eight years, in this, five centuries have seen no shade of alteration. If the Irish of the present day are worse rebels than their forefathers, we cannot conscientiously avow that they are better subjects. We calculate the Czar was as popular here in a quiet way of late, as he deservedly was and is for similar reasons in the United States.

(They were mainly Irish, we believe, who turned the Alliance Banquet at San Francisco into a Russian one.) And if the popularity of the Emperor of the French be as it is, rather increasing in Ireland, it is not for any particular admiration of his character as a man or an ally—but for somewhat the same cause, in a vaguer and dimmer way, that his Uncle was sung in rebel-ballads fifty years ago—and, generally speaking, for the same reasons which bring upon him the Billingsgate of the Times.

No, thank God! the Irish nation is not dead; neither has it been innoculated British. A generation is but a year in the age of a people; and a nation has its ages of growth, education, and colonization, as well as of agitation, conquest, and organization. The reverie of independence runs in our blood as well as in the Pole's or the Magyar's. Some day or other, some way or other, we shall have our own again. Meantime, with our blood and our brain, we are mainly building up the two greatest commonwealths that ever were in the world, the American Republic, which is ruled by an Irish President—the Australian States, in which the Irish are likely to be even more powerful. We are the basis and the body of three new Catholic Churches, with their Roman Primacies at Westminster, New-York, and Sydney, filled by Irishmen. There is hardly a country in the earth, in which an Irishman has not pushed himself into a higher place than the subtle Jew, or the eager Pole, or the crafty Corsican. We are everywhere, great and glorious every where, but at home.

Oh for a man with the soul of Davis, with the energy of Tone, the popular power and the faith of O'Connell in the days of his glory, to breathe one soul into this world-wide power! In eight years more, the Times might have to chronicle a change that would startle Rip Van Winkle indeed.

REMINISCENCES OF '98.

"A Milesian," in a letter to the Dublin Telegraph, says:—After the defeat of the Wexford and Wicklowmen at the unlucky Boyne, some of the finest spirits of the day, on gaining the mountains of Wicklow, made a stand in the deep defile of Glenmalnir; but when some time there, many of them began to make their way to their homes. Amongst those who endeavored to reach their homes, were Mathew Patrick and ——— Crean, two natives of the Mac-a-mores, county Wexford, but were apprehended by a patrol, and brought to Arklow.

Crean fought in several battles, and was rather of a retiring disposition. Mathew Patrick was about five feet ten inches in height and thirteen stone weight; of a bold and forward mind, with a frame of steel and sinews of the same material. He was a young man of surprising action, courageous, and fierce as a lion. They were brought up before a court-martial and condemned to be executed on the next day.

During their short imprisonment, they were much liked by some of the soldiers that guarded them, particularly Patrick, who was a generous jovial fellow, and who had not surrendered one iota of his vivacity, not even to the stern prison of death. They had frequently sent for liquor to treat their guards, and on the evening after sentence being passed, Patrick procured two bottles of whiskey. He then acquainted Crean with a plan for effecting their escape, and that there was no fear if he would act his part.—

"I have the two bottles of whiskey (said he); do you take one, and we will pretend to have an occasion to go down the yard. We will give a private hint to two of our guards to accompany us, (naming two of them,) they will gladly come to sympathise with us. When at a distance down the yard, I will stop and take my bottle from my pocket and pretend to take a sup from it, which you will also do, and hand it to them to do the same. After they take the first sup, we will insist on their taking a good swig. When your guard will stretch his neck to let the whiskey down from the bottle, do not fail to strike him with all your force on the neck, and never fear but I will do my part, and then, by the assistance of each other, we will scale the wall and get off."

The plan was agreed to by Crean, and about nine o'clock, Patrick addressed the sentinels for the above purpose. They readily complied, and as they walked down the castle-yard, they repeatedly protested their sorrow for the fate of two such generous fellows.

"Well," said Patrick, in an artless tone, "had we fell in battle, there would be no more about us; but our fate has come, and we must meet it."

He commenced his manœuvre, as did Crean also. The first act was performed, and the second also; but on the third, the one on which their destiny hung, Crean, although a powerful man, remained as if transfixed to the earth. Patrick, with eagle-eye, perceived it; he pressed his man to take a good drink, and while receiving the contents, he sent him almost lifeless to the earth, and turning on the other with all his force, he sent him also to the ground; he then made a spring to gain the coping of the wall, in which he failed, and perceiving an ammunition-cart in the yard, he ran it against the wall and crossed it, and had just time to get behind the houses, when he heard the cry of "Prisoners escaping."

The paddocks, hedges, and trenches behind the houses, very much retarded his progress. The enemy was for a time on his track, but turned off. He, however, gained the sea-shore near that frowning promontory called the Little Rock, and here a fresh difficulty beset him; the waves were furiously lashing the rock. In a few minutes he was tossing the spray of the foamy brakers with his brawny arms, and in about half an hour, landed on the south side. After leaving his cold bath, (it was then near the end of October,) he proceeded along the strand until he reached Maurice Castle, in his own neighborhood, a distance of about sixteen miles; and after helping the fishermen there in securing their boats from the rising storm, unnoticed by them in the hurry of the moment, he arrived at his own dwelling, just as his wife and friends were preparing to set out for his execution. Having procured a change of clothes, he took a hasty farewell of his wife and family, and set out for Dublin, where he arrived safe, and assumed the name of Furlong.

He became a wealthy dairyman after some time, and lived in Irishtown. In the year 1818, he and his family emigrated to the United States of America.

As to poor Crean, the soldiers having recovered their senses, he was secured aud executed the next day.

REMINISCENCES OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1830.—IRISHMEN AT THE BARRICADES.

I trespass on your "Answers column," says a correspondent of the Dublin Telegraph, with a few reminiscences of the undaunted bravery of our ancient Gallic friends during the Revolution of July, 1830, which sent Charles the Tenth—the despotic enemy of the Press, the great bulwark of modern liberty and civilization—into exile. Bravery and mercy were characteristic of Frenchmen in the struggle of July, 1830. A courageous, fine-looking stripling, distinguished by remarkable deeds, proved, when the conflict was over, to be a woman. Prodigies of valor were performed by women. A boy of ten, with folded arms and pistol, quietly waited for an officer of the Lancers, who was most ferocious in cutting down the people, and the moment he came up, shot him dead. Noble Son of Liberty, exclaimed a number of matrons present.

At the suspension bridge, at the Place de Greve, a heroic youth said to the armed citizens—"We must cross this bridge—I will set the example. If I die, remember my name is Louis Arcole." Saying these words, and followed by some hundreds, he rushed forward. He had scarcely reached the middle of the bridge, when he fell, pierced by countless musket balls. The witnesses of his heroism, retained his name, and the bridge, which was the theatre of his sublime devotedness, was subsequently called the Bridge of Arcole. Mr. Henry Lynch, of the county Galway, (since dead), informed me that he witnessed from the window of a house in the Rue Richelieu, a man coolly station himself at the corner of a barricade, load and discharge his rifle eighteen times at the Swiss Guards. He took down sixteen men.

The youths of the Polytechnic School took command of the artillery and directed the movements of the people. Lads of fifteen commanded regiments of men of forty, fifty, and sixty years of age, and were obeyed with the greatest submission. At one place a poor workman covered with blood sought for a little refreshment, he having been two days fighting, and during that period, tasted no food. He was scarcely seated when the firing was heard again. He threw away the bread, and, hastening to join his countrymen, fell from exhaustion, and died in a few minutes.

At the capture of the Tuilleries, one of the Polytechnic pupils presented himself at the railings. A superior officer immediately approached. "Open," said the brave youth, "if you do not wish to be exterminated, for the people have become too powerful for the representatives of despotism to resist." The officer refused to obey the summons, and pulled the trigger of his pistol, which did not go off. The young man, who still preserved all his coolness, sprang forward and seized the officer by the throat, and directing his sword against it, said, "Your life is in my power; I could cut your throat, but I will not shed the blood of a fallen enemy—it would be ungenerous indeed—it would be unworthy of the cause of true Liberty." The veteran Royalist, who felt deeply affected at this scene, tore from his breast the decoration he wore, and presented it to his enemy, saying, "Son of France! no man can be more worthy than you to wear such insignia: receive it from my hand. I have worn it till now with some credit, and I am certain that you will continue to do the same."

In a few minutes the Tuilleries were in the possession of the people; but there was no robbery—no destruction of property. The feeling of honor displayed in this regard by the people—and the poorest of them too, was remarkable. A Galway gentleman named Blake (who was amongst a dozen Connaught gentlemen at the taking of the Tuilleries) offered money to several poor fellows who fought beside him, and were dry and hungry, but they refused his assistance. "No, good Monsieur, we don't seek alms. In a few days we will resume our work. Thanks, thanks." With the characteristic feeling of a Connaught gentleman, Mr. Blake took them to his hotel, and gave them abundance of refreshment.

Malachi O'Donnellan, a young Frenchman, behaved with the most heroic bravery. He shot several officers of the Royal Guard and the Line. His humanity to the wounded enemy was truly noble indeed. He fell just at the moment that the Tuilleries were taken by the people. Monsieur O'Donnellan was connected with an ancient family of that name in the county Galway, whose estates lay in the neighborhood of Capatagal, over whose daisy-bedecked head the writer of this narrative had often wandered in childhood's more sunny, hopeful, happy days.

The hardihood of the children was a most striking feature in this Revolution. The Marquis of Chabannes, who commanded the Lancers, was killed by a boy of fourteen. The Swiss Guards were assailed at another point by hundreds of women, armed with pitchforks, knives, stones, &c. Amongst the slain were a large number of women, many of whom were concealed in men's attire, and remarkably beautiful, looking with a smile in the pale "sleep of death."

THE POPE ON SPIRITUALISM.

Rome, Wednesday, July 30, 1856.

At the general meeting of the Holy Roman and Universal Inquisition, held in the Convent of S. M. Supra Minervam, their Eminences the Cardinals Inquisitors-General against heretical depravity over the whole Christian world, after having ripely examined those things which from all parts, were reported to them by men worthy of credit, concerning the experiments of magnetism, decreed that these present encyclical letters should be uttered to all bishops towards restraining the abuses of magnetism.

For it has been found that a certain new kind of superstition has been introduced from the phenomena of magnetism, to which many of the moderns apply, not for the sake of developing physical science, as would be proper, but for the sake of deceiving and seducing men in the idea that secret, remote and future things can be discovered by the art, or imposition of magnetism, especially by the aid of weak women who depend solely on the magnetiser's nod.

Some answers in particular cases have already been given concerning this matter by the Holy See, by which those experiments are reproved as illicit, which are made to obtain an end either non-natural or immoral, or by use of unlawful means. Thus, in similar cases, it was decreed, April 21, 1841, that the use of magnetism, as exposed, is not lawful. Thus the Holy Congregation decided on prohibiting certain books obstinately disseminating these errors.

But since, beside particular cases, it was necessary to decide generally on the use of magnetism, it was resolved, by way of rule, on the 28th of July, 1847, that all error, all soothsaying, all express or implied invocation of the fiend being excluded, the use of magnetism, viz: the simple act of employing physical means otherwise lawful, is not morally forbidden, provided it do not tend to an illicit or in any way bad end. But the application of purely physical principles and means to really supernatural things and effects, is a wholly uulawful and heretical deception.

Although by this general decree, the lawfulness and unlawfulness of the use or abuse of magnetism is sufficiently explained, yet the malice of men has so far increased, that neglecting the lawful desire of knowledge, and rather pursuing things curious, to the great injury of their souls and loss of civil society, they boast that they have got some principle of prophecying or divining. Hence these weak women, delivered over by not always modest gesticulations to the delusions of somnambulism and clairvoyance, as they call it, prate that they behold things invisible, and with rash daring, presume to discourse on religion itself, to evoke the souls of the dead, to receive their answers, to discover things unknown and far distant, and to practise other superstitions of the kind, with the certain result of gaining by their divinations great profit for themselves and their masters.

In all these things, whatever art or illusion they use, when physical means are employed for non-natural purposes, there is a wholly unlawful and heretical deceit, and a scandal against good morals.

Therefore, in order to restrain efficaciously this great evil, most ruinous both to religion and civil society, the pastoral solicitude, vigilance, and zeal of all bishops ought as much as possible to be aroused. Wherefore, as far as by the aid of Divine grace, the ordinaries in each place are able, now by the warnings of paternal charity, now by severe reproof, now by the legal remedies, according as they may deem it expedient in the Lord, with due attention to the circumstances of places, times and persons, let them apply every endeavor to repress and root up these abuses of magnetism, that the Lord's flock may be defended from the enemy, the deposit of faith may be kept safe, and the faithful be preserved from the corruption of their morals.

Given at Rome in the Chancery of the Holy Office, at the Vatican, August 4, 1856. V. Card, Macchi.

DESERTED RUINS OF THE ANCIENT HOUSE OF BARRYMORE.

Augustus O'Reilly, of Fermoy, writing to the Dublin Telegraph, says :—The ruins of this ancient house stand on the verdant banks of a crystal rivulet, from which the tourist enjoys a sublime view of rich and variegated sceneries, with which few landscapes can vie in South Munster.

Here I sat me down to enjoy the rich and picturesque prospect afforded over hill and dale and the serpentine Bride. I forgot my cares and the cares of others. It was here I beheld the sad doom of fallen greatness, the ruins extant, and the Barrymores, who flourished here for six hundred years or more, now extinct.

On the marriage of Lord Barrymore with Lady Boyle, daughter to Richard, Earl of Cork, the wedding-ball at Castle-Lyons cost five thousand pounds, and the nobility of South Munster partook of the princely entertainment, which was splendid beyond anything hitherto known in Ireland since the days of the O'Briens, O'Neills and O'Conors. A dozen rooms, some of them palatial in their dimensions, others bijoux of elegance were thrown open to the brilliant throng that had begun to assemble. When the head steward and the flower-boys left the grand saloon, the conservatory was filled with blossom-plants, and lighted entirely by beautiful lamps placed in alabaster vases, or swinging like moons from the waves of crystal that formed the roof. Mosses of exotic plants sheeted the sides with blossoms—passion-flowers crept up the crystal roof, and dropped their starry blossoms among the lamps ; trees, rich with the light feathery foliage peculiar to the tropics, bent over and sheltered the blossoming plants—an aquatic lily floated in the marble basin of a tiny fountain, spreading its broad green leaves on the transparent water, and sheltering a host of arrowy litte gold fish, that flashed in and out from their shadows—the air was redolent with heliotrope, daphnes, and Cape jessamines—soft mosses crept around the marble basin, and dropped downward to the tesselated floor. It was like entering Fairyland as you came into this starlit wilderness of flowers from a noble picture-gallery, which divided it from the reception room—it was one of Claude of Lorraine's masterpieces—no artist ever arranged a more noble picture—no Peri ever found a lovelier paradise. The silken curtains that divided the picture-gallery from the reception-rooms were drawn back. Thus a most delightful vista was formed, down which the eye wandered till the perspective lost itself in the starlighted masses of foliage, and on entering the drawing-room, which was highly embellished, a scene was presented that no European palace could rival, save in extent. The beautiful stained windows had a corresponding recess filled with mirrors that multiplied and reflected back every beautiful object within its range. Fresco paintings gleamed from the ceilings but so delicately managed and inwrought in the light golden scrolls that all over-gorgeousness was avoided. Each room possessed distinct colours and had its own style of ornament, but natural contrasts were so strictly maintained and harmonies so managed that the rooms, when all thrown open, presented one brilliant whole that might have been studied like the work of a great artist, and always found to present new beauties. The rooms filled rapidly, fancy dresses gave new eclat, and no royal court-day at Buckingham-palace could exceed the grand ball at Barrymore house.

A few months after her marriage the Countess died in Paris, and a splendid monument, that cost one thousand pounds, was built in the Abbey of Castlelyons,now alas! in a disgraceful state of dilapidation.

Not many years past the luxuriant principality of the illustrious house of Barrymore reached from the banks of the copious Blackwater to the Cove of Cork, a distance of twenty-four miles.

Lady Barrymore brought a fortune of ten thousand pounds to her husband, and her father, the Earl of Cork, bestowed the rectorial tithe of several parishes in this neighbourhood on Lady Barrymore, which was sold to several persons. Castlelyons alone pays old maiden ladies one thousand pounds per annum for the cure of souls. Thus robbing Peter, they don't pay Paul.

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

As I have already shown, an army such as ours, chiefly composed of infantry, is easily provided for, only requiring meat and bread, and needing but a very limited transport ; while the efficiency of cavalry and artillery depend upon forage being provided for them. Want of proper forage for a few days, render cavalry and artillery unserviceable. A regiment of cavalry or a brigade of artillery, require the same establishment and means of transport, or nearly so, as a brigade of infantry composed of three or four regiments. We will only need to provide forage for mounted officers' horses, and those of aides-de-camp, orderlies, and cart horses. During the months preceding the harvest, when forage is scarce, cavalry in an enemy's country often cut down the green corn for the use of their horses, doing infinite mischief. To prevent this, during this season, in corn countries, the encampments should push forward rifle ambuscades, supported by the pike, towards the enemy's vicinity, and thus give him other occupation besides devastating the country. For the transport of medical panniers, horses or mules should be chosen in preference to carts, as being manageable and convenient. Panniers are baskets suspended each side on horses' backs. Old linen sheets, shirts, lint, tow and adhesive plaster, will be required for hospital purposes. Carts conveying gunpowder should be covered. The covering should be slight, made of wood, covered with tarpaulin, or oil-cloth, or painted canvas, nailed down, and opening from behind.

In order to insure the security and repose of the camp, to protect it from a sudden surprise or attack, and from a close reconnoisance from the enemy, a cordon of outposts must be established around it. The distance of these outposts from the camp will depend upon the nature of the ground, and the numerical strength of the encampment. Each of these outposts will supply and push forward to their front a number of double sentries, within sight of each other during the day, and within hearing of each other during the night ; encircling the whole by a chain of videttes, through which no enemy can pass unobserved The principles of outposts and their advanced sentries are similar to those of light infantry formations, and their duties, in the main are precisely analogous, the advanced sentries taking the place of skirmishers, and the outposts themselves acting as supports to the skirmishers In rear of these posts a small body of pikemen should be strongly posted to act as the reserve. These, by taking advantage of the accidents of ground, can oppose a check to the advance of the enemy, and give notice and time to the troops in camp to get under arms, and make dispositions to repel the attack. In fixing on the places for outposts, care should be taken to place them under cover so as to be screened from the enemy ; in hollows, behind ditches or dykes, moats, embankments, streams, in clumps of trees, at a farm-house or cottage, at a cross roads, and on the line by which the enemy is likely to advance ; and these naturally fortified positions should be strengthened by adding to them the resources presented by field fortification. As one of the objects of the outpost is to retard the advance of the enemy, and gain time for those in camp to get under arms and make the requisite dispositions to repel the attack, the outpost should be sufficiently strong to resist for a time the first attack of the enemy. The sentries, having signalled the approach of the enemy, are called in, and they, and all the men composing the outpost, skirmish as they retire upon the reserve, where the chief resistance is to be made, until they are supported from the camp, or ordered to fall back upon it, fighting as they retire. The sentries during the day should be posted on eminences, from which they would have a view of the country, and notice the approach of the enemy ; at night they should be drawn in nearer the outpost, forming a closer circle, and be placed in hollows, that they could the more readily observe the enemy crossing the high grounds against the sky line. Sentries should be posted near any copse or cover from which a sudden rush might be made upon them by the enemy, and every wood near hand and outside the line of sentries should be visited by patrols to prevent the enemy from assembling in its vicinity unobserved. When an outpost is permitted to light a fire, it should as much as possible be concealed from observation ; and the alarm-post at night should be fixed at a short distance in rear of the fire, so as to prevent the guard from being seen when drawn up, and compelling the enemy to expose themselves while passing the fire in coming on. The post for the outlying picket should be in rear of the reserve, whose duty will be to send patrols at night round the extremities of the chain of sentries, to vigilantly watch the enemy, to see that the sentries are on the look out, and to support the reserve in case of attack. The inlying picket remains in camp, patrolling through it to see that all is right, accoutered, and ready when necessary to support the outlying picket. When any one of the outposts is attacked, all the others call in their sentries, and cautiously retire upon the camp, and lend their aid to repel the enemy.

Such is the method of collecting and organising the resources of a parish, evoking the military capabilities of its parishioners, and endowing the parish itself with all the unconquerable attributes of glorious war. The method is simple and practicable, without a single ingredient of impossibility or even difficulty in it, if the people but just have the will. Every parish in Ireland can similarly organize and arm for the fight. All the parishes in each county should be governed and directed by a general, and council of war, prudently selected for that purpose. A single county so organized and braced for the struggle, ought to be of itself more than a match for all the troops that any invader can send against this country. But when all Ireland, from centre to shore, is thus prepared and braced up for the grand combat, her old bleeding heart will bound with joy, and the awakened glowing spirit of her soul will burst into national chivalry, shedding the bright and invigorating halo of its myriad charms over the entire people ;—when each real Irishman will feel himself thrilled by the magic inspiration of the times, and irresistibly borne along by the cheerful, foaming, bounding cataclysm of a sanctified warlike enthusiasm ;—when, from a thousand green banners, the butterflies of war and embryo blossoms of a nation's fame—spreading their verdant folds upon the battle's breeze, each one festooned by all the pristine chivalric beauties and splendors of Ierna's battles' sun-burst of yore, as they proudly float in the foeman's teeth, encircled by myriads of steel blades, brightly sparkling in the auburn beams of an autumn sun, and consecrated to the achievement of Irish freedom and glory ; and marking an epoch in the annals of the universe far outshining the historic splendors as recorded of yore, when from Grecian battlements and towers were borne aloft on freedom's breezes the floating ensigns of democracy, and when, from the classic hills of Italy, the glittering arms and warlike banners of republican Rome hurled back a fierce and proud defiance in the teeth of invading Carthage.

The thirty-two counties of Ireland should become thirty-two distinct military districts, each district to be governed, as I have said, by a general and council of war. The situation for the general and council of war to be a central encampment, around which all the parish encampments in the county would form the covering outposts and depots of support and supply. This central encampment should be large, and on a scale commensurate with its importance, and be also strongly and judiciously fortified ; and each of the other encampments should operate precisely as if they were detachments pushed forward from the central stronghold, obeying and executing its orders. These encampments should maintain lines of communication with each other, as well as with the central and governing position, that the necessary patrols, scouts, and despatches from the one to the other would be insured without intermission or interruption. All the other roads, not needed for these or other essential purposes, should be rigidly blocked up, and rendered impassable to the enemy, by cutting them up, felling trees across them, breaking down bridges, and creating inundations about them ; and railways should also be torn up to prevent the enemy from using them. Each encampment in its own vicinity should not only block up the roads, but build up and repair the ditches, apply art to the hedges, and thus give additional strength to the natural securities of their positions. A hedge-ditch could be so splashed, interwoven, and made to present such a grinning front of wooden spikes, as to make the devil himself stop, stare, and look wild at it, should he be doomed to pass through it.

As to the distribution of these encampments, or the concentration of their forces upon any given point, there can be no general rule given, as circumstances must govern all such cases. The line of the enemy's advance having been ascertained, and the strength of his force having been estimated, the central position is at once informed of the circumstance, when proportionate detachments from the adjacent encampments are ordered to advance in support of the one destined to come first into hostile contact with the advancing foe. The strategetical points in front of this encampment in the line of the enemy's advance are seized upon by the detachments, where they await the enemy in position. Should his superiority of force compel these detachments to fall back upon the encampment, in this case the encampment itself strikes its tents and sends its commissariat and military stores to the central position, upon which the forces of the encampment and the auxiliary detachments slowly retire, advantageously disputing every inch of ground with the enemy as they retreat. The lateral encampments will not retire in this case upon the central position, unless compelled to do so by another division of the enemy's army, but collect their forces, and in combination fall upon the enemy's rear, and press upon him until he arrives in front of the central position, where he will find himself harassed between two fires, and his supplies cut off; and the devil's in the dice if he will not be soon made to surrender his troops as prisoners of war and give up his arms and military stores. This done, the encampment forced to retire takes up its former position, and the several detachments march back to their respective encampments, to guard the country and protect the inhabitants, as if nothing had happened. This is but a mere outline of operations ; but I will now more minutely describe our system of tactics and strategy. In doing so, it will be essential, as helping to throw light upon the subject, to take a brief retrospective view of war from the remotest period of antiquity up to the present time.

During the remote ages of antiquity, and up to the period when gunpowder was discovered, and fire-arms applied in war, the armament of armies, generally, was comprised in bows and arrows, swords, battle-axes, spears, and pikes. Their formations were lines and columns ; but deep formation was the chief feature of their tactics, and their bowmen discharged nearly the same office as our skirmishers do now. There was very little strategy, at least none that can be prudently applied now, as the most level plain was usually selected as the theatre of battle ; and the tactics, I may say, consisted in driving in the bowmen, outflanking, depth of column and breadth of front ; and in cavalry charges against broken lines or columns of infantry, and one line encountering the other in a hand-to-hand struggle, man against man, battle-axe against battle-axe, sword against sword, and spear against spear, while fate generally decided in favor of the line possessed of the greater degree of spirit and physical prowess. But the armament and tactics of ancient Greece and Rome have shone conspicuous above all, and it is from them that any lessons for present utility can be learned. Their systems of strategy and tactics are, nearly all, inapplicable now ; but the chief weapon of their armament was the pike, which has done all the execution and won all their military fame, and has become, as I have already shown, a desideratum precisely adapted to meet the existing exigencies of war, and to abolish and replace cavalry and artillery in the field. The discovery of gunpowder having given birth to the invention of fire-arms, their introduction discarded the bow, battle-axe, and pike, and the old system of deep formation that accorded with that species of armament ; and battles were fought, the contending armies in lines of slender formation, and remaining at a distance from each other, it having been considered that the use of projectiles rendered the shock of arms needless, and was deemed so, until again brought into practice by the application of the bayonet. The evident utility of the charge again necessitated the solidity of deep formation.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Irish News.

In an enlightened and elaborate article in the last number of the Irish Quarterly Review, we are given to understand that the fact that population in Ireland is at present in a better proportion to the means of subsistence than before the terrible ravages of pestilence and famine, but that no sort of provision or policy seems inaugurated whereby when population increases again, as increase it will and must, a corresponding increase shall take place in the means of subsistence. And after all that has been said, and written, and avowed, and declared, of the expediency and desirableness of settling the distracted relations of landlord and tenant, nothing at all has been done toward that end, and towards giving the farmers of Ireland that reasonable security for the enjoyment of the results of their industry and expenditure of capital, without which they would be little better than insane if they expended their labor and money on the soil. Still more forcibly and with equal truth the writer reminds the English Government that their congratulations on the prosperous state of Ireland have been carried to the extreme limit of allowance, and that the time has arrived to prepare for changes for which they seem wholly ignorant as well as unprepared. "The best service," says the writer, "that could be done by the present or any other set of men in power would surely be, not to assist in lulling them to sleep with sadly unfounded congratulations, but to awaken them sharply to the real precariousness of the present calm in the condition of Ireland, and to the very evident symptoms of the social distractions which may be slowly but still more assuredly growing and threatening again.

The public examinations, says the Kilkenny Journal, took place in this school on the 11th of December, and were fashionably attended. The proceedings commenced with the examination of the children of the infant school. The visitors then entered the large female school, where the singing class, under the direction of the efficient teacher, Mr. Washington, opened the general business of the day. "Erin, the Tear," harmonized for a number of voices, was pleasingly sung; and "The Meeting of the Waters," a solo, by Master Thomas Lennon, was particularly admired. "The Spirit of Song," written by Mr. J. T. Campion, (for Mr. Washington) was next sung, and was followed by a duet "I saw from the Beach," by Mr. Washington, and his most efficient pupil, Miss Murtagh. Then proceeded the examination of the several classes under the surveillance of the head inspector, J. Sheahan, Esq. The first class was of boys, whose examination embraced general history, grammar and arithmetic. Their answering evidenced the training of their teacher, Mr. Casey. The girls' school was next examined. The senior class by Miss Clarke on the geographical features of Ireland; the junior class by Miss Ryan, whose talent as a teacher and whose disciplined and carefully instructed pupils were generally commended. The proceedings concluded by the distribution of premiums, followed by a burst of harmony from Mr. Washington's whole band of pupils singing "Cheer Boys, Cheer."

From the Waterford Chronicle we learn that the good people of Ross have been recreating themselves during the dark December days, listening to lectures on various subjects. First came Mr. Will Warner, Sculptor, of Stratford-on-Avon. Will, whose chief business was selling busts of O'Connell, Shakspeare, Curran, &c., gave some Shaksperian readings in the Tholsel. Himself a working man, Will sympathizes with his class, and offered to deliver a lecture on "Big Minds" and "Little Minds," for the benefit of the Tenant-Right News Room. The respectables, who, before that, patronised him a good deal, buying his busts and listening to his readings, shunned him altogether when they found he was no better than a Radical. His loss has not been made good by the Democracy. Poor Will "fell between the two stools." After Will Warner, the democrat, came Mr. William Love, a man of color, who described himself to be a runaway slave. Determined to avoid the rock on which Will Warner split, Mr. Love announced himself in his bills as of "no politics," and so he confined himself to Swaddling. He told a good many funny anecdotes connected with slavery, at which the audience laughed a good deal, but his pathetical pictures failed to elicit a sigh, a groan, or a tear, only that he called himself a runaway slave and gave a description of his escape. The Chronicle thinks he was never in America, and only collected his anecdotes to retail them in lectures, and turn an honest penny by appealing to the sympathies of a philanthropic public.

Three weeks ago, Mr. John Mitchell, of Ballygawley, went to pay a visit to his brother-in-law at Gortaclare, near Beragh, co. Armagh, and left there to return home about nightfall, accompanied by Mrs. Irwin, of Carey, whom he invited to a seat on his jaunting car, she having been also visiting in that locality. They had only proceeded about three miles, when the off wheel of the car came against a milestone, which precipitated Mrs. Irwin on the road. On her recovery she observed Mr. Mitchell's horse and car tumbling off the road into a ditch of four feet of water. He called to her "to shout for assistance," which she did to the utmost. No person coming to the relief, she returned to a house on the roadside, about half a mile distant. On coming back with assistance, Mr. Mitchell was found dead. The deceased was the oldest spirit dealer in Ballygawley, and noted for his strict integrity. He was invariably an arbitrator in some one side in any dispute that might arise for miles around, and no appeal has ever been heard from his decision.

The Waterford News report a disgraceful proceeding which took place a short time since in Tramore. A certain mason had been employed to build a house for a carman of the name of Keohan. The building was nearly finished, when one night, during the late heavy rains, the water having got down through the centre of the uncompleted walls, the edifice suddenly crumbled to the very foundation. Some mornings after, a house in the same neighborhood, and which had been nearly completed, by a mason named John Power, was found nearly in a similar condition, and almost prostrate. There is reason to believe that the latter transaction was the work of malicious persons.

An occurrence of a melancholy nature took place a few weeks ago at Cregg, in the neighborhood of Fermoy. Mr. Wm. Adams, son of the Rev. Mr. Adams, of Cregg, having been in Fermoy, left the town between ten and eleven o'clock at night, having drank pretty freely. Arrived at Cregg, it is supposed he sat upon the battlement of the bridge and fell over, as the next morning his body was found lying at the foot of the arch with his neck broken. An inquest was held by Mr. Henry Barry, coroner, and a jury, and a verdict of Accidental Death returned.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry have given a grand ball to five hundred of their tenantry at Newtownards.

The copy of a private bill, agreed to by the deputies appointed at the several meetings of the Creditors of the Tipperary Joint Stock Bank, has been published. The object of the bill is to facilitate the winding-up of the affairs of the Tipperary Joint Stock Banking Company. It recites the number of debts proved (amounting to 1700), and all matters connected with the failure of the Bank, and prays the Legislature to enact its provisions, which bind the Shareholders to agree to any arrangement the official manager shall make, as regards compromise or composition, upon due notice thereof being published in the Dublin Gazette. Shareholders are to file a schedule of all property, both real and personal, of which they were possessed at the time the Banks stopped payment; and parties not attending at the meetings to be called by the Master, to sustain their claim, after fourteen days' notice, shall be dealt with as he (the Master) shall decide.

It may not be generally known that the revenues arising from the taxation of Ireland were regularly let out to, and farmed by, Englishmen as late as the reign of King Charles II. The Tablet lately saw a parliamentary report, or bluebook, printed in Dublin "at his Majesty's Printing House," and bearing the date of 1676, which is styled on the title-page an "Indenture containing a grant of all his Majesty's revenue of Ireland (new and extraordinary aydes by future acts of Parliament only excepted) to Sir James Shaen, and others, for seven years, to commence the 26th day of December, 1675, yielding and paying to his Majesty the sum of twenty thousand pounds sterling the last day of every calendar month." At this rate the whole amount of Irish revenue to the King's Exchequer was 240,000*l.* a year a large sum enough to be levied on the unfortunate island for the support of Charles's wars, his mistresses and their bastards.

A very sad and fatal accident took place near Tralee on New Year's Day. On that evening two young married women named Fitzell, living near Ardfert, were returning home on a cart, driven by a cousin of theirs named Hill. As they passed along the road Hill's hat fell off, and he jumped out to get it, which frightened the horse, and the animal then ran away. The women were afraid and jumped out. The elder, who was very near her confinement, was killed on the spot, and the other, also in the family way, was seriously injured, and was not able to attend her sister's funeral to-day. These women were sisters and married to two brothers. The deceased, Rosanna Fitzell, has left two young children.

From the Cork Reporter we learn that during the gale which prevailed three weeks since almost every post carrying the wires of the Electric Telegraph Company, on the part of the Great Southern and Western Railway, between Buttevant and the Limerick Junction, were either broken across or blown down. It will probably cost from £500 to £600 to repair the damage. The line cannot be in a state to transit messages for the next three or four weeks. The train from Thurles was delayed an hour, owing to the number of posts lying across the rails.

On the 1st of January a meeting was held at the new Church of Kilmovie, county Mayo, to further the cause of the tenant-farmers. The parish priest, Archdeacon Coghlan, took the chair. In the course of an able speech he pointed out the strong necessity that existed in his own parish for some security for the tenants' industry. Almost within view, and in the parish of Kilmovie alone, there were thirty thousand acres of reclaimable land—land more easily reclaimed than the American woods—a desert that the people, if permitted, would turn into a teeming paradise.

The Cork Examiner informs us of the death of the Right Rev. Dr. Wilson, Protestant Bishop of Cork, at the Episcopal Palace, St. Finn Barr's. The deceased prelate was very highly esteemed for his great liberality of mind, as well as for the virtues which distinguished his private character. Bishop Wilson, though a man of delicate constitution, died at an advanced age. He enjoyed the episcopate not quite nine years. Previous to his induction he had resided in Trinity College, Dublin, of which he was a distinguished scholar.

The Dublin Evening Post reports the death of Richard Barry, which took place in that city on the 30th ult. Mr. Barry was a native of Cork, and having in early life embraced the profession of the stage, he for many years in various parts of Great Britain and Ireland maintained a prominent position before the public, with whom in every instance he was an especial favorite. He was for a long series of years connected with the Theatre Royal, Hawkins's street, as one of the stock company, stage manager, and latterly box book-keeper.

Catherine Campbell, for the last six weeks in custody of the Dublin police, has been released, and intends going home to her friends, who reside in the county Meath. This woman was regarded by the police as a most important witness in the case of the murder of Mr. Little, and was placed under the strictest surveillance, for the purpose of preventing any person holding communication with her.

Duncannon Fort, Waterford Harbor, is ordered to be dismantled, and the Ordnance stores to be removed to Cork, whilst the Store-keeper, Wm. Blackwell, Esq., retires on a superannuation pension. The barracks will still be retained in use, for the accommodation of troops receiving instruction in Minie rifle practice.

A deputation from the Crimean Banquet Committee has waited on the Lord Lieutenant to confer with his Excellency on the expediency of giving an entertainment to the Crimean officers at present quartered in Ireland. The result is that no entertainment is recommended, but that the surplus fund now in hand shall be applied in some manner either to the Royal Hospital or the Hibernian School, Phœnix Park.

At the County Quarter Sessions, Limerick, the Assistant Barrister ruled that the Christian Brothers' Schools in Adare, are not subject to grand jury or poor-law taxation. Gamalel Fitzgerald, Esq., was examined, and proved that the Earl of Dunraven, proprietor of the soil, had given the site of the building and land in connexion therewith, gratuitously, for charitable purposes.

The sales in the Incumbered Estates Court for the last week of December, amounted to £167,088. Among the petitions was one on behalf of the children of the Hon. Mr. Warburton, author of the "Crescent and the Cross," who met so melancholy a fate.

On the 28th ult., Miss Margaret Keane, of Limerick, daughter of James Keane, Solicitor and Mayor's Clerk, was drowned, having fallen off a narrow plank when crossing the mill stream at Corbally.

The Mining Company of Ireland have issued their account previous to the half-yearly meeting. We observe that the nett profit is about £12,222, about 1½ per cent. for the half-year.

A Dublin police magistrate has commenced proceedings in an action for slander, against an Irish paper. It appears that the nobleman in question, was plaintiff in some petty case of complaint against a tradesman, and being dissatisfied with the adjudication of the magistrate, addressed a strong remonstrance on the subject to the Lords Justices during the absence of the Lord Lieutenant, attributing corrupt motives to the magistrate, to whom this statement was transmitted by Mr. Horsman, the Chief Secretary, for the purpose of obtaining an explanation. What reply the magistrate deemed it right to forward to the Lords Justices, does not appear, but it is understood that he has placed the matter as between himself and the peer in the hands of his solicitor.

On St. Stephen's Day there was a splendid stag hunt at Killarney, with the hounds of Mr. Maurice James O'Connell. Lady Godfrey graced the sport with her presence on horseback. Lord Castlerose, M.P., and his brother-in-law, Mr. Berkeley, Sir Wm. Godfrey, Captain Daniel O'Connell, M.P., and many other local gentry were present. The stag was taken after a spirited run, near Rockfield, by Mr. Edwards, of the Park, one of the gentlemen connected with the construction of the Tralee and Killarney Railway.

On Christmas-eve, a man named Flaherty, from Moycullen, County Galway, fell into the canal at the point where the swivel-bridge should have been long since erected, and was drowned. His body was found the next day, and an inquest was held on it by the magistrates. The verdict was "Accidental death;" but at the same time, the jury passed a vote of censure upon the Board of Works and the Town Commissioners for their neglect, in not having the swivel-bridge erected where this melancholy accident, with many others of a similar kind happened.

On Tuesday, the 23d December, a match came off on the Clonkelly Race-course, near Birr—a mile and a half—for 20 sovs., between Mr. Thomson's Fanny Hill and Mr. Seymour's Rouser. The latter kept first until near the winning-post, when Fanny gained on him, and won by a length. A fox was then let out and pursued by Mr. O'Moore's hounds and the gentlemen on horseback. They had only a short run, as Reynard got under cover in the plantation over Ballyegan National Agricultural School.

Three weeks since, Lord Fermoy appeared before Mr. Sergeant Berwick, while presiding as Assistant Barrister at Quarter Sessions at Fermoy, and was publicly sworn in Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county and city of Cork. His Lordship took the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed William Charley, John W. Fulton, and John Roberts, Esqrs., to the Commission of the Peace for the county Down, on the recommendation of the Marquis of Londonderry; and on the recommendation of the Earl of Care, he has appointed Frederick Furnell, Esq., of Cahirelly Castle, to be a magstratei of the county Limerick.

A chevron has been awarded to Head-Constable Kennedy, of Cork, by the Inspector-General of Constabulary, for the active assistance rendered by him and the party of men under his command, on the occasion of the late fire at Lota Lodge, when, in consequence of his energetic exertions, a large amount of property was saved.

A correspondent of the Belfast News Letter reports a terrible occurrence in the townland of Galvin, near Dungiven. About midnight, the house of a man named Stewart, accidentally took fire, and of those sleeping on the premises at the time, only a portion escaped with their lives, as Stewart's nephew and two sons, aged from seventeen to nineteen, who lay on a sort of loft above the kitchen, were burnt to death.

As a man named Dennis Lahy, a process server of the county Tipperary, was recently engaged in his duties on the lands of Clone, Kilduff, near the town off Borrisokane, he was pursued by a number of persons who pelted him with stones, and took from his person a number of civil-bill processes, and a letter containing half notes for £3.

An inquest has been held on Friday before Dr. Murphy, coroner, on the body of a farmer named Elias St. John, of Kilgobbin, county Limerick, who was found hanging by the neck in his own barn. There were circumstances adduced that went to show that jealousy was the primary cause of the fatal deed. A verdict of temporary insanity was returned.

About a month since, a farmer named Flahavan, living near Fermoy, County Cork, went to that town to get a gun repaired. A few days after, his body was found in the mill-race attached to Mr. Furlong's mills, in an advanced state of decomposition. It is supposed that the deceased, while intoxicated, fell into the stream and was drowned.

The Rev. Thomas Gimlette thankfully acknowedges, in the Waterford Mail, the receipt of the sum of seven pounds ten shillings, being a gratuity awarded by Lloyd's Patriotic Fund, to David Condon, of Waterford, late private in the 88th Foot, who lost his arm at the battle of Inkerman.

The Rev. John Hogg, a highly respected clergyman, has been appointed to the Protestant vicarage of Bruree, and Mr. Edgar Hyde, of Oxford, gets the Mastership of the Diocesan School of Limerick and Killaloe.

The Dublin Evening Post learns with considerable pleasure, the great improvement in the health and appearance of the Right Rev. Doctor M'Gettian, Roman Catholic Bishop of Raphoe. The venerated prelate has now been 47 years on the mission, 38 years of which he has been bishop.

William Smith O'Brien, Esq., lately visited the Mechanics' Institute, Limerick. He made several inquiries regarding its progress, and was highly pleased with the information he received.

The highest price which the Roscommon Journal has heard given for wood this year, was obtained by Walter Bourke, Esq., of Camms, who sold upwards of 2000 stone, at 20 shillings per stone.

Sergeant Major Bond, late of the 16th Lancers, and now Barrack Sergeant at Cork, has been appointed one of the Yeomen Warders of the Tower, in place of James Tuffin, late of the 9th Lancers, deceased.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Mt. Kernan to the office of Clerk of the Crown for the county of Leitrim, in the room of the late Mr. Kernan, uncle to the present Clerk.

The remains of Mrs. Kilgarriff, who had been missing from Tuam for some time, have been discovered in the river, between the bridge and iron grating in the Bishop's demesne.

The bazaar in the Town Hall, Waterford, in aid of the Sisters of Charity, realised £120.

Answers to Correspondents.

TO THE PUBLIC.]

Captain Maurice Walsh, of New-York, having set out to travel through America, is authorized to collect advertisements and subscriptions for this paper. Captain Walsh has our written authority, which he will present to those who may not be personally acquainted with him. A list of the subscribers' names, together with the respective sums paid by each, will be published each week.

News Agents.—Mr. Thomas McCormack, of Honesdale, and Mr. C. C. Molony, of Dunkirk, have kindly consented to act as our Agents for their respective localities.

Subscriber.—Five cents is all it costs to Register a letter at the Post-office, when it is mailed. It is quite a necessary precaution for parties who remit us money, in all instances, to take.

Our friends in Peoria, Ill., will accept our sincere thanks for their splendid subscription to the News, and the friendly and eloquent sentiments which accompanied it. We feel honored as well as gratified in placing on our books the names of so many respectable Store-keepers, Merchants, and Mechanics. Mr. John Malone, who forwarded the subscriptions of these thirty-six good citizens of Peoria, deserves and receives our cordial acknowledgements. The honest warmth of them, we are sure, will not be chilled by the tedious waste of snow through which, just now, they have to travel to Peoria.

From Tiffin, Ohio, we have also received a very substantial assurance of support. On the list forwarded us from there, the 16th of this month, we find as many O'Sullivans as there are to-day in Kilkenny, or were formerly in the South of Cork, between Kenmare and Bantry. Dr. Farland and the other gentlemen who have subscribed to the News in Tiffin, have our best thanks.

We have received a letter from Mr. John Gilmary Shea, touching the review of "The Catholic Church in the United States," which appeared in the literary page of our last issue. Mr. Shea's communication is in an indignant spirit, which, however, shall not prevent the publicity the writer desires it to attain. Unfortunately we must hold it over until next week, as the literary department of the News—under which head Mr. Shea's letter comes—was already made up when we received it.

A Celt desires to know whether there is in the United States any University having an establishment equivalent to the Sizarship of the English or Irish Universities.

We know of no American institution that offers precisely the same advantages which belong to a Sizar in England or Ireland. There are, however, in nearly all our American Colleges, free scholarships which merely give to the beneficiary the advantages of tuition without expense. The terms upon which these scholarships may be obtained are various, and full information on the subject can only be had by a direct application to the officers of the institution which our correspondent desires to enter.

"St. Michom" writes from Boston, "I venture to suggest to our country people throughout the Union, the propriety of celebrating—in some appropriate way—the birth of Robert Emmet. On the 4th of March, 1777, appeared above the Irish Earth, this third scion of a patriotic stock. Universal history gives to the illustrious name of Emmet, a distinguished portion of its indelible pages, and when the Irish eye descends on it, the muse of Moore is characteristically descriptive of the feelings awakened."

"The tear that we shed, though in secret it rolls, Shall long keep his memory green in our souls."

A "Constant Reader."—There was a law in Ireland called the "Little Tithe Law," which was generally known as "Church Cess." It was abolished in 1834, through the influence of O'Connell. We are not aware that it exacted tribute for every child born in the family, nor did it compel the people to part with the tenth part of corn, &c.—that impost was levied under a different enactment.

"M." It is perfectly correct to spell the name either way. "MeNamara," being an abridgment of "Mac Namara," the "a" being struck out of the Mac by syncope.

Declined.—Rufus L., your "Ode to Fortune," is a most unfortunate attempt to palm off upon us a very bad adaptation of the chief points of John Dryden's splendid ode recommending the enjoyment of the present hour, which opens:—

"Enjoy the present smiling hour,
And put it out of Fortune's power:
The tide of business, like the running stream,
Is sometimes high and sometimes low—
And always in extreme."

We are tempted to give a long quotation from "glorious" John's noble and manly poem, but alas the crowding necessities of the day, put an embargo on our enthusiasm. We must however give a specimen of "Rufus L.'s" vile paraphrase:

"Smiling, let us pass the hour;
Duns are wont to show their power.
The tide of commerce, uncertain as a stream,
Now goes too slow—now runs, as if by steam,
Is sure to leave one—ebbing like the first,
Or with the second, ready for a burst—
Both horribly extreme."

But enough of this.

The following lines have been sent by a new contributor, who says, however, that he is too lazy to write more than one verse at a time.

THE OLD LAND'S SONG.

Although my boys are scattered far
From Liffey's side and lordly Shannon—
Though some are charging 'gainst the Czar,
And riding down his flaming cannon—
Although by bright Missouri's banks,
They wield the axe—are forests felling,
Or fill each gap in labor's ranks,
And be in distant households dwelling;
Still don't despair my daughters dear:
We'll yet have rifles when we need 'em,
And Granua's green flag flying, high
Above the flashing lines of freedom.

A correspondent writes to inform us that he was turned out of employment by the foreman of one of the machine factories in Hawley, (Pa.,) because he fired the salute there in celebration of Mr. Buchanan's election. He further states that the "bosses employed by the Pennsylvania Coal Company offered inducements to Irishmen to settle down there and sold them lots on which they built houses, and when they had thus got hold of them, they tried to lower their wages from a dollar to eighty or ninety cents. They keep a set of despicable fellows who make it a point to quarrel with every one who may happen to differ with them in belief—politically or religiously; and, if any person have the courage to repel the insult, he is immediately discharged. The Directors of this Company, of whom General Ewen of your city is President, are ignorant of al this, and it would be an act of charity to bring it under their notice." We cheerfully comply with the request of our correspondent. In this free country, labor should be untrammelled by either political or religious influences. Such small tyranny—such petty annoyance—is truly disgraceful. If made known to the Directors of the Company we are sure this oppression would not be tolerated for a moment.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1857.

CONGRESS—THE PRESS.

In our last issue we endeavored to delineate the "letter-writer" and the duties that are expected from him. The main end to be attained, as we are informed by a journal rather celebrated in the line, is "sensation;" but the manner of the "sensation" is left entirely to the operator's taste. Time, place, incident, unity, exercise his ingenuity and afford scope for his fancy. In proportion to his success in these externals is his value rated. Mr. Simonton's accessories to the corpus of his "sensation," impart to it great piquancy. He is quite classical, and models his drama on the pattern of Ulysses, that unsurpassed master of guile, whose perfection in the slanderous art is thus attested by the famous shepherd of Mantua:

"Hine semper Ulysses
Criminebat terrere novis; hine spargere voces
In vulgum ambiguas."

At this accomplished dexterity at firing vulgar curiosity and awaking vulgar fear, Mr. Simonton is quite au fait. His censure, while ostensibly it is against one, virtually includes all. As long as the one is not identified, set apart as it were, for special scorn and opprobrium, there is not a member of Congress, not specially interested in, or a suborner of, the charge, who does not feel its weight on his head and see its shadow on his path. Such is the vague alarm with which a slander so indefinite fills the minds, most conscious of innocence, that on the slightest indication of who the real culprit is, men will grasp at it as a relief, and gladly and almost precipitately sink their fears in his condemnation, as the writer above quoted happily elucidates. The man whom Ulysses at last criminates exclaims,—

"Assensere omnes et quo sibi quisque timebat
Unius in miserè exitium, conversatulere."

Fortunately, however, Congress is not a camp where the lie of a military chief is law; and, in this case, the doom, so craftily designed by the calumniator for all, will fall to his own sole lot. And then, assuredly, the assent will be universal, unless we may except those at whose festivities he appears as the prevailing star. But to inculpate even them in this nefarious business may be harsh, if not absolutely unjust; for "sensation" has drawn them reluctantly within its inevitable vortex. Yet if we must have "sensation," even in our private circles, why not apply to some dexterous hunter to catch us a laughing cockatoo, or sentimental baboon, or poetic rattlesnake? Surely these would be sufficiently exciting, and, except in certain doubtful circles, would scarcely provoke imitation. But they would hardly "do" for the "press."

Perhaps it may not be amiss here to explain that when we use the "press" as a quotation we do not mean the press in its aggregate character, but the pretence which invokes the name to justify the most monstrous infamy. In the hurry of our last issue, (the article on this subject having been written as we were going to press), the distinction which we here intimate was not accurately observed; so that sweeping censures which we intended for the pretence, may seem to be directed against the institution itself, of which these pretences are only the abuses, and of which, in the plenitude of its power, exercised with lofty purity, impartiality and courage, we are devoted and devout worshippers.

The press, as we have said, was originally a guide and a light. Even now, that it has become a power, it has not lost its original characteristics. When the "press" is unscrupulous in the use of agencies of success it will be sure to have imitators. Indeed, in this our age, its example is not needed; on the contrary, it would require all the energy of a bold and generous press to check the prevalent worship of success—the great disease, if not disgrace, of our age.

The ancients raised temples and altars to Fortune, whose favors were blindly disposed. There is no longer any worship of Fortune, nor, indeed a mention of her name, because she was blind; and because the doctrine now is that the only blind are they who cannot clutch the new Divinity of Success. There is no temple for her worship, it is true, but she has her shrine in the glittering ball-room, round which "blind" devotees cluster to adore; she has it in the gay equipage, in the brown-stone house, on Broadway, beside the bench of justice, in the halls of legislation, at the fashionable watering-place, in the saloons of London and Paris, and in the galleries of Milan and of Rome.

That there are pilgrims of genius on the highways of fame, though obscured by the shadow of the garish, whose name is never heard in the loud clatter of "sensation" makers is, we fondly hope, true. There are men born in the backwoods, and rocked to rest by the desert winds, whose souls thirst for the beautiful, who glide unseen over the Alps, and tread unheard the crowded haunts of men, to realize their grand dreams and invest their country with the halo of immortality. But these are the exceptions. To them the press owes encouragement, direction, and a fostering care. Is this so, and if so to what extent? Is it so with the "sensation press?" On the contrary does not that "press" track the steps of extravagance over land and sea, join in its dissipation, and exhibit its scandals in capitals so captivating, and a rollicking indifference so inspiring, as even to tickle the fancy of the victims of its slanders? Hence it has come to pass that we breathe a factitious social atmosphere; that we live on show; that we have no standard of merit or success but "sensation." Our literature is first to droop and die of this meretricious sentiment. Our booksellers no longer blush to announce a "sensation book," which is, alas, a sad reflex of our times, a sad blow to our fondest hopes for the future.

The object of literature is to develope the true, the beautiful, and the good in nature and in man—to lead us into the paths of wisdom, kindliness and justice—to impart to us a just appreciation of God's gifts, and an unselfish love of God's creatures, so as to render the good of living worth bearing its evils for. This, too, should be the object of the press. But the "press" run to seed, that is, run upon "sensation," as a branch of successful traffic, closes up the fountains of truth, wisdom, and goodness for ever, and lights above their buried remains, the false and corrupting ignis fatuus of "sensation." By it, and by its light alone, we are to read the men and the things around us. The virtue, the honor, and the fidelity of Congress, and all public functionaries, are flung in to increase the flame. All society whirls round in its glare, exhibiting to its inmost core nothing but ulcerous corruption; and honest men, if any such be left grope in the mirage.

But the "sensation press" circulates! Alas! the price is a dear one.

It is gratifying to find, that in the views which on this subject we have been compelled to enforce by a sense of justice and self-respect, and, above all, by our unqualified admiration for the institution of the press as the great guardian of morality and liberty—it is gratifying to find, that we share to a great extent the opinions of our neighbor of the Tribune. This gratification is still further enhanced by our knowledge of the Tribune's intense hostility to the incriminated members of Congress. The Tribune admits that this body is not so debased and self-condemned as that their accuser may dispense with proof; and that a writer who censures in the name of the "press," is not so far exempt from the ordinary obligations of man as to have his mere ipse dixit conclusive in support of his own charge. This is much, considering the source, nor is it more important on account of the circulation and influence of the Tribune, than because it is a wrathful judgment on its own judgments, for nearly a year past. Let us hail it as an omen and an assurance, that in good season and when passion cools, other journals, which impute all men's acts to foul and sordid motives, will come to admit that when an "explicit charge" of corruption is made "proof should be given if possible." We are not disposed to quarrel about the "distinction without a difference," involved in selecting an "explicit charge" as that to which the obligation attaches, although we humbly think that the more general and sweeping the charge, the more indispensable the proof of it. Nor yet shall we question the Tribune's caution in insisting on proof only in case it is "possible," although we regard the "impossibility of proof" as the first and last and best reason for not preferring the charge at all. Let these quibbles go, if quibbles they be—repentant sinners are entitled to indulgence.

For our parts we denounce all charges, insinuations and inuendoes against purity and honor, as treacherous, cowardly and infamous, of which the accuser has not clear proof, proof which is not only possible to give, but which he is ready at any moment and any place to vouch. We denounce them, whether "explicit" or general, whether against public bodies or individuals. We denounce them whether made by a private person or by the "press." If by the former, his ignorance of his own obligations as a man and member of society may be a palliation; if by the "press," the offence is without excuse and the infamy without redemption. Nay, there are cases even where the proof is possible, tangible and full, and yet delicacy and manhood should stay the pen and tongue of public scandal. In the name of the Press, the true and free Press, we denounce them as dangerous to morality, which it is its pride and province to vindicate and uphold; as fatal to public confidence, which it is its first duty to encourage and extend; as the evil seeds of general suspicion in every rank and walk of life, which at all risks it should endeavor to avert; and finally, as tending directly and inevitably to bring the Press itself into disrepute, and detract from its efficiency, while stamping it with indelible dishonor and disgrace.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

There's none. All sorts of conjectures, to be sure, about the new Cabinet, but nothing positive. Among the names mentioned in probable connection with the Secretaryships, we find that of Robert J. Walker. Sincerely and heartily we trust that this may prove to be something more than a conjecture. It would gratify us thoroughly to see this eminent gentleman with one of the Portfolios of the Buchanan Administration. Were he to succeed Mr. Marcy, our gratification would be complete. Personally we know of no other gentleman whose elevation to that post would afford us such genuine satisfaction, delight and pride. The public grounds which justify this appointment—justify Mr. Buchanan in conferring, and Mr. Walker in accepting it—are part and parcel of the history of the country. His ability when at the head of the Treasury department was indisputable. Every one admits it. Nor can any true Democrat be insensible to the claims which his eloquent and masterly appeal on behalf of the Union, in his memorable letter to Pittsburg last Fall, constitute upon the country and the dispensers of its high gifts. Historically his name is specially dear to us.

The night of the crossing of the Delaware, there was a body of Revolutionary soldiers, known as the Irish Regiment, which made their way, not on rafts or by means of boats, but by leaping from one broken clump of ice to another. The Colonel of that Regiment was Robert J. Walker's father. Irishmen, who proudly treasure up every incident which connects their race and fame with the War of Independence, lovingly remember this; for, Robert J. Walker's father was cradled within the moat of Derry. Exultingly they would hail, as another evidence of the prosperity and glory which await them here, the accession of the son of the Irish Colonel of the Delaware to the Cabinet of James Buchanan.

GENERAL WALKER.

There's not the least fear about him. Mr. Vanderbilt and his accomplices may manufacture bulletins as they please, and gross perfidy may, for a few hours get the upper hand, but all to no permanent effect. Disastrous news has come, if everything, or anything, coming from Aspinwall and Panama is to be believed. But bad news has so often come from both those places—Walker has been so often represented by the inspired penmen of the New Granada Isthmus to be in a desperate condition—to be on the very brink of bottomless perdition—to be all but annihilated—that the worst intelligence from that quarter utterly fails to disturb our serenity. Indeed, the only reliable facts concerning the movements in Nicaragua, which the Editors and special Reporters at either end of that route receive, are those which go to them from here, two months after date. With the view of enabling them to be a little more expeditious in the circulation of correct intelligence regarding General Walker and the progress of Constitutional Republicanism in Nicaragua, we beg to advise them that, by this time, the San Juan is in complete possession by General Walker's army, the Costa Ricans, together with the murderers and renegades, aiding and abetting them, having been flung to the alligators in the river, or to the wild hogs in the forests overlooking either bank.

The reinforcements at Punta Arenas under Colonel Lockridge—those that sailed on Thursday last from here—those again under Colonel Titus, not including, or mentioning even, the four hundred who sailed from New Orleans last week—these facts justify us in the statement we have made. All the reinforcements were well armed. Physically, they were in the best condition. Their stores were abundant. Adequate means for forcing the river were on hand. The coolness, intrepidity, and experience of General Walker, the military genius and accomplishments of Gen. Henningsen, the fidelity and courage of the officers and men under their command, these are the elements which, in combination with the substantial resources we have referred to, will retrieve whatever has been lost. Not merely do this, but impregnably consolidate in that noble region the Republicanism—the enlightened system of laws, society, and freedom—the seeds of which, generously sown by Wm. Walker, and nurtured by the blood of his brave soldiers, would have ripened by this, into a perfect growth, but for the scandalous cupidity of such men as Mr. Vanderbilt, and the illiterate jealousies of such cut-throats as Carrera.

THE BOND STREET MURDER.

A most horrible murder was discovered on Saturday morning last, January 31st, in the boarding house No. 31 Bond street. Dr. Harvey Burdell, a Dentist, of considerable wealth, was found by his errand-boy murdered in his office. The evidence of the eminent physician, Dr. John W. Francis, shows that the deceased was strangled by a cord being drawn round the neck, in addition to which the body exhibited fifteen wounds, inflicted by a dirk or some such instrument. The mystery in which the foul deed is involved, up to the time we go to press, adds to the horror excited in the mind of the city at large. No occurrence of the day has created so appalling an interest. The chief facts elicited on the Coroner's inquest are few, and do not directly criminate any parties.

It appears that Dr. Burdell was the owner of the house, and that he used the parlors in his business as a dentist, also the room over the back parlor as an operating room, in which room he was found dead, and the front room communicating with it as a sleeping room. Mrs. Cunningham rented the house, or the part unoccupied by him, or was his housekeeper, in which capacity, however, she took boarders. This lady exhibited a certificate of marriage with deceased; but the identity of the deceased as the man to whom she was married is not thoroughly complete. A strong likeness between said person and deceased is recognised by the Rev. Mr. Marion, who officiated, and by his servant girl who was present. The difference of the growth of, or the manner of wearing the beard—the deceased only having a "goatee" when killed—precluded the clergyman's evidence from being direct.

The girl recognised Mrs. Cunningham as the woman married, but could not positively identify the Doctor. "It looked like" the man that was married. The marriage took place last October, and was kept private. The married parties, that is to say Doctor Burdell and "Mrs. Cunningham," did not occupy the same room. They were known to dispute—a charge being made by the Doctor accusing Mr. C. with stealing some papers or notes of his. Previous to the marriage, its necessity was made the subject of complaint by both parties—by the lady that the Doctor did not keep a promise of marriage he made her; and by the Doctor, that such charge was made by the lady. In September last, he consulted a friend as to what course he should pursue under the circumstances. That he refused to comply with Mrs. Cunningham's request is evident from that lady's declining to state the reasons he gave for not marrying her then.

The evidence gives anything but a favorable picture of the state of morality within the premises. It appears that a boarder named John T. Eckel was on peculiarly intimate terms with the lady, that she was in consequence the cause of jealousy between Eckel and Burdell; and that she was herself, in turn, jealous of the Doctor, he being in the habit, as she stated, of bringing females into the house whose conversation was not becoming, and who, she believed, sought him for other and less virtuous purposes than professional advice and treatment.

It is stated that the Doctor did not keep money in the house, which fact, in connection with the orderly manner in which his papers were found, show that his murder was not undertaken and perpetrated with a view to plunder. All the inmates of the house have been retained.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

The presence of Mr. Buchanan in Washington has created a very gratifying excitement among the crowd of eminent persons desirous of paying him that respect due to his distinguished career and present illustrious position. Nor has the President elect been wanting in those courtesies of life which Laurence Stone says, make its paths bright. It is usual for the President to vacate the "White House" a few days previous to the inauguration of his successor. Mr. Buchanan has politely requested Mr. Pierce to remain in the house until after the inauguration; and then become his guest until he desires to return to New-Hampshire. Mr. Pierce has accepted this very graceful invitation.

There is quite a panic and a pother on the subject of the depreciation of Spanish coins. Congress has not passed any law yet interdicting the coin; but in view of an approaching edict, the Ferry companies have issued orders to take Spanish coins at the reduced value, 20 cents for quarters, 10 cents for shillings, 5 cents for six-penny pieces. This has set the papers tattling on the subject, some for and some against the reform, which we think a very judicious one, if carried out thoroughly; and which, as a correspondent of the Daily Times suggests, ought to extend to the "squelching" of the American quarters, and substituting twenty-cent pieces, the propriety of which is clear enough. The Day-Book suggests that sixty days' notice should have been given of the reduction, as entailing a loss to people greater than the value of the Spanish coins would warrant. It states that one hundred dollars of Spanish coin—quarters—weighed at a jeweller's, were found to contain 79 ounces and 7penny-weights, which, at mint valuation of $1,22½ cents per ounce, would be worth $97,20, or about 2 7-8 per cent less than its value. We perceive that a Wall-street house was purchasing the Spanish quarters at 23 cents, shillings at 11 cents, and sixpences at 5 cents.

On Wednesday, Jan. 28, Joseph W. Fabens, A. C. Lawrence, and three others—Henry Bolton, James Miller, and Andrew Finegan—were arrested on informations made at the office of the District Attorney by Joe Brown and Robt. Fuller. Marshal Thompson took Mr. Fabens immediately before Commissioner Stillwell, who required him to give bail in the sum of $3,000 to answer the charge of violation of the neutrality laws. He refused to give bail, and was handed over to the custody of Marshal Hillyer. Commissioner Stillwell, before whom Mr. Lawrence was also brought, required him to give bail in the sum of $3,000. Horatio N. Wild, Esq., became his surety. Henry Bolton, James Miller, and Andrew Finnegan were each committed to Eldridge-street Jail in default of $500, to await examination. Colonel Fabens and Captain Bolton, were brought up on Sturday, Januarythe 31st. Judge A. C. Morton, Thomas Francis Meagher, and Malcolm Campbell appeared as their counsel, Commissioner Stillwell being absent, the counsel for the prisoners insisted upon proceeding with the examination before another Commissioner. Kenneth G. White, Esq., the newly-appointed Clerk of the U. S. Circuit Court and ex-officio U. S. Commissioner, declined to act from personal considerations, being a brother of Joseph L. White, who has lately been such a conspicuous opponent of the Walker interest in Nicaragua. The Counsel for the prisoners waived all objection to Mr. White, and expressed perfect willingness to proceed with the case before him. Mr. White, peremptorily refused to go on and take the testimony. Mr. McKeon, the District Attorney, in the face of the demand of the accused for an immediate examination, declared the matter adjourned until Monday, February 2nd, at 12 o'clock. Mr. Judge Morton on behalf of the prisoners, then notified the U. S. Marshal that the parties being by law entitled to an examination, and this right having been refused them, they now considered themselves at liberty, and should by an action at law make the Marshal respond in damages for their further imprisonment. On Monday, at 12 o'clock, the case was proceeded with. Judge Dean appeared for the prisoners, in the absence of Judge Morton, obliged to leave for Washington. After a somewhat lengthened argument concerning the legality of the writ and warrant of the arrest, the first witness for the prosecution was produced. The result and full particulars in our next.

Hon. Preston S. Brooks died of violent cramp, at his hotel in Washington, on the 27th ult. On the 29th, Mr. Evans in the Senate, and Mr. Keitt in the House, announced, with eulogistic feeling, the occurrence to Congress. Tributes to the deceased were also made by Senators Hunter and Toombs, and Messrs. Quitman, Campbell, Clingman and Savage, of the House. After a recess, the corpse was brought into the House, when the President, Cabinet, Members of both Houses, the Judges of the Supreme Court, Mr. Buchanan, and others being present, the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Waldo, preached from the text—"This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." The remains were temporarily disposited in the Congressional Cemetery. Mr. Brooks was born in Edgefield District, S. C., 1819, had served in the legislature of that State, and in the Palmetto Regiment did gallant service in the Mexican War. Gen. Quitman especially alluded to his chivalrous character during the seige of Vera Cruz. Mr. Brooks has left a wife and four children. The death of the honorable gentleman has created a feeling of heartfelt and sincere regret among his many personal friends.

On the 30th ult. Mr. J. J. Owens introduced a bill into the New-York Legislature, which provides that the Ferry Companies between New-York and Brooklyn shall not demand a rate of fare which shall yield a greater profit than 10 per cent. per annum upon the capital actually employed; that when fractional parts of cents are called for, a single passage shall be charged the even cent next highest, but tickets in quantities should be sold at the fractional rate, fractions less than a mill going to the favor of the Ferry Company. Foot-passengers may procure tickets of commutation for any period not less than one month, at the same rate that 1,000 are procured. As the rate of fare is to be based upon statements of business, any perversion in these statements is made perjury and punishable as such, and a fine of $10 is imposed for demanding a higher rate of fare than is allowed.

Mitchel's lecture—embracing the life of Thomas Devin Reilly, specimens of his most brilliant articles during the period of the European Revolutions in 1848, and deeply touching personal details of the close of his career in Washington—has just been issued, in a neat form, under the publishing supervision of Haverty, of Fulton street. As the lecture was given in aid of the fund for the widow and child of the deceased, and as it is published for the same laudable purpose, it is to be hoped that the sale will be extensive. Those who were, by distance from the city, prevented from attending the lecture, and those whose means will not permit them to offer on the altar of patriotism and charity any larger testimony of approval can, at least, in the purchase of this lecture for twenty-five cents, exhibit a loving desire, than which no greater can be manifested by the largest donation. We had almost forgot to mention that Reilly's celebrated paper on Naturalization, suggested by the well-known Koszta case, is included in the publication. At the time of its first appearance it created a great sensation, and was attributed to several eminent men, including Edward Everett, Caleb Cushing, Charles Sumner, J. L. Frothingham, the Historian of Boston, &c.

The ladies of the Benevolent Society attached to St. Patrick's Cathedral will hold their Twelfth Annual Festival, at the Apollo Rooms, 410 Broadway, on Saturday evening, February 7th. Tickets may be had at the Catholic bookstores, of the Sexton of the Cathedral, and at the door on the evening of the Festival.

The object of the Society is to visit applicants at their residences, to inquire into their wants and character, and if found worthy of assistance, to relieve them, rs far as the means of the Society will admit. The Managers appeal to a kind and charitable public in behalf of their Society, as they have been enabled to extend comfort to many an unfortunate person during this inclement season, and trust that their Festival may meet with patronage.

On the 30th ult. Mr. Slough, Member of the Ohio Legislature, was expelled by a vote of seventy to thirty-five for striking another member, Mr. Caldwell. All the Democrats opposed Mr. Slough's expulsion with the exception of Mr. Corey.

We understand that Mr. J. B. Tully will deliver a lecture in New Haven on the 11th instant. The subject chosen is a very wide one—"English Tyranny and Irish Endurance." Mr. Tully, we believe, makes his first appearance as a lecturer in this effort; which we are given to understand will be treated in a popular and patriotic manner.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

THE CAMPBELL TOWN ELECTION DRAWING TO A CLOSE—THE GOVERNMENT CANDIDATE—A WORSHIPPER OF NAPOLEON—THE GEESE OF FONTAINEBLEAU—THE DODD FAMILY AT HOME—THE GRIFFINS ON THE PLATFORM.

The Griffins were the first to arrive in town. As the head of the column broke in sight, the Widow Kearney threw open one of her front bed-room windows, looked out, waved her 'kerchief, and with redundant smiles sent forth a thousand welcomes to the friends of Peace and Order. The head-waiter waved the flag. The cook and chamber-maids, the stable-boys and book-keeper, buzzed and swarmed at the door. The sons and daughters of the plump Cornelia, (the eldest not six years,) exhibited themselves effectively at various points, within and without the house.

Clipper, the tomb-stone cutter, huzzahed for the Widow. Carter, the Launceston carrier, called for three cheers more. The Chaplain became spasmodic with his enthusiasm, whilst the Medical Superintendent nearly broke his neck with a bow. Mrs. Kearney never saw such a beautiful sight before. Prosperous, her impoverished birth-place, in its palmiest days, (not even when the great Daniel O'Connell passed through there from Tullamore,) ever turned out so well. Oh, if James Kearney had only lived to see it!

The Widow's heart sunk within her. But the sight of the sub-district constable—a middle-aged bachelor, in new boots and prime condition—mounted on a fat black horse, suddenly revived her. He lifted his hat to Mrs. Kearney, and, so doing, bobbed against the neck of his horse, leaving a considerable portion of the rear of the saddle exposed. Mrs. Kearney kissed hand, doubled up her 'kerchief, and pressed it to her eyes. Did the thought strike the Widow Kearney, that Giles, the sub-district constable, might one day (and that not far distant) lead her to the stone of sacrifice? She would have denied it proudly. Giles, indeed! A Welchman! A foreigner! An Irish widow marry out of her own kin and country! The world wasn't at an end yet, said Mrs. Kearney. For all that, six months after, there was no longer a Mrs. Kearney in Campbell Town. When strangers inquired for that name, they were asked "if it wasn't Mrs. Giles they meant?"

In the rear of the column rode the candidate himself, Mr. Ethelwood Griffin. He was well mounted. His horse, a beautiful iron gray, showed off to the sprightliest advantage. The bridle, head-gear, saddle-cloth—everything was perfect. The young candidate rode superbly. Born in Tasmania, he was cradled in the saddle. His face and figure were picturesque. Dark brown eyes, lips and nose finely cut, broad shoulders, heavy beard and flowing hair, deep chest, small round hands, staunch thighs, and (what the Widow herself pronounced to be) "the beautifulest foot." Ethelwood Griffin was, every inch, a winning, handsome, noble fellow. Generous almost to recklessness; faithful, frank, courageous; deserting nothing, denying nothing, fearing nothing; nothing that his large heart bid him cling to, confess or dare;—no one socially, was more beloved than he. He fell ill of fever one day. The news flew quick and wide. For miles and miles around, one might have felt the deep vibration, the pulsating, throbbing sorrow which the news awoke.

The rich, the poor, the rude, the gentle, the young, the old—aye! the wildest scamps that scoured the country on search of quail or kangaroo, and kept the inns in uproar, in the high-road and in the Bush, the whole year round—they whom people (experienced people, "religious" people) might have said had no thought, no sensibility, no sense of duty, not the smallest!—they, too, came flocking in from every quarter, in every sort of costume, in ever kind of vehicle, and some on foot, to know how Ethelwood was getting on.

Ah! it is well that heavy visitations come upon us sometimes; that we are struck down in our exulting strength and laid helpless on our bed; for at such moments do we awake to the consoling knowledge that Heaven keeps around us friends we little dream of: friends, who, from various pursuits and scenes, from lonely or from populous places, come together at one stroke of nature, and throw light upon our darkened couch; friends, who, despite of all the gaiety they dance or dash through, all the flattery they drink in, all the frivolity, dissipation, and debauch they flit or flash through, still retain the diviner impulses that conduct them, through all the forms of sin and death, to pious duties and inspiring visions.

Ethelwood's education had not been of a very brilliant order. University men would have said so. Literary people, generally speaking, would have been of the same opinion. He knew nothing of the classics. He never had to sit down in a sepulchral study-room, before a grim oak-desk, mutilated with the hieroglyphics of five or six mischievous generations, and worry his brain with the fables of Phædrus or the legends of Lucian; never had to prepare two hundred lines of a Georgic by ten o'clock of a winter's morning, with his chillblains burning, and the fear of man and all the Immortal Gods before him; never worked himself into frenzy with a Philippic, or stumbled to the ludicrous with Longinus on the Sublime. Horace was Greek to him, and Ovid as unfamiliar as the Euxine. But he had Lempriere's dictionary, and Maria Hack's stories of the Hellenic confraternities. He had a popular translation of Livy in his bookcase, and the luminous pages of Gibbon completed his knowledge of the Cæsars.

It was the same way with the sciences, as they have been taught during many dusky centuries in the sombre colleges of Europe. He knew nothing of them. But, in a plain, cheap, way, he had been taught to be a man—an intelligent, useful, active, eloquent, strong man. He knew enough of kings and demagogues, quacks and statesmen, creeds and commerce; knew enough of the progress and decline of nations, the politics of latter times, the history of the great old monarchy that had planted the colony which he loved, and had the earnest will to serve; knew enough of the statistics, industrial and otherwise, of this same little colony; knew enough about her young and growing interests, and had mastered a sufficiently accurate and forcible diction to convey his views upon all these matters tellingly to his hearers; and thus, though but slightly qualified for a grand debate in Westminster, or an elegant gossip at Gore House, or a morning with Lady Morgan, he was fully equal to the position he now strove to occupy, and brought into the contest for it much sound knowledge, a clear, quick brain, a fluent tongue, and a resolute high-toned nature.

He was on the wrong side, however. Public opinion emphatically declared he was. The public press, with one exception, resisted his claims, and assailed him fiercely. Generous, honest, courageous fellows, frequently commit this same mistake. They very often appear on the wrong side. The very weakness of it, the discredit which attaches to it, the opprobrium which threatens those who stand up for it—all invest it with a fascination which excites the devotion and sympathy of the chivalrous. No one said that Ethelwood Griffin took the side he did, from unworthy motives. No one charged him with mercenary desires, for he was rich whilst he was generous. No one charged him with being a candidate for the compliments and favors of the Government folk; for his social position left all such poor temptations far below him—whilst his own proud nature, had they been invitingly displayed, would have trampled them in the dust.

The other side had, far away, the best of it. It was cheerful, beautiful, and bright with the budding hopes of a future already dawning, in which the young colony would rise above the impurities and maledictions of its childhood, and in a purer atmosphere, on a loftier level, efface the features with which, in its cradle, by a malignant magic, it had been cursed. All that was good, hopeful, pious, manful; all that was noble in thought, impulse, prayer and purpose; all were with the cause of which, this day, the Blue Cockade had been the chosen symbol. The other side attracted to it all the noisy flies and greedy vermin, all the tame snakes and silken spaniels, that had birth, congenial refuse, food, warmth and caresses, within the drawing-rooms, waiting-rooms, out-offices, and sculleries of the Colonial Court—the Petit Trianon—the paltry lodging-house of a Green-room king.

In their progress through the town, the Griffins were variously received. Mrs. Kearney kissed hands to them and waved her snowy kerchief. This we have already seen. But Hodgens, the butcher, who had figured in the famous Bristol Riots, and had largely partaken of the chief magistrate's port wine, whilst the venerable city was in flames, shook his cleaver in defiance at them; pointing, at the same time, to a fat wether, recently slaughtered, as indicative of the destiny which, in his opinion, so sheepish a mob incontestibly deserved.

Hodgens was a Chartist. He was a rude, blunt, boisterous man; but honest, intelligent, and generous. His hatred of the English aristocracy was intense. He would have fallen on them with the vengeance of a Couthon. Warwick castles and Woburn abbeys, Elizabethan halls and Norman keeps, would have speedily disappeared in the red tempest of his torch. Not a pillar, not a torch, not a tomb-stone with a scrap of heraldry upon it, would have been spared. Trees that had been planted long before the rival White and Red roses bloomed, and were sacred to the children of the knights of Poictiers and Agincourt, he would have dealt with as the fig-tree of the Gospel. Their very roots would have been reduced by him to charcoal. With their ashes he would have marked the pale foreheads of the nobility, and have dismissed the sinner out upon the world to do penance in poverty and hard labor, for the iniquity of his birth. Out from the huge factories; up from the mysterious mines, where generations had gnawed their way like worms, and had toiled, and writhed and died, without knowing there were flowers, and streams, and stars, and sunshine overhead; down from the garrets, where the spider had been their silent companion for years of labor and desolation, and through the damp and darkness of which, beautiful and strong thoughts had sometimes gone forth, winged and armed like warrior angels, to disturb the dull reign of falsehood and servility; from all these places he would have summmoned a new nation into power. Men of less truth, less courage, less heart and thought, have had their triumphal cars, their crowns of laurel, statues in cathedral and pantheon, public obsequies and sumptuous catafalques decreed them.

At the door of a public-house stood an old man of the name of Dodd—Isaac Napoleon Dodd. He was stone blind. Dressed all in white, with a long white pipe in his mouth, he was a remarkable figure in the panorama of this memorable contest. He wore no spectacles. The blank eyeballs glistened in the sun, towards which they seemed irrevocably turned. A martyr to the gout, he wore yellow worsted slippers, and rested on a thick, heavy-knotted brown stick, round which a flabby snake had been carved. The smoke from his pipe rose up in clouds, softly curled, glided, and lingered about his hat. Having the good luck to be the owner of the house at the door of which he stood, he was a man of substance in the village. He was corpulent besides; and this, added to the fluency of his speech, and the vigor of his voice, rendered him an oracle with his customers.

Over the doorway was a large square lamp. It was painted green, and bore an imperial tin crown, as yellow and ponderous as a sun-flower. Various inscriptions were legible on the glass. They contained a synopsis of the resources of the house. The passer-by learned from them, that gin and chops, tobacco and beef-steaks, brandy and soap, nutmegs and nails, pickled salmon and Panama hats, were supplied within on liberal terms, by Isaac Napoleon Dodd. A sign-board over the lamp represented the great Corsican, on a powerful bay horse, clearing the Alps at a bound. The house was called the Bridge of Lodi, and Isaac Napoleon Dodd had a hay-stack, three-quarters of an acre of sand and bulrushes, a flock of geese and dog-kennel, a mile outside the town—all of which came under the denomination of Fontainebleau.

The historic partialities of Mr. Dodd were manifest. He worshipped the memory of the first Napoleon. Could he have sung like the blind balladist of Scio, the victories of the Consulate and Empire would have been celebrated in an epic not less majestic than the Illiad. As it was, he named his children in commemoration of the famous fields of Germany and Italy, over which the eagles of the Champ de Mars had winged their boldest flights. Thus it was set down in the baptismal register of the parish of Campbell Town, that on such and such a day, in such and such a year, Friedland Dodd had been born, and Arcola Dodd had been born, and Westphalia Dodd had been born. When his youngest daughter, his last child, was born, the pious father had her christened, amid the loudest cackling of the geese at Fontainebleau, Maria Louisa St. Helena Dodd! All public events and questions were viewed by him as having reference, immediate or remote, to the glory of the name which with such pertinacity he had inseparably interwoven with that of Dodd. Somehow or other, he came to the conclusion that in this contest, between Wagstaff and Griffin, the Napoleonic interest was at stake; and, by a process of reasoning equally as intelligible, he determined to throw himself, heart and soul, into the ranks of the latter gentleman; convinced that, by so doing, he would best evince his fidelity to the deceased Napoleon.

"Are they coming?" he asked, with his eyeballs fixed in the direction of the sun.

"They're coming," shouted a score of voices.

"Wagram," said he to his eldest son, "beat the drum."

The boy brought out the drum, slung the broad leather strap over his neck and under the left arm, and flourished the drumsticks about his head—

"Here's Wilkins, the lame Chaplain," shouted the crowd about the Bridge of Lodi.

"Three cheers for Wilkins! and three cheers for Marshal Soult!" cried Isaac Dodd, waving his white hat, and sending up a pillar of smoke as he threw down his pipe.

"And here's the Doctor in his gig," exclaimed the drummer.

"Three cheers for him!" cried Dodd, and he waved his white hat again.

"And here's old Clipper and his wife!"

"Hurrah for Lannes and Davoust!" cried Dodd.

"And here's Mr. Griffin himself," shouted the friends of the blind man, as they rushed past him towards the carriage of the young candidate, and lost themselves in the throng which beat around it, enveloping it in dust, and shaking it to pieces.

"Beat the drum, my boy!" cried Dodd, waving his hat with redoubled energy flourishing his big stick, and joining in the uproar with lungs and limbs, until the buttons in his waistcoat and the vacant eyeballs seemed to start. "Beat the drum, my son," he cried; "beat 'The Caliph of Bagdad!' beat 'The Conquering Hero Comes!' Hurrah for Bernadotte! hurrah for General Rapp! hurrah for Murat and the Pyramids!"

Isaac Napoleon Dodd shouted his reminiscences, until his voice, in a gasp, broke down; swung his hat until he swung it in his delirium from him; flourished his stick, and stamped a muffled peal with his slippers on the door-step, until he fell back exhausted into his high-backed arm-chair, which, with a delicate providence, had been placed by Josephine Beauharnais Dodd in close proximity behind him. During all which performance Wagram beat the drum on both sides, drowning the shouts of the multitude, and driving the horses in the gay procession to desperation. During all this performance, too, Mr. Griffin stood erect in the carriage, took off his hat, bowed to Dodd, (bowed over and over again to Dodd,) pressed his hand to his heart, swept his hat through the stormy air in a final burst of gratitude, and then fell back (he couldn't help it, for the horses had become unmanageable) into his seat once more.

It was some time before the worshipper of the Sun of Austerlitz revived. When he came to life, he called for a fresh pipe, and a glass of his favorite gin. The latter being handed him, calling for silence, he proposed a sentiment—"Victory to Griffin, and success to Fontainebleau!"

The drum, the crowd, the candidate, the horses—all tumultuously replied, and, in a whirlwind of enthusiasm, swept on. Mr. Dodd collapsed into his cane-bottomed chair, and, with his hazy eyes still fixed intently on the sun, drank in the cheers and tumult of the departing crowd.

Arrived at the Rainbow, the Griffins halted; and, breaking line (if they ever kept it), threw themselves in a shapeless mass against the platform, on which, agreeable to the wording of his Excellency's proclamation, the nomination was to take place. Up from this under-growth of heads and arms and legs, through which, in various shapes, the gaudy colors of their leaders shone like wild flowers, the banners of young Ethelwood waved and danced, swung languidly or violently, to and fro in the dusty sunshine.

The Police Magistrate, Josiah Thomas Briggs, Esq., staid his impatient step, and jerking up his shirt-collar to the last extremity, performed a pirouette upon his boot-heel, and then came down on both soles firmly, boldly facing the audience in the parquette before him. The consciousness of the greatness of his position threatened at the moment to turn to apoplexy. His face inflamed, the brass buttons of his claret-colored dress-coat broke into symptoms of instant dissolution. The audience cheered him; some being under the impression he was already committed to their views; others, not quite so convinced of this, believing it would be easy to secure him by an early manifestation of regard.

The disabled Chaplain was the first to mount the platform: he did so very ungracefully (that leg of his was always in the way), and with considerable palpitation of the heart. The condemned foreigner from Ceylon assisted him with his arm. The tomb-stone cutter encouraged him with patriotic adjurations. Having accomplished the ascent, soothed his forehead with his spotless cambric, let out a reef or two of his shirt or waistcoat, and, with a solemn pause, quieted the palpitation with which he was afflicted, the Rev. Mr. Wilkins advanced towards Mr. Briggs, and, lifting his hat, did homage to that gentleman. Mr. Briggs stiffened himself up, buttoned his coat a button tighter, tightened the proclamation under his arm, and, jerking out the right boot, returned the salute with inflexible precision. The multitude cheered again. The banners shook—Isaac Dodd's big drum announced another epoch in the struggle.

Next came the Medical Superintendent. Not a smile, not a motion of the lips, not a motion of the eyes. As though he had been starched all over, dried, crimped, ironed out, from the boot-heel to the hat-band, he walked up the steps. A sneeze would have broken him in two. He saluted the Magistrate as he would salute a statue. The Magistrate saluted him with equal propriety. But the one was flushed—the other frozen. It was Bagstock and Dombey. The notables of Leamington had removed to the Pacific. The spectators were at a loss to know whether to cheer or not, but thought it as well to do so. They had, for the moment, nothing else to do, so they cheered. The Medical Superintendent frowned—the Magistrate looked grand. The big drum of Wagram completed the effect.

A few minutes' conversation between the Medical Superintendent and the Police Magistrate; between the Chaplain and Englebert, the landlord of the Rainbow; between the Baptist preacher and Mr. Clipper (the tomb-stone cutter), concerning a piece of melancholy art, on which the chisel of the latter gentleman had been for some time (during lucid intervals) engaged;* some more shouting and waving of hats and banners; a great deal of smoking, and copious refreshment of another kind; and then came the pioneers of the Wagstaff procession.

CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.

MRS. LEWIS'S POEMS.

RECORDS OF THE HEART, and other Poems. By ESTELLE ANNA LEWIS. Illustrated by American Artists. D. Appleton and Co.

In a previous notice, we drew attention to the admirable manner in which this volume was printed and illustrated, and to its appropriateness as a most seasonable and beautiful gift-book. The publishers have done their part with highly commendable taste and elegance. Having said so much for the body of the book, let us see what soul there is in it.

Mrs. Lewis has achieved a prominent position among the female authors of America. To this, large natural powers of melody, and great scholastic resources have contributed. As a songstress, Mrs. Lewis has sustained the promise of her early writings, and her translations from various languages, have won her the reputation of being the most learned of American ladies who commit their thoughts and brain-exercises to the press. Margaret Fuller d'Ossoli was a notable example of female perseverance in the study of both dead and living foreign languages. From such study that able woman derived much power, and a great deal of harsh phraseology. She was more engaged in acquiring extensive knowledge of the dead languages than in perfecting a sound, living harmonious style. Her writings therefore are in general more remarkable for what she said than the manner in which she said it. Since her death, we have good reason to know that the distinguished author of the work before us, takes the rank of being, among all the female poets of America, and indeed—excepting Elizabeth Barrett Browning among the female writers—in the English language, the best acquainted, not only with the mellifluous tongues of Southern Europe, but with the Greek and Roman authors of antiquity.

In consideration of Mrs. Lewis's acquirements, we must congratulate her readers on her freedom from pedantry, a which in the case of Margaret Fuller d'Ossoli was rather painfully substantiated, and of which even Mrs. Browning cannot be acquitted. Mrs. Lewis writes from a naturally strong poetic mind, and though no just critic can compare her for subtle force and direct metaphysical strength of thought and diction to the great English poetess, she possesses more melody and suavity of expression. She lacks the brilliant antithesis of Mrs. Browning, but exhibits in general a richness and an easy flow of style, evidently a combination growing from an appreciative study of Byron and the Italian poets.

The poem which opens the volume, illustrates these remarks. It is entitled "Florence, a Tale of the Tiber," where rise

> Rome's seven hills o'er Ruin's hearth,
> The mimic Pleiades of earth;

The story is quite Italian thus: Florence loves the young Count Leon Gudoni in opposition to her father Ugo's desire, who commands her to wed Leonardo. Leon is going to Sicily for a short time, and pays a stolen visit to Florence, when a renewal of their vows is interrupted by the sound of armed men. The lovers part.

> "Flung back her long, rich, raven hair,
> Pale as a statue of despair—
> Her small hands clasped, her lips apart,
> The maiden lists her lover dart
> Along the silent corridor."

Leon barely escaped the rage of the father, who orders his daughter to prepare to wed Leonardo that night. She calms the father by complying with his wishes, after which she despatches her page to kill Leonardo, as he retires from a visit of betrothal. The page fulfils his errand with a stiletto given to him by the victim. Florence proceeds with her toilette, and is ready for her future lord, when

> "'Ho! murder! murder!' through the castle
> Bursts from the lips of slave and vassal—
> 'Blood' rings along the corridor—
> Old Ugo staggers through the door,
> His white hair bristling like the frost
> That clings around the Boreal pole—
> Ho! Florence! Bridesmaids! we are lost!
> Say mass for Leonardo's soul!"

Meanwhile Leon, forgetful of the dangers he had past, or warned by them, or being, in modern and unpoetic parlance, a scoundrel, gets married to a fair maid of Sicily and returns; when his father gives a splendid feast, to which Ugo and the forsaken Florence are invited. After her long agony had succumbed to her Italian blood, she prepares for the feast:

> "Before her mirror mute she stands,
> Twirling the note in her white hands,
> 'Till every fiery word she mars—
> Her black eyes gleam like two fixed stars,
> That through the tempest of the night
> Flash out with white, intenser light—
> And all her mien a hell bespeaks
> That vent in desperate action seeks."

She does not betray any emotion at the ball; but on the contrary disarms all unpleasant thoughts which might force themselves into Leon's mind; and while—

> "——— with his joined her fair hand > Within the bounding Saraband," she gives him a note. Leon fulfills his mission of rascality, attends at her chamber, where—

> "——— o'er departed, hallowed years
> Both mingled silently their tears," and partook of what she gave as wine, but which the following passage explains was not the "liquor of life:"—

> "And pale and corpse-like there they stood
> As held by some unhallowed spell,
> 'Till to their hearts flowed back the blood,—
> Then shrieking on the floor they fell.
> * * * * * *
> Then rose and met their eyes of fire,
> With horrid scream, and visage dire,
> Like two fierce demons on their flight
> That met along the realms of night.
> * * * * * *
> Each bent on each a hideous gaze,
> 'Till from their frozen, ghastly eyes,
> The parting soul withdrew its rays,
> To wing its flight to other skies.
> And there, when morning's limpid light
> Broke through the damask curtains bright,
> They sat all cold, and stark, and still,
> In every vein death's icy chill—
> The frightful wrecks of mutual ill."

Such is the story, which in general is told with great grace and fervor. Some of the author's scenic passages are very fine: one especially opening the fourth Canto, descriptive of the bank of the Tiber, which our space forbids us to re-produce.

In our desire to allow Mrs. Lewis to speak for herself, we must pass over with no more than mere mention, many admirably interesting passages from "Zenel," in the same metre as "Florence," and "Melpomene," a monody on the death of Miss Landon, written in the Spenserian stanza, over which in this poem, as well as in the "Lament of La Vega," the author shows a fine, free power. We must reluctantly hurry over these and others to make room for a specimen in another style, from what we think the best poem in the book—"The Last Hour of Sappho."

> "High on Leucadia's famed and jutting rock,
> Whose rugged base returned with scorn the shock
> Of ocean, softly veiled in evening shade,
> Leant Lesbian Sappho all in white arrayed:
> Back from her brow her sable tresses flung,
> In melancholy showers around her hung,
> Down to the rock, and there besprent with dew,
> Lay throbbing in the briny breeze that blew
> Up from the sea."

She bewails Phaon's inconstancy.

> "'Awake my spirit! nor within me die!
> Strike on the key-note of thine agony;
> Ring out one anthem more! one sad farewell!
> To love and life! Oh breathe in it thy knell!
> Thy requiem!—a dagger make each tone,
> To pierce false Phaon's heart when I am gone!'
> She said; then swept its straining cords—but fleet
> As struck, her lute fell shattered at her feet.
> She gazed upon it as it quivering lay,
> And said—'thus have life, hope, love passed away.'"
> * * * * * * *
> "'And now, to thee, thou wild and haughty Sea!
> Terrific emblem of futurity!
> That in thy restless might dost round me roll,
> And chafe thyself like my own troubled soul;
> Upon whose fickle bosom none can trace,
> The pathways of the dead unto their place
> Of endless rest; from chilling storms of life,
> From my own heart's corroding fires and strife,
> From pangs that have no antidote but death,
> I come to seek for peace, thy waves beneath.'
> Ope now thy breast, and hide for ever there
> My fading form—my fondness and despair!'
> She said, then drew her snowy vesture close,
> And calmy as reclining to repose
> At eventide, from that Leucadian height,
> Headlong descended to eternal night,
> On sea-weed beds to rest in slumber sweet, [sheet!"
> The boundless main her tomb, the waves her winding

Even the casual reader must accord due homage to the force, expressiveness and poetic feeling at Mrs. Lewis's command. In her "Child of the Sea," and "Sonnets," the possessor of this volume will find many things to stir the heart and seduce the fancy. Here are a string of beauties:—

> "The violets lifting up their azure eyes
> Like timid virgins."

Speaking of the possibility of Beauty's smiles making fair the slumbers of Zamen, she says:

> "Ah no! it only shows the ruin there,
> Like sunshine falling on a sepulchre."

And here—tears,

> "——— standing on her cheeks as on white flowers,
> The clear drops linger after vernal showers."

A ship in a storm,

> "——— Now on the mountain wave she rides—
> Then down into the yawning chasm glides—
> Then like a curbless steed stands head in air,
> Shaking from her the pallid mariner."

Gliding from the land,

> "Fresh blows the breeze, and flaps the buoyant sail,
> Like a glad falcon loosened on the gale."

And again the ship—

> "Like a swift steed that dashes on his way,
> And from his panting sides flings back the foaming spray.

Of love—

> My love was born full-statured. . . .
> As sprung Minerva from the brow of Jove;
> A beam launched into immortality.

What a natural beauty is this—

> "I cannot tell nor sing the bliss of loving,
> It is a joy to think of——"

Canova's Hebe is apostrophized as a

> "Stray spark from Eden, ere the serpent came
> And fastened on the human heart his tooth."

Poetry is characterized as

> "The High-priest of the heart, that soothing e'er
> To its confessions lend'st a willing ear."

These extracts exhibit Mrs. Lewis's characteristics better than any mere critical index could.

CURRER LYLE; or, The Stage in Romance and the Stage in Reality. By LOUISE REEDER. E. D. Long.

We finished this work in two sittings, and found it worth the time we devoted to its pages. There is a peculiarity about its style which pleases, and in many instances the earnestness of its manner bears the impress of reality.

The most prominent character, with the exception of the heroine, is that of her mother, whose neglect of all that should be most dear to woman, her household, forms the basis of the misfortune and wretchedness entailed upon those connected with her.

The view of the stage given by Miss Reeder, might well deter many an aspirant eager to personify Juliet to some sweet Romeo. But as in every profession, there is a vast difference in the manner one enters it. No matter what may be your talent, if you have no influential hand to uphold you, long and weary will be your path; unless some happy, or it may be unhappy, occurrence leads you forth from the million, and raises you conspicuously before the public gaze: then, if your talent is equal to curiosity, success is sure to follow.

There is no doubt, however, but the trials of the stage, as here depicted, are feeble in comparison to those undergone by many in that arduous profession. Still, to the uninitiated, we think the object of the author will be accomplished. Miss Reeder labors to divest the stage of its tinsel and gaud, and place it in its true colors before the young and inexperienced aspirant for Dramatic fame. If she but convince them that the theatre is not a place of enchantment, but a mimic world of busy action, where all is real and earnest, and that the only laurels they may hope to win must be gathered from the fields of mental labor, she shall, to use her own words, "be more than re-paid." This, our author's first book, we believe, will recommend her favorably for a future acquaintance.

Mr. Frederick S. Cozzen's lecture on Wit and Humor, before the Mercantile Library Association, was tolerably well attended notwithstanding the bad weather. The critic of the Daily Times gives a kind notice of the performance, which no doubt was well deserved. Mankind, said Mr. Cozzens, will amuse itself, however customs alter, and thus wit is older than language or the religion which we profess. Revolutions may snap the sceptre and pollute the ermine, but the laugh of Harlequin remains potent forever. Dryden had defined wit as allied nearly to madness. Locke married it to great ideas, felicitously expressed; but as a system of astronomy would be imperfect which made no allowance for comets, when suddenly a comet would come along and upset the whole theory, so any rules defining wit and humor, would be overthrown when a comet of a wit or a humorist came along and broke through all rules by his unlicensed originality. But the difference between wit and humor was immense. Humor could be united with exquisite pathos, but in no case could wit be pathetic. Running through the great line of wits, from Rabelais to Swift, and from the mighty Dean of St. Patrick to Sydney Smith, the Dean of Westminster, and coming even to Dickens and Thackeray, Mr. Cozzens, while revelling in the genius of either, had more faith in the "great spectacled eyes," than for the strutting figure and preposterous vest that still survived as a dim tradition of the great Boz Ball. The vices of men, the lecturer maintained, were more easily dispelled by humor than by satire, and he often thought that a satirist was only a rogue in armor, while a buffoon not seldom proved a philosopher in disguise.

"The Loved and the Lost," is the title of a neat volume devoted to memories which are dear to all of us—memories of those who have departed from amidst the scenes made lovely or famous by their genius and affection. Tennyson well says—

> "Better to have loved and lost
> Than never to have loved at all."

The volume contains five descriptions of Cypress Hill's Cemetery, on Long Island; Pere la Chaise, in Paris, and other notable "places of the dead," besides admirable selections from eligiac poems and orations on eminent persons. We may probably refer to the work again. The idea of the work is one which will be appreciated by many families. It is, we perceive, copyrighted by Mr. D. J. Twohig.

MAGAZINES FOR FEBRUARY.

Snowed In—Besieged by the storm, Mrs. Stephens, our Florence Nightingale—"Knickerbocker" portraits—"Putnam" on Southern Literature—Grayson's poetry—"Harper"—"United States Magazine" and Jack Downing—"Household Words."

The pleasant monthlies are with us, and help materially to inspire us with a scorn of the snow, frost, sleet and storm, which have hemmed us in our sanctuary by the hearth-side, as the Costa Ricans hemmed in General Henningsen and his gallant band in the church of Guadalupe at Granada. Books are our battalions, and with them by us we have as great a contempt for snows and storms as Henningsen had for the distracted powers which surrounded him. Mrs. Stephens is our literary Florence Nightingale or Mrs. Bingham. She succors us with good womanly attentions. The Kniekerbocker cracks jokes around our camp-fire with all the flippant ferocity of a confirmed New-

*Mr. Clipper had a tender soul, and poured constant libations to the dead.

Yorker. Putnam, by his very grumbling at young heroes from other States—Southern, for instance—only shows how eager he is to rival them in the great fight. Harper, with his stories and reminiscences of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, talks away, now seriously, now gaily, and contributes, in his great variety, to almost make us forget we are beleaguered. The United States Magazine is in itself an arsenal, a contemplation of which is cheering to one besieged by a grim January. And Household Words even, we lay violent hands on, as Gen. Henningsen would grasp the foreign element, which, cautiously enough but surely, is aiding and sustaining his enemies. Even if our siege is a twenty-day one, with such various elements of strength and heartiness about us, we can fearlessly stand it, and look at the snowy intrenchments which block us in, with feelings less sorrowful than Hamlet when he philosophized about the possibility of something thawing and resolving itself into dew.

Let us, if we can, amid their various tones, catch the leading points by which these friends of ours are claiming attention, interesting the various groups of which they are the respective oracles, and cheering the momentous solitude by which we are surrounded.

Mrs. Stephen's New Monthly is, as a woman should be, elegant and neat in appearance, pleasant in temper, gay without being boisterous, beautiful without being proud, and eloquent without being oratorical. It is really good. The new story, "West Point," we have not yet read, but it is so recommended to us, that we shall attack it when there is enough out for a single reading. The continuation of "Lost Jewels" sustains the praise bestowed upon previous chapters. The "Things we talk about," are more than usually varied, and a little poem entitled "Does my Willie think of me," by Mary Kyle Dallas, deserves favor. Bulwer's (not equal to Clarence Mangan's) translation of Schiller's "Lay of the Bell," is reproduced with some dainty and delicate illustrations.

The Knickerbocker opens with portraits of a very German-headed gentleman and a very Broadwayish ivory-headed cane, both belonging, we perceive, to Mr. Charles G. Leland, the exceedingly entertaining author of "Meister Karl's Sketch-Book," and the "Observations of Mace Sloper, Esq.," now being published in Old Knick. Judge of the entertainment of this number, when "previous" to the "Editor's Table" there are some nineteen contributions and seven literary notices, making twenty-six in all, or not quite up to the rate of one cent an article, the entire—from the old vignette in front to the illustrated advertisement of the child's perambulator on the back cover—going for a quarter—not Spanish.

For many reason Putnam will be read and talked of this month—for its interesting paper on Myles Standish, one of the pilgrim fathers and a notable military worthy of old New England—for its article on George Sand, and among the friends of two or three young poets for the justly kind notices of their works; but chiefly will it be talked of for its article on "Southern Literature;" caricaturing the labors of the Southern Convention which lately deliberated at Savannah. The writer is in a strained titter from the commencement of the article until near the close, where he has the misfortune, for himself, to quote some admirable passages of poetry from a work lately published by a Southern author, Mr. William J. Grayson, which are unanswerable, and turn the laugh against the very tenor of the Putnamite article. The writer sneers at the idea of creating a Southern literature, not in the broad sense, as one would laugh at the idea of a Southern Confederacy; not on Union grounds, but for the sake of sneering; while the extracts from Mr. Grayson's book are far superior to the poetry in the Magazine this month, and every month, with a very few exceptions. There is point, purpose and finish exhibited in it. Neither dreamy moonshine nor wide-awake adaptations of every living English poet and rhymer from Tennyson to Mackay characterise the quotations from Mr. Grayson. They are vigorous, antithetical, and moulded after the best models of English verse. The article in Putnam is worth reading. It shows clearly how a writer may lose his temper and his judgment through thinking he is an exceedingly funny fellow; and reminds us of the lugubrious individual in the farce of Away with Melancholy, whose wretchedness is the more obtrusive from the fact of his constantly informing us he is such "a jawl-ly fellow." The short article entitled "A National Drama," is a graceful index to the locale of the most notable works of the greatest dramatists of all countries, showing how few were concocted on national themes pertaining to the countries or times of the writers. The editorial notes are fresh.

Harper has an article which in these days of Arctic-mania will meet an attentive perusal. It gives an account of Capt. Sir Robert McClure's voyage and sufferings in search of Franklin, and his Discovery of the North-west passage. "Sketches of Old Thebes" and the Review of Andersson's account of his four years' explorations in South-western Africa agreeably follow up previous papers on travels and travellers published in this magazine. A short paper on "Celebrated Wines" is well flavored, and the two or three tales which fill up the chinks are readable.

The United States Magazine continues its illustrative articles on the City of Washington. We have the second part of the "Smithsonian Institute." The reviews of Peter Parley's "Recollections" and Mrs. Browning's "Aurora Leigh," and the papers on "Charlotte Corday" and "André Chenier" are deeply interesting. Also, we must recommend to every reader of Col. Benton's ponderous "Thirty Years in the Senate," a perusal of the original Major Jack Downing's "Out of the Senate" for the same period.

The Editor's Notes are good, and the wood-cuts rival those of the other Illustrated Monthlies.

Household Words concludes its fourteenth volume with this issue. It is, as usual, full of very pleasant tales and sketches, and some crisp short essays of a sententious and serio-comic nature.

Whoever doubts that this is the age of cheap literature, and is anxious to judge it is, should purchase all the magazines.

Literary and Artistic News.

A Vermont genius, by name Mead, 19 years of age, has been astonishing the natives near the asylum, Brattleboro, Vt. During the night before Christmas, by the light of a lantern, young Mead constructed of blocks of frozen snow, on which water had been poured, a statue which genius alone could form or conceive, The figure is said to represent a beautifully sculptured figure of the Goddess of Fame, rather larger than life size. The design indicates decided genius. Fame has just recorded the past year's history. Her right hand, still grasping the pen, has fallen carelessly to her side, while her left hand, holding the tablet, rests upon her knee; her attention for the moment being engrossed with passing and changing objects yet to be recorded. Close scrutiny is necessary to detect the fact that the whole figure is made of snow and ice, while the tablet and pen are but pieces of an old cigar box. This curiosity is reported to have attracted a number of visitors.

In the way of Ecclesiastical art, we learn that the design for the marble altar about to be executed by Mr. Kirwan, of Dublin, for the Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, P. P., of Dungloe, county Donegal, is exceedingly beautiful. It is simple gothic, and will form an interesting combination of Irish and Italian marbles. The three panels in the front, and two end panels will be of red variegated marble, from Cork; the frieze of the altar, the facial of the candle branches, and some other portions of the work, will be of rich green marble, from Connemara; the door and panels of the tabernacle of Sienna marble; the copula of the tabernacle of white marble; and the remainder of the work of Italian veined marble. In the centre panel of the altar a lamb will be sculptured in relief, in white marble, lying dead on a small truncated column of green marble. The graceful outline, the correctness of the proportions, and the sweet combination of colors will render the work one of extreme beauty.

The whole number of newspapapers published within the United States and territories is 3634. Of these there is published in Alabama, 83; Arkansas, 22; California, 87; Connecticut, 42; Delaware, 9; District of Columbia, 17; Florida, 17; Georgia, 73; Illinois, 221; Indiana, 242; Indian Territory, 1; Kansas, 2; Kentucky, 183; Maine, 65; Maryland, 65; Massachusetts, 219; Michigan, 178; Nebraska, 4; New-Hampshire, 43; New-Jersey, 77; New-York, 613; North Carolina, 85; Ohio, 382; Oregon, 8; Pennsylvania, 419; Rhode Island, 20; South Carolina, 53; Tennessee, 148; Utah, 1; Vermont, 33; Virginia, 137; Wisconsin 88.

At a sale of paintings at Paris lately, a portrait of "Angelica Kauffman," by Reynolds, was sold for £54 to Lord Holland, and an "Interior of a Guard-house," by Schalken, for £124, to Baron Rothschild. At the same sale, a small landscape, by Huysmann, of Malines, went for £16; an "Entry to a Public-house," by Karl Dujardin, for £16; "Two Horses," by Gericault, for £21; a "Portrait of Fontenelle," by Tourniers, for £18; and "A Lady of the Court of Louis XV.," by Nattier, for £19.

A correspondent of the New-York Evening Post says that Hon. Wm. C. Rives has undertaken to edit the Madison papers, or such of them as are in possession of Congress, and have not been stolen. Among them is a letter addressed by Madison to his countrymen, with the request that it should not be opened until after his death. It is a great "Union" letter. Mr. Rives is now actively engaged in the work.

Dr. Francis Lieber has retired from his professorship of History and Political Economy in the College of South Carolina, a station which he has occupied for twenty years. He will in future reside in the North.

Designs for a church are invited from architects of all countries, by members of the Catholic Parish of the City of Berne. The cost is to be about £6,000. The first prize will be £60, and 4 medals, gold and silver, are also offered.

Queen Victoria has commanded Mr. Simpson, the artist who has so successfully depicted the war in the Crimea, to paint a picture for the royal gallery of the scene on the deck of the Resolute when Captain Hartstein presented the ship to her Majesty, in the name of his government and people. The picture will be engraved and published here by Colnaghi.

The committee of the North London, or University College Hospital, at their meeting on Thursday, received notice of a legacy to the Hospital of five thousand pounds, free of duty, bequeathed by the late John Kenyon, Esq., of Devonshire-place.

Mrs. Stowe's visit to England in order to secure the copyright of "Dred," in this country and the colonies, was unsuccessful—for a reprint has been issued in Canada from the American edition—not the English.

There is an oyster-shell, it is said, owned by the University of Leyden, which weighs one hundred and eighty pounds. The oyster was swallowed whole by a Dutch girl.

Dr. Livingston, the African traveller, is about to be presented with a public testimonial, at the Egyptian Hall, London, the Lord Mayor presiding.

MILITARY NEWS.

Tuesday, 13th January, being the anniversary of the Meagher Guards, the Company mustered at 9 o'clock A. M., at the Military Hall, in good force, under command of First Lieutenant Edward Daly.

In pursuance of a previous notice and invitation, they were met on the parade by Col. James Simons, of the First Artillery, and his Staff, to whom the company had indicated their intention to present a testimonial of their regard and esteem.

Accordingly, the Company having been drawn up in line, and the proper military salutes having been executed, Lieutenant Parker of the Guards, accompanied by Lieutenant Daly, addressed Col. Simons as follows:

Col. James Simons.—Hon. Sir: We, the Meagher Guard, approach you, on this occasion, with profound respect and heartfelt gratitude, to offer for your acceptance a small token of our esteem.

It is now three years since we received at your hands a proof of that kindness and interest in our welfare, which has never since deserted us.

We can readily recall the occasion on which you sheltered our young corps under the wings of your command, until the opportunity occurred which gave us our present position in the Rifle Battalion.

Though so long a period has elapsed without making our gratitude manifest, or giving a proof of the high esteem in which we hold you, both as an efficient officer and accomplished gentleman, still, Hon. Sir, we can assure you that the kind and disinterested services rendered us by you, shall never be forgotten.

Honorable Sir, you will please then accept this cane in testimony of our undying regard, with the assurance that as long as our Corps exists, our sentiments toward you shall remain unchanged.

Lieut. Parker then presented to Col. Simons a superb and massive gold-headed Cane, with the following inscription engraved thereon:

To
Col. James Simons,
By the Meagher Guards,
First Battalion Rifles, S. C. M.

On receiving the Cane from Lieut. Parker, Col. Simons replied as follows:

Lieutenant and Comrades: It is with sentiments of unalloyed satisfaction that I receive at your hands this elegant testimonial of your kindness and esteem. The occasion is as unexpected as I am sure your gift is unmerited. In rendering you the slight service to which reference has been so flatteringly made, and which seems so favorably to have impressed your Corps, I was actuated only by those sentiments of public spirit and fraternity, to which as fellow citizens and brethren in arms, you were altogether entitled; and I am sincerely gratified that you should so much appreciate it. Permit me to say, that although you are no longer under the wings of my command, you carry with you my regard and esteem, and I trust that you may go on, prospering and to prosper; that your ranks may be increased by numbers, and perfected in discipline, and that should the country of your adoption ever need your services on the field of battle, your valor and spirit will entitle you to a full share of her glory and renown.

The Cane has been left at the store of Mr. J. E. Spear, in King street, where it can be seen for a few days.

The company then proceeded to Magnolia, where, after a spirited contest in target practice, the prizes were awarded in the following manner, by Lieutenant Daly, with a neat and appropriate speech:

Private Henry McCarroll, best average shot, a silver cup; Sergeant J. E. Murphy, best single shot, a plume; Private John Birmingham, a silver service.

The contest for the third prize exceeded in interest and excitement any thing we have ever before witnessed. On account of the scattered state of the target, it was decided by the officers that the contestants should run a race of 600 yards. An umpire being appointed, the line formed and signal given by the drummer, the contestants had a fair start, and the race was won by Private John Birmingham.

The Guard then partook of a sumptuous dinner, and after the cloth was removed there were many patriotic sentiments given, of which we were not fortunate enough to procure a list.

THE CABINET—PAST AND PRESENT.

BY COL. J. F. H. CLAIRBORNE.

From the New-Orleans Delta.

The speculation in regard to the incoming Cabinet may be unprofitable, it certainly is not unpleasant. It gives every one an opportunity to have "his say," or his fling at this or that man.

The importance attached to the Cabinet is very much exaggerated. Those who are curious as to the origin of the departments may refer to Laws of the U.S., Vol. I. Bioren and Duane's edition. In England the Cabinet is everything, and the crown a symbol, an effigy. In this country, with a great man for Chief Magistrate, Cabinets are mere conveniences for administration.

Gen. Washington was a safe prudent man, and with Jefferson, Hamilton, Pickering, Wilcott and Knox, in his Cabinet—in spite of the jealousy and counter intrigues of the two first—the early and trying stages of a new government were passed in safety.

John Adams was a self-willed, crotchety, suspicious, impulsive, egotistical and ambitious man, but full of the stuff of which patrots are made. He was "never," as he said himself in 1778, "much of a John Bull. I was John Yankee, and as such I shall live and die." This bold, high-spirited, but pig-headed man, got on badly with his Cabinet. His jealousy of Hamilton made him distrustful of every one about him.

Thomas Jefferson threw his Cabinet into deep shadow. There were very able men in it, but his views, not theirs, were stamped upon the Administration.

James Madison was a closet statesman—a philosopher—pure, but timid to infirmity—ignorant of men—unsuspicious and confiding. He required bold and energetic advisers to counteract his idiosyncratic tendency to hesitate. For the most part his ministers were, in this respect, as deficient as himself, and hence the blunders that occurred during his administration, both in our financial policy and in the war with Great Britain.

President Monroe was a dull, weak man—singularly so; a man of phraseology and ceremonial: elevated by the traditional ascendancy of Virginia, and a combination of factions comprising the highest talent of the nation, all jealous of each other, but willing to put him into power as one easily moulded to their own personal views and aspirations. The consequence of this state of things was a Cabinet of matchless ability. John Quincy Adams, Wm. H. Crawford, John C. Calhoun, William Wirt, were members of it—all struggling for the Presidency. There was but one point in which those distinguished men resembled each other—insatiable ambition. In every thing else—figure, countenance, manners, temperament, opinions, tastes,—they differed.

The first was low, swart, cold and repulsive, irritable and eccentric; more deeply read than his father, yet knowing even less of mankind. A splendid writer, a master of rhetoric, defiant in his opinions, easily inflamed, brave to martyrdom, yet so frigid, formal and saturnine that few could approach, and none could love him. His political opinions were erratic and variable, and were, all his life, controlled, more or less, by personal resentments. His first great apostacy may be traced to this source, and to the same feeling may be justly attributed the war that he waged against domestic servitude in his latter days—a war utterly at variance with his recorded and deliberate opinions, when Secretary of State.

Mr, Crawford was a man of collossal stature, and of massive intellect. In astronomy or mathematics he would have been pre-eminent. No man in this or any other country had a more thorough and orthodox knowledge of political economy, and especially finance. He spoke with great cogency, and wielded a luminous pen. A Virginian by birth and education. He carried the political opinion of the renowned commonwealth into Georgia, and, until he was stricken down by paralysis on the threshold of the Presidency, she never wavered from the Jeffersonian faith. Her subsequent career has been one of inconsistency and error, until lately she has taken her stand as the empire state of Democracy—great in her resources, great in her moral and physical development, great in the ability and reputation of her sons.

The third on this list—the proud and sensitive Carolinian—was tall, but not stately; rather with the slight stoop of a student than the presence of a soldier with strongly-lined intellectual features, and manners simple and winning as a child's. The young loved him most, for his noble heart and generous affections were fenced by no conventionalities, but were freely and often injudiciously bestowed. Few public men have suffered more from ill-timed confidences, or paid, without flinching, heavier penalties for the indiscretion of others. A man of purer sentiments—of simpler habits, or more irreproachable morals never lived. The atmosphere of the metropolis, its sirens and seductions, had for him no taint. Calumny, itself never imputed to him, during a long lifetime of temptation, a single lapse from virtue. Yet he viewed with no ascetic eye the infirmities of others, and never pursued error as a crime. His most intimate friend—the late Warren R. Davis—one of the most gifted men of his day—was proverbial for his frailties and indiscretions. Mr. Calhoun was fixed, rigid and immovable in his notions of right and wrong. He early adopted certain great principles for the regulation of his political conduct, but, with singular blindness, he constantly wandered from them. His intellectual vision, miraculously acute in all other respects, was notoriously obtuse when studying himself. To the last hour of his life he was persuaded that his political career had been uniform and inflexible, when to every one else his inconsistencies were transparent. He was less deeply read than Mr. Adams; he knew less of mankind than Mr. Crawford; nothing of the management or discipline of party. But he had more intellect—more concentrativeness—more enthusiasm—a higher and a holier appreciation of truth, than either of them, or any other statesman our country has produced.

Mr. Wirt, the Attorney General, was of large stature and heavy cast of features—with little, at that period, to indicate the vivid imagination that colored and exaggerated his early productions. He was either too florid or too jejune, always too elaborate. He was an excellent man; a little too saintly, perhaps, in after life, in atonement for early indiscretions, as the feudal barons founded monasteries in compensation for their crimes; a delightful companion—very susceptible of flattery—very didactic—very credulous and very ambitious, as his acceptance of the Anti-Masonic nomination for the Presidency, at an advanced period of his life, demonstrates—a nomination, a truly great man would have scorned to accept, even though certain of success; and which ended—as it deserved to do—in disgraceful abortion—a complete eclipse of Mr. Wirt's political sun, and he soon died of vexation and disappointment.

This Cabinet, it may readily be inferred, was the Government They made of Mr. Monroe a mere pageant. He traveled from city to city, and from State to State, while his ministers conducted affairs. In this respect they anglicised our Government, for the time being. The splendid diplomatic correspondence of Mr. Adams, elaborate, highly finished, and full of national spirit; the luminous treasury reports of Mr. Crawford; and the powerful impetus given to fortifications, internal improvements and manufactures by Mr. Calhoun, withdrew public attention entirely from President Monroe. The Cabinet was everything. The game was for the Presidency, and each of the triumvirate played a bold hand in it. Mr. Calhoun, the boldest and most hazardous, full of promise for himself, but prolific of evil to the Republic. His policy favored centralism. He pushed the constructive powers of the Government to the farthest boundary, but lived to atone for the fundamental error by consecrating his intellect, in its meridian glory, and his untiring energies, even to the closing scene, to the defense of State Rights.

The Cabinet of John Quincy Adams was only remarkable because Mr. Clay conducted the Department of State. Mr. Adams, avowing from the first his intention to stand for a second term, of course shaped the policy of the administration sometimes, no doubt, against the advice of his illustrious premier; and shaped it to his own defeat and the exclusion of Mr. Clay. Had their positions been reversed; had Mr. Clay been the Chief Magistrate, and Mr. Adams the Minister, Gen. Jackson, in all probability, would never have been elected. Our country at this moment might occupy a very different attitude. What was called the "American System"—the rapid development of home manufactures, by a schedule of exorbitant and, in some instances, prohibiting duties, concentrating vast capital in few hands; National banking, in close connection with the Federal treasury; the Federal Government penetrating the States, and controlling their legislatures and popular suffrage, by Internal Improvements, involving large outlays of public money; and a close-fisted policy in relation to the public lands, holding them at fixed prices, refusing the right of pre-emption, and impeding, as much as possible the flow of immigration from the manufacturing to the agricultural States. This vast machinery would, doubtless, have been engrafted upon the national policy, had the chief magistrate been a really great man, of popular attributes, like Mr. Clay, instead of a political enthusiast who, obtinate as his distinguished sire, never knew when to retreat, and regarded Fabius as a historical coward. Under this policy we should have grown compact, formidable, very aristocratic, very English. The four great events most memorable in our annals since the Revolution—the separation of bank and State—the metallic currency—the annexation of Texas and the conquest of California—would yet have been in the womb of time. A scholar and not a statesman—a creature of passion, not of purpose—a man of intense and unquenchable ambition, who nevertheless lived in an atmosphere of ice—consumed by his own fire, but chilling and repelling sympathy and confidence—was Chief, and the Government, by popular forms but by what was, morally, a revolution, passed into the hands of the Democracy. A democracy, not contingent upon the mere triumph of its leader, or the duration of his official term, but, to all intents and purposes, a democracy under every administration, and by whatever name the prevailing party happens to be called.

Andrew Jackson, though he knew little of books, still less of national law, and nothing of diplomacy, had less need for a Cabinet than any of his predecessors. Chiefs of Bureau, or a few competent clerks, would have been enough for him. Nature stamped him GREAT, and the most sagacious in his councils, to pass current, had to be recoined from the same die. A transfusion of ideas flowed from him to them. He astounded experienced politicians and jurists, by his intuitive perception, and masculine grasp of the most complicated subjects. He converted men to his views as much by this great faculty as by an indomitant will. The timid felt his inspiration, and the powerful and factious were subdued by a sublime constancy very different from the insane obstinacy of the Adamses, or the dogged courage of Gen. Taylor. He, however, surrounded himself with able men, but he moved them about like figures on a chess board, transferring them to other spheres of duty, or kicking them, unceremoniously, overboard, to rise no more. Van Buren, Forsyth, Cass, Livingston, Berrien, McLane, Taney, Barry, Duane, Woodbury, Eaton, Dickerson, Ingham, Branch and Butler, were in his Cabinet at different periods.

Mr. Van Buren had played a masterly role in the political drama. Regarding politics as a game, his great forte was in stocking the cards. His peculiar trait was caution, properly termed non-committalism. It was something more comprehensive—forecaste and sagacity. Under the mask of great moderation, and with something of the air of a petit maitre, there lurked a vaulting ambition. His faculty for governing men, his untiring energy and imperturbable coolness enabled him to achieve great results, without apparent effort. Thus this accomplished tactician, while Adonising before his looking glass,* and toying with the square-rigged belles of Albany, or the more voluptuous beauties of Washington, was dethroning Dewitt Clinton, checkmating Clay, Webster and Calhoun, and scattering roses in his pathway to the Presidency. When news of the advance of Napoleon upon Waterloo reached the Duke of Wellington, he was in the ball room of the Duchess of Richmond, at Brussels, and with undisturbed composure escorted her grace to supper. Thus, while the great tribune of the Senate was hurling his thunderbolts at Vice President Van Buren, threatening his political fortunes with every blow, that gentleman sat with a quiet smile upon his face, and with inimitable sang froid sent his snuff box to Mr. Clay the moment he resumed his seat! The good humor of the Senate was restored, and the great orator himself perceived that his mighty effort had been fruitless. The little magician was "up to snuff."

The late John Forsyth was one of the most accomplished men of his times. As an impromptu debater, to bring on an action or to cover a retreat, he never had his superior. He was acute, witty, full of resources and ever prompt—impetuous as Murat in a charge, adroit as Soult when out-flanked and out-numbered. He was haughty in the presence of enemies, affable and winning among friends. His manners were courtly and diplomatic. In the times of Louis XIV., he would have rivaled the most celebrated courtiers; under the dynasty of Napoleon he would have won the baton of France. He never failed to command the confidence of his party; he never feared any odds arrayed against it, and at one crisis was almost its sole support in the Senate against the most brilliant and formidable opposition ever organized against an administration. With the ladies he was irresistible. During his diplomatic residence in Spain the demand for duenna's could scarcely be supplied, and even royalty smiled more indulgently than he wished. This gallant and high-spirited gentleman died suddenly in the enjoyment of great popularity.

Gen. Cass I have, on a former occasion, elaborately sketched. His massive intellect, his highly cultivated tastes; his consistent political career; the landmarks he has left on our foreign and domestic policy—are all matters of history. He was a prominent feature of the Jackson administration, and by a single but masterly article in the North American Review, brought to a satisfactory conclusion the Indian Question, the great party and moral excitement of that period—an excitement which, up to the appearance of that article, had marshaled the press and pulpit of the North, and much of the conscience of the South, against the Administration. Subsequently he went to France, and the influence he exerted there upon momentous issues, has never been exceeded in the history of diplomacy. His career thenceforth is a household word to the nation.

Mr. Berrien and Mr. Livingston were both very eminent at the bar. The one was an able lawyer, merely; the latter a great jurist. The one had the sharpness, the plausibility, and the acute, but contracted grasp of the technical attorney; the other was comprehensive, eloquent, and learned. Mr. Berrien could split hairs like Mr. Tazewell; Livingston grappled with generalities like Lord Brougham. The mind of one resembles a dictionary; the other a code. Berrien was a conscientious man, who always meant to do right, but by an unfortunate process of ratiocination usually got wrong. Livingston was unscrupulous, but from policy generally did what his discriminating judgment decided would be right. He was courtly and insincere, prone to intrigue, with no fixed principles, political or moral; and the stain of official defalcation will ever shadow the lustre of his fame.

Both Mr. McLane and Mr. Taney had belonged to the ancient Federal party, but since its extinction had acted with the Democracy. In one respect their fortunes were not the same. The former, at every period of his career, has been singularly exempt from political vituperation, while the latter, before he became Chief Justice, literally walked through the fiery furnace—an ordeal that he sustained with unshaken equanimity.

Mr. Woodbury shared the opprobium that was cast upon Mr. Taney. Every form of detraction was exhausted upon him. He was a man of strong sense and clear perceptions, but an awkward and involved style by no means expressed the impressions of his mind. He thus, while in the treasury, had the reputation of being obtuse; but when he resumed his place in the Senate, and had the opportunity of explaining his reports, and vindicating the financial policy inaugurated by Gen. Jackson, his reputation rose to its proper level. Unhappily, in the full vigor of a well preserved life, he died, with his hand upon the Presidency. His mansion at Washington was noted for its liberal and elegant hospitality—always crowded by the young and gifted—and adorned by a household of incomparable grace and beauty.

Of the other members of this Cabinet, Mr. Dickerson was a sensible and amiable man, but too infirm for his place. Mr. Barry was a man of talent—an orator cultured in the great controversy of the old and new Court parties of Kentucky. His voice, his manner, and declamation were of the school of Patrick Henry, but he was utterly unfit for the Post Office Department. Mr. Duane was fantastic and feeble, though he fancied himself profound. Mr. Ingham was stolid and treacherous; Mr. Branch honest but impracticable; and Major Eaton—lately dead—could not be classed above mediocrity.

Benjamin F. Butler, Attorney General and Secretary of War—a political saint—studied finance, I believe, under Jacob Barker, at Sandy Hill, and psalmody and the prayer book with Henry Ward Beecher. He never took a questionable step in politics or peculation, without finding a precedent or a text to justify it, precisely as Beecher pretends to find, in the New Testament, a warrant for Sharpe's rifles, insurrection and massacre.

Of succeeding Cabinets—of the policy likely to be pursued by the President elect—and of the duty of the country, and especially of the South, without distinction of party, in the crisis before us, I may treat in my next number.

PEARLINGTON, Miss. Jan. 1st.

* When Mr. Van Buren was elected President he sold the lease and furniture of his house, in the "Thirteen Buildings," to a distinguished Senator. With him I inspected the premises. Everything was found in perfect order, and nearly new, except the carpet before a French mirror in his dressing room—that was worn threadbare.

Mr. J. B. TULLY—well known as a public speaker of great vigor and beauty—will lecture before the citizens of New-Haven, on the 11TH INSTANT. Mr. Tully proposes to treat of the interesting and important subject of ENGLISH TYRANNY AND IRISH ENDURANCE.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. steamer ARAGO, via Southampton and Havre, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 7th day of February, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

fe7 ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Fire Department.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK FIRE DEPARTMENT.—The undersigned, on behalf of the friends of HENRY H. HOWARD, beg leave to submit to you the enclosed circular, as a specimen of the means used by the friends of Mr. ALFRED CARSON, to defeat the election of the former for Chief Engineer. It will be seen that they purport to be a Preamble and Resolutions adopted somewhere and by somebody, but where and by whom does not appear. The signers to the circular, however, have virtually endorsed them, and must therefore be held responsible for the base, nefarious, and unmittigated falsehoods which it contains. The undersigned have better opportunities than Mr. HOWARD'S enemies of knowing what means have been used to promote his election, and they unhesitatingly say that nothing has been done by the friends of Mr. HOWARD which will not challenge the severest scrutiny. They deprecate, as much as any one, the introduction of politics into the Fire Department, and the cry that the friends of Mr. HOWARD have resorted to them has only been got up by his opponents to cover their own infamy. So far as we are personally concerned, those who know us know also that, with perhaps one exception, we are politically opposed to Mr. HOWARD, and their charge therefore falls to the ground.

Mr. HOWARD is placed before the Firemen solely upon his own merits. We defy amy man to name, of his own knowledge, the first act of Mr. HOWARD which in any way reflects discredit upon him. On the contrary, his whole course since he has been before the public and the firemen, redounds to his honor, and points to him as the upright, honest and honorable man. We do not wish to decry Mr. CARSON to elevate Mr. HOWARD: we leave such tactics to the friends of the former. We simply ask firemen to judge both men by their lires and acts, and to decide accordingly whom they will have for their next Chief Engineer.

New York, Jan. 29, 1857.

MICHAEL RICHELLS, Ex-Assistant Engineer.
JOHN A. CREIGIER, Assistant ENGINEER.
NOAH L. FARNHAM, Assistant Engineer.
TIMOTHY L. WEST, Assistant Engineer.
EDWARD W. JACOBS, Assistant Engineer.
JOHN DECKER, Assistant Engineer.
JAMES F. WENMAN, Assistant Engineer.
CHAS. MCDOUGALL, Engine Co. No. 28.
JOHN S. BELCHER, Hydrant Co. No. 22.
ROBERT C. BROWN, Engine Co. No. 8.
WILLIAM A. WOODHULL, Hose Co. No. 86.
WILLIAM THOMPSON, Hose Co. No. 53.
JAMES A. CAROLIN, H. & L. Co. No. 12.
DANIEL STANBURY, Engine Co. No. 28.
WM. G. WARD, Hose Co. No. 38.
EDWARD P. MORRIS, Hose Co. No. 7.
WM. H. CHARLOCK, H. & L. Co. No. 19.
W. H. WICKMAN, H. & L. Co. No. 15.
JAMES DONOHUE, Engine Co. No. 20.
DELANCEY W. KNEVELS, Engine Co. No. 2.
S. V. W. JONES, Hose Co. No. 40.

To our Brethren of the Fire Department:

Whereas, it has become known to us, the Undersigned, that those opposed to the re-election of Mr. ALFRED CARSON to the office of Chief Engineer, are dragging political influence into the contest; and bringing them to bear to secure the votes of many of those who could not be induced by any other means than the fear of losing their daily bread, and consequent distress and privation of their families, to vote against Mr Carson.

And whereas, the undersigned, and a large majority of the New-York Fire Department, are utterly opposed to the admixture of political and other outside influences, in Fire Department affairs, therefore Resolved, That it is with feelings of the most unmitigated disgust, that we learn that Mr. Carson's opponent's are endeavoring by promising positions in the Custom-House, Navy-Yard, Post-Office, County Clerk's, Mayor's, and Tax Receiver's offices, to some; and by threatening the speedy decapitation and removal from office of others, id order to secure their votes against him at the coming election.

Resolved, That while we dprecate the idea that the Firemen can be bought or sold by any clique of political wire-pullers, we cannot but regard this attempt to do so, as being too base and despicable to emanate from any party having the true and best interests of the Department at heart.

Resolved, That while we have every confidence in his success, and in the manner in which the members of the Department will vindicate their abhorrence of political intrigue, we deem it just to our Brother Firemen to make the above exposition of the latest method used to defeat Mr. Carson.

In addition to the above it is only necessary for us (and we conceive it to be our duty) to call upon the members of the Department generally, to reflect calmly, and to use their own good judgment in voting for Chief Engineer at the coming election; and to exhort them to have mainly in view the perpetuation of our noble institution, as wholly beyond the reach, and independent of the intrigues and influence of political speculators, now being brought to bear in Fire Department affairs.

SIGNED:

PETER N. CORNELL, Assistant Engineer.
WM. T. MAWBY, Assis't Engineer.
H. P. MCGOWN, Foreman Engine Co. No. 49.
SAMUEL CHESHIRE, Foreman Engine Co. No. 7.
JAS. MILWARD, Jr., Foreman Hose Co. No. 46.
WM. E. BERRIAN, ex-Foreman H. & L. Co. No. 3.
WM. P. DANIELS, Foreman Engine Co. No. 50.
W. W. ADAMS, Assis't-Foreman Hose Co. No. 19.
JOHN K. EVANS, Foreman H. & L. Co. No. 6.
ELISHA KINGSLAND, Assis't Engineer.
G. JOSEPH RUCH, Assist't Engineer.
RICHARD JACKSON, Foreman Engine Co. No. 26.
THOMAS WILDING, Foreman H. & L. Co. No. 4.
WILLIAM C. LYONS, Foreman Engine Co. No. 5.
JAMES G. SWEENY, Foreman Hose Co. No. 28.
J. H. HOFFMAN, ex-Foreman Engine Co. No. 10.
A. O. ALLCOCK, of Hook & Ladder Co. No. 10.
AUG. HURD, ex-Foreman Hose Co. No. 28.

Ex. Com. of the Firemen's Convention

January 26, 1857.

New Advertisements

ANNUAL BALL

OF THE

Erina Society,

For the benefit of the Catholic Library Association, will be held at the City Assembly Rooms, on Wednesday evening, February 28, 1857.

HONORARY MEMBERS:

Alderman Clancy,	Patrick O'Shea, Esq.
" Healey,	Mich'l Phelan, "
Andrew Carrigan, Esq.,	J. B. Nicholson, "
Councilman T. Dunn,	Patrick McCarty, "
Nicholas Walsh, Esq.,	Bernard Maguire, "
John M'Carty, "	P. Maguire, "
Patrick Corrigan. "	James Kelly, "

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS:

H. S. Hewson,	John J. Mullen,
T. Mulcare,	D. Quinn,
James J. Carey,	W. J. Malone,
P. J. Mathews,	T. O'Brien.

W. R. ROBERTS, Pres't.
T. W. Kennedy, Sec'y. Joseph M'Guire, Treas'r.

Shelton's full band is engaged for the occasion.—Tickets, admitting a gentleman and ladies, $2 00. To be had of the above committee, and at Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier's, William st.; Dunnigan & Bros., Fulton st.; P. O'Shea, Broadway; Irish News Office, and a the door on the Ball night.

Halloway's Pills.—The mild, yet thorough operation of these pills upon the secretive and excretive organs, renders them invaluable remedies for summer complaint, colic, worms, cholera morbus, and all internal diseases of children, as well as of adults. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New-York, and 244 Strand, London; and by all druggists, at 25 c. 62 1-2 c. and $1 per box. fe7

Balls and Parties, Cold Weather, Snow and Rain. Ladies, if you wish white Satin, Kid, or Linen Gaiter Boots and Slippers for balls and parties; cloth button Boots, with flannel lining, for cold weather; soft warm Slippers for the invalid, at one dollar a pair; or India Rubber Boots and Shoes of all the various styles, suitable for this season of snow and rain, patronise J. B. MILLER & CO.,

fe7 4t 184 Canal-street

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, &c., per U. S. steamer ILLINOIS, will close at this office, on THURSDAY, the 5th day of February, at 1 o'clock, P. M. I. V. FOWLER.

Holloway's Ointment.—Safety and Certainty.—This great external remedy does not suppress information, but expels the cause of it by excretion through the pores. Hence its radical cures of salt rheum, erysipelas, ring-worm and other ERUPTIVE DISEASES. Sold at Manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London; and by all Druggists at 25c., 62 1-2c., and $1 per pot or box. fe7

Post Office Notice.—Change of Hour.—On and after Monday, February 2d, the Northern and Western Mails, via Hudson River Railroad, will close at TWO P. M fe7 I. V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

MARRIAGE BETWEEN CATHOLICS AND PROTESTANTS.

From the Vienna Correspondence of the London Times.

By the circular just addressed by the Archbishop of Vienna to the clergy of his diocese, we learn : 1. That the Archbishop is employed by the Pope to remove, " by dispensation," the prohibition of marriage between Catholic and non-Catholic Christians. 2. That the dispensation will only be granted when it appears certain that all the issue of a mixed marriage will be educated in the Catholic religion. 3. If the bridegroom, being a non-Catholic, promises to have all his children brought up in the Catholic faith, the priest will perform the marriage ceremony ; but if he refuse to give such promise, and his affianced bride persist in her resolution to enter into a matrimonial engagement with him, then the Papal brief of May 22, 1841, comes in force, and the parish priest shall receive the declaration of their resolution to marry in the presence of two witnesses, but shall carefully avoid giving to the act the appearance of an ecclesiastical ceremony."

The foregoing archiepiscopal ordinance is of extreme importance, as it shows that the concordat and Imperial patent of Oct. 8, 1856, have not rendered the union between female Catholics and conscientious male Protestants impossible.

MARRIED,

On Tuesday evening, January 13th, by the Rev. Father Quinn, of St. Peter's Church, Barclay-street, New-York city, Mr. Stephen Wm. Swift, of Philadelphia, Pa., to Miss Maria Martin, of Moira, County Antrim, Ireland.

Belfast papers please copy.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

Jan. 2, Robert Ormsby, M.D., of Castle Durrow, in the Queen's county, to Augusta Rebecca, daughter of Lewis Ormsby, of Emla House, county Roscommon.

At St. Peter's Church, John White, of Birmingham, to Maria Wood, Rathmines.

Edward Butler, to Mary Josephine, daughter of the late Francis Cruise, of Rahood, Meath.

Jan. 8, Michael M'Namara, son of John M'Namara, South-terrace, Cork, to Lucy, daughter of the late Major Gallwey, Deputy Inspector-General of Constabulary.

At Dromskin, James Alexander, son of the Rev. C. Weir, of Drumard, to Sophia Mary Anne, daughter of the late John Whaley, of Stephen's-green, in Dublin.

At Sixmile-bridge, Clare, Crofton H. Fitzgerald, son of C. Fitzgerald, of Sidmouth, Devon, to Ellen Margaret, eldest daughter of Colonel Giles Vandeleur Creagh.

At Athenry, Galway, Wm. F. Wakeman, to Frances Alice, daughter of Rev. Mark Perrin.

At Nenagh, Philip E. Magrath, to Mary Moore, daughter of Daniel Moore, Limerick.

Dec 27, at Strathallen Lodge, Isle of Man, J. Muirhead, of Laurel Bank, Glasgow, to Semia, daughter of Maj. Pollock.

At Jersey, Major J. Rose, of the Staff Depot Battalion, to Eliza Maria daughter of the late R. M. Jephson.

In London, E. H. Harrison, to Catharine Parker, daughter of J. Wharton, London.

At Guernsey, Major R. Carey, to Caroline, daughter of John Le Merchant, Guernsey.

Jan. 1, at Thursby, Carlisle, Stephen Egan, of Eyrecourt, Galway, to Anne, daughter of the Rev. J. W. Huntley.

At Knightsbridge, Alex. T. Blakely, to Harriet Katharine, widow of Captain John Henry Tonge.

In Birmingham, Thomas Roberts, of New Bond-street, London, to Rebecca Isaacs, the vocalist.

IRISH DEATHS.

Jan. 4, at D'Olier-street, Dublin, Patrick, son of P. M. M'Cullagh.

At Lower Exchange-street, Jas. Rossiter, aged 87 years.

Jan. 2, at Tivoli-terrace, Kingstown, Mary, daughter of Col. Jackson, Enniscoe, county Mayo.

At Lough Fea, Monaghan, Evelyn John Shirley, of Eatington Park, Warwickshire.

Dec. 31, at Derra, county Clare, aged 87 years, Ellen, relict of Thomas Frost.

Mary Rose, daughter of C. P. Duigenan, Trim.

At Lissadell, Sligo, Emily Mary, daughter of the late Sir Stephen and Lady May.

Jan. 1, at Castle Archdall, county Fermanagh, aged 89 years, Colonel Archdall.

In Ballinasloe, Frederick Thornton, M.D.

Jan. 2, in Dundalk, the Rev. J. H. Allpress.

Jan. 2, at Kilboggin House, Kildare, Olivia, relict of Thomas Burne, M.D.

W. H. Dwyer, of the Dudalk branch of the Bank of Ireland.

Jan. 6, at Lisnamallard, Tyrone, Mary Jane, relict of John Buchanan, of Omagh.

At Farmhill, county Fermanagh, Charles James Adams.

At Killooly Hall, King's county, Wm. Gamble.

Jan. 5, in Dundalk, Anne, wife of Henry Harnden.

Jan. 2, in London, Alfred Kerr, son of the late Lieutenant-General James Kerr.

At Rochester, Cadtain R. Kerr.

Dec. 25, in Bath, Edouine O'Brien, daughter of Lieutenant-General Sir Rh'd. England.

In Liverpool, aged 79 years, S. Ridgway, formerly Captain in the 85th Light Infantry.

At Hamilton Island, Bermuda, Wm. Henry Buckle, son of Lt. Col. Robinson, formerly of the 72d Highlanders.

Dec. 21, Susan M'Cabe, sister of Terence M'Cabe, of the Carlisle Tavern, Bachelor's-walk, and niece of the Rev. Hugh De Lacey, P.P., Killinagh.

At Windy Arbor, John Rochford, aged 76 years, of the firm of John Rochford and Son.

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Carefully revised every week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1857.

FLOUR—Com'n to Extra State per barrel		$6.25	a $6.85
Common to Fancy Western	do	6.85	a 6.75
Extra Western	do	6.75	a 9 —
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do	6.90	a 8.75
Mixed to Extra Southern	do	6.90	a 9 —
RYE FLOUR—Fine and Super	do	3.50	a 5.25
CORN MEAL	do	3.12½	a 3.75
WHEAT—Canada White	per bushel	1.70	a 1.82½
Western White	do	1.70	a 1.82½
Southern White	do	1.70	a 1.80
All kinds of Red	do	1.45	a 1.62½
CORN—Mixed	do	— 72	a — 75
Yellow	do	— 75	a — 76
White	do	— 75	a — 76
OATS—State and Western	do	— 50	a — 53
Jersey	do	— 46	a — 49
Southern	do	— 42	a — 46
Rye	do	— 90	a — 95
Barley	do	1.02	a 1.32
White Beans	do	2 —	a — —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels		— —	a 4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb		— 13½	a — 13½
Fair		— 13½	a — 14¼
Rice, per 100 lbs		3.25	a 4.25
Hops, per lb		— 7	a — 10
Pork—Mess per bbl		20 —	a 21 —
Prime, per bbl		18 —	a — —
Beef—Country Mess		10.50	a 18 —
Prime		9 50	a 10 25
Dressed Hogs, per lb		— 9¼	a — 9¼
Lard, in bbls. per lb		— 12¼	a — 12¼
Butter—Western, per lb		— 15	a — 22
State, ordinary to choice, per lb		— 20	a — 29
Cheese, per lb		— 10¼	a — 11½
Potatoes—Carters, per bbl		3 —	a 4 —
Mercers, per bbl		2.50	a 3.25
Onions—Reds, per bbl		1.75	a 1.87½
White, per bbl		3 —	a 4 —
Apples, per bbl		2.50	a 5 25
Eggs, fresh per dozen		— 29	a — 31
Limed, per dozen		— 25	a — 26½
Feathers, Live Geese per lb		— 50	a — 55
Seed—Clover, per lb		— 12	a — 12½
Flax, per bushel		1.90	a 1 95
Timothy, mowed, per bushel		2.25	a 2.37½
Timothy, reaped, per bushel		3 —	a 3.25
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb		— 9¼	a — 11½
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl		— —	a — 80
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb		— 7	a — 16
Seed Leaf, per lb		— 10	a — 32
Wool—Domestic fleece, per lb		— 34½	a — 60

Corporation Notices.

CORPORATION SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

Public Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the authority vested in them by the laws of the State and the ordinances of the Common Council, the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the city of New-York will sell at public auction, under the direction of the Comptroller, E. H. Ludlow, auctioneer, on Wednesday, the 25th day of February, 1857, at noon, at the Merchants' Exchange, in the city of New-York, the following real estate, viz :—

1st. The three story brick building formerly occupied as an engine-house, and the lot No. 49 Christie-street ; that portion of the lot not occupied by the engine-house, is under lease till May 1, 1868, at the annual rent of $100, and the property will be sold subject to the lease recorded in book of special leases, page 164, in the Comptroller's office.

2d. Two lots on the west side of the Bowery, as extended, between James-street and Rosevelt-street.

3d. Six lots, with the buildings thereon, on the southerly side of Chatham-street and the westerly side of Pearl-street, now known as numbers 111, 113, 115, 117, 119, 121 Chatham-street, and numbers 457, 459 and 461 Pearl-street.

4th. Three lots, now known as Nos. 451, 453 and 455 Pearl-street, will be sold separately, subject to the conditions of the lease of the same, recorded in leases of city lots, page 168, in the Comptroller's office, and which will expire on the first day of May, 1859 ; the purchaser of each of the lots, will be entitled to receive $233 33-100 per annum of the rent reserved by the lease, after the first day of May next, and will be required to assume the covenants of the lease in regard to the payments for buildings at the expiration of the lease.

5th. The lot on the northwest corner of William aad Pearl-streets, now known as No. 449 Pearl-street and No. 271 William-street, subject to conditions of the lease of the same, recorded in leases of city lots, page 172 in the Comptroller's office, and which will expire on the first day of May, 1858 ; the purchaser of this lot will be entitled to receive the rent reserved in the lease, of $362 50-100 per annum after the first day of May next, and will be required to assume the conditions of the lease in regard to the payments for buildings at the expiration of the lease.

6th. The house and lot on the north side of Fifth-street, commencing 80 feet west of the Second-avenue, lot 20 feet front and rear, and 24 feet 2 inches deep on both sides ; houses 15 feet by 24 feet 3 inches.

7th. The house and lot north side of Thirteenth-street, commencing 213 feet west of Avenue C ; lot 25 feet front and rear by 103 feet 8 inches deep on both sides, with three story brick building on the front of the lot, 20 feet wide and 40 feet deep, lately built for an engine-house ; the rear of the lot is covered by and occupied as a foundry.

8th. Four lots on south side of Fifty-second street, commencing 90 feet west of Lexington-avenue.

9th. Thirty-six lots, being the southerly half of the block between 74th and 75th-streets, and the 3d and 4th avenues.

10th. Thirty-six lots, being the southerly part of the block between 80th and 81st-streets, and 3d and 4th avenues.

11th. Twelve lots on 116th-street and 117th-street, between Third and Fourth avenues.

12th. A piece of rear ground on the block bounded by Cherry-street, Oak-street and the Bowery, (as extended,) now used as part of the yard of Fourth District Police Station-house.

Full covenant warrantee deeds will be given.

TERMS OF SALE.—10 per cent of the purchase-money and auctioneer's fee of $5 per lot, to be paid to the collector of the city revenue, on the day of sale ; 15 per cent on the 1st day of May next, when the deeds will be ready for delivery ; the remainder of the purchase-money (75 per cent) may remain on bond and mortgage at the option of the purchaser, for five years from the 1st day of May, 1857, with interest, at the rate of six per annum, payable semi-annually.

Lithographic maps of the property may be had at the Comptroller's office, No. 5 Hall of Records, after the 7th instant.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.
A. C. FLAGG, Crmptroller.
JAMES M. SMITH, Jr., Recorder.
A. V. STOUT, Chamberlain.
THOMAS MCSPEDON, Ch. Fin. Com. Board Ald.
T. JONES, Jr., Ch. Fn. Com. Board Councilmen,
Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT,
Comptroller's office, January 20, 1857.

Special Notices.

THE WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN.

A FEW FACTS WORTH READING.—1st. The WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN is the ONLY Steel Pen manufactured in America.

2d. It is the BEST Steel Pen manufactured in any country, as it is made with the greatest care and upon scientific principles.

3d. It permits the greatest freedom of the hand, being as soft as the " classic goose-quill."

4th. The school-boy, the farmer and the mechanic can use it as freely as the Professor of Penmanship.

5th. England has drawn from us annually, 1,000,000 Dollars for STEEL PENS !

6th. We as true Americans, ought to keep that million at home, for reasons that New-Yorkers fully understand.

7th. WE CAN keep it by using the WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN instead of foreign made Pens.

8th. If we are a wise people, we will keep it at home ; for we are DEPENDENT on British workshops.

9th. All who have tried the WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN, are delighted with it.

10th. It has met with an EXTRAORDINARY sale in all cities where it has been introduced.

11th. It is destined to supersede all other Pens now in use.

12th. Importers of British SCRAP STEEL, " set your houses in order."

13th. The CHEAP TRASH that is now imported, is not called for by the consumers of PENS. On the contrary, all men are annoyed by them, and pray for good pens, at any price.

14. Therefore, it is nonsense for American merchants to interpose an objection to the price, which is simply remunerative.

15th—

" Let those write now who never wrote before,
And those who have always wrote, now write the more."

16th. N. B.—Buy none but sealed boxes, as you thereby secure the PATRON'S TICKET.

17. These Pens ARE MANUFACTURED IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, in the United States of America—not in Birmingham, England, where all OTHER pens are made that purport to be American—bearing the names of American MERCHANTS.

Office of the Company, 293 Broadway, New-York.

N. B.—Three Sample Pens sent on receipt of two stamps, or one gross by mail, postage free, on receipt of $1 50. f7 6m

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street, New-York.

sept27 3mos

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring, by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfactiofi be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York.

Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete prcess (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

Ocean Express Company of London and Liverpool.

(ESTABLISHED 1851.)

Small Parcels forwarded by each Mail Steamer, to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales—the Continent, India, China, South America, &c.

 Persons wishing to send small packages to their friends at home, at a trifling expense, will please address

COLLINS & MARSH, Agents,
29 Broadway, New-York.

ja26 1y

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

THIS Theatre was opened for the season on Wednesday September 17. Its object will be, as it has been, to sustain the Drama in artistic purity and intellectual respect. The company, through whose energies and abilities this object has been so successfully attained, will remain substantially the same as in past seasons.

It is the intention of the management to produce dramas in the same style as those put forth by Charles Kean at the Princesses Theatre, London.

LOVE IN A MAZE.
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS,
FAUST AND MARGARET,
LOUIS THE ELEVENTH.

Engagements have been offered, with every prospect of success, to several American artists of renowned fame, and to others of dawning distinction, whose genius it will be the object of the management to cultivate and encourage, and several comedies, written in this country and for this theatre, will be produced.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION :

Boxes	50 cents	Pit	12½ cents.
Gallery	12½ cents.	Orchestra Stalls	50 cents.
Private Boxes			Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½ ; commence at 7½.

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 839 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.

JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man,

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 186 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

CATHOLIC LIBRARY BENEFIT SOCIETY.

Attached to the Church of the Nativity.—A Course of Lectures will be delivered before this Society, at

HOPE CHAPEL, BROADWAY,

on the following Thesday evenings :—January 13—20—27, and February 3d, 1857.

The proceeds are to be appropriated for the benefit of the poor children belonging to the Parish of the Nativity.

Tickets—admitting a gentleman and lady—to the Course, $1 00, to be had at the Catholic Book-stores.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Thomas Larkin,	James Cunningham,	Edward Carroll,
Joseph P. Flin,	Thomas Riley,	James Tracy,
Patrick Sury,	Michael Fogarty,	James Riley,
James Fore,	Wm. Walsh,	Francis Dunnigan.
William Byrns,	John Kelly,	Thos. Kelly,
John Quin,	Malagee Conboy,	Timothy Dwyer,
John Luyden,	William Krogh,	John Hehir,
Patrick Ward,	John McCan,	Robert Coddington.

JOSEPH KIERNAN, Chairman.

PATRICK MCCARTY, DENIS QUINLAN, } Treasurers.

WILLIAM BROPHY, Corresponding Sec'ry.

WILLIAM PRICE, MICHAEL NOONAN, } Rec. Sec's.

j31f

Special Notices.

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade ; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furuishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
GERALD GRAY.

y10jan

LEGAL NOTICE.

Notice of Application for the discharge of an insolvent from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

James Grant of New-York City, Notice first published January 12th, 1857, Creditors to appear before the Hon. A. D. Russel, City Judge of the City of New-York, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1857, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at his Chambers No. 25 Chambers street, in said city, to show cause, if any they have, why an assignment of said Insolvent's Estate should not be made and he be discharged from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the Statute for the discharge of an Insolvent from his debts.

McCUNN & MONCRIEF,
Atty's. for Insolvent, 29 Wall st., New-York City.

jan17 6t

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,
423 Broome st.,
New-York.

tf6dec

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each —— evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y. JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at corner of Center and Grand st. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J. OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey. WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. THOMAS ASMITH, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport.

y11june

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frosen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracy of workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 58 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARDS," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

58, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING eurered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

Special Notices.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any order left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVINOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 3ms. 188 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicine

NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtained. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENEUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bound, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1858.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

For THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issued in July, 1855. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	8s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 8s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

CARPETINGS FROM AUCTION.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW-YORK AND VICINITY.

STEPHEN LEAHY,

93 SIXTH AVENUE, between Waverly and Clinton Place,

BEGS to call the attention of the ladies to his large and varied stock of Carpeting and Oil Cloth. The collection comprises goods of every grade and style, from the richest and most beautiful of foreign manufacture to the lowest price domestic.

All who are acquainted with the Carpet trade, and have visited our New Store, acknowledge our stock the most varied assortment and best selected on exhibition in the city. The facilities we enjoy for purchasing cheap, and an experience of many years in connection with the largest houses in the country, enables us to present to our lady friends and the public, the cheapest and most select stock of goods in the city.

sept27 3mos STEPHEN LEAHY, 93 Sixth Avenue.

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 13 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHS,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

325 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 28½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANBURY, Secretary. my31y

Wines and Liquors.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY1 STREET,

8m18dec New-York.

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. y1aug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, ont of bond and at the above establiishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 806 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. yjly26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on liberal terms. jly5 y

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 13, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

THOMAS LYNCH,

Provisions, Wholesale and Retail,

NO. 22 ESSEX-MARKEV, NEW-YORK.

Fresh, Salt, Corned, and Smoked Provisions. Shipping orders punctually attended to. Goods delivered to any part of New-York, free of expense.

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 35 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.

dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 35 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

WILLARD, FELT & CO,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

Medical.

THE Cause of Consumption—BRONCHITIS—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?—FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

Costiveness is the first link that connects disease to the system. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency. Nevertheless, it has laid the foundation of that destroying disease without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches, or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim than that formidable and insidious leveler of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold—through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites any attention or alarm in the mind of any person until it has sown the seeds of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely: If the culverts and sewers of the city were chocked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What then is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations, and irritations all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shoulder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly, of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period, the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid, in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublesome symptoms through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and the mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their rooms. Hence, the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out, and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull and heavy, loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and softness of the gullet of the throat.

This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at length aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption, ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis, and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheep-skin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle: by cutting the tonsils and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister and Croton Oil externally to the throat or neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose, (what blind philosophy!) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the patient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opportunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physicians and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one until the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby; the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold upon the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or on awakening from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attack of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an early period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cesssation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution, which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

The above remarks will prove sufficient to the simplest observer, in comparing it to his own feeling; also, the nature and cause of this insidious disease that slays thousands of thousands of the most blooming of our population annually, on account of catching colds on the slightest exposure, which excites coughing through the diseased condition of the blood, and which could be easily remedied by applying to me and obtaining my remedies while the disease is in the first and second stages, but when the disease has progressed to the third stage, and those fatal symptoms fully developed, a cure is impossible.

Consequently, to relieve the doubts of those who are sufferers, and hoping to snatch them from the grasp of death, I have made an arrangement, at a sacrifice on my part, of sending medicine all over the United States and Canada at a trifling expense through the request of those patients who are completely restored to perfect health by a few weeks' use of my medicine and were despaired of when I commenced to treat them, as their testimonies before the public will show, and have deeply interested themselves toward the suffering public. Through the universal satisfaction given by this medicine, I am compelled to comply to the wishes of the thousands of the laboring classes exclusively, who are more exposed to the ravages of this treacherous disease, in giving them an opportunity of testing the efficacy of my preparations in the above specialities, and which I shall guarantee to the sufferer the amplest satisfaction in less than forty-eight hours of its use by obeying my directions, unless there is immediate death, by enclosing five dollars, and on receipt I shall send medicines, with all directions, per express, to their address. No letters answered without the above inclosure.

This privilege is extended to those persons who addressed me previously on this subject.

I have made it my rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time I give up the patient as lost and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

J. D. DURKIN,
Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
jan31 1y No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR. JAMES ROCHE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES SIX CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1857. NO. 45

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLV.

Editorial.

MARCY AND CLARENDON OUSTED BY THE SENATE—DON FERMIN FERRER—SUCCESS TO NICARAGUA.

VERE FOSTER AND IRISH EMIGRATION.

A DAY IN WASHINGTON.

A WORD ABOUT CORK.

DUBLIN AND PARIS.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS—Last of the Tasmanian Election—Scuffles on the Platform—McGillicuddy's Oration—Medical Superintendent suppressed—Special Constable knocked to pieces—The Triumph—The Lake in the Mountains.

James Clarence Mangan, a Sketch—Thos. Devin Reilly—Catholic History versus Catholic Pamphleteers—Literary Items, &c.

Correspondence.

Letter from Dubuque, Iowa, by R. C.—Letter from "Fortescue Whittles."

Miscellaneous.

Carlow College Theatricals—Mrs. Bingham, the Florence Nightingale of Nicaragua—No Irish need apply—Notes on Ireland—British Literature in the United States—Military Resources of Ireland—The Irish Legion, a Christmas Memory—The O'Meara Family—Our White Slaves—Orangeism in the North—Latest Irish, European, American, and City news, &c.

Answers to Correspondents.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $8.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. MADDEN, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 87½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

English-Irish Dictionary. 12mo, cloth. Price $1 25.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

Ready Now

Memoir of Thomas Devin Reilly.

By JOHN MITCHEL.

12mo, wrappers. Price 25 cents.
Orders from the trade solicited.
jan31 P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

LADY MORGAN'S NATIONAL STORIES.—Just published—

THE O'BRIENS AND THE O'FLAHERTIES. A National Story, being the first of Lady Morgan's Novels and Romances, with an Introduction and Notes, by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. 2 vols. 12mo. $2.

ALSO,

THE HISTORY OF TEXAS, from its first settlement to the annexation, with Maps, Portraits and other Illustrations. By Col. H. Yoakum, of the Texas Bar. 2 vols. 8vo., cloth, $5; full library, sheep, $5 50; half calf, or morocco, extra, $7 50.

SINAI AND PALESTINE, in connection with their History. By Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A. Cannon of Canterbury, with colored Maps and Plates. 8vo., cloth, $2 50.

KNIGHTS AND THEIR DAYS. By Dr. Doran, author of "Table Traits," "Habits and Men," &c. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A FEMALE SLAVE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

Next Week.

DICKENS'S LITTLE FOLKS: SECOND SERIES.

A Series of beautiful Juveniles, selected from Dickens's Works, in his own language, with illustrations, by Darley, 18mo., cloth, 38 cts.; do., extra gilt, gilt edges, 50 cts.

1. THE BOY JOE AND SAM WELLER, from the "Pickwick Papers."
2. SISSY JUPE, from "Hard Times."
3. THE TWO DAUGHTERS, from "Martin Chuzzlewit."
4. TINY TIM AND DOT, AND THE FAIRY CRICKET, from the "Christmas Stories."
5. DAME BURDEN, from "Bleak House."
6. DODLY VARDEN, THE LITTLE COQUETTE, from "Barnaby Rudge."

The 6 volumes in a neat case, $2 25; extra gilt, $3.

nov22 J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

Special Notices.

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a danghter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Money Saved, in Buying Books on the Gift Principle.—All the $1 25 Books sold at one dollar. The Gifts consist of various articles; some of which are Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Rings and Pins, Ear-Drops, Sleeve-Buttons, Cashmere Shawls and Scarfs, Black and Colored Silks, Gold and Silver Watches.

A GIFT BOOK to be delivered at the sale of each Book, worth from 25 cents to 60 dollars.

Catalogues of the Books (containing a selection of the best works) sent to any address.

Any person sending an order for 10 Books, will receive a Book and Gift extra. J. S. ANDREWS, 140 Nassau-street, ja25 3m New-York City.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Valentines.

VALENTINES! VALENTINES!

PHILIP J. COZANS, Valentine Manufacturer, 107 Nassau street, corner of Ann, New-York, respectfully announces to Booksellers, Stationers and Valentine Dealers, that his VALENTINES, ENVELOPES AND VALENTINE STATIONERY, manufactured for next Valentine season, February, 1857, is now ready.

Wholesale dalers and jobbers will find it to their interest to examine his stock as regards quality and prices. Liberal discounts will be given to them, according to the quantity ordered.

Parties ordering Valentines will please send their orders early, to insure their getting them in season. jan24 tf

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS!

TWO LARGE EDITIONS IN THREE MONTHS!!!

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE $1 50. The Second Edition, revised and corrected,

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

PAGES OF ITS HISTORY—By HENRY DE COURCY, Author of "Le Servantes de Canada."

Translated and concluded by JOHN GILMARY SHEA.

Possessing great industry and rare talent for historical narration, combined with true Catholic feeling and a sincere love of Truth, Mr. De Courcy has grouped together the most important facts in the history of the Church in Maryland, Virginia, and the Middle States, with a general view of the progress of Catholicity in the country.

Among the important matters embraced in the volume are,

I. Sketches of Archbishops Carroll, Neale, Marechal, Whitfield, Eccleston, Kenrick, and Hughes. Bishops Conwell, Concanen, Connolly, Dubois, Barron, Kelly, Whelan, McGill, O'Connor, Neumann, Young, Bayley, McCloskey, Timon, Loughlin, Prince Gallitzin, Father Malou. Rev. Messrs. Nagot, Joubert, Power, Kohlmann, Chevalier Keating, &c.

II. Religious Orders of many—the only account in English: The Jesuits, Sulpitians, Redemptorists, Brothers of the Christian Schools, The Sisters of Charity and Mother Seton, The Visitation Nuns and Miss Lalor, The Sisters of Providence and the Rev. Mr. Joubert, The Ladies of the Sacred Heart and Madame Gallizin, The Ursulines, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph, School Sisters of Notre Dame.

III. Memorable Events—The Negro Plot, Father Kohlmann and the Confessional, The School Question, The Native Riots in 1844 "Maria Monk" and anti-Catholic Forgeries in General, The Trustee System and Attacks on Catholic Church Property, The Know-Nothing Excitement, The Mission of Archbishop Bedini, The First Nuncio.

This work before publication was submitted to persons of high rank in the Church in each diocese treated of, and approved by them.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

It would not be easy to find elsewhere or anywhere as much interesting matter connected with our history, as is here brought together.—Pittsburg Catholic.

The most complete body of facts in connection with the progress of Catholicity in this country that has yet been published.—N. Y. Herald.

The Catholics of the country owe Mr. DeCourcy a debt of thanks.—Freeman's Journal.

A welcome book to our increasing literature.—Catholic Mirror.

A most valuable book, whether we consider it as a book of reference, (so far far as it goes,) or as furnishing a great amount and variety of information for a more compendious work of some future historian.—Catholic Herald.

Written in good temper, it avoids personalities and overwarmth of expression.—N. Y. Times.

Address orders to EDW'D. DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER.)
dec27 1m 151 Fulton-street, New-York.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including fare from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line which lay at Pier 28 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY,
} Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.

All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 18 tf

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.

N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.

SMITH, No. 31 PARK-ROW,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

GAS! GAS!! GAS!!!

W. H. CAREY,

Manufacturer of Chandeliers, Pendants, Brackets, Pillar and Mantel Ornaments,

And every variety of Gas Fixtures, No. 6 ESSEX-MARKET, Grand-street, New-York.

Hotels, Churches, Stores, and Dwellings fitted up, and everything appertaining to the business of GAS FITTING, attended to by competent workmen, with promptness, and at satisfactory prices.

Old Chandeliers, and all kinds of Brass-Work, Bronzed, Re-Gilt and Re-Finished, in every style, and restored to its original appearance. ja31 3m

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 81 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.

Give him a call by all means. my31y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6¼ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853;

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Toloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 53 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. W. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued.

SLOAN & CO., 53 Sixth Avenue,
Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

The steamship Baltic, from Liverpool (about 3 P. M.) Wednesday, January 21, arrived on the 5th inst. The news is of little importance politically, the Swiss difficulty being considered as settled, and nothing new appearing for the moment. An emeute had broken out on board the American ship "J. L. Bogart," in the Mersey.

The trial of the murderer of the Archbishop of Paris occasioned much more excitement in the public mind than any event that has occurred at the Palais de Justice for many years. The number of applications made to the President Delangle for admission to the court was almost fabulous, and the greater part of them were necessarily refused. But from an early hour in the morning, groups of people, who had not the least expectation of getting in, assembled in the environs of the court, and remained throughout the day in the flower market, on the bridges, and on the quays, in the hope of hearing, from time to time, some report of how things were going on.

A very strong force of Sergeants de Ville guarded every avenue to the Palace, and the public were not allowed even to pass the front gates, or enter the Salle des Pas Perdus, so great was the fear that there would be too strong a pressure at the doors of the Criminal Court. At 9 o'clock, persons provided with tickets were admitted, and more than an hour before the proceedings commenced, the court was full in every part.

The trial was a deeply interesting one. The plea of insanity was put in, but without avail. After the testimony was closed, the whole occupying but one sitting, the President shortly summed up, and the jury after retiring twenty minutes, returned a verdict of "Guilty."

Sentence of death was then passed in the usual form (Verger being still absent,) and M. Nogent Saint Laurens was directed to inform him that he had three days to appeal to the Court of Cassation against the sentence.

ENGLAND.—Lord Palmerston has issued the following circular to the House of Commons:

"DOWNING-STREET, Jan. 16, 1857.

"SIR.—The meeting of Parliament having been fixed for Tuesday, Feb. 3, business of great importance will then come under the consideration of Parliament; and I trust, therefore, that you will allow me to express my earnest hope that it may be consistent with your convenience to attend in your place in the House of Commons at the opening of the session. I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient and faithful servant.

"PALMERSTON."

We may, therefore, soon expect an official programme of the contemplated Government measures.

According to private advices from Shanghae, dated Nov. 19, received by the Overland Mail, there seems a prospect that the specie shipments to that port may prove to have been excessive, owing to the insufficiency of produce available for returns. With respect to silk, it would appear to have been believed at Shanghae that the exraordinary stimulus given to the export trade, during the first three months of the season, had drained the country of the bulk of the yield. It was thought, however, that prices had reached a maximum in Shanghae, as they now stood at a point equal to the higest quoted from England. Under these circumstances the large arrivals of silver from this side were producing a marked effect; and the decline in exchane appears to have been greater than that mentioned on Friday last.

With regard to the prospect of a continued interruption of business, it is mentioned that the English forces had been engaged chiefly strengthening the precautions against fire-rafts, &c.; and that, according to some statements, there was a disposition to remain as much as possible on the defensive, until a reply to their first advices of the war shall have been received from England. Meanwhile re-inforcements were understood to have been sent for. The chief hope of a speedy settlement was, therefore, confined to the possibility of orders being transmitted from the Imperial Government at Pekin for Governor Yeh, to accede to the demands made upon him. As that functionary, however, had declared in his proclamation that the English had joined the rebels, it was thought he might have conveyed the impression to the Emperor, in which case it was possible he would receive no instruction, other than that he should continue his proceedings for our extermination.

A dispatch from Berne, dated the 18th, announces that the Neufchatel prisoners, escorted by a detachment of Swiss troops, were conducted on the preceding night to the French frontier, which they crossed at Pontarlier. The Federal Council had issued orders for immediately disbanding the troops already assembled.

Lord Napier has arrived in London, from Scotland, and will probably leave for Washington in about three weeks.

Robson, the Crystal Palace forger, has become a maniac, and there is talk of removing him from prison to Bethlehem Hospital for the insane. Leopold Redpath, the other great forger, is found guilty and sentenced to transportation for life. Kent, Redpath's supposed accomplice, has been acquitted.

Paul Bedford, the comedian, writes a letter to the papers suggesting signal rockets and blue lights, as means of avoiding railroad collisions.

The London Times publishes a circumstantial account of the last illness and death of the Rev. Dr. Grant, Roman Catholic Bishop of Southwark, London. Dr. Grant himself declares that he is alive and perfectly well.

Actions have been commenced in the name of the depositors against the shareholders of the Royal British Bank. Bankruptcies and insolvencies must follow.

At a meeting at Manchester £4,000 were subscribed to erect a statue to the late Joseph Brotherton, M. P.

A fire in the bookpeeper's office in the Bank of Ireland, had destroyed the office and furniture, but the books and valuables were saved.

There is no truth whatever in the statement which appeared in the Limerick Chronicle, that Smith O'Brien's eldest son has selected the English Bar for the sphere of his professional career.

Francis Percy, Esq., County Inspector, County Dublin Constabulary, is appointed an Inspector-General and Commandant of Constabulary Depot, Phœnix Park, Dublin.

The assistant-barrister of Cork has decided that the Mayor's salary is quite subject to income tax, though his Worship has liberally devoted the entire of it for the benefit of the local charities.

Andrew Murray Ker, Esq., has been appointed a Deputy Lieutenant for the C[illegible]t Monaghan.

THE DALLAS-CLARENDON TREATY.--PROTEST OF DON FERMIN FERRER, THE NICARAGUAN MINISTER.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 1, 1857.

ESTEEMED SIR—I am informed that the treaty with England lately negotiated at London, has been accepted by this government, and is now receiving the consideration of the Senate.

As this document affects the territorial integrity and sovereign rights of Nicaragua, particularly over the port and river of San Juan and the department of Guanacaste, it becomes my duty to notice it, if it be only in the capacity of a private citizen who feels deeply that it is a question of life and honor to his country; and I am fully convinced that the Senate of this Republic is too just and enlightened to sustain a position in direct contradiction to American sentiment and its declared policy on this continent.

The most pressing question is not whether England shall continue to protect this extraordinary "Mosquito nationality," composed of a few hundred leprous savages of spurious parentage; it is whether the British ministry shall ignore the indisputable rights of Nicaragua—whether it shall suppress the sovereign independence of an American Republic, and whether the Senate of the United States will ratify this European assumption.

The Mosquito coast was discovered by Gil Gonzale Davila, who explored and took formal possession of the country from ocean to ocean, in the name of the crown of Castile. The establishment of this colony was but the practical assertion of the right of discovery and settlement universally assumed and acted upon by every power in Christendom from that period to this day.

England claims that the Mosquito country has always remained independent, inasmuch as the coast Indians have never acknowledged the authority of Spain or Nicaragua. Perhaps so; but if such an acknowledgment were absolutely requisite, what nation has a valid title to any part of the American continent? Either the British Minister errs in this position or the sovereignty of England in Canada is a wrongful usurpation. The sovereignty of Nicaragua over the Mosquito Indians is founded on the same prescriptive basis with that which the United States exercises over the Indians of Florida, of New Mexico, of Oregon, and every State and Territory in the Union. Many of these tribes deny and resist the authority of your Government; but would the Senate of the United States consider the circumstance sufficient to give England the right to enter your limits and sustain their "independent nationality" by force of arms?

Would the United States admit the right of England to invite Mexico, for example, to join with her in arranging their status and what relations these savages are to hold with your Government, only leaving to the United States the passive role of unlimited submission, which, in a parallel case, the Marcy-Clarendon treaty assigns to Nicaragua?

Or would the Senate of the United States have accepted it as a proper act of international comity if at a certain crisis of your history England and Brazil had been pleased to decide, on their own responsibility, without at all consulting this republic, where the territorial limits, then in dispute between Mexico and the United States should be finally established? Or would such an assumption be any the less painful to the party from whom all was taken, and to whom nothing was given, if those self-appointed arbiters should further declare, in the terms adopted in the Marcy-Clarendon treaty in the similar case of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, that if either party should refuse to abide by their decision, the dictating Powers would not consent to any other or more favorable terms to the refusing party.

When Spain owned Florida and manifested an uncertain friendship for the republic, would the Senate of the United States have received it as an evidence of just and honorable intentions if England had availed herself of the occasion to unite with some other strong Power, then in dispute with you, to frame an ex parte treaty, in which New Orleans should be virtually wrested from the Union, as San Juan is taken from Nicaragua by the Marcy-Clarendon treaty—while, with similar license, Florida is declared, in another clause, to extend to the Mississippi, and the navigation of the river made the equal property of a foreign and unfriendly State?

The undivided exercise of her rightful sovereignty over the repose and prosperity of the feeble and oppressed State of Nicaragua than New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi can be to the dominion of this vast and powerful republic.

Nicaragua is as completely convinced of the perfect validity of the title to both banks of the San Juan as the United States were of the extension of theirs to the eastern bank of the Bravo del Norte by the annexation of Texas. Your country, in the majesty of her power, vindicated her claims at the expense of a war with Mexico. How, then can she condescend to use this same power to deprive Nicaragua of her similar and equally vital rights by the ratification of the Marcy-Clarendon treaty?

It is impossible to believe this government can ever forget the duties of its high position as the head of the American republics. It will not so far depart from all its fundamental rules of exterior and interior policy as to impose these unjust and arbitrary conditions upon any, and much less upon the most friendly of the American States, or aid in establishing such disorganizing and fatal innovation on its continental system.

Both England and the United States assail the equity of their relations with their own Indian tribes in this example of foreign alliances and forcible interposition, solely for the regulation of their Mosquito affairs.

England does not found her claim to dismember the territory of Nicaragua on the discovery, conquest, purchase or settlement of the country, but simply on the right of the Mosquito Indians to a "nationality."

Two powerful nations propose to subvert in principle their whole system of Indian relations, and impose upon Nicaragua conditions to which neither of them would submit in their own case, all for the peculiar service of a miserable tribe of vagrant outcasts who infest the outskirts, but do not belong to civilization. They are not Indians; they are a degraded race of mixed bloods, called Sambos, the offspring of the illicit commerce of pirates and their African sailors and slaves with the wandering Indians of the coast. The Negro blood predominates, and they are in fact Africans of a low type; but my country does not for this refuse them whatever land they can cultivate, and had never denied them any right or privilege which persons of like condition enjoy in any party of the dominions of either Great Britain or the United States. But Nicaragua protests against foreign Powers dismembering her territory under the plea of protecting their nationality, and she cannot but hope that the Senate of the United States will not ratify such an infringement of the rights of an American republic.

Wise and honorable Senators will reflect on the gravity of the precedent before they give the sanction of their votes to this novel policy of calling in foreign interference to establish the assumed rights of alien and spurious races, who have, by whatever chance, been introduced into the bosom of a distinct people. Thoughtful Senators will remember that the political allies of the British Minister who framed this subversion of the American system are continually asserting in Parliament and through the ministerial press "that the elements of a distinct and hostile nationality exist in the Southern States of the Union, which, with the aid of the immense steam marine of England and her own peculiar elements of nationality in the West Indies, could be readily organized into vitality." These are not my opinions; but the Senators are doubtless in the habit of reading the leading papers of Great Britain, and will recognize the accuracy of the quotation, in sentiment, if not in words.

Nicaragua can never be a menace to either of the dictating Powers. On the contrary, her geographical position must make her a serviceable ally, and she ardently desires to be in amity with these enlightened and commercial nations—she would cheerfully concede, in a spirit of generous friendship, all that a just and magnanimous nation could desire in a direct treaty; for my government considers a narrow and exclusive policy inconsistent with the interests of civilization; but if I do not entirely mistake the sentiments of my country, it will resist unjust and arbitrary impositions from any quarter whatever, even as it is now resisting, single and alone, the combined efforts of all the enemies of American institutions.

The various attempts of England on the defenceless soil of Nicaragua are subjects of history. Among others, a British vessel of war came to San Juan del Norte in 1842, and demanded of Don Manuel Quijana, then commanding at that port, his signature to a document compromising the sovereign rights of Nicaragua. Regardless of menaces, that officer refused to comply with the demand, and he was then carried a prisoner to Blewfields, where he remained some time in confinement, and was made to suffer rigorous privations. San Juan was however, finally taken by force, and for some years the British ministry agitated the idea of transferring that port to Costa Rica, but at length it was decided to treat it as an extension of Mosquito, and essentially a British colony.

Upon this basis Mr. Chatfield, the British Charge in Central America, notified the Executive of Nicaragua, Dec. 9, 1850, (perhaps with some reference to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, signed the preceding April,) of the large limits his government assigned to the Mosquito "nationality." The boundary line he indicated would start from the northern extremity of the line separating Teguaigalpa, Honduras, from the department of New Segovia, in Nicaragua, and thence following the north line of New Segovia, and along the southeasterly line of the departments of Matagalpa and Chontales, and so continuing to the Machuca rapids on the San Juan river. This includes about two-thirds of the length of that river, and there are several States of the Union of smaller extent than the territory thus taken from Nicaragua. It must also be observed that the Mosquitos had never thought of claiming the town and river of San Juan until England discovered that this portal of our isthmus transit was essential to their nationality.

The title of Nicaragua to the jurisdiction of the San Juan river, which was first given by England to the Mosquito nationality, and now in an equally arbitrary manner is assigned to Costa Rica by the Marcy-Clarendon treaty, is that of an ancient and indisputable possession.

Costa Rica never, from the earliest times, pretended to any control over the trade or navigation of the San Juan, although it was at one time of great importance. Previous to the sudden fall of the river in 1683, merchantmen ascended the San Juan to the lake, and an active and valuable trade concentrated at the commercial capitol of Nicaragua. A great annual fair was held at Granada in which foreign goods and domestic products changed hands to an immense amount, but Costa Rica never at any time laid claim to any voice or control in the internal or external trade by the San Juan.

I am confident the government of the United States will not descend from its legitimate sphere of action to seriously accept the position of arbiter-general of all the boundary disputes which may arise in States so addicted to changes and revolutions as those of Spanish America. I will not, therefore, encroach upon your time by a refutation of the modern and frivolous pretensions put forward in the name of Costa Rica—they are easily refuted; but it is useless to trouble you with these details, as no branch of this government has made them a subject of investigation, and it is to be presumed that the Senate will not hastily decide on the merits of an entirely unknown case.

In the fullest assurance, thereiore, that the candor and integrity of the Senate of the United States will not permit Nicaragua to be despoiled of her rights without a hearing, I entreat your attention to tho points I have submitted to your consideration in this letter, and most respectfully request you, in the name of republican justice, to ask for it the same favor from your honorable colleagues.

Permit me to offer you, sir, my assurances of the highest consideration. FERMIN FERRER.

HON. J. J. CRITTENDEN, U. S. SENATE.

The New-Orleans Delta, of the 20th ult. says, a hostile meeting took place yesterday, at one o'clock, at "The Oaks," between Packenham Le Blanc, Deputy Sheriff of the Supreme Court, and George W. White, the book-keeper of N. C. Folger, of Old Levee-street. The immediate insult that led to the challenge and the duel, was of the grossest kind, and demanded appeal to the most deadly redress among those who abide by the "code of honor," or who have manhood to resent the most unpardonable offense. The cause that led to the insult being offered, was the refusal of the Committee of Invitation to one of our public balls, to issue a ticket of admittance for a friend of Mr. Packenham Le Blanc. The gentleman considering himself affronted, concluded to visit his displeasure on one of the committee, and chance, as we have reason to believe, was the cause of Mr. White being selected. He was met by Mr. Le Blanc, who spat in his face. They met yesterday at "The Oaks." The conditions of the duel being double-barreled shot-guns, twenty paces, and to fire at the word. Two seconds of each gentleman were on the ground. The word was given, and Mr. Le Blanc fell mortally wounded, discharging his gun as he fell. His opponent, of course, was unhurt.

The New-Orleans Bulletin urges evening schools for men and women, after the model of the Swedish free scientific schools, where drawing, chemistry, architecture, ornamentation, &c., are taught.

American News.

Railway Progress.

The subjoined interesting information relative to the progress of Railroads in this country is obtained from the Annual Supplement to "Dinsmore's American Railway and Steam Navigation Guide," regarded as entirely reliable in such matters. It gives first the miles and tenths of finished Railways in each State on the first day of January, 1856 and 1857.

States.	Miles in operation, 1856.	Miles in operation, 1857.	Increase last year.
Maine	422.2	442.1	20.0
New Hampshire	545.5	645.5	0.0
Vermont	515.6	515.6	0.0
Massachusetts	1,207.1	1,285.6	78.5
Rhode Island	78.4	85.4	7.0
Connecticut	596.2	600.9	4.7
New-York	2,668.2	2,702.0	34.7
New Jersey	448.3	472.3	24.0
Pennsylvania	1,737.8	2,164.1	426.3
Delaware	84.0	119.0	35.0
Maryland*	371·8	377.8	6.0
Virginia*	1,252.1	1,490.9	227.8
North Carolina	483.0	612.0	129.0
South Carolina	677.4	706.4	29.0
Georgia	1,002.0	1,062.0	60.0
Florida	0.0	26.0	26.0
Alabama	317.5	484.5	167.0
Mississippi	254.8	431.8	177.0
Louisiana	221.5	263.5	42.0
Texas	0.0	57.0	57.0
Tennessee	365.8	491.8	126.0
Kentucky	197.9	306.7	108.0
Ohio	2,641.1	2,869.7	228.6
Indiana	1,438.2	1,806.8	368.6
Michigan	470.5	559.5	89.0
Illinois	2,132.3	2,531.2	398.9
Wisconsin	276.4	629.9	353.5
Iowa	88.0	253.0	165.0
Missouri	144.3	189.7	45.4
California	22.5	22.5	0.0
Grand Total	20,760.4	24.195.2	3.434.8

The Missouri Democrat makes us the following statistics of Iowa, for 1856 :—There are in Iowa 83,906 dwelling-houses, 509,414 population, out of which 274,012 males, 235,402 females, 271 colored persons, widowed 11,073, married 170,979, native voters 86,815, naturalized voters 14,492, 92,376 militia, 371 deaf and dumb, 103 blind, 120 insane, 261 idiotic, 67,111 owners of land, 132 paupers. There are 2,043,958 acres of improved land in the State; 6,515,479 unimproved; acres of meadow, 140,656 ; of spring-wheat, 346,966 ; of winter-wheat, 41,114 ; of corn, 737,213 ; of oats, 190,022 ; of potatoes, 18,-124. Number of bushels harvested, 20,815 of grass-seed ; 4, 972,639 of spring-what ; 496,877 of winter-wheat ; 6,127,329 of oats ; 31,163,362 of corn ; 2,014,388 of potatoes ; 225,364 tons of hay. Number of hogs sold, 403,584 ; value $3,127,531. Number of cattle sold, 125,779 ; value, $2,923,253. Pounds of butter, 6,099,208 ; of cheese, 732,323 ; of wool, 517,441. Value of domestic manufactures, $438,900 ; of general, $4,096,961. The three largest counties in the State are Lee, Dubaque and Des Moines.

The Fredericksburg Herald says that beautiful granite in inexhaustible quantities, has recently been discovered on the banks of the Potomac, at Occoquan, Va. It is of a grey color, containing quartz to excess, and bears a pressure of 16,800 lbs. to the cubic inch. The government is now paying 60c. for granite used in the construction of some of its buildings, while that from the Occoquan quarry can be afforded at 35 cents per foot.

John A. Washington, the occupant of Mount Vernon estate, has sold to James Crutchett, of Washington, several thousand trees on the Mount Vernon property, and most of them from the hill on which the tomb of Washington stands. This timber is manufactured into canes, and a portion of the proceeds will be used for the purchase of materials for the Washington National Monument.

The finances of Maryland are represented to be in a very excellent condition. There is said to be a balance in the treasury, from the receipts of last year, of about $238,000, which, added to the surplus remaining of the previous year, gives a total surplus in the treasury of nearly $600,000. The receipts of the State for the year are about $1,230,372, and the disbursements about $1,003,290.

The editor of the Nashua Telegraph has a Hawkes printing press and works on it himself; and he says the fly-wheels cast a revolving shadow, which is palpably wearing out the floor. The Boston Post says it knows the editor to be a sober man, though he has been a Republican Senator.

From the report of the Legislative Committee, it appears the State Debt of Georgia, on the 26th of December, 1856, was $2,666,472 22. As an offset to this debt, the State holds as an item of assets, the Western and Atlantic Railroad, built at a cost of $5,600,235 10, and which is probably worth all that it cost.

The new iron bridge at Goat Island, Niagara, just completed, was fairly tested the other day, by the passage over it of an immense boiler for a paper mill, drawn by eight horses, together weighing about fifteen tons.

Capt. David Lemond, of Warren, Me., was at Dartmoor at the time the bloody tragedy was enacted by Captain Shortland, and remained there till the close of the war. Though in his seventy-second year, he is still active.

A band of robbers and counterfeiters, ten in number, were recently caught in Marshall county, Ala. Two of them turned State's evidence and the rest were jugged to await trial.

The Secretary of the Treasury has purchased two lots in Dubuque, Iowa, as a site for the new Custom-house authorized to be erected in that city.

In the legislatures of Michigan and Indiana, bills have been introduced repealing acts prohibiting the sale and manufacture of spirituous liquors.

A young gentleman from Mississippi was fleeced of six thousand dollars at a gambling hell in Cincinnati, a few days ago.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislature of North Carolina "to encourage matrimony."

* Including portions in District of Columbia.

The village of Ludlow, in western Massachusetts, recently became scandalized by the theories of a free-love circle being carried to practical results. Mr. Olvord, of Springfield, professed to have had a communication from his deceased wife, announcing the intelligence that her spirit had taken possession of the body of a Mrs. Clark, of Ludlow. Mr. Clark, who was also a spiritualist, at once surrendered his marital rights. Common scandal also named a sister of Mrs. Clark as a participant in these left-handed and irregular nuptials. On Sunday evening the neighbors, incensed, came down. The spiritual high priest was treated to a coat of tar and feathers, and a free ride out of town. The females, whose virtue had yielded to their faith, also received warning to leave.

From reliable sources, says the Portland Oregonian, we learn that the mines in the Southern portion of the Territory are paying well this Winter. In Jacksonville, Sterlingville, Illinois Valley, and throughout the entire mining region, there is being more gold taken out than at any time since the Winter of 1850. New diggings are being discovered on and in the vicinity of the Indian Reservation, that "pan out" rich, and as there are no diggers in the mountains, miners do not run the risk, as they used to when out prospecting, of having their scalps taken. The golden resources of a large scope of country on Rogue River and its tributaries, will now be fully developed.

Here are a few interesting Minnesota items :—The towns along the western bank of the Mississippi are rapidly improving in trade and population. A new land office is soon to be opened at Buchanan, near the head of Lake Superior. St. Lawrence is the name of a new town fifteen miles above Shakopee, on the Minnesota River. Trade between St. Paul and Superior is quite brisk. The total amount of peltries from the Pembina or Red River region exported from St. Paul, Minnesota, for 1856, is as follows : 64,292 rats ; 8,276 minks ; 1,428 martens ; 876 foxes ; 3,600 coons ; 1,045 fishers ; 10 wolverines ; 364 badgers ; 2,032 wolves ; 405 otter ; 2,542 kit-foxes ; 610 deer ; 20 cross-fox ; 8 silver fox ; 50 lynx ; 7,500 buffalo robes, and 586 pounds of beaver ; worth, in the aggregate, about $97,000.

A committee of the Ohio legislature are investigating a case in which it is charged that a convict has been deprived of his sight by the ignorance or recklessness of the penitentiary physician. It seems the physician operated upon one of his eyes and put it out. The convict refused then to allow another operation, but the doctor insisted, and now the man is stone blind. He has been in the penitentiary over his time because the warden and directors do not know what to do with him. Such a case certainly demands strict investigation.

The law for the protection of game in Illinois, went into effect on the 15th of January. It is unlawful for any one to kill or "have in possession" any game between that time and the 1st day of August, under a penalty of $15 each, for deer, and $5 each, for birds—the penalty to be recovered before any justice, one-half of which goes to the complainant, and the other to the school fund.

The three prisoners, Walter Beckworth, Robert Conroy, and Henry Cole, who escaped from Clinton Prison, were recaptured within twenty-four hours after leaving the prison. One of them went to a farmer's house the same evening, where he obtained food and shelter for the night, and the next day he was again in confinement. The other two were found secreted in a stable, one of them being badly frozen.

The Oregonian says : The Indians on the Grand Round Reserve are indulging their natural propensity for bloodshed by occasionally pitching into and slaying one another. Hardly a week passes that there is not a regular row kicked up by the "poor Indians."

Among the applicants to the Committee of Council of Cincinnati for wood at half price, last week, was a man who is estimated to be possessed of hard cash to the amount of $40,000 or $50,000. Of course his application was refused, this wood being designed only for the "deserving poor."

There was manufactured in Cincinnati and vicinity, last year, 19,260,000 gallons of proof whisky. This is only about seven millions short of the entire product of England, Ireland and Scotland.

A Negro belonging to Mr. Hatcher, in Laurens county, Ga., has confessed to his master that he had during three days swallowed 25 gold dollars which he had stolen.

Frank O'Mahony, formerly engaged with the Petersburg Express, and recently local editor of the Southside (Va.) Democrat, ii connected with the press in Savannah, Ga.

It is estimated that the love-letters dropped in the Post-office, at Lowell, average over 1,500 daily. The factory girls are unanimous in their opposition to "single blessedness."

The new board of Wardens of Athens, Ga., have passed a law taxing retail liquor sellers, $1,000 per annum, and billiard-tables $500 a year.

A bill to compell free Negroes to leave the State, is before the Alabama Legislature.

A Presbyterian Female College is to be established at Rome, Ga. The buildings have been purchased.

In the Georgia Lunatic Asylum, there are 160 patients—92 males and 69 females.

In the Georgia Academy for the Blind, at Macon, there are at present 19 pupils.

Mr. Denis Corcoran has disposed of his interest in the N. O. Delta.

J. W. Farber, Republican, has been elected Speaker of the Minnesota Legislature.

OUR WHITE SLAVES,

From the British Medical Journal.

A letter in the Times of January 1st, from Jane D. Le Plastrier, a humane milliner of Bond-street, draws timely attention to an evil inflicted upon helpless and sensitive women, for which the fashionable portion of the female world is chiefly to blame. All of our associates who have had any experience among the out patients of hospitals and dispensaries, must be familiar with the dismal troop of poor young creatures, with an appearance and bearing far superior to the general class of patients who apply at such places for relief. They flow on from year to year with a steady if not an increasing stream, and year by year the medical man sees scores of them drop into eternity, as Mirza, in the Eastern allegory, watches the travellers drop through the bridge and disappear in the swiftly running stream. Familiarity with suffering, it is true, deadens the public sense to any particular evil, and in course of time we are led to believe that cruelties which occur day by day without remonstrance, must be unavoidable. This patience of wrong is a great misfortune. If we ask ourselves the question, "What is the cause of this ceaseless waste of life? what immutable necessity consigns thousands of young women in this country year by year to the grave?"—the shocking answer is returned, "The dire necessity that a furbelow or a flounce shall be finished at a few hour's notice, in order that some old dowager may appear fine at an assembly, or that a blooming belle may appear in her battle field—the ball room—decked in becoming war paint!" We have legislated for the poor women who for centuries were employed in drawing corves of coal in the deep mines ; we have taken the children of the factory workers under our control ; and we have justified the interference with free trade in labour, under the plea that parliament should protect those who cannot protect themselves. We say without fear of contradiction, that the woman who worked like a beast of burden in the deep mine, or the child who sapped its young life plying spindles in the mill when it should have been asleep, were it not more to be pitied than the poor milliner working sixteen hours, nay, sometimes, in the height of the season, twenty hours a day, in the foul workroom ; and that the former did not require the interference of the legislature against the hardness of the world one whit more than the latter. We should be unjust were we to pass a sweeping condemnation upon all women for their inhumanity to one another ; but we must confess our experience teaches us that they are much less considerate to their own sex than men are. We do not believe that any miner would work young girls twenty hours a day for weeks, seeing them day by day drooping under such treatment ; yet this the fashionable milliners of the metropolis and of all large towns do, apparently without being aware that by so acting they are guilty of manslaughter. These persons see the havoc they are committing, and therefore are perhaps the more culpable for allowing it to go on unchecked. They are not, however, the cause of it ; the cause lies in the supposed exigencies of fashion, which will allow life to be sacrificed rather than appear twice at a dinner party in the same dress ; the cause is to be found in the imperious necessities of the boudoir, which command elaborate dresses to be made almost at the clapping of the hands, as in fairy stories, regardless of everything but the gratification of vanity. If the lady saw with her own eyes the misery caused by the tired labour employed upon her charming robe, perhaps she would be thoughtful upon the subject, and would for a season desist ; but as she does not, as the milliner interposes between her and the cruel thing to be done, she does not trouble herself more about the matter than to sing, perhaps, amid a crowd of admirers, in the most pathetic and moving mood, Hood's song of a shirt :—

With fingers weary and worn,
With eyeballs heavy and red,
A woman sat in unwomanly rags
Plying her needle and thread.
Stitch! stitch! stitch!
In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,
Would that its tone could reach the rich!
She sang the song of the shirt.

And thus with an expression of sentiment, but too many of the fair sex, we fear, plaster a wounded conscience, and go on allowing the evil to be done as before. It is one thing, however, to denounce an evil, and another to find a remedy for it. The evil is so great, that we feel the liveliest pleasure in giving publicity to that part of Jane De Le Plastrier's letter which aims at the root of it. She says :—

"Fashionable milliners and dressmakers are, of course, wholly supported by the ladies of the fashionable world, without whose patronage they could not continue their business. These very ladies, then, who have so much power in their own hands, should pledge themselves to withdraw their patronage from all houses that would not fall into the twelve-hour system—this fact to be ascertained, not from the employer, but by a letter or form, signed by all the young people and forwarded (say monthly) either to the Closing or Dressmakers' Association. The form might run thus :—

"'To the Committee of, &c.

"'Gentlemen—We have much pleasure of informing you that our duties during the past month have not exceeded twelve hours per day. We are, &c.'"

This appeal, be it observed, confines itself to asking that poor young creatures shall not be employed in a reeking atmosphere more than twelve hours a day—or two above that time which a strong man is asked to labour in the invigorating and fresh air! The old cry of impolicy of interfering with the "labour market" will, we know, be raised ; but what are the alternatives placed before the delicate girl in her teens? If she does not submit to the hours of the task-mistress, what chance has she of an honest meal? Let the answer come from Jane D. Le Plastrier, who speaks with the knowledge of the business :—

"The applications I constantly have from young people leaving these 'workhouses,' and the harrowing tales I hear from them, are distressing in the extreme. Two days since, one presented herself in a state of fearful distress, begging me to give her employment. She had lately been dismissed her situation, because, suffering severely in health, she refused to work after 10. p. m. ; she sought employment elsewhere, and was engaged, provided her reference suited ; but, when, in answer to the usual inquiry, 'What was her reason for leaving?' the answer was, 'Because she refused to work over hours, the unfortunate girl's doom was at once sealed ; nor would her employer give her a second reference. Thus was she left to wander the street almost homeless, and, after her scanty purse was exhausted, quite hungry."

To talk of free trade in labour as applicable to such poor creatures as these, is indeed a shocking mockery. Free trade, indeed! Yes, a free trade which allows its poor victims only one alternative from the most grinding slavery—and that is pollution! It is well known that the milliners and dressmakers are the fertile sources which feed prostitution in all large towns, and can we wonder at it, when we see the horrible straits they are subjected to before submitting to further degradation. We know full well that—

Sorrow is wrought by want of thought,
As well as by want of heart ; and for that reason we trust that the medical portion of the public will do its best to indoctrinate the female portion of the community with the magnitude of the evil they are working by shutting their eyes to the commonest dictates of humanity. We must endeavor to awaken dormant conscience to a consideration of the diseases engendered, and of the deformity produced by the demands of fashion—unshackled by consideration or pity. Few ladies would, we think, be so thoughtless of the health of the poor slaving milliners, if they clearly saw, as poor Hood did, that in their hard night labours in producing finery they are—

Sewing at once with a double thread,
A shroud as well as a gown.

CARLOW COLLEGE THEATRICALS.

From the Carlow Post.

The olden custom of having amateur theatricals with which to amuse and instruct the young students of Carlow Lay College, as well as the select number who are admitted as auditors, was revived this year. On looking over the names of the corps dramatique, we discovered that it was composed of young gentlemen who had not before appeared on the stage, and we could not overcome a certain feeling of misgiving as to the result of their efforts; however, when we were seated, and the curtain rose, all those misgivings vanished, and our astonishment was only equalled by our delight at the scene presented to our view. It would be almost invidious to speak of any of the young gentlemen in particular, yet we cannot refrain from saying a word or two respecting the most prominent of the dramatis personæ.—These we conceive to be—Masters Laurence Hyor, Edward Hyor, Henry O'Hea, and Robert Kennedy, in the first piece. Master Laurence Hyor's performance of the part of Larry Hoolagan in "More Blunders than One," was admirable; in our opinion, it far exceeded what is generally exhibited on the provincial boards. His courtship with Susan was quite natural, and he displayed that ready turn of wit which is Nature's gift to Irishmen in perfection. Whilst he was on the stage he kept the whole company in roars of laughter at the fine broad Irish brogue which he could so happily assume. Master O'Hea, who was next, or perhaps equal, to Master Hyor in sustaining the part allotted to him (Louisa Lovemore), drew forth frequent bursts of applause from the admiring audience. His affected passion at receiving the letter from Henry Melbourne, unopened; the proud disdain that flashed from his eyes when the gentleman sought an explanation; the willingness to forgive which is so inherent in woman's nature, and prompted Miss Lovemore to fly again to her lover's arms ere he breathed his last, were all admirably executed by this young gentleman, and he exhibited a vivacity and versatility throughout which were truly astonishing in one so young. We cannot speak so flatteringly of Master Edward Hyor's performance of Young Melbourne. In our opinion he should have acted with more energy; for though some parts of his piece required him to appear dejected at the unaccountable conduct of his "ladye-love" yet there were others that called for more warmth of expression than that gentleman exhibited. A little more spirit and energy, some additional variation of tone, will, with his gentlemanly bearing, enable him to afford his audience all the gratification which the line of character he is so well fitted to represent, is calculated to produce. Master M'Carthy did his part as Old Melbourne very respectably, but it is hard to expect to put "an old head on young shoulders." The second piece, "The Bould Soger Boy," was not by any means so well performed as the first, yet we could not help admiring the masterly piece of elocution to which we were treated by Master William Mara on the introduction of Harry Kildare to Captain O'Slasher. Sir George Dashwood was excellently performed by Master Taaffe, who exhibited a majestic bearing well suited for the occasion. Master White performed the part of Harry Kildare very respectably. Master O'Brien sustained Mr. Prettyman well, but he did not exhibit enough of hauteur to suit the part. Master Dooley failed, in our opinion, to realise the grace and ease which we have always been accustomed to associate with the name of the fair Lucy Dashwood; however, considering his extreme youth, his conception of his part was very good. We must not forget to mention Masters John O'Connell and Robert Kennedy, who acted the parts of rival lovers to the fair Jenny Jinks, for they sustained their parts with credit to themselves. Our small disposable space will not allow us to enter more fully into the merits of the respective performers; but we regret this the less as we shall have to speak of them again next week, when, we understand, there will be an opportunity afforded us of doing them more ample justice. We cannot, however, close this brief sketch without expressing our satisfaction at finding that Carlow College still maintains, in this as in every other department, the high reputation for which it was always remarkable, and the truth of this observation has been fully attested by those who, having left the mimic College stage, and joining in the world's great stage, have performed their parts with honor to themselves and credit to the persevering, pains-taking, and efficient President, Vice-President, and Professors of that Institution.

THE O'MEARA FAMILY.

From King James's Army List.

"The O'Mearas were a distinguished territorial sect in the barony of Upper Ormond, County Tipperary, and the name of their principal residence, Tuam-ui-Meara, is still retained in that of Toomavars, within that district; yet the only individuals of that name, who appear in the outlawries of 1642, are Dermot Meara, described as "of Dublin," and Catherine his wife.

"In the commencement of the seventeenth century flourished Dermod O'Meara, a physician and a poet, who, Ware says in his "Writers," was educated at Oxford. He wrote a history of the House of Ormond in verse, as also some prose medical treatises. His son Edmond O'Meara, also a Doctor of Oxford and a member of the College of Physicians of London, resided for some time at Bristol, and died in 1680, leaving three sons, William, a physician also; the above Major Francis, his second son; and the third, a Jesuit. This Francis was one of the burgesses in King James's Charter of 1687 to Wicklow, and was sheriff of that county in the following year. He was killed at the Battle of the Boyne. A funeral entry in Birmingham Tower, Office of Arms, records the death of Teigue O'Meara of Lishenuske, county Tipperary, (son and heir of William O'Meara of do., son and heir of Donnell O'Meara of do.,) who had married Honora, daughter of Robert Grace of Courtstown, county Kilkenny; by whom he had issue three sons, Daniel, William, and Patrick, and two daughters. Said Teigue died at Killballykelty, county Waterford, 30th April, 1636, and was interred at Clonmel.—Another member of this sept, Thomas Meara, was a Lieutenant in Colonel Dudley Bagnall's Regiment of Foot; and a Thady O'Meara, having been seized in the various lands in the county of his sept and being an adherent of James, was attainted; when Daniel O'Meara claimed a fee-tail therein; while in a patent of lands in the same county to John Otway, a saving was contained of the rights of Theodore "Maragh" to certain townlands specified therein.

"At the battle of Lauffield in 1747, Captain O'Meara was of the wounded in Clare's Brigade. He was living in 1793, when he resided with his son, General Felix O'Meara, Commandant of Dunkirk. This latter individual went into the French service in 1755, being then but eighteen years of age, and was immediately received into Rothe's Regiment. In the same year hostilities commenced in Europe, by Admiral Boscawen's taking the Alcide and Le Lys, French ships of war; and preparations were made for land actions on both sides. The Irish regiments embodied in France were sent to garrison Calais, Dunkirk, Boulogne, and Ardres, on that frontier of France nearest to England, as it was the policy of the French king to oppose the Irish troops to those of England. Here O'Meara, sharing in all the services of his regiment, gradually rose, as vacancies occurred. In 1778, when this brigade was incorporated with French regiments, O'Meara, then a captain, had the same rank given him in that of Auvergne, which was the second in military estimate of all the infantry of that country. Peace had existed between the two kingdoms for some years previously; but hostilities breaking out in the latter year (which led to the American war,) Captain O'Meara for a time took part with royalty. In the succeeding years, however, of intestine commotion in France, he, being then Lieutenant Colonel, resigned his commission to the crown, and, embracing the Republican movement, received a fresh commission from the national party. He fought under General Dumourier, afterwards under Dampierre, and was subsequently raised to the rank of Lieutenant-General, with the defence of Dunkirk confided to him. There he subsequently married a young lady with a fortune of 80,000 livres. Three younger brothers of his were also officers in the French service.

ORANGEISM IN THE NORTH.

From the Northern Whig.

On the other hand, how stands the case with Orangeism? An association, sanguinary, vengeful, and malignant as Ribbonism—its history a series of massacres, houseburnings, and waylayings—its name almost a synonyme for remorseless hate and defiant crime—in its very essence bloodthirsty, unchristian, and cruel—denounced from the throne as illegal, upwards of twenty years ago—denounced by the two houses of parliament—clearly as unlawful as its antitype Ribbonism, bound together, as its confederates are, by secret signs and passwords—it still holds its ground. Against it the law has never yet been attempted to be set in motion. The Orangeman makes no secret of his crime; he openly proclaims his connection with the society—erects Orange-halls to meet in, holds festive-meetings in presence of, and in company with, the magistrates of the land, numbers of whom are his sworn "brethren;" appears in public wearing the insignia and emblems of his order, and the law never once interferes. Government after government has permitted this state of things to go on unchecked. Nay, government itself, sworn to maintain the law impartially against all violators, has not merely connived at Orangeism, but some of its most notorious ringleaders have been appointed to the commission of the peace, or suffered to retain it—have been made sheriffs of their counties, and had other high honors conferred on them. The example of this has not been without its effect on the inferior officers of the law; and, if we required proof of the fact, we have far more than enough in the lengthened report, which will be found in our columns to-day, of the trial at the Ballymena Quarter Sessions on last Friday.

It appears that a party riot—or, rather, two riots—took place at the fair of Craigbilly, in the county of Antrim, in the months of June and August last. Roman Catholics—whether Ribbonmen or not, does not appear—were engaged on one side, and Orangemen on the other. To apportion the degree of blame belonging to one set or the other, is no part of our purpose. Both were equally engaged in creating a breach of the peace, and both should, as far as possible, have been equally made amenable to the law.

Well, what do we find? The police succeeded in arresting several of the Roman Catholics, who have been brought to trial, and some of them sentenced to imprisonment for participation in the riot. But, from the first to last, not a single man of the Orange rioters was taken into custody, or had informations lodged against him by those policemen who showed such vigilance in securing the riotous Papists. No wonder that the assistant-barrister commented in the strong terms he did on this remarkable fact. How is it to be accounted for? Is it not as plain as the sun at noon, that the police acted on the cue given them by their superiors of punishing the Roman Catholic offenders, and allowing the equally guilty Orangemen to escape? While such a one-sided, partial mode of administering the law is allowed to prevail, it is vain to hope that it will command the respect and obedience of the people. It is not in the nature of things that it should; and, for our own part, we are altogether at a loss for language which will adequately express our sense of the culpable manner in which the different governments, for the last few years, have allowed the law to slumber in reference to what the assistant-barrister of the county Antrim has so justly stigmatised as "a very disgraceful confederacy." How long, we ask, will Orangeism be permitted to rear its head among us in defiance of the law?

How long will it be permitted to corrupt the youth of the country by administering to them unlawful oaths, and instilling into their minds the most deadly hate and malice towards their fellow-countrymen?

It is melancholy to read the admission of one of the witnesses in this Craigbilly case, that, when only seventeen years old, he was sworn in a member of an Orange lodge; but still more melancholy is it to witness the workings of that system on his moral nature, as disclosed in the answer that he did not know the number of his lodge! If it had not been for the indifference and connivance of the Irish executive, Orangeism could long since have been as effectually crushed, and made to feel the strength of the law, as Ribbonism. What difference is there between them that they should not be subject to the same treatment? They are both illegal in their constitution, both vicious in their object, both the enemies of public tranquillity, and crime and bloodshed have tracked the steps of each. We will go so far as to say that of the two, Orangeism is the more dangerous to the peace of the country, and, for many reasons more imperatively calls for the vindication of the law. Ribbonism in many instances, was nothing more than a defensive association against the other, and where it now exists as such, its extinction would follow, as the natural consequences of the suppression of the antagonistic force which called it into being. Besides, patronised as Orangeism is, by Protestant noblemen and gentlemen, of course for purely selfish purposes, it loses, in the eyes of many of its supporters, its guilty character; and, on this account especially, it is incumbent on those entrusted with the vindication of the law to convince the more ignorant dupes that no men, however high their rank, can protect them from the consequences of its violation.

If the law, as it at present stands, cannot be made to reach the Orange Association, let such an alteration be made in it as will accomplish that object. It will be a scandal to the present government if they allow the next session to pass without giving some evidence of their sincere desire to crush completely this mischievous confederacy. The Orangemen of Ireland, as political allies, are now not worth courting. They have degenerated into the class which Sir Robert Peel, with so much terseness and truth, described them to be when he cast them off as broken, degraded, and worthless tools.

NOTES ON IRELAND.

From the Liverpool Journal.

Farewell to the year of grace 1856, memorable in Ireland for the "Crimean"—prolific harvests—remunerative prices for produce—tenantless (as regards the able-bodied) workhouses—in fine, for peace, plenty, and "progress,"—the exaction of the double income tax, and the Sadlier frauds, in connection with the Tipperary Joint-Stock Bank, forming the only drawbacks. "At no antecedent period for the last ten years (says the Louth Advertiser) were there so few inmates of the workhouse. At Christmas nearly all the local poor outside of the workhouse were enabled to fare comfortably out of their own earnings." Take it for all in all, not since the commencement of the present century has the past year had its "parallel." May it prove not the "shadow" of the "coming events," but the forerunner of many years of prosperity in the future of this heretofore sorely-tried land. But as it is not given to any except the compilers of "prophetic almanacs" to peep into futurity, and inasmuch as there is no lack of such sources of undoubted information, a few "notes" with respect to the "manners and customs" of those who flourished in the last century may prove acceptable in these holiday times, if only by way of variety. To begin with the month of January, 1733. The following items of intelligence appear in a Dublin journal published at that period:—

"January 2.—A coachman was, by order of the Righ Honorable the Lord Mayor, tied behind the coach and whipped through the city for giving saucy language to a gentleman."

"Tuesday night (the 2d) was played in the Council Chamber of the Castle, by several of our young nobility and gentry, the celebrated tragedy of the Distrest Mother. There was a great appearance, and the whole conducted with much decency."

"January 16.—This day a chairman was whipt through this city, and yesterday a coachman; both for giving saucy language."

"January 20.—Yesterday there was burned, by order of the Lord Mayor, in College-green, twenty-four barrels of bad herrings. This day being the anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who then entered into the 27th year of his age, there was a numerous appearance of nobility, &c., at the Castle, to congratulate their exellencies the lord trustees on the happy occasion, and at noon their excellencies went to the Strand at Irishtown, attended by a squadron of dragoons, and at night there was a play for the entertainment of the ladies."

A very active official, and potent withal, was the Lord Mayor in those days; and that he did not permit his "brief authority" to slumber, we have proof in re the coachmen's backs and the burning of bad herrings. If the holder of the office attempted to raise a similar flame in College-green at the present writing, he would be indicted at the suit of the sanitary commissioners, the fear of which was not before the eyes of his predecessor, for the very sufficient reason that there were no such commissioners at the time. We next come to a proclamation from "His Majesty's Treasury in Dublin," dated the 18th day of January, 1733, and signed "Luke Gardiner, Dep. Rec. Gen.," warning "all persons having salaries, employments, places, or pensions, or profits of places and employments," that by an act of parliament "passed the last session, held in 1731," it was enacted that they "should be taxed four shillings in the pound if they did not reside six calendar months in each year in the said kingdom of Ireland. This is therefore to give notice to all persons concerned that they do comply with the said act, or otherwise that they will incur the penalties in the said act mentioned." This hint to absentees closes the record of January, and then comes the following:—

"February 13.—On Wednesday last Capt. Mooney and Mr. Maguire were executed at St. Stephen's-green. They disowned the act for which they were executed, viz., of forcing men into foreign service, but that they voluntarily enlisted themselves."

"February 27.—Thursday last being the anniversary of her most sacred Majesty Queen Caroline, the morning was ushered in with the ringing of bells; at noon their Excellencies the Lords Justices, with a great number of the nobility and gentry, as likewise the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, met at the Castle, and heard a song on the occasion; they afterwards went in state round St. Stephen's-green, and at night gave a play to the ladies." "Increase of burials this week, 100."

"March 3.—This day James Cavanaugh, Dominick Donnelly, and James Taafe, were executed at St. Stephen's-green, for several robberies." Total buried last week, 98; decrease of births, 71."

"March 13. On Wednesday morning last the Lord Mayor sent four or five men, some of them being gentlemen's servants, to Newgate, for being out at an unseasonable time at night, with trumpets, kettle drums, and fiddles, serenading their mistresses."

"March 27.—Last Saturday about thirty criminals were shipped off for her Majesty's plantations, but we fear four of them have made their escape."

How calculated to excite the "special wonder" of the present generation is the above record. Who that would visit "St. Stephen's Green" now, with the Museum of Irish Industry, the Catholic University, the Palace of the Protestant Archbishop, the Royal College of Surgeons, embellishing its respective squares, could repress surprise at learning that it was, in days of yore, the "Gallows-green," the place for the public execution of malefactors of the city of Dublin? The last public announcement for the month of March is in the shape of an advertisement; and when it is stated that it was published from the 20th of March to the 3rd of April following, some idea may be formed of the distance between England and Ireland at that period, as compared with the present age of rapid locomotion. Here it is:—

"For Chester.—Mr. Luke Gaven having very well equipped his two ships Pretty Bessy and Golden Falcon, and furnished them with able sailors, clean bedding, and all other neccessaries fit for passengers, any person of quality, or other, disposed to go to Chester, may be informed of the exact time of either of the aforesaid ships sailing, by the said Mr. Gaven, at his house in Abbey-street. And that nobody may be disappointed of their passage, they are desired not to believe any one as to the time of either ship sailing, except the said Mr. Gaven or the masters of them."

It is very probable that Mr. Gaven's "fast sailing ships" started once a month, and did not occupy more than a week or ten days in the "voyage!" A large and varied assortment of these curious "chronicles" yet remain—but "sufficient for to-day."

THE MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND,

WITH A SYSTEM OF ARMAMENT, PLAN OF ORGANISATION, AND MODE OF WARFARE, ADAPTED TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COUNTRY.

BY CHARLES BEGGS.

(Continued.)

Tactics from this period remained much the same, until the time of the American Revolution, when, in that woody country, the columns of General Howe were enveloped and almost annihilated by clouds of undisciplined riflemen, without masses for their support. In about twenty years afterwards, from the success which followed this sort of fighting, a lesson had been learned by the generals of the French republic, who, instead of inventing new machines, have wisely adopted a new system of tactics, which, in brief, consisted in the application of the line of skirmishers with their supports, the success of which both astonished themselves and their opponents. This system has been improved since; the usual arrangement to-day being the division of large armies into smaller divisions, called "corps d'armee," the bases being composed of infantry, with a proportion of cavalry and artillery attached, and covered by skirmishers with their supports. In action, the line of battle is formed of infantry with its proportion of artillery stationed at intervals along the line; and this line supported by a second line, the distance between which depends on the nature of the ground—generally from 150 to 300 yards apart, in order, as far as possible, to keep the second line out of fire. In undulating ground the lines may be closed up to 100 yards' interval, but on level ground may be 200 or 300 yards apart, and the proportion of cavalry are generally in columns on the flanks of the second line, waiting for an opportunity to dash upon the broken or disordered ranks of the enemy. The habit of the English infantry is to charge in line two deep; the practice of the continental infantry is to charge in column or solid masses, covered and connected by skirmishers. The charge in line two deep, is the better formation for brave and stalwart men; and in column for bad troops, aided by skirmishers.

Our system of tactics is necessarily and totally different and superior. We have neither cavalry nor artillery to rely upon, as rotten reeds, to cramp our exertions and disorganize our movements. Our whole force is composed of movable and manageable infantry, the component parts of which are pikemen and gunmen; the pikemen forming the solid internal body and the gunmen the external active agents of that body.

The enemy will adopt one of two modes of action: he will concentrate his forces into one great army, and attack us in the pride of his united strength: or he will divide his army into several divisions, and attack us at so many points. Whichever course he pursues, is case equal to us; we will soon teach the predatory barbarians that Irishmen are as much their superiors in war, as they are in every other particular. Should his whole army move on one point, it must not be allowed to proceed without being stoutly opposed. He will, in the first instance, be under the necessity of repairing the roads, and making passages for his artillery, cavalry, and baggage, and while doing so he must be subjected to the attention of our skirmishers. At this point, his force will be vastly superior to ours; but that is not material, as our force, though then numerically weak, having, I may say, all Ireland at its back, can advantageously attack the enemy; because, although we attack, we cannot be compelled to give battle, and we retire, only when he comes in force and presses upon us or menaces our flanks, under cover of the lateral ditches, favoring him with a dropping fire as we recede before him. It is true that we have not the interminable forests, in which to shelter our men, as the American people had, during the American Revolution; but we have what are ten thousand times better—we have interminable ditches and hedges, hills and hollows, and broken ground; and I will now proceed to show how these are to be garrisoned and defended. The detachments from the neighboring encampments having been pushed forward, as I have already pointed out, the place having been carefully selected where a stand is to be made, the pikemen are formed in hollows or depressions of ground, or behind hills, in a line of contiguous columns at quarter distance, and two ditches in front of them without hedges are selected, one behind the other, in which two lines of pikemen are posted; one the line of attack, and the other the support. If time admitted, these ditches should be made, with spades, into steps or stairs from bottom to top, over which the men could evenly ascend and charge. Pikemen about to charge should never be posted behind a hedged ditch, because it would be almost impossible for them to charge through it without their order being broken; and if unavoidably placed in such a position, cuts should be made in the hedge, through which the divisions could file, reform line, and charge. Cuts somewhat similar were made by St. Ruth, at the battle of Aughrim. This done, the skirmishers are pushed forward a mile or two in front, with their supports and reserves. Three ditches, parallel with the enemy's front, are here selected, one behind the other, in which three lines of skirmishers are posted. The supports are drawn up in column behind the fourth ditch, and a column of pikemen, acting as the reserve, are drawn up behind the fifth ditch. In this order, they lie close and concealed from the enemy's view, awaiting his advance; and as soon as his vanguard comes within range, the first line of skirmishers open fire upon it, each man taking particular care to aim correctly, which firing they will vigorously maintain until the enemy comes on in force or threatens their flanks, when they will close to the left and right, and retire by the lateral ditches, clearing the front for the second line of skirmishers to fire upon the enemy, and form in column behind the reserve; and the moment the front of the second line is cleared, it will open fire upon the advancing enemy, and retire under the same circumstances and in the same manner as the first. The third line acts likewise. The fourth line, or supports, having the same number of men, now in their turn occupy three rear ditches as skirmishers; and the former lines of skirmishers, now in their turn form the fourth line, or supports; and the fifth line, or pikemen of the reserve, retire to the ditch in rear of the new supports, and again form the fifth line or reserve. In this manner will the skirmishers, supports, and reserves, in succession, retire until the enemy is lured on, until he attempts to storm the ditch in which the first line of pikemen is posted and concealed. The pikemen posted under cover of this ditch are to keep close, and never show until the enemy arrives within a few yards of them; and in order to break the order of the enemy, and deceive him still more, a line of gunsmen will form close in rear of the line of pikemen, and keep up an independent file-fire over the pikemen's heads, in the enemy's teeth; and the order to these gunsmen to cease fire will be the signal for the pikemen to be up and at the enemy.

The moment the first line of pikes is engaged, the offensive power of the enemy ceases—they become paralysed and unable to strike—and the supporting lines of pikes advance to assist the first without having anything to fear; and these supports will still be reinforced by the pike columns in reserve, if necessarry. It is evident that nothing but the enemy's infantry can advance over those hedged ditches; their cavalry and artillery must remain behind. Should any portion of their cavalry advance through the openings made by their infantry, and attack the skirmishers, they will form the rallying square close to a ditch, or retire in that order until they are relieved by a charge of pikemen, called up for that purpose from the reserve. If, after this transient brush with the enemy, he still presses forward in superior force, and we are too weak as yet in numbers to hold our ground, the pikemen will retire in separate compact columns upon the central position, covered in rear by the skirmishers, and the other encampments in combination will press upon the enemy's rear, and cut off his supplies in the manner described. Despatches must now be sent to all the central positions throughout Ireland, and all the counties must support the fighting county with reinforcements and supplies until the enemy is crushed. No matter how inferior to those of the enemy in numerical strength our forces may be, their armament, tactics, and strategy range on their side such an array of advantages, as to absolutely endow them with all the advantages of a permanent superiority. No matter in what order the enemy may advance, whether in line or columns, preceded by skirmishers, or both, our tactics and strategy are still the same. Every ditch and hill, embankment or undulation, or accident of ground, commanding or bearing upon the approach of the enemy, must be occupied by our gunsmen; and if time permitted, these obstacles to the enemy's progress should be improved by art, with the view of detaining them and breaking their order of formation. Every ditch or obstacle they cross detains them under our fire, breaks their order of formation, and puts them to the inconvenience of reforming, while all this time they are, without being able to return a single shot, exposed to the murderous fire of our men from the next ditch or cover; and the thicker and closer this fire could be given the better. Every ditch, with or without a hedge, furnishes a secure position for our men, while it checks the advance of the enemy, breaks their order of formation, and obliges them either to re-form after crossing the ditch under our fire or move forward in disorder and confusion, and receive at our hands the treatment which hopeless confusion merits. Should the enemy hope to embarrass us by menacing our flanks, we have only to line the lateral ditches with a portion of our men, and thus oppose a steady front to his flank attack.

Exclusive of the impediments which ditches and the like obstacles furnish, artillery, horse or foot, cannot operate in this moving onwards or backwards kind of fighting. Artillery cannot operate effectively without being stationary, well supported, and its flanks secured; and to effect any kind of respectable execution in the field, columns of men must be got foolish enough to stand as targets for its practice; but it is pretty certain that columns of men, sufficiently foolish, could not be got in Ireland nowadays, particularly when they can so very easily do better in action. No gunsmen, capable of availing themselves of the advantages of ground, need fear cavalry, because they cannot charge through hedged ditches, nor over walls nor embankments, nor on rugged ground; and on the most level surface the best cavalry in the world, no matter in what order they appear, are no match for pikemen, in either line or column formation.

Not wishing to weary the reader with many further remarks on these points, I think that I may now justly content myself with feeling that I have given sufficient explanation to show clearly—even to any civilian of the dullest mental capacity—the simplicity, practicability and superiority of the system of armament I have recommended, and the mode of warfare I have here propounded, in contradistinction to the obsolete system of armament and mode of tactics yet patronised and practised by the military powers of the world, and particularly the utter uselessness of cavalry and artillery in the field; therefore I will abridge as much as possible, the few observations I have yet to make.

This kind of warfare has two sides—the offensive and the defensive. The advantages are all arrayed on the defensive, and the disadvantages on the offensive side. And it is a golden fact, that the invader must always assume the offensive, as he cannot advance without doing so; while it is equally as golden a fact, that the people have the option of assuming either the offensive or defensive at pleasure. In retiring before the advancing enemy, the defensive system, as I have shown, is fully developed; but when other detachments of ours assemble in rear of the advancing enemy, with the view of isolating him and cutting off his supplies, should these detachments fall upon his rear, in doing so, they assume the defensive; but in this case they must only encircle his rear with a concave line of skirmishers, sustained by their supports and reserves, and continue to gall him with their fire. The reserves should invariably be composed of pikemen, that in case the enemy should halt and assume the offensive against them, with the view of relieving his rear, the order of battle then becomes reversed, and his attack should be repulsed by the pike divisions, advantageously posted and compactly arrayed in reserve for that purpose.

TO BE CONTINUED.

The Protestant Bishopric of Cork is still undisposed of. Several individuals are spoken of, among the rest, Dean Bermingham, of Limerick, the Rev. Dr. O'Callaghan, connected with this locality, the Rev. William Fitzgerald, chaplain to Archbishop Whately, besides Archdeacon Kyle, whose name is most prominently before the public. Saunders' News-Letter is the authority for the rumor that gives the place to Dr. Whately's chaplain.

The town of Westport, the seat of Colonel, the Marquis of Sligo, and the headquarters of the permanent staff of the South Mayo Rifles, has lately been the scene of unusual gaity, the raising of Volunteers have commenced vigorously, under the supervision of Captain and Adjutant Butcher, and Dr. Burke, surgeon of the regiment. The staff and brass band paraded the streets for several hours.

It is thought says the Dublin Saunders that a revision of the county magistracy is not unlikely to take place in Ireland—no party to be re-appointed whose income is not independent of his farming pursuits or trade, or whose social position is not on a par with the gentry of the district.

During the recent run on the Tipperary National Bank, a farmer withdrew all his money, conveyed it home, and secreted it. He died suddenly and his family cannot find the place where the coin is deposited.

Three weeks since, the house of Mr. Wallace, chandler, Tralee, was accidentally burned down, with all the property therein; also the premises adjoining, belonging to Mr. Terrence O'Grady, confectioner. The latter was insured for £200.

The people of Carrick-on-Suir are taking steps to improve their Temperance Hall, or Town Hall.

Irish News.

The Earl of Carlisle arrived in Kingstown Harbor, by special steamer from Holyhead shortly before eleven o'clock on Tuesday night. His Excellency, who was accompanied by his private secretary (Capt. Everard) and the Hon. Capt. Ellis, reached the Dublin terminus of the Kingston railway at half-past eleven, and proceded to the Viceregal Lodge in Phœnix Park. Rumors of a change in the Irish government are again afloat, to the effect that Lord Carlisle and Mr. Horsman retire from their respective offices, to be succeeded, the former by Mr. Granville, and the latter by, of all men in the world, Sir Robert Peel! Although it is probable enough that the present excellent Viceroy may desire to relinquish an office which, it is said, he accepted on condition of his tenure being limited to a period named, and that his stay in Ireland may be much shorter than could be wished—it is exceedingly improbable, in the event of Mr. Horsman's resignation of the office of Chief Secretary, that he will be succeeded by Sir Robert Peel. If the office be vacated a very, different manner of man will have the appoinment. One thing is certain, so long as Lord Carlisle resides at Dublin Castle there will be no complaints as to the curtailment of the Vice-regal festivities. Already it is announced that there is to be a levee on the 28th and a drawing-room on the 29th inst.

During the Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell, the destination of the "mere Irish," as settled by the rulers of the day, was "To Hell or Connaught;" and it would appear from a statement in the Ballinasloe Star that the last named locality is looked upon as a favored spot by another class of settlers in the reign of Queen Victoria. It is recorded in "Clarenden's life" that in Cromwell's time all the Irish were required "to retire, by a day named, to the province of Connaught, under the penalty of death," and we have now an announcement in the journal named that "the demand for farms in the West of Ireland by the English and Scotch agriculturists continues unabated. Every week we receive applications from parties who are anxious to settle in Connaught, for advice and assistance." We are also told that there are applicants from Ulster, "who are anxious to invest their capital in less densely populated districts." Should this demand continue, we shall have a "plantation" of Connaught, but of a far more acceptable and serviceable kind than those which followed the confiscations of Queen Elizabeth, James the Eirst, Cromwell, and William the Third.

The Belfast Literary and Debating Society having been in existence only a few months, has succeeded, through the energy of its members, in attaining a position and influence such as has not fallen to the lot of any contemporary society in this country. The society has provided itself with an excellent library, comprising an assortment of natural and philosophical works, selected with the utmost care and good taste. This valuable collection has been removed to a commodious room which has been fitted up at considerable expense.

The Right Hon. Thomas Viscount De Vesci has been chosen by a majority of votes to be the Peer to sit in the House of Lords of the United Kingdom, in the room of Cornwallis, Viscount Hawarden, deceased. The Right Hon. Somerset Richard, Earl of Belmore, has been chosen by a majority of votes to be the Peer to sit in the House of Lords of the United Kingdom, in the room of the late James Earl of Bandon, deceased.

The editor of the Derry Journal learns with much satisfaction that Sir William Cubitt intends to be present at the next meeting of the Londonderry Bridge Commissioners, to state which of the plans for the new bridge he considers most worthy of being adopted.

At Borrisokane petty sessions, the other day, Sub-inspector James Healy prosecuted a man named John Ryan, for being upon the premises, and working an illicit still, at Coorevan. The magistrates inflicted a penalty of £100, or, in default, 12 months' imprisonment.

The Lord Chancellor has, on the recommendation of the Marquis of Londonderry, appointed John W. Fulton, of Braidugh House and the Inner Temple, Esq., barrister-at-law and J. P., for the county of Down.

From the Newry Telegraph we understand that Mr. Harpur has a pig, reared by him, which, when sixteen months' old, weighed in the scales of Templegowran Mill, five "long-hundreds," of one hundred and twenty pounds each.

At a road sessions for the barony of Barrymore, county Cork, a presentment for £35 was passed in favor of Nicholas Murphy, compensation for two stacks of barley maliciously burned; and £25 to a farmer named Nunan, upon whose land two cows were killed.

The British Government have sent over auditors from London to investigate the accounts of the several railways in Ireland to which public loans have been advanced. Two gentlemen have arrived in Dublin for that purpose.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed William Rogan, Esq., M. D., Resident Physician to the Londonderry District Lunatic Asylum. He has also appointed Mrs. Elizabeth Grant as Resident Matron in the same institution.

The extensive flour mills of Ballycorney, near O'Brien's Bridge, in the county Clare, have been destroyed by fire. The value of the property consumed was about £2,000. It was insured for only £1,500 in the National Insurance Office.

Mr. Willoughby George Fox, sub-inspector in the Irish constabulary, has been appointed chief constable for Derbyshire, at a salary of £100 a year, with an addition of £1 a week for travelling expenses.

At Parsonstown quarter sessions, a few weeks since, the assistant-barrister decided that convents are not liable to grand jury cess or poor rates.

The Misses Harriette and Georgiana Poe, daughters of the late James Poe, Esq., solicitor, Kilkenny, have taken the white veil at the Presentation Convent, Middleton, County Cork.

The Limerick Chronicle informs us that several officers of the Irish militia regiments will proceed in the next packet from Liverpool to Australia as settlers.

Mr. John Rea, Solicitor for the Liberal Committee, has left Belfast, for London, to prepare for the opposition to the Indemnity bill.

The Marquis of Waterford is quite recovered from the effects of his late accident.

There are 367 paupers in the Carrick Union, being a decrease of 183 from the same period last year.

The expense to the country for education in Ireland in the year ended March last, was £195,040.

The agitation against the Income Tax in Ireland is acquiring some consequence if we may judge from the following facts :—In Belfast, the Mayor has convened a meeting at the Music Hall, "for the purpose of having the income tax reduced from the present war rate." The requisition is headed by Wm. Sherman Crawford, and bears the names of many of the principal manufacturers and merchants. In the city of Cork, the Mayor has called a meeting to afford the citizens an opportunity of protesting against the impost. In Drogheda, the Corporation has adopted a petition against the tax, on the motion of Alderman Boylan. In Carlow, the tax payers, throwing aside all party feeling, have determined in one vast body to protest against the tax. In Enniskillen, the people have met and adopted a petition against it. In Clonmel, the Corporation have adopted a petition for the reduction of the tax, on the motion of Alderman Hackett, seconded by Alderman Bianconi. In Galway, a requisition addressed to the High Sheriff of the town, is in course of signature, requesting him to call a meeting of the county of the town in condemnation of the tax. In Londonderry, the city and county were convened to petition for its reduction. And in Wexford, Enniscorthy is taking the initiative for convening a county meeting. When Mr. Walsh, J.P., mentioned the subject at a recent assembly of the town council of the Borough, there was an unanimous expression of opinion that a petition against it should be forwarded to the legislature without delay.

The Evening Mail, Dublin, publishes a sort of balance sheet of the Bar appointments made in the course of it, showing the proportion of Protestants and Roman Catholics, and giving the names and offices :—

Roman Catholics—Mr. Keogh, Judge, vice Torrens, Protestant ; Mr. Fitzgerald, Attorney General, vice Keogh ; Mr. Sausse, Indian Judge ; Sir Colman O'Loghlen, Assistant Barrister, vice Sausse ; Mr. O'Donnell, Capel street office, vice Kelly, Protestant ; Mr. M'Dermot, College street office, vice Burke, Protestant ; Mr. Barry, Australian Judge ; Mr. Lynch, Assistant Barrister, vice Perrin, Protestant—Total 8. Protestant—Mr. Christian, Solicitor General—Total 1. The Judges of Appeals, and of the Admiralty, the Mail observes, are not brought to credit under this head—the first being made by the Committee of the House of Commons, and the other by law.

The Roscommon Messenger finds that two cases of the use of the knife have occurred in Roscommon during the past week. In one case the victim dropped dead, stabbed to the heart. Owen Levin, when returning to Frenchpark from the fair of Ballaghadereen, having got into some altercation with parties who were traveling on the same road, received two stabs, both of which reached the heart. A man named John Low, his son, and John Madden, are in custody on the charge. Another case, though not attended with the same fatal results, occurred at Strokestown, when a man named John Hedlan was stabbed in the leg by Bernard Lennon, who has since absconded.

Another instance of the cruelty of the administration of the English and Scotch poor law has come under the observation of the Derry Sentinel. An officer arrived in Derry from Edinburgh, bringing with him two men, three women, and two children, portions of five families. One of the women, with her two children, left Derry twenty-three years ago, and resided that time in Glasgow, with the exception of a few months in Edinburgh, from which place she was deported to Derry ; the others belonged to Fermanagh and Armagh. One proceeding homewards, the remainder were admitted by the relieving officer, Mr. Klophel, to the union work-house.

The Carlow Sentinel complains that, within the last few weeks, a daring act of incendiarism was attempted by one of those wretches whom the government let loose on society, instead of removing them to some penal settlement. A large hay-rick, the property of Mr. Lord, was set on fire in the vicinity of his residence—The Lodge, Athy. Were it not for the exertions of the towns-people, of all classes, aided by the constabulary, the dwelling-house and the entire premises would have been consumed, and a great deal of valuable property destroyed. The perpetrator of this act has been arrested ; his name is Edward Kennedy ; he had been under transportation for robbery ; but, after the expiration of 12 months' imprisonment, he got a "ticket-of-leave," and in his wanderings paid a visit to Athy.

Letters have been received by the Mayor and Town Clerk of Clonmel, from William Kemmis, Esq., Crown Solicitor, requesting the immediate payment of the three half yearly instalments of Minister's money, due out of the houses liable to the impost, within the limits of the borough, up to the 29th September, 1856. Should the debt not be discharged before the 11th inst., the Crown Solicitor has threatened to take steps to enforce its payment. It is the intention of the Mayor to convene a meeting of the Commissioners to see what shall be done under the circumstances.

On New Year's morning a fine young woman named Catherine Mahony, a daughter of a small farmer residing at Peafield, near Ballysimon, county Limerick, went to a mill-pond to draw a kettle of water, when she lost her balance and fell into the pond. There being no assistance at hand, she was drowned. The body was found about an hour after. The police measured the depth of the water, and found it to be only three feet.

Simon Byrne, who was captured in the attempt to steal three sheep, the property of Mr. Robert Hanlon, of Grangeford, was convicted, and sentenced to ten year's penal servitude. An order was read from the Lord Lieutenant to forward the prisoner to the convict depot for having violated his parole. By this new rule the prisoner will undergo penal servitude for seventeen years, having, in addition to his present sentence, seven years of penal servitude to undergo under the first.

Connaught has again pronounced for Tenant-right. The Provincial meeting at Castlebar could not be held with closed doors. Thousands of the Mayo men flocked to it from all parts of the country. It was found necessary to hold the meeting in the open air. Mr. Swift, M. P., Mr. Kennedy, M. P., Mr. Moore, Father Browne, P.P., the Venerable Archdeacon Coghlan, and other gentlemen attended. So we are enthusiastically informed by the Nation.

It is reported that Lieutenant-Colonel Roberts will succeed Major Priestly in the Constabulary department, and that Mr. Piercy, county Dublin inspector, will succeed Lieutenant-Colonel Roberts at the Park Depot. Mr. Healy, S. I. Borrisokane, has been promoted from the rank of third-class to that of second-class sub-inspector.

The bill for the Athenry and Tuam railway line is unavoidably postponed for this year. To the double dealing and bad faith of certain parties connected with the Great Midland, the Galway Vindicator says, the public may attribute this result.

It becomes the duty of the Northern Whig from day to day to record instances of grievous inhumanity towards natives of Ireland, long resident in Scotland and England, perpetrated by the parish authorities on the other side of the Channel, so soon as by accident or illness these poor creatures become chargeable, in deporting them from their shores. The following, says the Whig, are the latest cases of this description which have come under notice at the port of Belfast :—Mary Bruce, a young woman in a very helpless condition, was landed from the Glagow steamer. Superintendent Magee's attention was called to the condition of the poor female, and he sent her to a refreshment house, where she got breakfast. This young woman was sent over by the parochial authorities of Glasgow. Her native place is Lisbon, whither she went in search of her father. Francis M'Laughlin and his wife, an old couple, between 60 and 70 years of age, were sent over by the parochial authorities of London, in the steamer Oscar. They were in England for 26 years, and were natives of the county Derry. They were in such an exhausted state after the voyage that they were not fit to be removed from the lodgings in Belfast for two days. Margaret Brennan and her sister were landed from Glasgow by the steamer Stork, on the 3d instant, in a most deplorable condition—naked and penniless. Superintendent Magee's attention was directed to them as they were sitting in one of the Quay sheds, crying from cold and hunger. They stated that they had so far to go as the King's County.

A farmer named Dyce was transacting some business in Tullow last Saturday three weeks, after which he proceeded home in a cart in company with his brother-in-law, Michael Kealey. When they arrived at Tankardstown Dyce alighted opposite the house of a farmer named M'Lean, with the avowed purpose of lighting his pipe. The door of the dwelling being closed, he gave several knocks, whereupon M'Lean's wife inquired who was there? The deceased stated his object. Having been repulsed he made use of some rude observations towards the woman, and then pursued his way. M'Lean's wife felt indignant at the remarks, and went into an adjoining field and stated the grievances to her husband. The circumstance roused the worst passions of the man, as he called on his brother to accompany him for the purpose of avenging the insult. Both hastened in pursuit of the unfortunate deceased. Having pursued Dyce for about a mile across the fields, they pounced upon him and his companion, and belabored them with heavy sticks. The attacked having no means of defending themselves, were soon overpowered and dreadfully mangled. Dyce only survived a few hours, but Kealy escaped with a broken head and arm. The jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against the M'Leans, and the coroner issued his warrant for their apprehension.

A little more than three weeks ago, as the coach which leaves Killarney for Tralee, on the arrival of the four o'clock train, was coming down Farrenfore hill, the horses took head, and the driver, Neenan, as his only alternative, kept the horses to the left, to avoid the precipice on the other side, and contrived to bring down one of the leaders, which brought the coach against the ditch. The passengers at once got things to rights, and after coming down the hill got on again, and arrived here about an hour after the usual time. Had the horses gone to the right hand side, nothing could have saved the entire number of passengers, about a dozen, from destruction down the precipice, for the fence there happens to be very low. Among the passengers was Capt. Herbert, of the Kerry Militia, whose father, the Rev. Mr. Herbert, of Cahernane, was killed some years ago by a fall from his gig, the horse, while driving himself, having ran off and gone down this very same precipice. Two cows were killed at Rateanny, near Tralee, a few evenings ago, by the fall of a thunderbolt, and several trees, with portions of the walls of the old Rateanny house were torn down.

A fire of a most alarming nature broke out at Drinagh, in the frieze and worsted manufactory of Mr. James Millner, of Mountmellick, early last month. Perceiving smoke issuing from one of the windows, the superintendent, who resides on the premises, despatched a messenger to Mountmellick to inform Mr. Millner of the occurrence, and enlist the aid of the constabulary to extinguish the fire. The local fire-engine was brought with all rapidity from Mountmellick, and was vigorously worked by Head constable Nicholson and the police, aided by the spectators, under the directions of Messrs. Alfred Neale and Henry Odlum, who alternately guided its movements, and used every exertion to render it effective. A large quantity of wool was rescued from the flames, but with the exception of the department in which the tuck-mill was situated, the entire building, with its enormous and expensive machinery, was totally destroyed. Four naked walls are all that remain of this splendid concern, in which the spirited proprietor carried on for years, a most lucrative manufacture.

The meeting convened in Ennis by the High Sheriff, for petitioning Parliament for the reduction of the income tax, has come off. Owing to the unfavorable state of the weather the meeting was smaller than it would otherwise have been ; but, the Clare Freeman says, there can be no doubt that the general feeling of the country is strongly against the continuance of the tax.

The Archbishop of Cashel, the pious and amiable Dr. Slattery, has been very ill for some days, but late accounts represents his Grace to be a good deal better. The venerable prelate received the last rites. The constant enquiries at the Palace, Thurles, where he lies ill, indicate the profound esteem and veneration in which he is held by his clergy and the flock committed to his care.

At the last Waterford city Quarter Sessions, Mr. T. Graham, traveller and clerk in the employment of the Messrs. Davis, Strangman & Co., was indicted for embezzlement of two sums of money—one of £50 and the other of £36 16s.—monies due to his employers. The prisoner having been convicted, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment with hard labor.

Mr. Thadeus Kelly, of Limerick, apothecary, has received an order on the Treasury for £1,000, first portion of a much larger sum left him by the will of his brother Denis, late clerk in the Customs department at the Cape of Good Hope, where he died on the 9th of April last.

Sir J. T. Burke, Marble Hill, representative of the county Galway, will shortly lead to the hymenial altar the amiable and accomplished Mary, second daughter of Anthony F. Nugent, Esq., of Pallas, county Galway.

E. H. Perry, Esq., agent to the Perry estates in Mayo, has noticed all the tenants on the property that, in case of conviction for illicit distillation, the party will be dispossessed.

Vacancies have occurred in the 27th Regiment, and directions have been issued to the parties in Ireland to resume recruiting.

A melancholy catastrophe has occurred at Ballinleena, about three miles from Croom, county Limerick. Two young men, farmers, named O'Callaghan, were returning from market with their cars. Owing to the recent high tides and flood, they had to pass a portion of the road near to the river at Ballinleena, which was at the time deeply covered with water. To avoid the spot which was so flooded, one of the brothers took a different route, but the other, not dreading any consequence, pursued the dangerous path, and in the attempt lost his life, the horse and car having been carried off by the stream and the young man drowned.

A fatal occurrence took place lately on the river, a little below the New Docks, Limerick. As the barque Hylton, of Taganrog, was coming up to the quays, she came in contact with a small sloop, the Sea Lark, the property of Messrs. Russell, then lying at anchor. The rigging of the barque got entangled in the bowsprit of the Sea Lark, and one of the latter immediately went forward on the bowsprit to free the ropes. In endeavoring to do so, the poor fellow fell into the river, and was not again seen to rise. His name was John Slattery, a native of Kilkee. He left a wife and four children to deplore his fate.

The Anglo Celt informs us that the practice of "hunting the wren" took place in the King's County on St. Stephens' Day, when some two hundred blackguards began fighting among themselves in the yard of a public house, whereupon four unarmed policemen interfered, when the whole of the mob turned on the police, and pursued them to their barracks, where the Acting Constable prepared to fire on the pursuers. They then retired, but the police secured thirteen of the rioters.

The extensive Patent Cordage Works of Messrs. Wallis and Pollock, city of Cork, were recently discovered to be on fire. Owing to the exertions of the workmen in the establishment under the direction of the proprietors, assisted by the inhabitants of the locality, the fire was confined to the yarn and machinery departments, which, with contents, were entirely destroyed. The loss sustained amounts to £2,000. The works, however, will soon be in working order again The proprietors were only partly insured.

A serious accident has occurred in Cork to a young man named Thomas Hedges, son of the sexton of St. Nicholas' Church. He and a son of Mr. Murray, lessee of the Theatre Royal, Cook street, were out shooting, and having crossed a hedge he desired Mr. Murray to hand him over the gun. The latter was in the act of doing so when the charge went off, lodging in the right arm of Hodges and breaking the shoulder bone. He was immediately removed to the South Infirmary. As the shot still remains in the arm, it is feared that amputation will be necessary.

The Galway Vindicator has much pleasure in announcing that P. Sarsfield Comyn, Esq., high-sheriff elect for the town of Galway, has had an interview in Dublin with James Edward Stopford, Esq., Vice-commodore, and other members of the Royal Western Yacht Club of Ireland, and have induced them to determine on holding their regatta for this year in Galway bay. Early in June it will come off.

At the Head Police Office, Dublin, Mr. Wm. Nolan, of Golden-lane, has been prosecuted by the Excise for having on his premises a quantity of snuff adulterated with sawdust and yellow ochre. The accused was committed, and fined in a penalty of £200, on each of the counts charged. Messrs. Dutch, Capel street ; Keegan, and Dempsey, Harrold's Cross ; and Creamer, of Capel street; pleaded guilty of a similar offence, and were fined £50 each.

On the invitation of the Viscount and Viscountess Milton, the employes and artisans on the Fitzwilliam estates, in the county of Wicklow, lately assembled to the number of nearly four hundred at Coolattin Park. By 3 o'clock this highly respectable dinner party was seated, enjoying roast beef with many etceteras, and quaffing strong ale. With brimful bowls of good old whiskey punch, the company responded to the healths of Viscount and Viscountess Milton, Master Fitzwilliam, and Ralph Laurenson, Esq.

The following gentlemen have been elected Directors of the Mining Company of Ireland for the ensuing year :—Edward Atkinson, Francis Barker, M.D. ; Thomas Bewley, Samuel Bewley, jun., Francis Codd, Edward A. Gibbon, James Gray, Robert R. Guinness, Sir Robert John Kane, M.D. ; James Birch Kennedy, James Magee, Richard O'Gorman, James Perry, Henry Pim, and William Stephens.

The Catholics of Ballymoney are about to present a tea-service of silver to their late respected parish priest, the Rev. H. O'Loughlin, who has been removed to Randalstown. The Rev. H. O'Loughlin won general affection in the parish of Ballymoney, where his labors as a zealous pastor produced rich fruits.

Francis Thomas Mackreth, Esq., of Canonbury Park, London, has been solicited to become a candidate for the representation of Bandon. Mr. Mackreth was one of the late directors of the Cork and Bandon Railway, and is reputed to be quite wealthy and influential.

Under the head of Bankrupts, the Ulsterman announces that James Craig, of Craigstown, county Antrim, linen merchant, dealer and chapman, was to surrender on Wednesday the 21st of January last. Wood Caulfield Hazelton, of 44 Donegal street, Belfast, county Antrim, grocer, dealer and chapman, to surrender on the same day.

Early in the second week of January, in the Parish Church, Carrickfergus, by the Rev. C. B. Knox, Walter Mearns, a recipient of Gill's charity, aged 84, was married to Jane Boyce, of King's Moss, aged 30. An immense crowd assembled with various sorts of musical instruments, to usher in the remarkable event.

The annual election for Harbor Commissioners has taken place in Derry. The retiring members, Alderman M'Arthur, Messrs. John Munn, Pitt Skipton, W. D. Porter, and Samuel Smith. The successful candidates are Messrs. John O'Neill, John Munn, Pitt Skipton, W. D. Porter, and R. Newton.

The Rev. Wm. Crook, jun., has recently delivered an interesting lecture at the Court-house, Nenagh, on The claims of Temperance, having been invited to do so by Lord Dunalley, the noblemen and gentry of the district, owing, it is said, to the vast increase of intemperance amongst the peasantry.

At the last Matriculation Examination in Queen's College, Cork, Mr. P. O'Hea, second son of J. O'Hea, Esq., Barrister, carried off the first prize from a number of competitors.

Edward Bagwell Purefoy, Esq., High Sheriff, has convened a meeting of the North Riding of Tipperary, at Nenagh, to petition for the repeal of the war portion of the income tax.

Answers to Correspondents.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Captain Maurice Walsh, of New-York, having set out to travel through America, is authorized to collect advertisements and subscriptions for this paper. Captain Walsh has our written authority, which he will present to those who may not be personally acquainted with him.

News Agents.—Mr. Thomas McCormack, of Honesdale, Mr. C. C. Molony, of Dunkirk, and Mr. Robert Conway, of Dubuque, have kindly consented to act as our Agents.

Subscribers.—Five cents is all it costs to Register a letter at the Post-Office when it is mailed. It is quite a necessary precaution for parties who remit us money, in all instances, to take.

A letter, enclosing a large subscription, gives us the following extremely interesting particulars regarding Dubuque, the capital of Iowa:

On my first visit to this city (Dubuque,) nearly ten years ago, I found it a very trifling place, with a population of about 3,000 persons, with only half a dozen brick buildings, and was truly surprised on my second visit to find it a large and growing city. We have now in full blast twenty steam-factories of different kinds, with two railroads and two more in contemplation. It is considered that this will be a large city in a very few years.

The Mellery Monastery settlement is about eight miles from here; as is also, by another route, the "St. Joseph Ladies' Seminary," conducted by the Sisters of Charity. The fact of these institutions being a desideratum in a new State, has helped the tide of emigration into the country ten fold. The country all round is thickly settled, mostly by Irish Catholics—a great number of them from the vicinity of Waterford. Prairie lands rate very high; in fact, improved farms cannot be purchased less than $30 per acre. This State I consider very healthy, and not second to any State in the Union in agricultural products, particularly those of wheat, oats, corn, and last not least of "Irish" potatoes—these are not inferior to those of the county Wexford, either in flavor or product.

There are no fogs, neither is their much rain; plenty of snow, accompanied by Jack Frost for at least four months. We have no violent or rapid changes of temperature—such as take place further South. At the time I write, the country is covered with a hardened snowy surface about three feet in depth, over which—as upon an excellent macadamised road, the traffic of the country is carried on. I was somewhat surprised at first to see the rapid strides of the different sleighs and hear the musical sounds of the thousand bells on the horses and mules, as they clatter over the frozen track.

There was expended in buildings alone last season nearly Two Millions of Dollars, and it is rumored that at least double that sum will be expended the coming season, exclusive of all city improvements. The City Council have sold to J. P. Farley & Co., twenty-eight acres of city property. This property lies in front of the city, and is now advertised to be filled and graded; three or four streets to be filled and continued to the river—which is a very heavy job—and will cost thousands of dollars; all the sloughs are to be filled up, and our steamboat landing will in future be on the main river which is at least a half mile from the business part of the town.

There are also to be built the coming season two Catholic Churches, and the foundation of the contemplated Cathedral removed off Main street. In fact, you would not credit half what I could say about the extraordinary improvements going on here. Still, money is very scarce; rents awfully high, and the markets extravagantly dear; the weather extremely cold—from 15 to 37 below zero; wood, $8 to $9 per cord—the poor find it very hard to provide all those necessaries of life; business is very dull and will continue so until the river opens. At present, I will not trespass further on your patience.

I have the honor to remain your obedient servant, R. C.

The venerable associations of the writer, entitle these few lines to the most grateful acknowledgement. It is dated from Whittle's Mills, Virginia.

Sir: Above is a check for your paper which you have been sending me, and to which I wish success. Please acknowledge receipt. In 1798 I was acquainted with and embarked in the same cause with Tone, Arthur, O'Connor, Lord E. Fitzgerald, Russell, Wilson, and all the other prominent advocates for the emancipation of my native country. Subsequently with Robert Emmet, and by correspondence with Thomas Adis, when living in New-York. If please God, I should live to the 19th instant, I will have attained eighty-one years.

Wishing you every possible success, I remain with respect,
Your friend, Fortescue Whittle.
To the Editor of the Irish News.

"St. Valentine."—We really cannot comply with your polite request, to write you "a few tender sentiments of a blighted affection," and a couple of stinging retorts against the fair but foul fiend who has destroyed your peace for ever." You are a very serio-comic scapegrace, and must fall back on your own resources, as take the ready-made "soft sawder" and sentiment of our neighbor, P. J. Cozans, who in the words of his audacious and heartless advertisement, is a "wholesale dealer and jobber" in the finer sensibilities of our nature, as also in the comic balm which heals hearts, and returns the shafts of Cupid to the quivers from which they were originally despatched. Cozans will aid you, no doubt. He makes love for the millions.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1857.

MARCY AND CLARENDON OUSTED BY THE SENATE—DON FERMIN FERRER—SUCCESS TO NICARAGUA!

There resides at present in New-York an eminent citizen of Nicaragua. His wealth is immense. Valleys, teeming with gold and silver, are his. Cattle, counted by thousands, belong to him. Plantations, rich as any in Louisiana or the Carolinas, have been his heritage. His intellectual resources are not less splendid than his material. Eloquent, philosophic, erudite, he has served his beautiful country in several high capacities, to the best advantage. His patriotism is pure. Pure as the waters of the glorious Lake in which the Red Star is mirrored. It is generous. Generous as the exuberant soil which gave him birth. Heroic, it supremely is. When the news reached this city that Granada was in ashes, and that, with the rest, his own sumptuous residence was but a heap of blackened ruins—

"Well, what of it?" he exclaimed. "The Independence of my country will rise from the ashes!"

This man, so fortunate, so gifted, so hopeful, so heroic, is Don Fermin Ferrer. Accredited as Minister from Nicaragua to this country, he awaits the inauguration of James Buchanan, to present his credentials. In the meanwhile, he has rendered a magnificent service to his country. With the simple force of a clear mind, thoroughly instructed in the affairs of his country, and what her position, territory, and foreign relations, should be, he has impressively advised the American Senate on the eve of their committing a fatal wrong. The Senate has acted on his advice. A Treaty, which went to legitimatize a huge robbery and a mob of spurious savages, at the very moment it was about being ratified, met with the fate which every fraud deserves. As an unclean thing—as a scrap of foul linen—it was swept out from the Senate Chamber. Thanks and high honor to Fermin Ferrer!

Had this Treaty been ratified, the Mosquito Kingdom would have been recognised—the Mosquito Grant been made good—Nicaragua scandalously despoiled of an opulent portion of her domain—Costa Rica invested with an unrighteous political predominance, and a territory assigned her to which she has no title whatsoever—English influence been planted deep in Central America—the Monroe doctrine trampled under foot. And to this—to this disgraceful pass—was the administration of Franklin Pierce, under the cover of this iniquitous Treaty, insidiously leading the honor, the justice, the Democracy of the country. Were it not that President Pierce has a direct personal interest in the Mosquito Grant, and must, therefore, be adverse to the success of Nicaragua under General Walker—for Nicaragua has ever insisted on the Mosquito Kingdom, as it is called, being an inalienable portion of the national domain—were it not for this startling fact, the Treaty, just banished from the Senate, would excite the vaguest wonder.

Now, at last, we have an explanation of the wanton persecution to which the friends of Nicaragua, ever since the tide of emigration flowed past the Mosquito coast in upon Nicaragua, have been subjected. Now we have the true motive for these arrests, imprisonments, vexatious detention of steamers, and all the other acts, which, inflamed by the spirit of the District Attorney, have, for the last twelve months and more, harrassed the brave and generous sympathizers with the cause of social order and constitutional liberty in Nicaragua.

President Pierce would extinguish that bright cause in blood—would have it trampled into the mud of the San Juan—would have that fair, sunny, fruitful region delivered over, a dead prey, to the vultures that sweep down upon it from Guanacoste and the mountains beyond the Nacaomi. And all, forsooth, because his Excellency, as it has been sworn last week before Commissioner Morell, holds a pecuniary interest in the Mosquito grant!

The letter of Don Fermin Ferrer—published in another column—has given the final blow to a politician, whose career, so far as the foreign relations of his country are concerned—and it is of them alone we speak—has been the flimsiest web of failures and contradictions.

VERE FOSTER AND IRISH EMIGRATION.

Mr. Foster's name and labors are well known. His name is a household word in many a family made comfortable by his labors. In a cause which does not recommend itself to the ambitious speculator in politics, or the crafty demagogue who deals in patriotism for place, Mr. Foster has been the first, and in fact the only one, to devote great energy, unremitting thoughtfulness, and the benevolent exuberance of his nature.

The son of a former diplomatic representative of Great Britain to the United States, and the inheriter of an independent fortune, Vere Foster has for more than ten years imposed on himself the arduous and noble duty which he has so effectively fulfilled. For this period he has denied himself all the enjoyment with which his position and intellect could surround his domestic hearth, for laborious traffic on the sea; traveling in the crowded steerages of emigrant ships, seeing with his own eyes the wants of the emigrant; beholding the usage to which they were forced; setting in motion and carrying out to a great extent a complete reform in the regulation, management, food and comfort of the emigrants on bourd such vessels.

The sufferings of the emigrant, the plunder they were subject to, the difficulties and temptations which the system surrounded them with, were brought before Parliament by the statements founded upon the actual observations and experience of Mr. Foster. The startling pictures of the real condition of the poor emigrant, and especially of the female portion, so clearly and vividly presented by him, created almost immediate legislation on the subject.

For this noble and self-sacrificing mission, Vere Foster well deserves the title of The Howard of the Ocean. If the Old World owes him a debt of gratitude for these services to her children, how much more does not the New World owe for the protection of those who become worthy citizens and the progenitors of a robust, active, and powerful race—a race whose name is written by the sons of emigrants such as Jackson, Buchanan, Calhoun, Dallas, Stewart, and others in the Army, the Navy, in the highest Council Halls, and the Executive Chair of the Republic.

We see it stated that since Mr. Foster made his first experimental steerage trip, he has never missed a year without crossing the Atlantic. But he does not leave the emigrant at the shore of America.

He soon learned that the vilest temptations surrounded them on land; that the men were likely to be fleeced of any money, little or much, they might hope to start on in the new world; and that the women were liable to be decoyed or dragged into an infamy, than which death by starvation on land, by fever on sea—death in any shape—would be preferable. Mr. Foster travelled through America and Canada, interesting public officers and private persons of worth in his mission, establishing posts, as it were, to which the emigrants would be sent, and where they would get employment, away from the vile associations of the cities on the sea-board.

Mr. Foster also instituted an Irish Pioneer Emigration Fund, to which he amply contributes himself, for the purpose of sending out deserving persons carefully selected in Ireland; and who are expected, when they get located, to contribute to the fund, and thus aid the good intentions for which the fund was established.

If emigration is to to continue—if Irishmen will leave Ireland, it is better that they should enjoy the comfort on sea and the good prospect on land which Mr. Foster's energy and love has prepared.

In the year 1854 nine millions of dollars were remitted to Ireland from America, by emigrants, through banking and mercantile houses, for the relief and assistance of their friends and relatives "at home." In chronicling the fact, the Limerick Observer says, that a large portion of the amount was owing "solely to the benevolent exertions of this one gentleman."

The first Report of the "Emigration Pioneer Fund" was issued in July, 1855. The amount of subscriptions received then, was 613 pounds sterling, or about 3,065 dollars; of which Mr. Foster himself contributed 1,950 dollars, besides sending out at his own expense, thirty-one persons, at an additional outlay of 850 dollars. Up to the date of Report, 114 persons, members of 105 families had been provided with free passage to the United States and Canada; and these persons in turn paid the passage of 86 others, having remitted for the purpose 3,780 dollars.

The second Report now before us, exhibits the following figure in pounds sterling:—

	£	s.	d.
Amount of subscriptions from 3,234 persons,	671	0	0
Mr. Foster's contribution,	810	0	0
	1481	0	0
Total expenses of emigration for 280 persons,	1447	13	6
Balance in hand, January 1st, 1857,	£33	6	6

Last year Mr. Foster came to America for the purpose of visiting as many as possible of the emigrants in their new homes, and to make arrangements for the reception of others. In his search he travelled over seven thousand miles, and it is due to the courtesy of the New-York Central, Michigan Central, Illinois Central, Canada Grand Trunk, Canada Great Western, and other Railway Companies, to mention that they furnished him with free conveyance to and fro. The excellent gentleman found 130 of the original "Pioneers," and 32 others whose passage was paid by the former. They were all content; and Mr. Foster's labors were well-rewarded by learning, on all sides, facts highly creditable to the industry, good behavior and affectionate natures of his proteges.

We well remember with what pride he spoke of them, on his return; and with what extreme gratification he read to us passages of several letters, received by him from the emigrants, detailing their various struggles in the "new country" to decent livelihood, and in several instances to very substantial comfort.

The tenderest feelings of esteem and the heartiest meed of thankfulness were offered by the writers to Mr. Foster, who in being thus recorded in the "short and simple annals of the poor" finds the richest guerdon for years of danger, and unceasing energy.

A DAY IN WASHINGTON.

From a Correspondent.

After a ride of twelve hours on the cars, I found myself, one day last week, in the Federal city—in the city of magnificent distances, as it is not inaptly styled. As the cars are made to hold, but not to accommodate passengers, a pilgrim from Gotham to the political Mecca of the United States—although there be a certainty of talking with the Prophet and touching the hem of his garment—feels wayworn, and more inclined to pay his respects to Morpheus, than worship at the shrine of even Mammon himself, although Mammon is now the ruling deity amongst men, and upon his altar truth, honor and patriotism are laid. His votaries are legion and the universe his temple. However, as I am only amongst his worshippers, not of them, I immediately paid my devotions to the god of sleep. Having been refreshed, and in a fair mood to make a few observations on men and things, I sallied forth from the National, and visited the other principal hotels. The scenes in each were pretty much alike. The cabinet-makers were at work in their private apartments, the place-hunters and politicians filled the offices, bar and reading-rooms, and the politicians thronged all the approaches. No member of the Senate or the House could pass down Pennsylvania Avenue without receiving a thousand friendly recognitions from a thousand humble servants, devoted and attached friends. The lobbiers and placemen were grouped together in the office of the National and Willard's, and as soon as a Senator or Representative descended from his rooms, he was seized by the hand, by the button-hole, by the arm, the elbow, the collar, the waist—in fine, taken bodily possession of by the most prominent of the politicians. He was compelled to listen to all their claims, and take note of all their suggestions. Jonas, in the whale's belly, did not find himself in a "tighter place" than the unfortunate legislator, when emerging from his apartments into the hall of the hotel. There was that portly Southerner, looking as if the spoils were all made for him—the battle fought was his battle, the victory won was his victory, and why should any loafing Northern man come between him and his legitimate prize. Again, some burly Westerner, deep in the game of politics, did not exactly agree with his Southern brethren—they should not monopolize all the Cabinet appointments. And there, too, sat a thin Yankee from the New England States, looking sharp and wise as one of Dickens' misers. He considered that the brunt of the battle had been entirely borne by himself, and that his party, although vanquished, stood in the pass, like Leonidas at Thermopylæ, and kept the hosts of Fremont from overrunning the South, and swarming like locusts in Nigerland. He cannot accept anything short of Secretary at War.

Make way there, political speculators, from Maine to Minnesota. In strides the Hector of the victory—the Coriolanus of the campaign. He alone fluttered the woolly horsemen and the rocky mountaineers on the plains of Pennsylvania. Let him pass on to the President elect's room—there is dignity in his gait and defiance in his look. A short while, and he returns somewhat crestfallen, but not less a vainer man. He has not been promised any Cabinet appointment, and the less pretentious worshippers of the rising sun have now discovered that he is only a very impudent and brainless village spouter who had stumped a few wards, and brawled out some plagiarised speeches, previous to the Presidential election.

Let us ascend to the Capitol and leave behind the political Babel of the hotels, and look from the steps of that lofty and magnificent building upon the scattered city, bending before us like a Crescent, and fringed by the green forests of Virginia and Maryland. Our eye runs along the noble Pennsylvania Avenue, broad as Sackville street, Dublin, straight as an arrow and adorned with trees, until it rests on the White House, situated about a distance of three miles at its furthest extremity. It is a beautiful building, hallowed by many events dear to the heart of the patriot—it is the seat of the First Consul of this great Republic, and that fact causes the beholder to look upon it with pleasurable emotions. On our left, on the banks of the Potomac, and close to the Smithsonian Institute, stands the unfinished monument to George Washington. When completed—and it is a disgrace to the Republic that the works have been for a moment suspended—it will be a meet tribute to the hero for whom history may be searched in vain for a superior. Its collossal proportions impart to it an air of solidity and grandeur which renders it typical of the heart and mind of the warrior and statesman, whose memory it is to perpetuate to all time. It is as much beyond the Wellington monument, in Phœnix Park, Dublin, in appearance and imposing effect, as Washington was greater than the Duke in all the qualities of head and heart which constitute true greatness upon earth. The one was a subject, the other was a citizen. A subject is a spaniel, petted or whipped at the whim of its master, and a titled subject is a spaniel with a gilded collar fastened upon its neck. A citizen of a free country is the noblest appellation by which man can be named. When the flight of the Roman Eagles encircled the globe, the exclamation of "I am a Roman citizen," was a passport and a protection—a crest of honor and a shield of defense—in the most distant and barbarous nations. Washington fought for freedom; Wellington drew his sword as a mercenary in the service of his master, the King. It is meet, then, that the monument on the banks of the Potomac should overtop and outshadow the "overgrown milestone," on the shores of the Liffey, in the same proportion as the United States exceed the extent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, "by the grace of God, and so forth."

Having glanced at the sculpture, which graces the exterior of the Capitol, we next stepped into the hall and were struck by the large life-like paintings which adorn this portion of the building. To a careless observer, they may seem perfect works of art; but this is not so. First, there is Healy's painting of Franklin pleading before Louis XVI, for the recognition of American Independence.

(CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.)

A WORD ABOUT CORK.

Next to Waterford, of all the old places in Ireland, we love Cork the best. The truest friends we ever had, lived there. The brightest hours that have blossomed on our path through life, were those whose roseate birth the Shandon Bells announced. Many a beautiful relic of our early life—of friendship, hope, festivity—lies buried in the waters of the Lee. The brown owls, perched in either corner of the architrave over the door-way of the old Cork Library, still wink at us demurely as we invoke, from week to week, the patronage of Minerva. Often does it come to pass, that we find ourselves gliding softly up the old Dyke-walk, or among those glorious groups in the Museum where Hogan grew to emulate Canova with his chisel.

A cordial letter handed us this morning, from John Francis Maguire, the worthy successor of Richard Sheil, in the representation of Dungarvan, renews our loving recollections of Cork city. The success of Barney Williams, in the city of his birth and childhood, is spoken of heartily by our friend. The congratulations we offered him the other day, were pale and scentless flowers in comparison with those which fell in such profusion at his feet the last night he figured before the Athenians of Munster. On the part of the citizens, a splendid testimonial was presented to Mr. Williams by the Mayor. Mrs. Williams came in of course—as a Better-half always does—for her full share of sweet words and smiles. May they both live to see an Irish Navy in the Cove of Cork!

An immense meeting has been held in the City Court-house, for the purpose of raising a Monument to Father Mathew. Mr. Maguire's speech on the occasion will appear next week. The object is a noble one. Wherever two or more of the Irish race are gathered together, there should hand and heart be pledged to it. To so good a man—to a benefactor so beneficent—to a spirit so exalted—a monument, beautiful and majestic as the Cathedral of Cologne, should rise from the Green Sod. Here, in America, the Irish people should at once see to it, that so their goodness and gratitude may not be questioned. It is a work, in which rich and poor, Royalist and Rebel, Irishmen of every creed and school, can, should, and will, no doubt, unite.

"I am writing," Mr. Maguire adds, "a volume on Rome—that is, on his Holiness, and the various institutions, &c., &c., of that city. My letters, such as they were, are now being published in Italian, in Rome. Of course, we both have little sympathy with any but the freest institutions; but, as Catholics, we would desire to show the Head of our Church in his true light, and I hold him to be one of the best and gentlest of human beings, and to be more solicitous for the material welfare of his people, as well as for their happiness, than any Sovereign in Europe."

Such a book as this, from the bright pen of such a man, should meet with a vast demand here. We call the attention of eminent Catholic publishers in in this, and other cities of the Union, to the proposed work, and recommend them to send in their orders without another week's delay.

DUBLIN AND PARIS.

From our Special Reporter, on his way to St. Petersburgh.

Since my last visit to the Green Isle of St. Patrick, the Dubliners have made great progress in West-Britainism—the bettaw classes, I mean, as the retired dealers in charcuterie delight to dub themselves. Of this I had an amusing example on board the little steamer which plies between Holyhead and Kingstown. We had on board about six feet three inches of a most unmistakeable Celt, evidently from Cork's own town. He had been in London for about a week or ten days, and, like other Charcutieres, had been seized with a bad fit of Cockneyism.

The struggle between the native brogue, and, what he considered the more polished accent of the sistaw Isle, was droll in the extreme. In the early stage of the proceedings, the Cockney evidently predominated, although a stray word would indicate that he first saw day-light under the lee of Blarney Castle, but gradually, and in the same proportion as he absorbed mats (the Dublin expression for Whiskey punch) the Corkonian overflowed the Cockney, and as I ascended the Cabin stairs, I heard—

"Stoo-at! why the divil don't you bring the basin?"

Dublin, male, is addicted to Raglan wrappers, dog-collars, and scented segars. Dublin, female, is given to voluminous crinolines, tight-fitting monkey-jackets, Kossuth hats, and cock's feathers. Dublin, at large, has got an awful attack of My Mary-Anne, introduced, for the first time, to the Dublin public, by that eminent artiste, Mrs. Barney Williams, who, by-the-bye, has just completed a most successful engagement at the Theatre Royal.

Yesterday I saw the Lord Mayor's gold coach—City Marshall and other trumpery, in hackney-coaches—the only respectable portion of the procession being the Mounted Police. These men wear a very dark blue short tunic with white buttons, black trowsers, and shakos similar to those worn by the Mounted Constabulary, with cords and tassels. They are all of good size, well made, and have good cattle under them, which they ride with an ease and dignity worthy of a Spanish Don. One of these military civilians rode on either side of the City Marshal. An envious waiter shouted to another just behind my back, that it was to keep that worthy functionary in his seat; and, indeed, there seemed to be some truth in the remark, for the illustrious Tom did quite resemble a Centaur.

In Stephen's Green, near St. Vincent's hospital, is the Museum of Irish History, under the charge of Sir Robert Kane. The internal arrangements are very well got up. The entrance hall is very handsome. The walls are ornamented after the fashion of an old castle. They are wainscotted, the styles being of Irish oak, and the panels, specimens of various Irish marbles. I counted some thirty specimens. Nearly every County in Ireland is represented; some having as many as four or five different colors and qualities of marble. You will there find the nearly white from Cork, beside the rich brown from the same County, contrasted with the cold gray or deep black of Kilkenny on the one side, and the variegated green of Galway on the other, whilst, opposite to them, are others as varied in their line and as different in their tone as the most whimsical taste could devise.

Sir Robert Kane deserves great credit for the arrangement, as I understand that this Hall was his design. He has arranged the various colors with such good taste, that, whilst they are all in perfect harmony with one another, they still perserve their individual characteristics; so that you can with facility judge of the merit of each specimen separately, at the same time that coup d'œil presents to the visitor the principal marbles of Ireland.

The Irish Catholic University, occupies the house in Stevens Green, known as Buck Whaley's. Adjoining their College, they have erected a very neat little chapel, in which the architect has employed with equal skill and admirable taste a combination of the same Irish marbles I've been speaking of.

The Trinity College authorities have erected in their park a magnificent building, intended for their Museum. It is in the florid style of Louis XIV. The plan is rectangular. The building will occupy, when finished, the whole side of one of the Squares. The material of which it is composed is Portland stone. The cornices, plinths, styles, mullions, &c., are richly carved, and between each window is a circular recess, into which the variegated Irish marbles (I'll never have done with these marbles) are introduced artistically. When completed, this Museum will be one (I speak of the building) of peculiar beauty, and add in no small degree to the fame which Dublin has justly acquired for its public buildings.

The Sisters of Charity are erecting a large Hospital and Nunnery in Eccles street. The back of the Hospital will look right into Mountjoy Prison. This building also promises to be got up with excellent taste.

In Dominick street, near Bolton, a large Catholic church is in course of construction. It is Gothic in its design, and one of the purest specimens of that style in Dublin. The roof is very high, and supported on columns of Caen stone. From the sides of the walls, between the arches, are projections, on which will be placed statues; which, also, are to be of Caen stone—as, indeed, the entire of the interior of the church. The window, over the entrance, is one of remarkable beauty. Its tracery is chaste and rich, and its whole design admirably conceived.

In Dublin, the soldiers all wear tunics, cavalry and infantry included. Every one of them you meet has either a Crimean medal or an Alma clasp, or both. Even some of the Metropolitan Police are decorated, and not a few of the Rural Constabulary wear these insignia of heroism. On inquiry, I found out that the Police and Constabulary, thus distinguished, had been engaged, not at the Alma, nor at Inkermann, nor even before the Redan (of glorious memory!) but in the Land-Transport Service. So that these gallant peelers and policemen have been embellished with clasps and medals for carrying barrels of pork and beef to the bull-dogs of Britain. Long may they wear their five-shilling piece (Queen's head out) attached to the breasts of their coats with a bit of blue ribbon!

As there is nothing else I saw in Dublin worth mentioning, I have now only to state, that I quitted that charming city the 5th of this month, and am now concluding the letter (commenced there) in the Hotel du Louvre, Paris.

Paris is gayer and more beautiful than ever. The anticipated immediate arrival of the Grand Duke Constantine has thrown everything into a bustle. I have not time at present to say much to you about the many improvements that have taken place in Paris. One thing pleases me very much—that is the growing dislike, to England and English ideas, which pervades every section of Parisian society. Apropos to this, I send you the Verite, which contains a remarkable correspondence, La France et la Russie. It will amply repay translation and republishing in New-York. As an illustration of how wide-spread this feeling is, I may mention, that on Friday last I was at the Grande Opera, and, after a little while, got into a chat with a French gentleman. First of all, we spoke about Neufchatel; and, finally, about the relations between France and England. He said, that, as for his own feelings, he would have preferred war with England rather than with Russia, and that nothing at present would be more popular.

I leave in a week or ten days for St. Petersburgh, by way of Berlin and Warsaw, from which city you shall hear from me next.

THE BOND STREET MURDER.

Another week has gone by. The murdered man has been laid in his grave. The inquest still continues. In the midst of a world of confusion and uproar, a few gleams, here and there, have penetrated the Chamber of Death, its mystery and horror. As yet, however, evidence sufficient to criminate any person has not been adduced. A dark suspicion thickens over two parties in particular, who remain in custody. They are Mrs. Cunningham and Mr. Eckel. The other parties residing in the house at the time of the murder have been set free. This is the result of the Inquest up to the time of our going to press. Until the crime has been brought home and stamped indelibly upon the murderer, we refrain from any further notice.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

LAST OF THE CAMPBELL TOWN ELECTION—THE SCUFFLING ON THE PLATFORM—M'GILLICUDDY ORATION—MEDICAL SUPERINTENDENT SUPPRESSED—CHIEF CONSTABLE KNOCKED ON THE HEAD—THE TRIUMPH—THE LAKE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

James McGillicuddy was one of them. Billy Bolton, the rich farmer from Jacob's Sugar Loaf, was another. Old Tucker, the blacksmith, was the third. McGillicuddy rode several paces in advance; and, as he pranced up the street with his noble Garibaldi, flourishing his hat and cheering on the column, even Mrs. Kearney, though inveterately opposed to Wagstaff and all who backed him, couldn't but admire her countryman.

"More power to you, Doctor!" she exclaimed; "but 'tisn't there you ought to be."

The Doctor flourished his hat (everybody was flourishing his hat to-day), laughed, cheered, hurrahed. Garibaldi may be said to have done the same. The Widow became excited, forgot her principles, forgot herself, and loudly invoked the blessing of Heaven on the Doctor. At this crisis, Mr. Hodgens joined the procession.

How magnificently they moved up the street to the place of of nomination! With what thrilling effect the Brothers of St. Cecilia gave forth their notes of triumph! How dazzlingly the blue banners waved! How deafeningly the cheers for Wagstaff and the freedom of Tasmania pealed along the line! With what exuberant courtesy and sweetness young Wagstaff bowed, flattened his hand on his heart, and expressed himself deeply overcome; how Isaac Napoleon Dodd groaned as the procession swept by the Bridge of Lodi; how radiantly the ladies in the church-yard (all the mothers and daughters of Tasmania were in favor of the League) smiled, blushed, throbbed, ejaculated, as the formidable column halted before the Rainbow—it is unnecessary to say.

At the moment the hostile forces met, there was a slight disturbance. It was inevitable. A dozen blows were rapidly exchanged. Here and there a hat was bruised. Here and there a sash was torn. Here and there a flag-staff was savagely grasped and broken. Mr. Hodgens threatened the Episcopalian minister. The minister, with his fat hand, waved an anathema on the butcher. Mrs. Cecilia Bunn upbraided the Medical Superintendent. There were groans for Griffin; there were groans for Wagstaff. Cheers and counter-cheers, indescribable excitement, and confusion all round. The Baptist preacher extended his hands, and with a long neck, implored the spirit of peace and good-will amongst men. The Chief Constable felt disposed for a miscellaneous arrest. Under the inpulse, he buttoned his coat and turned up his wrist-bands. The magistrate became convulsed; the blood rushed from his socks to his wig, and there permanently settled. The windows of the Rainbow, overlooking the platform and the combatants, were occupied by the ladies of the house, and numerous acquaintances in bonnets, from abroad. The uproar seemed to exhilarate them greatly. They laughed immoderately, occasionally interspersing the merriment with an improvident scream. The candidates, all the while, stood composedly at a short distance from each other; Ethelwood Griffin, with a quiet good-humor, noting down the sayings and incidents of the scene; Marmaduke Wagstaff, with folded arms, biting his lips, looked stern and invincible. The picture cannot be more effectively described. The reporter of the Launceston Wallaby gave it up in despair.

What was the McGillicuddy doing all this while? Where was the gallant, sporting, fiery, rollicking old Celt?

In the stable, loosing the girths of Garibaldi, hunting out a feed of oats for him, shaking down some fresh hay—in every possible way insuring the comfort of his restless black favorite.

Where was the Medical Superintendent?

In a private parlor of the Rainbow, sitting at a small table, with a Government Report, and a glass of thin lemonade before him. The inexorable Woodhouse! He was driving home the last charge in the battery he had vowed to open in full force that day on the enemies of his Queen.

"They shall have it—the rebels!—they shall have it," he cadaverously swore, as he finished the lemonade, and shut up the Report with a blow of his sinewy clenched hand upon the volume.

He left the parlor and came upon the platform the precise moment the presiding officer, Josiah Thomas Briggs, Esq., had ventured to open the proceedings. The tumult was not altogether hushed. But it had been to some extent appeased. The most athletic rioters gradually grow exhausted. The pianissima passage of the overture was now about being played. The Police Magistrate thought he had a favorable chance. Buttoning his coat to the throat—he did it easily, the buttons were familiar with the business—pulling up his shirt-collar, which had completely lost its stiffness from the frequency of the operation, tightening his hat upon his head a little on one side, opening his portfolio, clearing his voice and twitching the side-curls of his wig, he began to read the proclamation authorizing the election.

"Read louder," shouted the blacksmith.

"Peace be with you!" interposed the Baptist preacher.

"Remember Austerlitz!" cried Dodd, who had just come upon the platform, supported by Arcola and St. Helena.

The Magistrate resumed. With considerable difficulty he got through reading the proclamation, and, having exhorted the candidates and their respective friends to conduct themselves with decorum, retired to the back of the platform, where a pine-wood bench had been placed by the Chief Constable for the convenience of his worship. And now commenced the fight in good earnest. Heretofore there had been skirmishing, and on the whole a desultory conflict. But now the combatants stood face to face; closed up together, and delivered their fire at the shortest range.

Benjamin Thorne, Esq., of Hawthorne Lodge, came forward to propose a fit and proper person to represent the influential district of Campbell Town in the Legislative Assembly of the colony. He was an old man—genteel, inarticulate, and imbecile. Forty years ago a merchant in Hamburg, he had seen something of the world—had supped, by-the-by, with Dumouriez and Napper Tandy—and in the wild wastes and rude society of Van Diemen's Land had scrupulously preserved the urbanity which his early intercourse with genteel society had enabled him to cultivate. But he had little beyond his urbanity to recommend him. A book-case may be very polished and quite empty. Benjamin Thorne was very polished and highly-finished. But Benjamin Thorne had nothing in him. A surly master, an avaricious man, a grim father, his dealings with his servants, the world, and his family, were harsh, mean, and heartless. But from the stranger—from the casual visitor to his house—his urbanity concealed everything—concealed the worst. A satin cloak, edged with the softest ermine—it surely was—which hid the thongs, the iron clasps, the sponge dipped in gall, he had ever ready for his household and dependents. He had married three times. His third wife was living, and in her young arms he was a babbling and inconvenient child. A magistrate, however, the owner of thirty thousand sheep, an old settler in the colony—one of the very oldest—he was a man of decided note. His velvet-cushioned pew in the parish church, his carriage with its silver mountings, his coachman with his drab box-coat and three capes, and the footman with his lean calves sheathed in silk, established his respectability and weight. Moreover, like old Wagstaff, of Mona Vale, he gave great dinners; and when he went to Hobart Town, to ship his wool for Liverpool, he played whist and supped at the Union Club, and so nobody denied the purity of his birth.

But for all such men, a day of reckoning is sure to come. Within their households they are safe. Their infirmities, insincerities, and tyrannies, encounter there no criticism. The very impunity, however, they have reveled in at home, is but a snare which lures them to their proper chastisement. Safe at home—safe and triumphant for many years at home—ignorant that the world outside has been taking notes respecting them, and that—as though there had been no walls to screen them—their misdemeanors have been all the while the gossip of the bar-room, the market-stall, the public-offices, the highway, the gambling den and stable-yard; they obey their vanity and appear in public. Here the secrets of the household come to light—here the follies, the falsehoods, the severities or frauds they have been guilty of, meet, in a rude way, their just rebuke. Benjamin Thorne found this to be the case to his utter consternation, shame, and torture.

He came forward to propose Marmaduke Wagstaff, Esq., as a fit and proper person to represent the district of Campbell Town. His bald head was greeted with cheers and groans, as it glistened on the margin of the platform. The cheers were sickly. The groans were vigorous. He put on his spectacles—they were rimmed with gold and lozenge-shaped—and drew forth a manuscript from the breast-pocket of his coat. The groans revived and multiplied.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Thorne.

"You ain't no gentleman," cried an enemy in the crowd.

"I have attended here," continued Mr. Thorne.

"Go home, then," the enemy continued.

"The fabric of our glorious constitution," the urbane old gentleman went on to say.

"Shut up!" shouted his indefatigable persecutor.

"If there's one thing dearer to my heart than another," the venerable sinner pathetically observed.

"It ain't your wife," roared the anonymous assailant.

"It is the freedom," continued the speaker, "of this my adopted country."

Loud cheers burst forth, loud groans—intense hisses—cries of "Go home," "Don't give kangaroo any more to your men," "Pay them their wages," and many other delicate injunctions of the kind. Mr. Thorne was unable to proceed further. He put on his hat, pocketed his manuscript, and retired, with the most dismal sensations, to the rear of the platform. Had he been dragged through the Macquaire River and drenched to the bone, he could not have been more thoroughly depressed.

Captain Skelton, of Skelton Castle—the Castle was a portentous barn, by-the-by—seconded the nomination of Marmaduke Wagstaff. A sailor for five-and-thirty years, the gallant captain was limited in diction. He was no orator. He bluntly confessed it. On the quarter-deck, in a gale, he was thoroughly at home. On a stone platform, defining his position, he was an harpooned porpoise, in the chains of the forecastle. He said his brief word and was silent.

The melancholy stillness produced by the severe appearance of the gallant captain, was followed, when he put on his hat and fell back, by a vigorous outburst of feeling, partly jovial, partly recriminatory, in both phases absolutely lawless, which neither the presiding officer, Jonathan Briggs, Esq., nor the Chief Constable, old Simeon Grabb, an insolvent truss-maker, late of London; nor the Baptist preacher, one Caleb Whitehead, formerly a sausage-manufacturer in the suburbs of Nottingham; nor Hodgens, the Herculean butcher; nor Mrs. Cecilia Bunn, with her brown umbrella, and missionary labors; nor the post-master from Ross, with his formidable eyebrows; nor the proprietor of the Scotch Thistle himself, with all his popularity—and it was great, for he had a multitude of debtors, and he was liberal and patient to excess; nor the Rev. Mr. Wilkins, with his inflated waistcoat and voluminous white cravat; nor Mr. Balantine, the Jew, who conducted the largest dry-goods establishment in Campbell Town; nor Captain Skelton, though with a single revolution of his eye he might have calmed the troubled elements at any other moment; nor Isaac Napoleon Dodd, with his military reminiscences; nor anybody else, however influential, learned or illiterate, intellectual or athletic, profane or pious, lovable or terrific he might be, found it possible to compose. The storm had its own way; and when it had done its best, gave in, gave an expiring throb or two, and then closed up.

And then McGillicuddy spoke. The fall of Babylon; the submersion of Sodom and Gomorrah; the fate of the legions of Sennacherib; the siege, and sack, and desolation of Jerusalem; the plagues of Smyrna and Venice; the eruption of Vesuvius, and the earthquake of Lisbon; the snows of Siberia and the sands of Zahara; all the woes, catastrophes and tortures that had ever come upon the earth, were invoked and prophesied by him against the island, a considerable section of which he had the honor to adress, should Griffin be returned.

"Who was Griffin?" asked the eloquent old gentleman, flinging down his hat, tearing off his neck-tie, and pitching it in ribbons to the audience. "Who was Griffin?" he would ask. Privately, a moral, amiable, devout young man. Publicly, an advocate of abominations and a champion of dishonor. [Cheers and uproar.] An Adonis by the fireside, he was little better than a Caligula in the forum. [Immense applause.] Most of them had read Virgil. [Cheers.] In that celebrated book there was a king, Mezentius, mentioned—"

"Three cheers for Murat and Marengo!" shouted Dodd.

"Mezentius had lashed," the doctor continued, "living bodies to dead ones. The British government did the same. Tasmania was a beautiful, full-grown child. Convictism was a corpse. The Government had bound the two together." [Immense applause and hisses.] The doctor said he would say no more. The cause was safe. It would equally defy the seductions of the Treasury and the terrors of the Tower. [Renewed applause.] It was the cause of freedom, of innocence, of free labor, high wages, responsible government, decent living, and voluntary emigration.

The Medical Superintendent would wish to say a word.

James McGillicuddy wouldn't let him say a syllable. The storm broke out afresh. Dodd and Bolton opened precipitately on each other. The Chief Constable, venturing too near the edge of the platform, missed his footing, (some said old Wagstaff hit him,) and tumbled heavily on the drummer. The Brothers of St. Cecilia, ont he outskirts of the crowd, over near the railing of the church-yard, struck up the Druids' March in Norma; whilst Cooper, the red-haired carpenter, impetuously waved the banner of the League, violently fanning the Medical Superintendent with its folds, and sweeping off his hat. The robber from Ceylon was in danger of his life. Mrs. Kearney, who had come upon the ground with her cohort of young cherubs clinging to her green satin skirts, called upon the blessed Angels and holy St. Bridget to protect her; whilst Brickells, the saddler, and MacTavish, the druggist, and Hughes, a dealer in valuable odd volumes and broken china-ware, with Leonard, the pound-keeper, appealed in honor of their respective and conflicting sentiments, to the last resort of nations.

After this, James McGillicuddy, Esq., M.D., could say little that was intelligible. He faced the tumult, or as he said himself, he "faced the music," and did his best to get the better of it. Yet without avail. His concluding words it would be impossible faithfully to transcribe. There were allusions to Clontarf and Garibaldi—to the loveliness of the valleys of Tasmania—to the chastity and beauty of her daughters—to the snowy richness of her perambulating flocks and the salubrity of her encircling sky—to the aromatic sweetness of her umbrageous woods, and the prolific fecundity of her virgin soil. [Laughter and loud cheers.] The remarks were broken, and their effect dissipated, in the buzz and turbulence of the obstreperous audience he addressed. He retired in the midst of a tempest—wishing from the bottom of his soul he had the harp of a Carolan, the sword of Sarsfield, the crozier of St. Patrick, the bag-pipe of Ganzy, the patriarchal piper of Killarney, and the tongue of Grattan, to rouse, inspire, direct, redeem and save them!

* * * * * *

It is time to throw away the pencil. The light flickers in the socket of the lamp, and the duskiest shadows gather on the canvas. It is time to blow the glow-worm out—to rest the aching head. Time to set free the mind from the clod and rubbish through which it has been ploughing; time to let it spread its wings, and along the pathways strewn with the sapphires of the Southern night, betake itself to the solitudes it has loved. Beautiful as Esther—gentle as Ruth among the Reapers—the Queen of the Silent World looks forth upon the mountains, the woods, the waters, the foul prison-houses, the fair white homesteads, the gardens and the golden fields, the countless flocks, and all that is beautiful and sad, goodly and approbrious, lost and living within the island of Tasmania.

There is a large lake on the summit of a mountain-range, stretching away from east to west, in the center of the island, two thousand feet above the sea. Numberless little promontories, piled with rocks, thickly set with shrubs, deeply shadowed with the native oak, blue pine, and gum tree, break the waters into bays and nooks, where the wild dogs come down to drink at sunrise, and the wild birds, burying themselves in the sedge and rushes, close their wings at twilight. Lofty hills, wooded to the topmost peak, darken the waters all along the northern shore. Dense forests, and, here and there, the most desolate of swamps, girt them in upon the south, the east and west. Away, far off in the darkness, a sheep-dog gives forth his melancholy howl, keeping patient watch whilst his rough master sleeps.

Fagged and feverished with the noise and rioting—the squabbles, the cheers, the oaths, the eloquence, the anger, vulgarity and mischief of the day—Marmaduke Wagstaff had ridden up, accompanied by three well-loved friends, to this lonely lake. He had won the fight. The Government party had been defeated. A very large majority of the electors had voted for the young champion of the League. Marmaduke thought he had never seen the stars look half so bright. And there was a softness in the night-wind, and a fragrance from the leaves and blossoms of the Bush, and a grandeur in the shadows of the woods and mountains, he had never known before. In the deep solitude of that mountain lake—amid those waters, those solemn forest shades—his triumph became purified in his eyes from the grossness in which it has been born.

JAMER CLARENCE MANGAN.

A SKETCH.

It is dusk. The month is June, of the memorable year '48, and a pulse beats quick through the arteries of the heart of Ireland. It is a political throbbing which swells the ancient and goodly city of Dublin. Groups of men are seen hurrying this way and that, turning from the principal thoroughfares into the back streets, stopping occasionally at a knot of persons, who, it is evident, are deeply interested in the subject-matter of the discourse which stays them in the public ways. Their gesticulations are enthusiastic—their faces bright: some are all vehemence, some thoughtful, some wild with vengeance, while some one bites his lips at the "latest news," but a hopeful expression lights up his eye and issues from his mouth, as he turns on his heel and departs for the "Club."

An observer may easily perceive, as well from the bearing of the person as from the direction he takes, in what assembly his voice speaks, or his ears drink in the draughts of nationality that are being nightly brewed at the "Confederate Clubs." That thin, pale-faced and dark-eyed young man, in rusty black, and the well-thumbed pamphlets (by Lamennais or Mitchel) under his arm, is hurrying to meet sympathizing hearts in the "Student's Club;" earnestness and intelligence beam from his face, and his abstraction is only dispelled as he turns some corner, and his uprising eye brightens at the sight of congregating clubbists. He stays for an instant—asks of some bystander, "How many new members?" and receiving a satisfactory answer, laughs to himself and resumes his way. Yon muscular man, with the rough whiskers and half-washed face, (the club hour overtook his ablutions), and arms swinging as though he was used to a sledge, who turns down many narrow streets, goes with a fixed will to cheer and "back up" the ideas and opinions of John Mitchel at the "Swift" or "St. Patrick" Clubs; while that seemly-looking man of twenty-five, (a clerk no doubt), and his companions with the two days' beard and tradesman-like gait, are hastening, uneasy less they miss their time at the "Grattan Club." Here, well dressed and perfumed mortals are seeking the "Mercantile Assistants' Club," and there, plain dressed, and snuff-dusted lappels are entering the "Citizen's."

And round the doors, and from the lobbies of the club-rooms, the ear of the passer-by will be constantly assailed with a smothered lilt of a national air, as a lounger sings to himself, or a knot of some two or three chant in harmony, "Who fears to speak of '98?"—or "The Green above the Red."

While this exciting movement makes its way, we would retire up a crooked little street, called "Trinity," off one of the greatest thoroughfares of the city. The principal propellers of the excitement which moves the city and country have their being in this crooked little street, famous in Irish History, in the shape of the two journals, the "Irish Tribune," and "Irish Felon," both preaching the same creed, and rivals only in their devotion to it. Out of either of those offices—they are side by side, like brothers in a fight—we perceive a strange-looking individual has glided, even as a shadow on a wall.

That shy, abstracted-looking man has held not the least powerful talisman by which a nation is moved. We must look at him more minutely. He is about the middle size, and glides more than walks, yet at that is but infirm. He stoops and is abstracted. A threadbare dark coat—is it brown or black?—buttoned up to the throat, sheathes his attenuated body. His eye is lustrously mild and beautifully blue, and his silver white locks surround, like a tender halo, the once beautiful, and now pale and intellectual face of the prematurely aged man before us. He glides along and through the people who are naturally attracted to this locality, as if he did not belong to the same earth with them. Nor does he. His steps seem as if they were not directed by any thought, but mechanically wended their way to his wretched abode. His eyes are turned into his soul, and he is reading there unheard-of things, which God in his power of inspiration has fore-doomed this man to hear and see. He is a dreamer, because he is not awake to earth. He has dreamed—I dare not say lived—all his days and nights in realms of prophecy and poesy, holding in the enthusiastic daring of the poet, with the firm, but yet uncurbing rein of the philosopher; blending the national Poet and the world-wide Vates, so that you arise from one of his canticles refreshed and convinced, as if you had been reading the Sacred volume in rhymes of the quaintest, most terse, and most heart-catching character.

"And who is this wondrous being?" is a natural question, And as natural an answer with any of the poets or patriots of Young Ireland would be:

That is—James Clarence Mangan. He is about leaving a poem at the journal office. Some high ennobling or warning sentiment. Some canticle for the land's good, or hymn for blessing on the arms of Liberty. Yet that man who has given such thoughts to a nation, and who has sown more sterling seeds of nationality in the breasts of his countrymen, than, perhaps, any of the poets of the time, save Thomas Davis, lives on a miserable pittance, often on charity, pens his glorious thoughts in a damp cellar, or an unpitying and bleak garret, wanders a houseless being half his time, and at last dies in a plague-house. He glided out of the world as he glided through it; and was as unfortunate in the death-bed that fell to his lot, as he had ever been in his life-track. On one of his friends intimating a hope for his recovery from his last illness, Mangan said—

"God loves me too well to let me live any longer;" and if we receive the dogma that Heaven loves those upon whom it heaps misfortune, then truly was Mangan blest in Eternity. Mangan was a mystic, and believed in spirit-seeing, and apparitions, and would often start, and, walking slowly round the garret be partly occupied, discourse to the spirit of his mother, and describe to her paintings and views with appropriate and beautiful expression, which, he said, decorated the bare and damp walls. He was constantly haunted through life by the apparition of his father, and was at times painfully distressed by those meetings, believing his father to be a party to his misfortunes. "That wretched old man has been with me all the night," he would frequently remark to his literary friends when inquiry was made as to what distressed him.

On the day of his death he told the same friend to whom I have alluded before, "that he had promised to meet his father at ten o'clock that very night;" and he kept his promise, departing this weary existence at the hour he appointed. He was perfectly reconciled to death, as I have shown, and some hours previous to his demise, begged energetically of the friend beside him to read to him the fourth of the Penitential Psalms, which begins—

"Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy; and according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my iniquity."

MEMOIR OF THOMAS DEVIN REILLY; a Lecture delivered by JOHN MITCHEL, in the Tabernacle, New-York, on Dec. 29th, 1856. P. M. Haverty.

It is not our intention to intrude or trespass upon the pages of this publication. It is usual for the critic, who is faithful to his readers, to give—when the work is sufficiently important in a personal, political or literary point of view—a thorough and comprehensive resumé of the book submitted to him. In many instances, while this suggests the purchase of the book to the student loving details, it is sufficiently explicit to the general reader as to preclude the necessity of that individual's going deeper into the subject.

We look upon the publication before us as sacred to one especial purpose—a purpose well understood, and to which we have frequently made allusion—and therefore it seems to us unwarrantable to intrude upon the original matter of which it is made up, feeling that in doing so we should be materially interfering with the patriotic and pious design for which it was written, in which we ourselves took the initiative, and which we lovingly desire to see to a successful and satisfactory end. Many readers, no doubt, would like us to present, from this and other sources, a memoir of the lamented friend to whose memory it is a brilliant and brotherly tribute;—they know the subject is pregnant with interesting matter; but we must refer them to this neat little publication itself, with our recommendation as to the feelings which suggested it, and the ability by which it is executed. Those feelings are equally appreciated as the ability and almost as well known as the name of John Mitchel. It is widely understood that from their first acquaintance—at a time when a month's exchange of mind is equal to years of plodding protestations—John Mitchel and Thomas Devin Reilly, from congeniality of purpose, became deeply interested in each other.

Reilly beheld in Mitchel the only man who completely resuscitated, or strove to resuscitate, the principles and projects of the United Irishmen of '98. He held these principles himself; to follow up their projects was the mission he desired. Reilly therefore looked upon Mitchel as the only man whom he could conscientiously follow, or with whom he could honestly and bravely co-operate.

In Reilly, Mitchel beheld the only notable young man connected with journalism, who could or who would acknowledge in the face of "law and order" the necessity which drove our grandfathers into revolution, and why we of the present day should continue the struggle.

Thus Mitchel and Reilly politically were united. Personally they grew to be not less identical almost in their efforts, during '48, and since that period both have deemed it a loving privilege to draw on that period of their lives as one full of the proudest recollections of either.

Such being the relationship existing between the subject and the writer of this little book, our readers will readily perceive why they should peruse it, if they would comprehend the genius of the dead, and the touching eloquence of the living; the great power of the one, and the dear memories of the other, and the surpassing picturesqueness of both, as masters of revolutionary literature: a literature of which Ireland has such glorious reasons to be proud in these latter days of poor-law guardian philippics and evangelical eloquence.

Not intending to touch on the lecture of Mr. Mitchel, we can the more freely extract from the writings of Reilly which accompany the former. Here we have

A BARRICADE AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

"A man or two will rip up, with a pick-axe and crow-bar, or stout bit of iron railing, the pavement of a street in a right line across, of several feet wide, in ten minutes or so. The first carriage passing by does for a base—or logs of timber, lamp-posts, felled trees, or carts, if at hand. On this are piled stones, and flags, and mud, and rubbish, and wood, and loose furniture, care being taken to make the front of the barricade as vertical as possible, (small stones throw off cannon shot, and yield under the feet of a storming party; while large stones break and splinter before shot, and act as stairs to assailants, against whom they should be thrown from behind as missiles.) The barricade can be raised to any height, proportionate to its base, provided there are materials sufficient; and when immediate materials fail, the nearest street is ripped up, or the most convenient house pulled down. The line of defence extends across the entire street. In the inside a rough stage or platform, of piled stones, or wood, or furniture, is usually thrown up to about four feet of the top in front; and from this top the inner side of the barricade runs down at an angle to meet the platform—thus a revolutionary citizen, standing on the platform, leans against the inner side of the barricade, rests his musket on the top—and so. The ascent to the platform should be as easy as possible; an ascent of stones, heaped up, is the usual one.

"This is a very perfect barricade—but revolutionary citizens are not particular; they do the best they can, and fight. However, it can be made more perfect. By cutting up the street in front, to the depth of a few feet, materials are not once had, and a ditch made against assailants—if into this be imbedded an iron railing, torn from the nearest house-front, and other portions of the same, inserted horizontally in front of the barricade, as a chevaux de frize, the position becomes impregnable.

"The place selected to throw up such a defence depends on circumstances, and the military tact of the individual citizens.

"Fancy, then, a hundred such barricades at once in Paris—a hundred streets teeming with missiles, and paved with broken glass, as we have described;—then fancy mothers flinging their furniture down on devoted troops; swarthy working-men defending barricades, retreating from street to street before bewildered soldiers, wheeling on their flank through an alley, or round this street or that on their rear: fancy young children with their little shirts all bloody, still dashing on the bayonets of the mercenaries; the tocsin ringing; the Marsellaise; the red flag, the glorious Vengeance booming, the burning palaces, and Vive la Republique—and then what wonder if Louis Philippe had his crown knocked off!" * * * * * * *

This is from the splendid paper entitled "The French Fashion." From that headed "Berlin Work," we make an extract, the power of which is quite as apposite and suggestive to-day as it was when Europe was awakened every morning by the Vive la Republique of uprising people. After showing that Berlin is located somewhat as Dublin is, divided by a river having bridges in the same manner, but that it was fortified all round, and studded with positions the most defensive, Reilly continues:

"And in this city, eight days ago, the unarmed people assembled before the King's palace, to congratulate him on having yielded for the first time since Napoleon's day, to a petition for reform. They came, these German Burghers, in the fullness of their hearts, to thank their kind lord and master. They were ordered to stand back, while some thousand troops defiled before the palace. 'Our intentions are pacific,' they said; 'we are unarmed; we come to express our loyalty, as is our right and duty.' Without further ado, there must be 'a salutary lesson.' At the word, cavalry charge on the multitude, hewing down men like tall weeds in a grass field—the files of infantry roll in volley on volley—from the centre, mouths of fire open, and play out grape and cannister. The masses thin and waver, break and fly. Over the dead and weltering, the living rush through the street; and all Berlin rings with the cry—'To arms—revenge—blood for blood.' The gunshops are broken open and emptied—railings are torn down, and used as half pikes and crowbars—trees are felled, carriages tumbled, streets torn up, and barricades of rubbish, barrels, carts, stones, rise on the instant in a hundred places. All day and night the battle rages. From house-tops and windows, from behind casks and logs—rang out rifles in true hands. 'Some chose the eye, or the third button,' and seldom swerved. The women made their smoothing-irons red-hot, and flung them on the soldiery, alternating their favors with hot water, and furniture, and stones. One stout burgher garrisoned his upper story with cold vitriol. The people never attacked but at an advantage—waited till the soldiery were on the spring up the barricade face, then rolled down blocks and trees upon them. They relied on two weapons, the rifle and the improvised pike—they took cannon and used them; and for every man of the people two mercenaries fell.

"Next morning the King withdrew his troops and yielded.

"The streets best defended by the people were Frederick-street, the Linden, King-street, and the area of the Alexander-place. Hitherto, in Paris, for instance, and in Vienna, the narrow streets were the scenes of popular combat. The burghers of Berlin selected the widest in their city, and neglected almost totally the narrow fastnesses. This is the great lesson of the Berlin revolution. After it, Sackville-street must be lowered in the estimation of all loyal subjects in Ireland. There is no street too wide to lay a regiment on its back."

The "Lombard Lesson" is a noble paper—graphic, powerful and picturesque. The paper on Naturalization, which attracted such attention a few years back, will continue to interest all readers, as the principles with which it deals, are such as most frequently present themselves to the attention of all native and adopted citizens, or those aspiring to the latter privilege.

The pamphlet is neatly printed and only costs twenty-five cents.

CATHOLIC HISTORY VERSUS CATHOLIC PAMPHLETEERS.

The following is the letter to which we made allusion in "Answers to Correspondents," last week. The article to which it refers appeared in the issue for January 31st.

New York 31 Jany 1857

To the Editors of the Irish News—Gentlemen:

It is not to defend the "Catholic Church in the United States" that I now ask a place in your columns. Your article shows that your knowledge of the history of the Catholic Church in the United States is derived solely from my works and those of Mr. De Courcy, and that these enabled you to give a well written column is some satisfaction.

I might in justice complain of the suppressio veri in treating the work as a general history of the Church, when it professed merely and modestly to be a contribution to the History of the Church in Maryland, Virginia and the Middle States: I might complain of your foul calumny that I am un-Irish in feeling, when my family has for a century kept up an Irish feeling in the land and been backward in no movement for Ireland's good or the honor and relief of natives of the land from which we came: but of that calumny, originated by the Cincinnati Telegraph and copied by others you are only the echo of Dr. Brownson, who however balanced the charge as you do not, by charging me with being unAmerican: though on stigmatizing Mr. de Courcy and myself as being unChristian or infidel you show the moderation of your views.

All this I could allow to pass and Mr. de Courcy would allow it, as readily as myself, to pass without a reply, as we are perfectly conscious and the highest authorities in the Church are conscious of the motives that have induced the hostility to the book, but in the notice of my remarks on Dr. Pise, you have made a charge which I must answer, a charge against the late Edward Dunigan, the founder of the house of Edward Dunigan & Brother. I esteemed Mr. Dunigan as a personal friend; I respected him as a publisher of refined taste, of extensive views, of liberal mind, and one who sought to create and develop a Catholic literature here as far as lay in his power. The affair alluded to in my remarks on Dr. Pise is well known, but as the details were not given in our book you were naturally unaware of them. The series of tales which Mr. Dunigan began was to a considerable degree under the guidance of Dr. Pise. That estimable clergyman wrote a couple of the volumes himself; and edited two others written by ladies whose names I need not state, although both were friends of mine; other volumes were written by C. J. Cannon Esq and Donald McLeod.

These tales, especially the two edited by Dr. Pise and one other were very severely criticized by the leading Catholic periodicals and these criticisms were copied to no inconsiderable extent by the secular press, which enjoyed the idea of Catholic works being so assailed by Catholics. Mr. Dunigan was extremely sensitive; his motive had been good; the books were not bad; and unable to explain a course which resulted merely from overzeal in a few well-meaning writers he resolved to stop and did stop the series. This is a known fact.

Now while I can rest under the imputation of being unIrish unAmerican, unChristian, dull in manner, spasmodic in style, narrow in mind, fanatic in religion, and irrepublican in policy, unscrupulous and vindictive, I cannot without a word from me allow even the Editors of the Irish News, who should have Irish heads and Irish hearts, to throw such a slur on the character of my deceased friend Mr. Dunigan, as to say "Cash not criticism is the publisher's index" and say it as explaining the reason why he stopped his series of Catholic tales in which Dr. Pise took so much interest and so active a part.

JOHN GILMARY SHEA.

It will be seen by this that Mr. Shea has not had the temerity to directly call in question the spirit and purpose of the article to which his letter alludes. He deals, however, in some insinuations, and in one or two charges, which latter show, that the gentleman, if he is without logic, is not devoid of imagination. To these we shall devote a few remarks.

Mr. Shea accuses us of attaining our knowledge of the Catholic history of the United States from his own and Mr. De Courcy's works. The accusation is a harsh one, and the process it implies rather dangerous to one's health and patience; but suppose it true, and that we have—as Mr. Shea says—given "a well-written column" on the subject, it only proves that our labor in digging up, resuscitating, and re-marshalling certain facts buried alive in "The Catholic Church in the United States," has done more for them than the combined efforts of the authors; for no one can accuse their work with being well-written.

Mr. Shea insinuates that we suppressed the truth "in treating the work as a general History of the Church." The gentleman, himself, is the parent of such a belief. In his preface he says that "the want of any regular history of the Catholic Church in the United States" has led to erroneous ideas, and that "To give the public in France some definite idea of the progress of Catholicity" here, this work was undertaken. It is true that further down, the work is referred to as "a contribution to the history of the Church in the States of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New-York, and New Jersey;" but the implications made above are significant of the ambition of the writers. With this ambition we have no sympathy, as we have shown. And so far from our treating it as a general history, we have done exactly the opposite, showing that it was no history at all, but to quote our own words—"We are given a badly written and mentally-attenuated French view of French labors for religion in America, as a sketch of the Catholic Church." We again speak of its intention to be an "outline of Catholic History;" again as "a plethoric sketch," and as a "fat pamphlet of 600 pages," which we think sufficiently explicit as to our treating it as a History. The thing was impossible. No one could be so unjust to its authors as to call a re-publication of their hap-hazard newspaper articles a history. It would not be fair to History. It would be unjust to Newspaperdom.

Mr. Shea thinks we have foully calumniated him as "un-Irish in feeling." We do not remember where. What we said was this—

"Frenchmen, Spaniards, Englishmen, Belgians, Italians, Poles, Russians, and last, but as Brownson says, 'certainly not least,' Irishmen, have shared the dangers and glory of struggling for and building up the Catholic Church in America; and it is an unloveable office, a cold, heartless, frivolous and rebellious office to disrobe and dissect any one party, to the insinuated discountenance of any other."

As no nationality has the sole glory of the Catholic Church in America, there ought not to be any European nationality displayed in its history; therefore, Mr. Shea might just as well accuse us of calling him un-Russian, un-English, or un-Italian, as un-Irish, so far as the pages of this work are concerned. It is, however, significant enough that Mr. Shea does not refer to the pages of "our work" when he desires to show his Irish feelings, to which it might naturally be supposed he would under the circumstances. He simply refers to what his "family has done for a century" in keeping up an Irish feeling. What a man's family has or has not done, is no proof whatever of the good, bad or indifferent actions or intentions of the man himself. We do not call in question Mr. Shea's purity of feeling as regards Ireland, but cannot help showing the ridiculous nature of the gentleman's arguments.

Notwithstanding that Mr. Shea and Mr. de Courcy—considerate de Courcy—would allow what we have said about the book to pass; still, the former—for self and latter—cannot part from that, without this portentous growl—"We are perfectly conscious and the highest authorities in the Church are conscious of the motives that have induced the hostility to the book." Now, on said motives, we profess to be one of the very "highest authorities," having written what Messrs. Shea and De Courcy no doubt deem "hostility to the book." We were "perfectly conscious" that our task, if disagreeable, was a necessary one, and if somewhat, but not too severe, it was just.

The part of Mr. Shea's letter alluding to the late Edward Dunigan, the well-known publisher, we really do not know how to excuse. It has nothing to do with the subject; was not called for by any remark of ours, as even the most querulous reader must perceive. That "Cash, not Criticism, is the publisher's index," not alone as regards the house of Dunigan & Co. but every other publishing house, is simply nonsensical to controvert. If it were not, booksellers would be smashing up daily by the dozen, and the printer's cry for bread would soon be heard above the present clash and rolling thunder of mighty presses. We believe the late Mr. Dunigan to have been a just, good man, enthusiastic in the line of business with which his name is now so widely known, and deserving of any eulogistic mention Mr. Shea can make. For the present head of the House of "Dunigan & Brother," we have always held the highest esteem, and not unfrequently have we paid tribute to the enterprise which the firm—past and present—eminently deserves. We, therefore, indignantly repel Mr. Shea's mode of arguing, by which he attempts to show that we intended insult to the late Mr. Dunigan's memory.

Mr. Shea's explanation of the stoppage of the publications in question, shows the truth of what we said, that "If they were popular, as they deserved to be, all the Catholic reviewers in Christendom would not have forced the publisher to interdict the pen of so good and so able aman as Dr. Pise;" or the pen of Charles James Cannon, though differing from whom in some things, we regard with respect and admiration for the purity of his nature and character as a man and an author. These pens would not have been allowed to lie inert if "Cash" told the publisher to try still further to encourage them. Mr. Donald McLeod would have thrown the power of "Pynnhurst" into more books if it were so, and probably Mr. J. V. Huntington would not have indulged in the "sensation" line. To say that a publisher guides his business not on cash principles, is to say he is a fool.

As for some other of Mr. Shea's minor readings of our review of the "fat pamphlet," we must leave them with our readers.

The Dublin Tablet, reviewing the lives of the editors of the New-York Tribune and Herald, and being startled by the facts so minutely detailed there concerning editorial life in America, says—"The position of an editor in America is a peculiar one. He is entirely independent of the ballot-box, of which no other political personage in America is or can be independent. The President, the senators, the judges, and governors of States are subjected to an election. The editor elects himself, and has no master. Amid a nation of freemen, he is pre-eminently free. He is not, like a member of Congress, obliged to give an account of his conduct before a capricious multitude. He is an autocrat. In England, the journal absorbs the editor; in America, the editor absorbs the journal. In England, we say the Times says so and so; in America, they say Horace Greeley says so and so. In England the paper is better known than the editor; in America the editor is quite as well known as his paper.

MRS. BINGHAM.

THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE OF THE NICARAGUAN ARMY.

From the Daily Times.

In Gen. Henningsen's report to Gen. Walker, detailing the destruction of Granada and the successful retreat of their remaining forces from that place, the following passage occurs:

"The wife of Mr. Bingham, the actor, a noble woman, deserves the thanks of our army, of which she was the Nightingale. She was suddenly cut off with her child by fever."

Mrs. Bingham went out to Nicaragua with her husband and family in the month of October last. Her husband was at that time unable to walk, having been deprived of the use of his limbs about two years ago from a bullet wound in the back. From the time of her arrival in Nicaragua, Mrs. Bingham has occupied herself with attending to the sick and the wounded of Gen. Walker's army—braving all the perils of camp disease, everywhere bestowing on the invalid soldiers such kind attentions and careful treatment as to elicit the deepest gratitude and most friendly regard.

But her brave devotion in the hospitals proved fatal to herself at length—the intelligence arriving by the last steamer, that she had sickened from the prevalent fever and died.

This is not the first time Mrs. Bingham has been found on the battle-field and contributing solace and good offices to the convalescent and the dying. Her life has been a checkered one, full of suffering and heroic endurance,

Her husband, Charles Edward Bingham,—familiarly known to a large circle of acquaintance as "Ned" Bingham,—is an actor, and has followed that profession since early youth. During the Mexican war he was one of the aids of Gen. Taylor, with the rank of Orderly, and served through the whole Campaign under old Rough-and-Ready. His daring gained him much reputation, and he was frequently sent upon enterprises requiring great boldness and an adroit expedition. In the course of the war Mr. Bingham became acquainted with the daughter of an American officer, at that time a widow, in Gen. Taylor's camp; a woman whose kindliness of spirit had already made her a frequent and welcome visitor to the sick and wounded. Struck with her noble sympathy and generous nature, what was at first admiration soon ripened into love. They were married, and remained two years at San Luis Potosi, the husband meanwhile having resigned his position in the army. At the end of this time Mr. Bingham conceived the hazardous project of an overland journey from Potosi to San Francisco, where he proposed to resume his profession. Accordingly he set out in the middle of winter for San Francisco with his wife, who was the mother of twins a few months old, and accompanied by only a single attendant. The party were provided with mules. After a long succession of privations and suffering they reached their destination, having traveled a distance of some fifteen hundred miles.

Soon after arriving at San Francisco, Mr. Bingham, in connection with others, erected the first theatre built in that city, and became its manager. Mrs. Bingham made her first appearance on its boards, showing a fair degree of talent, and considerable versatility. During his stay in California, Mr. Bingham's pecuniary fortunes greatly fluctuated. Twice his theatre was burnt down in San Francisco, once in Sacramento, and once in Marysville. About one year before he left California he sent his wife home to the States, on a visit to her friends. When his resources were nearly exhausted, he chanced to meet Susan and Kate Denin, who were then on a professional tour in California, the former of whom became enamored of him, and as she was about to return to New-York, urged him to go also, promising to secure him a profitable engagement at the Bowery Theatre here. It will be remembered that Susan was some time previously married in this state to Mr. Woodward, a merchant of Syracuse, who accompanied her to California, in the double capacity of husband and business agent. Mr. Woodward could not regard the growing intimacy between his wife and Mr. Bingham without feelings of jealousy and displeasure; but his efforts to influence her were of no avail, and the party, consisting of the Denins, Woodward and Bingham, finally sailed together for this city, in the year 1854.

While on the passage to Panama Woodward succeeded in exciting, among certain of the passengers, a strong dislike towards his rival, which at length took the form of open threats, and led Mr. Bingham to secrete himself from their search. On arriving at Panama a number of the friends of Woodward assembled about Mr. Bingham's state-room door, armed with knives and revolvers. Through this crowd "Ned" forced his way, revolver in hand, without being assailed; but, while in the act of mounting the steps of the American Hotel, at Panama, in the midst of a promiscuous crowd, just landed from the steamer, he was shot in the back and fell to the ground. In the confusion the assassin was not detected, though suspicion was fixed upon a certain individual, supposed to be the tool of Woodward. From the effect of this shot Bingham was laid up, in Panama, for about seven weeks, and completely lost the use of his lower limbs; nor has he at any time since been able to walk. Recovering sufficiently to be moved, he came on to New-York, physically helpless, and completely destitute of funds. For a time he was nursed at the house of a friend, and he was thence removed to the City Hospital.

His wife, who was playing at some Provincial theatre, now heard of the arrival of her husband and as soon as possible, joined him. Mrs. Bingham procured employment at the Bowery Theatre, and endeavored to support her husband and three children, all of whom were entirely dependent on her exertions. After struggling in this way for some months, the Bowery Theatre was closed last summer in consequence of difficulties between its proprietors, costing her a situation, and with it her only means of sustenance. During the past year, Bingham and his family occupied wretched apartments in a tenement house in Stanton-street, and after the theatrical resource failed were obliged to rely for subsistence on the voluntary contributions of friends and public charity. In August last Mrs. Bingham was confined. Deprived of her assistance, the family was almost reduced to starvation. Frequently, Mr. Bingham relates, he passed thirty-six and forty-eight hours without tasting a morsel of food, and knew of no source from which relief would come. The Baptist Society in Stanton-street contributed something to their support, and a trifling aid came from members of his own profession. Two of the children—boys, aged eight and ten years—were taken by the proprietor of a traveling circus, who agreed to support them for their services, such as they might be.

The mother at length became well enough to go out, and spent several days in the futile attempt to procure work.

At length when the hope of bearing up against misfortune was almost exhausted, she came across the advertisement of the Nicaraguan Agency, which offered to every emigrant who would go to Nicaragua a free passage and a certain number of acres of land. Mr. Bingham, being well enough in body, except that his lower limbs were useless, and thinking he could teach school or otherwise employ himself in Nicaragua,—that at all events he was no more likely to starve there than here, concluded to take his family thither as soon as possible. Another inducement was that he had known Gen. Walker in San Francisco, who confided to him his plans of invasion at that time, and urged him to join his fortunes.

In October last this unfortunate family "emigrated" for Nicaragua, as already stated, and it seems, became connected in some capacity with Walker's army. Since their departure nothing had been heard from them here until the receipt of the news of the death of Mrs. Bingham. Mr. Bingham, we may add, has a brother, now residing in New-York, who recently returned from a three year's visit to the Sandwich Islands, where he was engaged in the service of King Kamehameha II. We are not aware that there are any other immediate relatives of the family here. We have detailed the curious story as we have been able to pick it up from those who knew them. It is certainly a curious one. We shall await with interest the further statements of some of those who have experienced in the Hospitals the kindly attentions of the Florence Nightingale of the Nicaraguan Army.

THE IRISH LEGION—A CHRISTMAS MEMORY.

From a corespondent of the Limerick Reporter.

Some time ago was presented to the readers of this paper an account of that celebrated brigade whose desperate valor upheld the glory of the French arms on many a bloody field, and whose fidelity and courage were the admiration of Europe. At this Christmas time, when the recollections of former days come thronging on our minds like flakes of foam drifting down a river, it would be well to remember those whose bones are mouldering at this pleasant season far away from their native land amid the arid plains of Castile, the dark passes of the Pyrennees, the sunny vineyards of France, the Mountains of Germany, and the drear morasses of Holland, the Irish Legion of Napoleon the Great. The terrible war of '98 had passed away like a desolating tempest, and bound, bleeding, and helpless the land lay at the feet of her oppressors, while her best and bravest had to fly for refuge to a foreign land. It was in the year 1803 that Napoleon, when he designed to invade England, determined to form an Irish Legion. The levies responded with alacrity to his summons, and what proud thoughts must have been in each breast when the great hero reviewed them, and told them that soon on the plains of England they would have the opportunity of revenging the wrongs of their country. That hope was never fulfilled, and from the camp at Boulogne they were dispatched to Holland and Belgium, where they added new lustre to the military reputation of the Irish by their daring acts of valor. Their dearest desire was that at some time or other they would have an opportunity of crossing swords with the English, and exacting some atonement for the horrors inflicted on their country. Their wishes were gratified, and the corps were marched to Spain. It was here they specially signalized themselves—Junot invested Astorga, and the Irish were commanded to lead the assault. Captain Allen, at the head of the Light Company, advanced towards the breach at a run, and with a wild cry they recklessly flung themselves into the ditch. A tremendous cannonade was maintained by the Spaniards, but still the brave fellows pressed onward over the huge broken masses of the way. Every instant some comrade was struck down, but still undaunted they clambered up, and finally effected a lodgment in the breach. They could advance no farther. Their number was reduced one-half, but still they determined to hold their position. Throughout that long dark night the brave fellows fought there, cold, and wet, and weary, and without food, and without a bandage to bind their wounds. Still an effort to dislodge them was fruitless, and at length the morning dawned. Captain Ware dashed along at the head of the Grenadier Company, the garrison capitulated, and at midday the banner of Spain was lowered, and the Eagle-crowned tri-color floated over the walls of Astorga. Thence were they marched to join Ney, at the siege of Cuidad Rodrigo; one morning, one hundred of the regiment were detached to attack the British outposts. They advanced with all the ardor of men whose hearts are burning with hatred and revenge. There, on that summer morn, were the Red and Green again opposed to each other. The exiles gazed on the bright ranks before them, and all the memories of 98' rushed on their hearts—memories of the picketings, the burnings, the half-hangings, memories of their slaughtered wifes and children, of their ruined homes, of the land they were never to see again. "Remember New Ross and Vinegar Hill" was passed along the ranks. Then through the still morn air came floating from the British lines the well-remembered notes of Garryowen, while the band of the Legion struck up the Minstrel Boy. They flung themselves on each other with that fierce hatred which seems destined to be eternal between the two nations. Few shots were exchanged, the men used but the silent and deadly bayonet, and after a desperate contest, the English retreated in confusion, and the exiles stood victors on the field. The disastrous termination of the Russian war obliged them to be recalled from Spain, and they joined the army under Napoleon. In March, 1813, they occupied the village of Celle. The Cossacks attacked the place but were driven back with severe loss. In their retreat they fired the wooden bridge across the Aller. But onward through the flames the Irishmen rushed, and came up with them, and inflicted a signal defeat, and then again returned; but the victory was dearly purchased, for numbers of the wounded perished from the fire and intense heat at the recrossing of the bridge. They gained new laurels in the awful engagements of Bautzen, and the succeeding battles. At Lowenberg they were formed into a square to resist the Russian cavalry;—again and again they charged, but the green ranks stood firm, and each time the hardy sons of the North were driven back by the Celtic warriors. It was now mid-day, and the sun shone brightly on the glittering helmets and breastplates of the Russians as they again charged. They came on a slow trot, and when at musket shot, they suddenly opened and a battery of artillery in their centre, poured in a terrible fire on the Irish. The square was fourteen hundred strong when they formed, and beneath that terrible fire four hundred men were stretched dead on the ground. In the second battle of Lowenberg they crossed the river Bohr, and unsupported carried the enemy's position under the fire of his batteries, but suffered severely, and their Colonel, William Lawless, had his leg shot away. Napoleon rode down,—"Who commands this regiment?" said he,—"Colonel Lawless, Sire," was the reply. —"Where is he?" The soldier pointed to a man stretched on a little straw—where a surgeon was busily engaged dressing his wounds.' 'Your regiment has acted well, sir," said the Emperor to him—"and I trust that you will soon recover from your injuries; meanwhile take this," and he detached the cross from his own breast and fastened it on that of Lawless. A grateful smile played across the wounded man's face, and he attempted to speak. "Do not speak now," said Napoleon. "I am well pleased at your conduct to-day; when you have recovered, report yourself to me, Baron Lawless, and General of Brigade." It was by such acts as these that Napoleon inspired his soldiers with that deep affection which was the subject of astonishment to Europe. After the retreat from Leipsic they were ordered to Holland,—where, on the 14th of January, 1814, they carried the village of Mersam and obliged the English to retreat in shameful confusion. With this action ended their services. The star of Napoleon had set. Fate decreed that the great fatalist should fall, and after Waterloo, Louis XVIII. meanly yielding to the wishes of the English government, disbanded the regiment—and the Irish Legion was blotted from the muster-roll of the French army. All honor to their memories who upheld the renown of Ireland in the foreign land they were driven to; and on those pleasant nights, when we sit with our friends round the fire, heedless of the wind that howls outside, and of the hard sleet that dashes against the window-pane, let us ponder on this dreary Cristmas-tide by the banks of the Elbe, where they lay on the cold earth, without drink, without food, and almost without covering; and let us hope that all, should the day come for the trial, will be as true to Ireland as these—the men of Ninety-Eight.

BRITISH AUTHORS AND BRITISH LITERATURE IN THE UNITED STATES.

From the New-York Day Book.

It is a fact that the United States have no literature. We have so-called American authors, but look at them for a moment; analyze them, and they are essentially British and monarchical. English ideas control our newspapers, our magazines, reviews, etc. In fact, the majority of the reading-classes in America are actuated by the same ideas and sentiments as pervade the same classes in England.

The recommendation of a book by a leading English review, is looked upon by those individuals as conclusive. There is nothing more to be said after Blackwood or Westminster has spoken. Look over our list of authors and see how many there are who represent the peculiar spirit of Democratic institutions, or the great principles of equality which underlie our system.

Irving first achieved his reputation in England, and came back to this country with the endorsement of Sir Walter Scott, whose judgment no one thought of disputing. He has given us very little from his fertile pen, with the exception of his last work, of which any American can feel proud. He is intensely British in his ideas, voted for Fremont at the risk of severing the Union of this Confederacy of States, and has very little to recommend him to the favor of his countrymen.

Hildreth pretends to be an American historian, yet he has written a work which abounds in slanders upon his own country, and which, if penned by a British author, could not have been more unfair. We might continue these remarks seriatim, mentioning all our prominent writers in turn. It is only necessary, however, to say that the following, whether they be poets, essayists, or novelists, are all intensely British, and strong Fremont men at the late election:—Bryant, Longfellow, Curtis, Emerson, Whittier, Bayard Taylor, Ticknor, Prescott, Epes Sargent, Dana, Godwin, Sprague, Conrad, Briggs, &c., &c. These comprise the prominent literary men of the North, and most of them might as well be residents of England as of this country; for they do not represent in the slightest degree the ideas at the foundation of our system of government. Indeed, they do not possess the first conception of them.

Turning from these writers and looking for those on the other side, how few do we find! First and foremost a Bancroft, not as thoroughly imbued with the spirit of Democracy as we could like, but still a fair and firm exponent of our government. Then we have the venerable Paulding, and among later novelists, Simms, Hawthorne and Matthews. Among poets, we have not more than one of eminence whose poetry breathes a national, patriotic ardor. Gen. Morris is probably more truly Democratic—more closely allied to the people in his sympathies and instincts, than any literary man of America. His songs are household words in every portion of our country, and his spirit-stirring melodies awake a throb of patriotic ardor like Burns' poems among the Highlands of Scotland or Baranger's liberty-loving stanzas in France. But beside him, we think only of Saxe and Hosmer, with Stoddard and Aldrich, whose reputations are yet to be made, that have really any Democratic sympathies in them.

It is the misfortune of Democrats, however, to be under the ban of the press—"the leading press," as it complacently styles itself. Thus, a newspaper that aspires to be the principal literary journal of this metropolis, devotes a whole page of its paper to an elaborate puff of Mr. Curtis' writings, which are, at the best, but very feeble specimens of good literature, with a great amount of varnish and veneering over a ricketty framework. Every literary journal must support the pretensions of this clique of writers—must sing songs of negro freedom and abuse the South—or all at once it finds a hornet's nest about its ears. This censorship is as inexorable as Louis Napoleon's muzzling of the press, and woe be to the unlucky author or publisher who dares to break out of the channel of puffing everything English.

There is a case just in point. The Messrs. Harper have recently started a weekly paper, as they had a perfect right to do. But because they dared to insinuate in the first number, that the election of Buchanan was an auspicious event, and that Democracy was not quite the villainous concoction of wickedness that it was represented to be, the whole Abolition British Press have pounced upon it with the energy of enraged hyenas. The Tribune scouts it. The Boston Atlas names it a "journal of barbarism." The Albany Evening Journal, Mr. Seward's home organ, says it is "a weekly issue of pulings and cronings, hostile to reform, to freedom and to progress." Thus it is, that democratic ideas—we do not use the term now in a party sense—are cowed down. The Messrs. Harpers' journal is not a political paper, but its proprietors have been thus attacked for breathing a national spirit; in a word, for preferring American sentiments to British. This is "the extent of their offending, no more." Heretofore, these Abolition censors have broken down every journal of this character. According to all accounts, they will fail this time, for we hear that the whole edition of the first number, 70,000 copies, is exhausted, and that the publishers are printing more.

In this hasty glance at authors and our literature generally, our readers will see how little chance there is for Democratic ideas to work their way in this country. For years the Democratic party has relied upon the instincts of the honest masses, which were not perverted by the defiling current of Britishism, that permeated the reading classes; but as knowledge increases, and reading becomes more general, the importance of building up a literature which shall be true to the fundamental ideas of our system of government, cannot be over-estimated. We must roll back this torrent of British literature with its monarchical and aristocratic ideas of government, or it will overwhelm us, and, perchance, destroy the first fruits of freedom in the New World.

Literary and Artistic News.

Mr. Pollard's lecture on "Gregory the Seventh" (Pope Hildebrand), delivered on the evening of the 27th, in Hope Chapel, was a very attractive one. The object of the lecture was to aid the funds of the "Catholic Library Benefit Society." The lecturer exhibited the warmest admiration of Hildebrand, and narrated the leading events in his troubled career with considerable dramatic force. In summing up Gregory's character, he represented his life as a perfect illustration of the principle that resistance to tyrants is obedience to God!

Ladies will be interested in the following account, given by Lady Sheil, of the dress and manners of their fair sisters in Persia:—The Shah's mother was dressed with great magnificence. She wore a pair of trousers made of gold brocade. These Persian trousers are always very wide, each leg being, when the means of the wearer allow it, wider than the skirt of a gown; so that they have the effect of an exceedingly ample petticoat, and as crinolines are unknown, the elegants wear 10 and 11 pair of trousers, one over the other, in order to make up for the want of the above important invention. But to return to the Shah's mother; her trousers were edged with a border of pearls, embroidered on braid; she had a thin blue crape chemisette, also trimmed with pearls; this chemisette hung down a little below the waist, nearly meeting the top of the trousers, which are fastened by a running string. As there was nothing under the thin gauze, the result of course was more display than is general in Europe. A small jacket of velvet was over the chemisette, reaching to the waist, but not made close in front, and on the head a small shawl, pinned under the chin. On the shawl were fastened strings of large pearls and diamond sprigs; her arms were covered with handsome bracelets, and her neck with a variety of costly necklaces. Her hair was in bands, and hung down under the shawl in a multitude of small plaits. She wore no shoes, her feet being covered with fine Cashmere stockings. The palms of her hands and tips of her fingers were dyed red, with an herb called henna, and the edges of the inner part of the eyelids were colored with antimony. All the Kajars have naturally large arched eyebrows, but, not satisfied with this, the women enlarge them by doubling their real size with great streaks of antimony; her cheeks were well rouged, as is the invariable custom among Persian women of all classes.

Hon. Henry Stanley, who has been sojourning in the East of Europe, has published a volume of metrical translations of the most popular national ballads of Wallachia and Moldavia. Some of these are very ancient. Few have previously been translated. Most of them have the warm love for home and fatherland. The originals are in the Rouman language—which the Wallachians claim to be one of the six streams through pure Latin, the tongue of the great Roman people, has come down to this time. The other five are the Provençal and the French, the Spanish, the Portuguese, and the Italian. The Greek language has only one descendant—the degenerate and enfeebled Romaic. There is little doubt that the Wallachians received the Latin through the province of Dacia. Thence, also, Hungary, Transylvania and Bessarabia came to possess it.

At certain periods Cook was as mad as any inmate of Bedlam. In one of his quarrels a common soldier declined fighting with him, because Cook was rich, and the persons present would, he affirmed, favor him. "Look you here, sir," said Cook, "all I possess in the world is here, 350*l.*," and he thrust the banknotes into the fire, and held the poker upon them until they were consumed. "Now I am a beggar, sir—will you fight me now?"

Beranger, who is now in his 77th year, has just completed the continuation and revisal of his Autobiography. It is to be published within a year after his death, in one volume, each page being full and solid as to composition, so that the whole work—including a hundred songs, never before printed—may be sold for five francs. The old poet desires evidently to be read by the million.

There is nothing new under the sun. In the Imperial Library at Paris, has lately been found a work entitled "Electricity as a Universal Agent," written by Count Tressau, printed as far back as 1783. It is positively stated to have forestalled the recent important discoveries in electricity.

Jasmin, the French barber-poet, who has lately been placed on the pension-list of France, for five hundred dollars a year, (he previously received the Cross of the Legion of Honor,) has been presented by his native place, the town of Ayen, with a gold vase, ornamented with fruits in silver, and inscribed "Ayen to Jasmin."

Rev. James Murphy, D. D., died in the village of Herkimer, on Tuesday of last week, aged 69. Dr. Murphy belonged to the Dutch Reformed Church, and entered the ministry in the year 1814. He published a work entitled "Geology consistent with the Bible."

The landscape painter, Catel, of Berne, one of the veteran artists in Rome, died lately. Enriched by a long and successful career, he was not unmindful of his less fortunate brethren, and left a portion of his property for the especial relief of poor and deserving artists.

John G. Saxe, poet and lecturer, has recovered from the severe illness which attacked him some months ago. He has resumed his customary pursuits.

The Chinese booksellers have a queer way of selling their volumes. They are disposed of, not according to their value, at a fixed price, but according to weight. If, on weighing them, they are too light, the seller coolly tears some leaves from another book, and throws them into the scale!

A new Southern Magazine is to be started at Charleston S.C., in March next. It will be under the editorial supervision of Messrs. W. B. Carlile and P. H. Hayne. It will appear on the first of March next, and be called Russell's Magazine.

Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne has abandoned her trip to Australia, and returns to New-York in the Spring prior to a voyage to England.

Mr Bancroft, the historian, has a private library, containing 12,000 volumes.

The following story has been current in Boston for many years, as illustrative of the strength of Mr. O. A. Brownson's personal antipathies. During a great pressure in the money market some eighteen years ago, Mr. B. had occasion to consult some brokers in regard to some negotiations, and was astonished at the terms demanded. Some weeks afterward he discovered the Shylocks in the hall where he officiated on Sunday. In his discourse he was inculcating the necessity of carrying religion into all departments of life, and practising it every day in the week. Religion, he said, should not be considered a cloak of sanctity, to be put on every Sunday morning and put off on the Monday. "It should be carried into your insurance offices, into your banks, into your merchants' counting-rooms, into your brokers' offices"—then glaring through his spectacles at the two brokers, he thrilled the whole assembly by exclaiming, "Religion in a Broker's office!—religion in HELL!"

Wholesale Prices Current in New-York, for Country Produce.

(Carefully revised every week expressly for the Irish News.)

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 1857.

FLOUR—Com'n to Extra State	per barrel		$6.40 a $6.80
Common to Fancy Western	do		6.45 a 6.95
Extra Western	do		6.65 a 8 75
Fancy to Extra Genesee	do		6.85 a 8.75
Mixed to Extra Southern	do		7 — a 9 —
RYE FLOUR—Fine and Super	do		3.50 a 5.25
CORN MEAL	do		3.25 a 3.75
WHEAT—Canada White	per bushel		1.68 a 1.80
Western White	do		1.65 a 1.80
Southern White	do		1.68 a 1.80
All kinds of Red	do		1.40 a 1.60
CORN—Mixed	do		— 70 a — 72
Yellow	do		— — a — —
White	do		— — a — —
OATS—State and Western	do		— 49 a — 54
Jersey	do		— 47 a — 49
Southern	do		— 48 a — 47
Rye	do		— 92 a — 96
Barley	do		1.02 a 1.32
White Beans	do		2 — a — —
Black-eyed Peas, per 2 bushels			— — a 4 —
Cotton—Middlings, per lb			— 13¼ a — 13¾
Fair			— 13¾ a — 14¼
Rice, per 100 lbs			3.25 a 4.37½
Hops, per lb			— 7 a — 10
Pork—Mess per bbl			20 25 a 21 50
Prime, per bbl			17 75 a 18 —
Beef—Country Mess			10.75 a 13 —
Prime			9 50 a 10 50
Dressed Hogs, per lb			— 9¼ a — 10
Lard, in bbls. per lb			— 13¼ a — —
Butter—Western, per lb			— 15 a — 22
State, ordinary to choice, per lb			— 20 a — 30
Cheese, per lb			— 11 a — 12
Potatoes—Carters, per bbl			3 — a 4 —
Mercers, per bbl			3.25 a 3.50
Onions—Reds, per bbl			2.50 a 3 —
White, per bbl			3 — a 4 —
Apples, per bbl			2.50 a 8 —
Eggs, fresh per dozen			— 35 a — —
Limed, per dozen			— 25 a — 26¼
Feathers, Live Geese per lb			— 50 a — 55
Seed—Clover, per lb			— 11¼ a — 12¼
Flax, per bushel			1.90 a 1 95
Timothy, mowed, per bushel			— — a — —
Timothy, reaped, per bushel			3 37½ a 3.50
Sugar, New-Orleans, per lb			— 9¾ a — 11½
Molasses, New-Orleans, per gl			— 75 a — 76
Tobacco—Kentucky, &c., per lb			— 8 a — 17
Seed Leaf, per lb			— 11 a — 36
Wool—Domestic fleece, per lb			— 34 a — 60
Domestic, pulled, per lb			— 34 a — 50
Hemp—Undr'd Amer'n per ton			210 — a 215—
Dressed American, per ton			240 — a 260—
Flax—Jersey per lb			— 7 a — 11
Hay, per 100 lbs			1 — a 1.25
Tallow, per lb			— 11½ a — —

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

MISS MATILDA HERON

continuing to attract crowded and delighted audiences by her splendid impersonation of the heroine in her own play of the management cannot at present withdraw it from the bills.

Camille,

A favorite Farce each evening.

An early application for seats is respectfully urged to prevent disappointment.

L. SILLIMAN IVES, LL.D.,

Will give a second Lecture on

Church and State Charities Compared,

For the benefit of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul,

at the

BROADWAY TABERNACLE,

On Thursday evening, February 26th, at 8 P. M.

Tickets 25 cents—to be had at the Catholic bookstores and of the members of the several conferences.

Beware of Counterfeits!

SORE THROAT, CROUP,

Costiveness and Lung Fever, and other Fevers,

Will all pass Harmless when

BRANDRETH'S PILLS

are used.

These Pills are indeed a

TREASURE OF HEALTH,

Because they abstract

ALL IMPURITIES FROM THE BLOOD.

Beware of counterfeits,

Many are out!

Purchase only of the Agents.

All boxes with

241 Broadway

On the side label, are counterfeits!

Principal office, 43 BRANDRETH'S BUILDING.

Sold at 296 Bowery, 241 Hudson street, 52 Division street, and 66 Houston street, corner of Lewis street; 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and 124 South Sixth street, Williamsburg.

Remember

All boxes with 241 Broadway on the side labels

ARE COUNTERFEITS.

Balls and Parties, Cold Weather, Snow and Rain.

Ladies, if you wish white Satin, Kid, or Linen Gaiter Boots and Slippers for balls and parties; cloth button Boots, with flannel lining, for cold weather; soft warm Slippers for the invalid, at one dollar a pair; or India Rubber Boots and Shoes of all the various styles, suitable for this season of snow and rain, patronise

J. B. MILLER & CO.,

fe7 4t 134 Canal-street

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. steamer BLTIC, via Southampton and Havre, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 14th day of February, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

fe14 ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

NO IRISH NEED APPLY.

From the Dublin Evening Mail.

In our last, we published a letter from "A Constant Reader," in which the writer takes us to task for alleged neglect of the interests of the "officers who distinguished themselves in the Crimea." We have not been so negligent as our correspondent supposes. If he will take the trouble of looking at our publication of the 13th of August, he will perceive that, immediately after the issue of the list of officers and soldiers on whom the decoration of the Legion of Honor had been conferred, we gave our opinion pretty freely on the evident partiality betrayed by that list, expressing our conviction that "favoritism and underhand influence had been at work for the benefit of some, whilst others more deserving had been neglected." We dwelt especially on the injustice displayed towards the medical officers of the army and navy; and we adduced the case of a naval surgeon—an Irishman, by-the-way, of whom his country may well be proud—who with a lieutenant in the marine artillery, headed a party of sailors, and under a murderous fire, nobly avenged the death of the gallant Captain Hyde Parker. We may repeat that the Lords of the Admiralty graciously acknowledged the distinguished services of those two officers, with an intimation that a "note" had been made of their gallant conduct. Well, "the lieutenant of marines has obtained the Cross of the Legion of Honor; so has the first lieutenant of the ship, who was not present at the engagement at all; but the medical officer, who has taken the most prominent part in the action, was passed over." We believe there have been more cases of this kind than will ever come to the knowledge of the public; and we are strongly disposed to agree with our correspondent that the claims of many deserving officers to the distinction of the Legion of Honor have been slighted for no other reason than because they were Irishmen. If we are not strongly impressed with a belief in our separate nationality, it is not the fault of those who are placed in authority over us. There are men of influence among our rulers who seem determined to convince us that Ireland is not, and cannot be, an integral part of the British dominions. Mr. Smith O'Brien has more powerful friends at Court than he imagines.

IRISH MARRIAGES.

In St. George's Church, Wm. Mackay, of Banbridge, to Georgina Napier, daughter of Alexander Sutherland, of Castle Shamrock.

At Stirling, R. H. Davidson, M.D., of the Bombay Medical Establishment, to Catherine M'Ghee.

At Peru, John Mathison, to Rachel Jane, daughter of Richard Dartnell, of Cork.

At St. Patrick's Chapel, Peter Wright, shipwright, to Catharine Murphy, 4 North Anne-street.

In Moy Church, James Verner, of Derryane, to Lydia, daughter of the late John Sinclair.

Captain C. W. Elgee, to Maria Emma, daughter of John Dooner, of Lower Mount-st.

In Warwickshire, Edward Stanley, to Louisa, daughter of J. Peel, Middleton Hall.

In Londonderry, Wm. Hancock, to Mary, daughter of Rev. W. S. Escott, of Foyle College.

Thomas, son of William Mooney, late of Dublin, to Ann, daughter of G. Tissington.

At St. Kilda, Australia, William E. D. Watts, late of Templeogue, county of Dublin, son of William Watts, solicitor, to Emily, third daughter of William Grace.

Jan. 8, Wm. Bonamy, son of Wm. Maingay, of Tunbridge-wells, to Anna Maria, daughter of H. Courtney, Fitzwilliam-place.

In Dublin, Charles Hughes, solicitor, 90 Lower Gardiner-street, to Martha, daughter of the late R. A. Dalton.

In St. Peter's Church, John B. Blake, of the Third Buffs, to Anne Helena, daughter of the late E. H. Naghten, of Thomastown Park, county Roscommon.

Jan. 13, in St. Mary's Church, Captain P. Lockwood, of the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, to Elizabeth Jane, relict of Captain F. Stewart, of Blessington-street.

Ths. M. Vigors, son of Rev. T. Vigors, Burgage, to Sophie, daughter Rev. C. W. Doyne, rector of Fenagh.

Wm. R. LeFanu, son of the late Dean of Emly, to Henrietta, daughter of Sir M. Barrington, Glenstal.

Jan. 8, Wm. Patrickson, of Killigar House, Wicklow, to Anne, only daughter of the late Samuel Wilkinson Tyndall, of Strandville, Clontarf, county Dublin.

At Kallaloan, John Le Poer Bookey, of Mount Eland, to Eliza, daughter T. Quinn, Redmondstown, Tipperara.

Jan. 7, at Bagnalstown, Rev. Ambrose Cooke, second son of the late John Cooke, of Kiltinane Castle, Tipperary, to Maria, daughter Rev. J. Chapman, of Wykeham, Carlow.

At Passage West, J. G. Fleming, of Rathdrum, to Mary Josephine, daughter of Daniel Holland, Cork.

January 8, at Kiltegan, Maurice F. Sandes, of Oak Park, Kerry, to Ellen Louisa, daughter of Thomas Stratford Dennis, of Fort Granite, county Wicklow.

At Blackrock, Paola Steffano Munich, of Queenstown, to Sarah, daughter of the late Major T. J. Grant.

IRISH DEATHS.

Sept. 18, at Port Cygnet, Tasmania, of disease of the heart, Mark O'Callaghan, late of Dublin.

Jannary 4, in Dominick-street, Mary Anne, relict of P. Kirwan, of Karnane, Galway.

Matilda, daughter of Thos. Burke, Dublin.

At Rathmines, Elizabeth Manley, wife of James Manley, of Dublin, aged 55 years.

Jan. 11, at 15 Aughrim-street, Catharine, relict of George Richard Workman.

Jan. 8, at Harold's-cross, John Potter, sen., formerly of Limerick.

At Woodlawn, Ballinteer, Dundrum, aged 64, Sidney Berkley, wife of John Pearson.

At Ardmore, Waterford, Rev. Garret Prendergast, P.P.

At Scariff, Clare, David Flannery, father of the Rev. Doctor Flannery, Irish Catholic University.

At Leipsic, in the King's County, the Rev. A. W. White, aged 88.

In Cork, Charles Bagshot, of the Royal Navy, late Inspector commander of Coast Guard.

In Monaghan, Amelia, daughter of the late captain Magee, of the 48th regiment.

In Killarney, aged 89 years, Mary Maybury, sister of the late Dr. Maybury, of Tralee.

At Crossabeg, county Wexford, Rev. John Barry, P.P.

At Rathduff, Ellen, daughter of John Cleary.

At Newpark, county Tipperary, Henry, son of the late Rev. John Davies, of Wavertree, Lancashire.

In Cashel, Sarah, relict of John White, of Ballynahinch.

Jan. 8, in Limerick, the Rev. Henry Rose, chaplain to the jail.

Mrs. Barnes, Ballyellis, Wexford, aged 76.

In Dundalk, Lenox Bigger, aged 87.

January 11, in Galway, Henry Martin Blake, late of Heath House, county Mayo.

At Vandome, France, aged 81, the Dowager countess of Clonard, formerly Miss Crosbie, of Ballinagee, Wexford.

January 6, aged 47, James Fegan, draper, Elizabeth-street, Manchester, late of Dungannon.

Jan. 8, Elizabeth, relict of the late Carey M'Clellan.

Letitia, wife of Dr. Forsyth, Culmore.

Robert, son of the late Sam Algoe, aged 22.

At the Commons, Coleraine, James Proctor, Gunsmith.

Suddenly, on Thursday, Jan. 1, Patrick M'Cauley.

At Dernakally, Jan. 14, Mary Rankin, aged 21 years.

At Tivnony, John Morrison, aged 80.

At Killyfast, Catherine, daughter of Hugh Neeson.

In his 8th year, Wm. Joseph, son of W. A. Franklin, of the G. P. O.

At Portmahon House, David F. Mitchell, aged 72.

Caroline, daughter of Lt. Gen. Geo. Cardew.

At Monvagher, of consumption, aged 33, James White.

Jan. 7, at 72 Earl-st., Belfast, Ellen Anderson.

At Hawkin's-street, Julia Ryan.

Richard Charles, son of the Rev. Dr. MacDonnel.

At Ballineety, Geo. R. Fitzgerald, aged 74.

In Parsonstown, Dr. Waters.

Martha, daughter of the late J. Roberts.

At Raconnell, Dorothea, relict of R. Lawder.

Elizabeth, wife of John Swanzy, aged 89.

At his residence in Lambeth, Mr. Allingham, aged 75.

Lady Romilly, aged 47, wife of the Master of the Rolls.

At Mountmelleck, Margaret, wife of Rev. H. McManus.

In Kingstown, Mrs. Speer, relict of Dr. Speer, Royal Navy.

In Great Charles-st., aged 88, Edward Archer.

In Belfast, Wm. Gillilan, aged 80.

In London, Thomas Kernaghan, aged 77 years.

Corporation Notices.

CORPORATION SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

Public Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the authority vested in them by the laws of the State and the ordinances of the Common Council, the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the city of New-York will sell at public auction, under the direction of the Comptroller, E. H. Ludlow, auctioneer, on Wednesday, the 25th day of February, 1857, at noon, at the Merchants' Exchange, in the city of New-York, the following real estate, viz:—

1st. The three story brick building formerly occupied as an engine-house, and the lot No. 49 Christie-street; that portion of the lot not occupied by the engine-house, is under lease till May 1, 1868, at the annual rent of $100, and the property will be sold subject to the lease recorded in book of special leases, page 164, in the Comptroller's office.

2d. Two lots on the west side of the Bowery, as extended, between James-street and Rosevelt-street.

3d. Six lots, with the buildings thereon, on the southerly side of Chatham-street and the westerly side of Pearl-street, now known as numbers 111, 113, 115, 117, 119, 121 Chatham-street, and numbers 457, 459 and 461 Pearl-street.

4th. Three lots, now known as Nos. 451, 453 and 455 Pearl-street, will be sold separately, subject to the conditions of the lease of the same, recorded in leases of city lots, page 168, in the Comptroller's office, and which will expire on the first day of May, 1859; the purchaser of each of the lots, will be entitled to receive $233 33-100 per annum of the rent reserved by the lease, after the first day of May next, and will be required to assume the covenants of the lease in regard to the payments for buildings at the expiration of the lease.

5th. The lot on the northwest corner of William aad Pearl-streets, now known as No. 449 Pearl-street and No. 271 William-street, subject to conditions of the lease of the same, recorded in leases of city lots, page 172 in the Comptroller's office, and which will expire on the first day of May, 1858; the purchaser of this lot will be entitled to receive the rent reserved in the lease, of $362 50-100 per annum after the first day of May next, and will be required to assume the conditions of the lease in regard to the payments for buildings at the expiration of the lease.

6th. The house and lot on the north side of Fifth-street, commencing 80 feet west of the Second-avenue, lot 20 feet front and rear, and 24 feet 2 inches deep on both sides; houses 15 feet by 24 feet 3 inches.

7th. The house and lot north side of Thirteenth-street, commencing 213 feet west of Avenue C; lot 25 feet front and rear by 103 feet 3 inches deep on both sides, with three story brick building on the front of the lot, 20 feet wide and 40 feet deep, lately built for an engine-house; the rear of the lot is covered by and occupied as a foundry.

8th. Four lots on south side of Fifty-second street, commencing 90 feet west of Lexington-avenue.

9th. Thirty-six lots, being the southerly half of the block between 74th and 75th-streets, and the 3d and 4th avenues.

10th. Thirty-six lots, being the southerly part of the block between 80th and 81st-streets, and 3d and 4th avenues.

11th. Twelve lots on 116th-street and 117th-street, between Third and Fourth avenues.

12th. A piece of rear ground on the block bounded by Cherry-street, Oak-street and the Bowery, (as extended,) now used as part of the yard of Fourth District Police Station-house.

Full covenant warrantee deeds will be given.

TERMS OF SALE.—10 per cent of the purchase-money and auctioneer's fee of $5 per lot, to be paid to the collector of the city revenue, on the day of sale; 15 per cent on the 1st day of May next, when the deeds will be ready for delivery; the remainder of the purchase-money (75 per cent) may remain on bond and mortgage at the option of the purchaser, for five years from the 1st day of May, 1857, with interest, at the rate of six per annum, payable semi-annually.

Lithographic maps of the property may be had at the Comptroller's office, No. 5 Hall of Records, after the 7th instant.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.
A. C. FLAGG, Crmptroller.
JAMES M. SMITH, Jr., Recorder.
A. V. STOUT, Chamberlain.
THOMAS MCSPEDON, Ch. Fin. Com. Board Ald.
T. JONES, Jr., Ch. Fn. Com. Board Councilmen,
Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT,
Comptroller's office, January 20, 1857.

Special Notices.

THE WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN.

A FEW FACTS WORTH READING.—1st. The WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN is the ONLY Steel Pen manufactured in America.

2d. It is the BEST Steel Pen manufactured in any country, as it is made with the greatest care and upon scientific principles.

3d. It permits the greatest freedom of the hand, being as soft as the "classic goose-quill."

4th. The school-boy, the farmer and the mechanic can use it as freely as the Professor of Penmanship.

5th. England has drawn from us annually, 1,000,000 Dollars for STEEL PENS!

6th. We as true Americans, ought to keep that million at home, for reasons that New-Yorkers fully understand.

7th. WE CAN keep it by using the WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN instead of foreign made Pens.

8th. If we are a wise people, we will keep it at home; for we are DEPENDENT on British workshops.

9th. All who have tried the WASHINGTON MEDALLION PEN, are delighted with it.

10th. It has met with an EXTRAORDINARY sale in all cities where it has been introduced.

11th. It is destined to supersede all other Pens now in use.

12th. Importers of British SCRAP STEEL, "set your houses in order."

13th. The CHEAP TRASH that is now imported, is not called for by the consumers of PENS. On the contrary, all men are annoyed by them, and pray for good pens, at any price.

14. Therefore, it is nonsense for American merchants to interpose an objection to the price, which is simply remunerative.

15th—

"Let those write now who never wrote before,
And those who have always wrote, now write the more."

16th. N. B.—Buy none but sealed boxes, as you thereby secure the PATRON'S TICKET.

17. These Pens ARE MANUFACTURED IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, in the United States of America—not in Birmingham, England, where all OTHER pens are made that purport to be American—bearing the names of American MERCHANTS.

Office of the Company, 293 Broadway, New-York.

N. B.—Three Sample Pens sent on receipt of two stamps, or one gross by mail, postage free, on receipt of $1 50. f7 6m

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

THE celebrated "National Guard Hat," Flags, Belts and Ornaments, &c. made by

J. Parkes, No. 195 Fulton, below Church street,
sept27 3mos New-York.

Dentistry.—HENRY C. O'CONNOR, SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL Dentist, can be consulted at No. 382 Broadway, near White street, where he continues to supply sets of Teeth on improved scientific principles, combining the most recent improvements, ensuring by his eminently successful method the greatest comfort, perfect mastication and articulation. Decayed teeth filled, and all dental operations performed at moderate charges. Consultation free and no charge made unless perfect satisfaction be given. sept6 3m

Information wanted of Robert A. Cox, who emigrated from Dublin in April, 1825, to Australia. Last heard from in Melbourne, 1827. Information regarding him to be directed to his sister, Mrs. Eliza Savage, (daughter of the late John Covey Cox, Esq., county Waterford, Ireland,) care of IRISH NEWS Office, or 48 Ferry street, Albany, New-York.

Melbourne and Sidney papers please copy. oct18

$1.—No Pen nor Ink is used.—$1.—Nothing is imitated in MCLAURIN'S PATENT SELF-INSTRUCTING PROCESS IN WRITING, yet it has been shown in the first Counting-Houses in New-York, that all who go through this novel process must, of necessity, become splendid and rapid penmen. The complete process (the result of thirty years labor and experiment on the part of the Patentee) sent, prepaid, with full directions, to any address, on recipt of $1, by W. S. MacLaurin & Co.

nov29, 3ms. 345 Broadway, New-York.

Ocean Express Company of London and Liverpool.

(ESTABLISHED 1851.)

Small Parcels forwarded by each Mail Steamer, to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales—the Continent, India, China, South America, &c.

 Persons wishing to send small packages to their friends at home, at a trifling expense, will please address

COLLINS & MARSH, Agents,
ja26 1y 29 Broadway, New-York.

Amusements.

BOWERY THEATRE.

The People's Temple of the Drama.

Open every night,

WITH A POWERFUL

Star Company.

Lessee and Manager.....JOHN BROUGHAM

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes.....50 cents. | Pit.....12½ cents.
Gallery.....12½ cents. | Orchestra Stalls.....50 cents.
Private Boxes.....Five Dollars.
Doors open at 7½; commence at 7½.

ANNUAL BALL

OF THE

Erina Society,

For the benefit of the Catholic Library Association, will be held at the City Assembly Rooms, on Wednesday evening, February 18, 1857.

HONORARY MEMBERS:

Alderman Clancy,	Patrick O'Shea, Esq.
" Healey,	Mich'l Phelan, "
Andrew Carrigan, Esq.,	J. B. Nicholson, "
Councilman T. Dunn,	Patrick McCarty, "
Nicholas Walsh, Esq.,	Bernard Maguire, "
John M'Carty, "	P. Maguire, "
Patrick Corrigan. "	James Kelly, "

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS:

H. S. Hewson.	John J. Mullen,
T. Mulcare,	D. Quinn,
James J. Carey,	W. J. Malone,
P. J. Mathews,	T. O'Brien.

W. R. ROBERTS, Pres't.
T. W. Kennedy, Sec'y. Joseph M'Guire, Treas'r.

Shelton's full band is engaged for the occasion.—Tickets, admitting a gentleman and ladies, $2 00. To be had of the above committee, and at Messrs D. & J. Sadlier's, William st.; Dunnigan & Bros., Fulton st.; P. O'Shea, Broadway; Irish News Office, and a the door on the Ball night.

Catholic Library and Reading Rooms.

THE Directors of the Catholic Library Association would respectfully inform the public that they have removed their Reading Rooms to 889 Broadway, between 13th and 14th streets, and which will be kept open every day, (Sundays excepted,) from 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

Those who feel interested in the establishment of the institution, and particularly the Catholic young men, are invited to visit the rooms.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JAMES O'C. TABB, Recording Secretary.

Lectures.

Illustrated

LECTURES,

On the Natural History of Man.

Scientific Societies, &c.,

Are respectfully informed that

Dr. McElheran

Is prepared to receive engagements to lecture on Ethnology. His discourses are the fruit of original inquiry, during the last eight years, chiefly among the Celtic and Gothic races and their descendants in America, and are illustrated by a large collection of portraits and cranial forms.

ADDRESS DR. MCELHERAN, 186 MCDOUGALL STREET, NEW-YORK. no7t4

Special Notices.

Worth Knowing.—Prof. Wood has discovered a remedy for the gray and bald, which is at once practicable and cheap. It requires no dyeing, no wig, nor extraordinary trouble. There can be no doubt whatever of its efficacy.

We have seen testimonials almost without number, and from men of great intelligence, high standing and moral worth.

Those who have been bald for years, are now wearing their own hair, and appear ten years younger than they did six months ago. As in most cases, gray hairs and bald heads are both premature and unnatural, it is a duty to remedy them by the natural and undoubted means which Prof. Wood has invented, and now kindly offers to the afflicted. Read his advertisement, try his wonderful remedy, and give the Professor a new testimonial.—Memphis Whig.

Sold at 312 Broadway, N. Y., and by all Druggists. fe14 2t

Holloways Pills.—The axe is not more necessary in new settlements, than is this wonderful medicine, which cures with rapidity and certainty all those debilitating affections of the stomach and the bowels which paralyse industry in unhealthy regions. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New-York, and No. 244 Strand, London; and by all druggists, at 25 cts., 62 1-2 cts. and $1 per box. fe14

BOYS' CLOTHING.

Townsend and Gray, 815 Broadway, near Twelfth st., have just had manufactured an extensive assortment of boys' clothing, suitable for the present season. Their boys' raglans, cape talmas, and fancy jackets cannot be surpassed by any house in the trade; a glance at their stock will convince parents of a saving of 25 per cent, both in money and time. Gentlemen's winter raglans, business coats, furnishing goods, &c., in endless variety. Custom work got up in the most fashionable style, and at the shortest notice.

C. E. TOWNSEND,
y10jan GERALD GRAY.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Notice of Application for the discharge of an insolvent from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

James Grant of New-York City, Notice first published January 12th, 1857. Creditors to appear before the Hon. A. D. Russel, City Judge of the City of New-York, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1857, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at his Chambers No. 25 Chambers street, in said city, to show cause, if any they have, why an assignment of said Insolvent's Estate should not be made and he be discharged from his debts, pursuant to the provisions of the Statute for the discharge of an Insolvent from his debts.

McCUNN & MONCRIEF,
jan17 6t Atty's. for Insolvent, 29 Wall st., New-York City.

Information wanted of Catharine Heaney, aged nine years, who left Sackin, near Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, about the 30th of September last, for the purpose of coming to New-York. Information of her whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration will be thankfully received by her mother.

Dr. Wm. O'Gorman,

OFFICE,

tf6dec 423 Broome st., New-York.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (City Horse Guard,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage, 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening.
JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle rooms." EDWARD KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at
—— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. JAMES CAROLAN, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (Columbian Guard), drill each Tuesday evening, at Washington Hall, Troy, N. Y. RICHARD S. QUINN, Captain.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

FORTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Emmett Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at the "Emmett Guard Armory," Utica, N. Y.
JOHN FLANAGAN, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (The Grenadiers) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms," corner Christie and Delancy. JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." WM. BUTLER, Lieut. Command'g.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." M. KEATING, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street.
JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at the Eagle Rooms. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (National Guard) drill each Tuesday Evening, at Masonic Hall, 309 Grand-street, E. D., Brooklyn. THOS. H. CLYNES, Capt.

Company G. (National Guard) drill each Monday and Wednesday evening at their armory, 161 Atlantic street, Brooklyn. JAS. CAMPBELL, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Capt. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at corner of Center and Grand st. JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." B. J. McDERMOT, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JAS. THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——.
JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening a "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery.
JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn.
JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y.
MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. JAMES CLANCY, Capt.

Company —, (Keystone Rifles,) drill every Monday evening, in Port Carbon, Pa. MATTHEW BYRNES, Captain.

Company—(Emerald Guard), drill each Monday evening, at "Smith's Hall," corner of 11th and First Avenue. JOHN COX, Captain.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

FIFTH REGIMENT N. J. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J.
OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

Company C, (Sarsfield Guards,) drill every Monday Evening at their room corner of Mechanic and Broad streets, Elizabethtown, New Jersey.
WILLIAM TOOMEY, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 88 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 404 Market street, Philadelphia. EDWARD W. POWERS, Capt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month n Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C.
EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport.

y21june

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

Billiards.

IMPROVED

Billiard Tables and Cushions.

Patented February 19th, 1856. These Tables conbine the nicest mathematical accuracyof workmanship with elegance of design, and possesses all the qualities that are esteemed by scientific players. The cushions are of superior correctness, and are lower than any others made, and so constructed as to prevent all jumping of the Balls. All articles connected with Billiards, at the lowest cash prices, at the Salesroom, 786 Broadway, or at the manufactory, 53 Ann street, N. Y.

MICHAEL PHELAN, Patentee.

Just published, "THE GAME OF BILLIARES," its theory and practice. By Michael Phelan, with numerous illustrations. Price one dollar. nov8 tf

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS,

53, ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Business Directory.

Meagher & Campbell,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM E ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office, at 267 Broadway, third door below Chambers st.

☞ All business, either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap19y

Special Notices.

Mr. Wm O'Rourke, devotes his attention to carrying the Irish News, throughout the 4th, 6th, 7th, and adjoining Wards. Any order left at the publication office, for him, will receive prompt and careful attention.

To Druggists and Grocers in the South and West.

Charles' London Cordial Gin, the first established and the only Imported.

This celebrated Gin, introduced into the United States by E. C. Charles, in 1851, has become so extensively counterfeited and imitated by one or two liquor mixers in New-York and Boston that it becomes our duty to advise with you on the nature of the poisons disseminated amongst you by these unscrupulous parties.

The records of the Custom House in the cities of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia, show that Charles' London Cordial Gin is the only London Gin really Imported into the United States, and sold in bottles; and the fact has been demonstrated and published in all the New-York papers, that the only importation of London Cordial Gin ever made except by ourselves, has been one Pipe, imported in 1855. On the credit of this solitary Pipe, which would not fill six hundred bottles, over one hundred thousand dozen, of a noxious mixture, called "London Cordial Gin," prefixed with different names, have been spread all over this Continent, and sold at a cost twenty per cent. below the cost of importation of London Cordial Gin.

If corroboration were necessary, Mr. Udolpho Wolfe of New-York, who keeps record of every import of Gin, has over his own signature published to the world this statement, and it remains (even by the parties who have adopted our title) an unanswered, confirmed fact beyond the power of disproof, that Charles' London Cordial Gin, is the only genuine article, and hence that all others are nothing more or less than Ohio spirits in their raw state impregnated with poisonous materials, to give flavor to the mixture.

The Genuine Charles' London Gin is distilled especially for the undersigned in London, under the surveilance of the British excise laws, and is imported solely by us. It bears the endorsement of over five thousand physicians, in Great Britain and the United States. It has stood the most severe tests of the most skillful chemists and essayists. It is the only Gin which has the approval of the most celebrated practitioner America has ever produced—Dr. Valentine Mott, of New-York, who in a letter to Mr. Charles, says, "It is the finest, the most reliable, and most vigorous extract of Juniper he had ever seen."

The genuine Charles' London Cordial Gin is for sale in quart and pint bottles, by all Druggists and Grocers. Be sure that, though styled "London Cordial Gin," it is absolutely Charles'. To escape adulterated and poisonous mixtures, it does not suffice that the article be labelled London Cordial Gin but be certain it is Charles'. Every other is injurious to health.

DEVENOGE & CHARLES,

dc27 3ms. 198 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Medical.

OLD DR. BONE'S

JUSTLY CELEBRATED Vegetable Family Medicine
NO CURE, NO PAY.

MEDICAL DEPOT—559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th Street;

Being the best medicine for strengthening the Stomach, creating an appetite, cleansing the blood of impurities, and regulating the whole system. They are the best medicines now in use for Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, both Chronic and Inflammatory, Fits, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Scrofulas, Ulcers, and all other humors of the blood. Price $1.

PILLS,

So long celebrated for cleansing the blood, discharging the bile, and removing obstructions in all cases where such medicines are needed. They have had no equal for the last fifty-five years. Price Twenty-five Cents.

These medicines are all prepared by LEWIS H. BONE, the only son now living of old Dr. Bone, who, by request of many of his father's patrons, has opened a Medical Depot in this city.

CAUTION.—Beware of Counterfeits, as unprincipled persons are trying to palm off their worthless trash on the public, without any regard to the evil effects it may have on the constitutions of those they deceive. The public will please take especial notice that every label is signed with the written signature of LEWIS H. BONE, only son of the late Dr. Christian Bone, without which none are genuine. References to thousands of the most respectable men in New-York and New-Jersey.

☞ All my authorised agents have a printed certificate signed by L. H. Bone.

For sale at No. 9 Bible House; First Avenue, corner of Houston street; Bowery, corner of Fourth street; corner of Broadway and 22d street; 91 and 695 Eighth avenue, near 48th street; corner of Canal and Hudson streets; E. Lyon, 562 Grand street; C. B. Riker, Harlem, N. Y.; 217 Fulton street, Brooklyn; 67 South Seventh street, East District, Brooklyn; Jacob L. Marinus, 15 Montgomery street, Jersey City; Wm. Merchmore, Astoria, Long Island; and all the principal stores on the island.

Old Sores of long standing, and all diseases which "flesh is heir to," cured in almost every instance. We cure cases which have been given up and considered incurable. If we say we can cure, we will cure, or no pay in every instance. Advice gratis.

☞ Principal Depot, 559 Sixth Avenue, near 34th street, where all diseases are treated and cured, or no pay.

oct18 6mos L. H. Bone, Son of Dr. Christian Bone.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Consumption---Watkinson's Pulmonacia.

A SAFE, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain a particle of mercury or any other mineral poison; not a nine day's wonder got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now, at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures, where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering with that fatal disease, so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave—Consumption. It has effected some of the most remarkable cures ever heard of; how some dear friend was saved from death, when all hope was given up, now lives and enjoys good health. Its rare qualities are not only in relieving consumptive patients, but for all diseases of the lungs, racking nervous cough, night sweats, bronchial affections of the throat, internal inflammation, where the blood is impure, it has no equal. The discoverer of PULMONACIA is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. Those that are acquainted with him know there is no quackery or humbug about it, as the number of certificates that can be obtained at the office will satisfy the most incredulous as to its value.

R. WATKINSON.

No. 448 Broadway is the only place in the city where it can be obtaincd. Price $1 per bottle. dec13 3mos

Publications.

LITTELL, SON & CO., BOSTON.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.

THIS work is made up of the elaborate and stately essays of the EDINBURGH, QUARTERLY, and other Reviews; and BLACKWOOD' noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen Political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain Scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History and Common Life, by the sagacious SPECTATOR, the sparkling EXAMINER, the judicious ATHENEUM, the busy and industrious LITERARY GAZETTE, the sensible and comprehensive BRITANNIA, the sober and respectable CHRISTIAN OBSERVER; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the UNITED SERVICE, and with the best articles of the DUBLIN UNIVERSITY, NEW MONTHLY, FRASER'S, TAIT'S, AINSWORTH'S, HOOD'S and SPORTING MAGAZINES, and of Chambers' admirable JOURNAL. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from PUNCH; and, when we think it good enough, make use of the thunder of THE TIMES. We shall increase our variety by importations from the Continent of Europe, and from the growth of the British Colonies.

The LIVING AGE is published every Saturday—price, (free of postage) six dollars a year. Remittances for any period will be promptly attended to.

Complete sets of the FIRST SERIES, in thirty-six volumes, handsomely bouud, packed in neat boxes, and delivered in all the principle cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale for Seventy-two Dollars. The Second Series began in 1853.

Any volume may be had separately, at Two Dollars, bound, or a Dollar and a half in numbers.

Any number may be had for 12½ cents—and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.

☞ A few advertisements of Books, Patents, or other matters of general interest, will be added, at reasonable rates.

Extracts of Letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.

CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.

I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give healthy tone, not only to our literature but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading, to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1844.

I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age;" and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates (of which I have no reason to doubt), it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day. JAMES KENT.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1845.

Of all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe, and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains, indeed, the exposition only of the current literature of the English language; but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind, in the utmost expansion of the present age. J. Q. ADAMS.

THE PANORAMA OF LIFE AND LITERATURE.

Published Monthly at the Office of Littell's Living Age,

Boston.

☞ Every number of this work contains articles of leading interest; grave and earnest, yet not heavy; popular, and yet of abiding value. To these are added, in profuse abundance and great variety, Tales, Poetry, Voyages, Travels, and whatever—within the bounds of sound taste and good principles—may be included under the large head of Light Reading. But mere light reading soon becomes wearisome, unless there breathe from it spirit and heart, life and soul.

We promise a Magazine that shall be more and better than mere amusement: a Book suited to the leisure of the old and wise, and yet abundantly attractive to the young and ardent. It will freely provide for the Imagination, as well as for the Reason and Memory.

FOR THREE DOLLARS A YEAR, received at the office of publication, the Panorama will be sent (free of postage), to any post-office in the United States.

TWO COPIES, Five Dollars a year; FIVE COPIES, Ten Dollars a year, Clubs to pay their own postage, which is three cents a number, payable QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE.

The first number was issued in July, 1845. It makes two large volumes a year. We can supply orders for back numbers or volumes.

Both Works are Published by Littell, Son & Company, Boston.

oct18 ☞

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856 Fall Importation. 1856

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 Bowery, (west side,) between Grand and Hester streets,

IS now prepared to exhibit his new Fall styles of Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

comprising every grade and description, from the CHEAPEST fabric to the RICHEST.

Importing his goods direct, and thus saving the commission and interest which most other dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other carpetings adapted to all varieties of tastes, the following elegant descriptions :

Medallions,	at 14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	10s to 16s.
Tapestry,	6s to 12s.
Brussels,	7s to 12s.
Three-ply,	7s to 10s.
Ingrain,	8s to 7s.
Common Ingrain,	18d to 8s.

English and American Floor Oil-Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern, and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everythg else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap191y Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

THOMAS H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 18 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ja Collections promptly attended to, and liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHS,

NO. 202 BOWERY,

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases pointed, works jewelled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to. u126m

---

John Kennedy's

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

325 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK.

William M. Smith,

The Public Favorite and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR.

The oldest established in the business.

WORK done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other poster in the city. Work done either in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts or any kind of work. Office 28½ Spruce street, New-York, ap26tf between William and Gold streets.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my81y

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my81y

NICHOLAS WALSH

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER,

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

Wines and Liquors.

CHAS. J. MURPHY,

IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM,

IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Segars, Ale, Porter, Cordials, &c.

Stores, Nos. 1, 4, & 5 Cedar street.

☞ Office, 133 Pearl street, a few doors south from the corner of Wall st., New-York. y6nov

---

RICHARD P. KING,

Wholesale Dealer in Wines, Brandies, & Segars,

NO. 51 HARRISON STREET,

And Wholesale and Retail at

NO. 65 VESEY1 STREET,

8m18dec New-York.

P. COTTER,

DEALER IN

LONDON BROWN STOUT, SCOTCH, & BURTON ALES.

Philadelphia Porter, Ale, Champagne Cider, and Soda Water.

Mercer House,

Corner of Broome and Mercer streets, New-York. y1aug2

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, Liquors, Segars,
London, Dublin, and Philadelphia Porter and Ale,
Scotch, Burton, and East India Ales,
Champagne Cider in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf Corner of Anthony street, New-York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of Wise's Cork Malt Whiskey, which will be sold at a reduced price, ont of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm in New-York who import the same. ap26y

---

P. CUFF,

RECTIFIER AND DISTILLER,

NO. 306 EIGHTH AVENUE.

NEW-YORK.

Dealer in Foreign Wines and Liquors.

Goods sent to all parts of the country. Orders of all kinds promptly attended to. jly26

JAMES CRAFT,

FANCY CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

CORNER ANN AND NASSAU STREETS,

Entrance 29 Ann street, New-York. tf9au

THE VIRGINIA TOBACCO AGENCY,

(ESTABLISHED IN 1836.)

45 Water street, New-York.

CHARLES M. CONNOLLY,

Commission Merchant and Agent for the sale of Manufactured Tobacco.

Has always on hand, at the above agency, a full supply of

Manufactured Tobacco,

Of all brands and descriptions, direct from the Virginia Factories, for sale on liberal terms. jly5 y

---

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and single counting-room desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office desks from 3 to 6 feet, of Mahogany, Black Walnut, and Oak ; cases for books and pigeon holes. Office-chairs, cushions, lounges, and office tables of every description. my17tf

---

THOMAS LYNCH,

Provisions, Wholesale and Retail,

NO. 22 ESSEX-MARKET, NEW-YORK.

Fresh, Salt, Corned, and Smoked Provisions. Shipping orders punctually attended to. Goods delivered to any part of New-York, free of expense.

WM. PERRY,

ANATOMICAL BOOTMAKER AND CHIROPEDIST,

NO. 85 SIXTH AVENUE,

Near Fourth Street.....New-York

DEFORMED or Club feet restored by means of the boots. Walking, riding and Waterproof boots made, however difficult to fit the foot. Repairing done with dispatch.

Corns, bunions, nails of the feet cured permanently and attended to.
dec6m3 WM. PERRY, 85 Sixth Avenue, New-York.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of Havana Segars, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 85 Beaver street, New-York.

N. B. Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap26y

---

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

Medical.

THE Cause of Consumption—BRONCHITIS—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?—FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

Costiveness is the first link that connects disease to the system. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis ; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency. Nevertheless, it has laid the foundation of that destroying disease without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches, or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim than that formidable and insidious leveler of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold—through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites any attention or alarm in the mind of any person until it has sown the seeds of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood ; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely : If the culverts and sewers of the city were chocked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What then is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations, and irritations all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shoulder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly, of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period, the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid, in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublesome symptoms through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and the mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their rooms. Hence, the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out, and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them ; sleepy, drowsy, dull and heavy, loss of appetite, and confused memory ; a stuffing, tightness and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and softness of the gullet of the throat.

This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at length aroused your fears, and well it might ; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption, ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis, and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheep-skin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle : by cutting the tonsils and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister and Croton Oil externally to the throat or neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose, (what blind philosophy !) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the patient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opportunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physicians and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one until the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter sometimes streaked with blood ; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility ; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after ; flesh soft and flabby ; the limbs scarcely able to support the body ; a susceptibility of catching cold upon the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a heavy expectoration in the forenoon ; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or on awakening from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attack of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an early period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution, which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

The above remarks will prove sufficient to the simplest observer, in comparing it to his own feeling ; also, the nature and cause of this insidious disease that slays thousands of thousands of the most blooming of our population annually, on account of catching colds on the slightest exposure, which excites coughing through the diseased condition of the blood, and which could be easily remedied by applying to me and obtaining my remedies while the disease is in the first and second stages, but when the disease has progressed to the third stage, and those fatal symptoms fully developed, a cure is impossible.

Consequently, to relieve the doubts of those who are sufferers, and hoping to snatch them from the grasp of death, I have made an arrangement, at a sacrifice on my part, of sending medicine all over the United States and Canada at a trifling expense through the request of those patients who are completely restored to perfect health by a few weeks' use of my medicine and were despaired of when I commenced to treat them, as their testimonies before the public will show, and have deeply interested themselves toward the suffering public. Through the universal satisfaction given by this medicine, I am compelled to comply to the wishes of the thousands of the laboring classes exclusively, who are more exposed to the ravages of this treacherous disease, in giving them an opportunity of testing the efficacy of my preparations in the above specialities, and which I shall guarantee to the sufferer the amplest satisfaction in less than forty-eight hours of its use by obeying my directions, unless there is immediate death, by enclosing five dollars, and on receipt I shall send medicines, with all directions, per express, to their address. No letters answered without the above inclosure.

This privilege is extended to those persons who addressed me previously on this subject.

I have made it my rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time I give up the patient as lost and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

J. D. DURKIN,
Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
jan81 1y No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

GLORIOUS NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

MADAME PAULINE HELD, the wonderful Animal Magnetizer, has opened her Rooms, No. 20 HOWARD STREET, near Broadway, for the reception of ptaients. No matter how obstinate or severe their diseases (unless Consumption), she engages to cure them ; ordinary cases in three, and extraordinary cases not more than twelve visits. One trial will satisfy the most incredulous of the efficacy of her treatment. She uses no medicine and the patient never suffers a relapse. Call and judge for yourself. Consultation fee, Two Dollars. Can be seen at all hours from 8 to 1, and 2 to 6.

MADAME PAULINE HELD,
jan17 3mos 20 Howard street, near Broadway.

WASHINGTON HALL.

JAMES McPYKE'S, No. 90 Prince Street, near Broadway, New-York.—This Establishment affords ample accommodation for Clubs, Committees, Families, Military Companies and all who desire spacious, elegant, and well-ventilated apartments for social enjoyment. Its proximity to all the leading hotels, renders this locality particularly desirable.

The Proprietor guarantees the best of the market, with a choice stock of Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c. Private Supper Rooms. Attentive servants, courtesy and kindness, the subscriber hopes to merit the patronage of an intelligent public.

dec. 13, 3ms. James McPyke, Proprietor.

Halloway's Pills.—The mild, yet thorough operation of these pills upon the secretive and excretive organs, renders them invaluable remedies for summer complaint, colic, worms, cholera morbus, and all internal diseases of children, as well as of adults. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New-York, and 244 Strand, London ; and by all druggists, at 25 c. 62 1-2 c. and $1 per box. fe7

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR. JAMES ROCHE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES SIX CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann Street, Cor. of Nassau.

VOL. II. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1857. NO. 46.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XLVI.

Editorial.

HISTORICAL MEMORIES OF WASHINGTON'S BIRTH-DAY.
SHAMEFUL RIOT AMONG THE IRISH IN JERSEY.
A DAY IN WASHINGTON (CONTINUED).
TOPICS.
CALIFORNIA SUMMARY.
THE BOND STREET MURDER.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS—Lough Corrib—Kilmore Pass—Cong—Menlo Castle—The Old City of the Tribes, by an ex-member of the Irish Press.
French MSS. in St. Petersburgh—The Paintings in the Capitol—The Game of Billiards—Reviews—Magazines—Art Items, &c.

Miscellaneous.

The Mathew Monument, John Francis Maguire's Address—Notes on Ireland—Mining Wealth of Ireland—Natives of Australia—The British Election—Italy and Switzerland—Military Resources of Ireland, concluded—Latest European, Irish, American, and City News, &c., &c.

Answers to Correspondents.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.

For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.

" 7 " " " " $17.

" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$15

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN NATION, a complete set, from '42 to '48, containing the first No. (very scarce), and the last No., which was suppressed by Government, 6 vols. half green calf.

THE DUBLIN NATION, revived series, from '49 to '51, 3 vols. half dark calf.

COLLEGE IRISH GRAMMAR, by Rev. Ulick J. Bourke, 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 204 pages—$2 00.

LIVES AND TIMES OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN, by R. R. MADDEN, 7 vols 8vo., full of Portraits, very scarce.

BEGG'S MILITARY RESOURCES OF IRELAND, 87½ cts.

SELECTIONS FROM IRISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, 1st and 2d series, 7 vols 8vo. bds.

A HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF IRELAND BY THE NORMANS.—By G. H. SUPPLE, 12 mo. wrappers, 87½ cents.

TRACES OF THE CRUSADERS IN IRELAND, (With notes and some Poems.)—By J. T. CAMPION. 25 cents.

VERSICLES.—By THOMAS IRWIN. (240 pages, 12mo, cloth.) 87½ cents.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE, complete to this year, 46 vols. hf. calf, $100 00

DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL, 4 vols. in 2, $16 00.

English-Irish Dictionary. 12mo, cloth. Price $1 25.

Any one of the following volumes will be sent free by mail on receipt of One Dollar—Madden's Life of Emmet, Mitchel's Jail Journal, Meagher's Speeches, Savage's '98 and '48, Moore's Lord Edward Fitzgerald—hf. bound, Hayes' Irish Ballads, Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation.

P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
nov29,tf. 110 Fulton street, New York.

Publications.

Ready Now

Memoir of Thomas Devin Reilly.

By JOHN MITCHEL.

12mo, wrappers. Price 25 cents.

Orders from the trade solicited. Sent free by mail on receipt of Nine 3 cent Postage Stamps.

To be had of P. T. Sherlock, 48 Clark street, Chicago; J. M. Crawford, St. Louis; and at the Office of this paper.

jan31 P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00. The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

☞ A list of Subscribers will be printed in the work.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10, 1856.

Dear Haverty—I wish you to put down my name as a Subscriber to Mr. O'Mahony's translation of "Foras Feasa ar Erinn."

That is a book long wanted, and which the Celtic Society ought to have given us long ago. If William Elliott had lived, it would have been accomplished. And it will be no small credit to you, if you can bring out here in America, a work long acknowledged to be a desideratum in Ireland; executed, too, by a scholar so competent both to translate and to illustrate it with notes as Mr. O'Mahony. I hope it is well advanced in its preparation.

Faithfully yours, JOHN MITCHEL.

UNIFORM WITH SIMMS'S REVOLUTIONARY AND BORDER TALES,
Will be published on Saturday, Feb. 14.

THE WIGWAM AND THE CABIN. By William Gilmore Simms. With Illustrations by Darley. 12mo, cloth, $1 25.

Already published in the same series, price $1 25 each:

1. The Partisan.
2. Mellichampe.
3. Katharine Walton.
4. The Scout.
5. Woodcraft.
6. The Foragers.
7. Eutaw.
8. Guy Rivers.
9. Richard Hurdis.
10. Border Beagles.
11. Charlemont.
12. Beauchampe.
13. Confession.
14. The Yemassee.
15. Southward Ho!

Just published—

HALL ON CONSUMPTION. 12mo, cloth. 75 cents.

feb21 1t J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street.

Special Notices.

A Retired Physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered, while living in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. Wishing to do as much as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow beings as request it, this recipe, with full and explicit directions for making it up and successfully using. He requires each applicant to enclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the recipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement. Address Dr. H. JAMES, No. 19 Grand street, Jersey City, N. J. jan17 tf

Money Saved, in Buying Books on the Gift Principle.—All the $1 25 Books sold at one dollar. The Gifts consist of various articles; some of which are Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Rings and Pins, Ear-Drops, Sleeve-Buttons, Cashmere Shawls and Scarfs, Black and Colored Silks, Gold and Silver Watches.

A GIFT BOOK to be delivered at the sale of each Book, worth from 25 cents to 60 dollars.

Catalogues of the Books (containing a selection of the best works) sent to any address.

Any person sending an order for 10 Books, will receive a Book and Gift extra. J. S. ANDREWS, 140 Nassau-street, ja25 3m New-York City.

To Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers.—FETRIDGE & CO., proprietors of Balm of a Thousand Flowers, are making arrangements with over two thousand newspapers, all over the United States, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, to advertise a new and improved article of pomade for the hair, to be called "Woodland Cream," which name they have adopted as a trade-mark. This Cream will be superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. It will be put up in octagonal glass cups, with metallic tops—the whole enclosed in an elegant blue and gold wrapper similar to the balm, with the same scale of prices. Druggists will please send in their orders, as they will be filled in the order in which they come.

FETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York.

Woodland Cream—A Pomade for beautifying the Hair—highly perfumed, superior to any French article imported, and for half the price. For dressing Ladies' Hair it has no equal, giving it a bright glossy appearance. It causes Gentlemen's Hair to curl in the most natural manner. It removes dandruff, always giving the Hair the effect of being freshly shampooed. Price, only 50 cents. None genuine unless signed.

Fetridge & Co., Proprietors of the
For sale by all Druggists. "Balm of a Thousand Flowers."

White Teeth, Perfumed Breath, and Beautiful Complexion, can be acquired by using the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers." What lady or gentleman would remain under the curse of a disagreeable breath, when by using the "BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS" as a dentifrice, would not only render it sweet, but leave the teeth white as alabaster? Many persons do not know their breath is bad, and the subject is so delicate their friends will never mention it. Beware of counterfeits. Be sure each bottle is signed FETRIDGE & CO., N. Y.

For sale by all Druggists. feb21 8mos

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, &c., per U. S. steamer GEO. LAW, will close at this office, on FRIDAY, the 20th day of February, at 1 o'clock, P. M. I. V. FOWLER.

Publications.

A NEW AND ELEGANT PRAYER BOOK.

ST. JOHN'S MANUAL.

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC WORSHIP AND SERVICES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH, and a Collection of Devotions for the private use of the Faithful—Illustrated with fifteen fine steel Engravings, by Muller of Dusseldorf.

A new Catholic Prayer-Book, got up expressly for the wants of the present time, and adapted to the use of the Faithful in this country, the Office-Books and Rituals authorized for use in the United States being strictly followed. It has been carefully examined by a competent Theologian, and is specially approved by

The Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of N. Y.;

The Right Rev. John Timon, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, the Right Rev. John Loughlin, D.D., Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. J. M. Young, D.D., Bishop of Erie; the Right Rev. David W. Bacon, D.D., Bishop of Portland.

CONTENTS.

Calendar, Movable Feasts, &c.
Summary of Christian Doctrine.
Of Prayer.
Morning Exercise and Prayers.
Meditation or Mental Prayer.
On Sanctifying Study.
Manner of Spending the Day.
Evening Exercise and Prayers.
Family Prayers for Morning and Evening.
Morning and Evening Prayers for Every Day in the Week.
Instruction on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.
Prayers before Mass.
The Ordinary of the Mass, with full explanations.
Prayers at Mass.
Devotions for Mass, by way of Meditation on the Passion.
Mass, in Union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
Prayers at Mass for the Dead.
Method of Hearing Mass spiritually, for those who cannot attend actually.
Collects, Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays and Holidays, including the Ceremonies of Holy week, with Explanations of the Festivals and Seasons.
Vespers, with full explanation.
Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Instructions.
The Office of Tenebræ.
An ample Instruction on the Sacrament of Penance.
Preparation and Prayers before Confession.
Examination of Conscience.
Prayers after Confession.
Devotions after Confession.
Instructions and Devotions for Holy Communion—Prayers before Communion—Prayers after Communion—Prayers for Mass before Communion—Mass of Thanksgiving after Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for First Communion.
Instruction and Prayers for Confirmation.
Order of Confirmation.
General Devotions.
Devotions to the Holy Trinity.
Devotions to the Holy Ghost.
Devotions to the Sacred Humanity of our Lord—The Holy Name—The Infant Jesus—The Passion—The Holy Eucharist—The Sacred Heart.
Devotions to the Blessed Virgin—Little Office—Office of the Immaculate Conception—Rosary—St. Ligouri's Prayers for every day in the week.
Devotions to the Holy Angels.
Devotions to the Saints—general and particular.
Devotions for particular seasons and circumstances—For the Pope—The Church—The Authorities—For the Conversion of those in error—The Itinerary—Prayers for time of Pestilence—Universal Prayer, &c. &c.
Prayers for various states of life—For Children—The Married—The Single, &c.—Instructions on Matrimony and the Marriage Service—Churching of Women—Instruction and Order of Baptism, &c. &c—Devotions for a Happy Death—Devotions for the use of the Sick—Morning and Evening Prayers—Instructions—Ejaculations—Order of the Visitation of the Sick—Prayers before and after Confession and Communion—Order of Administering the Holy Viaticum—Instruction on Extreme Unction—Order of administering it—Last Blessing and Plenary Indulgence—Order of Commending the Departing Soul.
The Office of the Dead—The Burial Srrvice for Adults and Infants—Prayers for the Faithful Departed.
Manner of receiving Profession from a Convert.
Litanies of the Saints—of Faith, Hope, Charity, Penance, and Thanksgiving by Pope Pious VI.—Of the Most Holy Trinity—Infant Jesus—Life of Christ—Passion—Cross—Blessed Sacrament—Sacred Heart of Jesus—Sacred Heart of Mary—Immaculate Conception—Holy name of Mary—Our Lady of Prompt Succor—Holy Angels—Angel Guardian—St. Joseph—St. Mary Magdalen—St. Patrick—St. Bridget—St. Francis—St. Ignatius—St. Francis Xavier—St. Aloysius—St. Stanislaus—St. Teresa—St. Francis de Sales—St. Jane de Chantal—St. Vincent de Paul—St. Alphonsus Ligouri—Litany of Providence—of the Faithful Departed—of Good Intention—Of the Will of God—Golden Litany, &c., &c.

No Prayer-Book in the language contains a greater number of Prayers, drawn from the works of Canonized Saints, and Ascetical Writers, approved by the Church.

For sale in all variety of Binding, and at all prices, from 1$ to $10, by
EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,
(JAMES B. KIRKER,)
d27 151 Fulton-st., New-York.

Special Notices.

The Potent Remedy.—It is a well-known truth that as a purgative Medicine, there is none other equal to the Brandreth Pills. They purify the blood, and thus remove out of the course of the circulation all those humors which cause pain and suffering, and they are safe in all ages and conditions of life.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

When they are used, they require no extra care in diet or clothing. The body is in fact less liable to take cold after, than before the Pills were used. A gentleman of high respectability, whose letter can be seen at the principal office, writes:—

"I am now fifty-two years of age. * * * For twenty years I have used your Pills as my Family Medicine, and I wish no other; and I have never had occasion to call a physician in my family (save in the sickness of my wife with children,) during the twenty years.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS

No medicine in the world can be at all compared to them in this, that they may be taken at any time, night or day, before or after or with dinner, or supper. When the eyes are yellow, when the head aches, when the stomach or the bowels are out of order, one single dose of four or five pills will benefit beyond the power of words to describe.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS

Beware of counterfeits! There is a dangerous imitation out; purchase only of known, respectable dealers, or direct from Dr. Brandreth's office. All pills purporting to be Brandreth's, with 241 Broadway on the side label, are counterfeits.

Principal office, 43 Brandreth Building, 4th door in Canal street, New-York. Sold also at 296 Bowery, and 241 Hudson street, 52 Division street, 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and 124 South Sixth street, Williamsburgh, at 25 Cents a box. 1t,

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $180; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.
Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. oct 25 6m.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP COMPANY,

Intend despatching their splendid Iron Screw Steamers as follows:

FROM LIVERPOOL	FROM PHILADELPHIA
Every alternate Wednesday.	Every alternate Thursday.

Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including are from or to New-York and cooked provisions. Persons wishing to visit Europe or to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—Thompson & Co.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—J. F. Meline & Co.....Toronto C. W.—D. K. Feehan. t24my

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of the departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; or persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.
GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 103 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my8 3m

Bankers.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.
REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY,
} Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.
ap19ly Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

Coal.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.
6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.
ap19ly Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

A. Lange, Manufacturer of Gilt Mouldings, Ornamented Picture and Looking Glass Frames, 206 William street, corner of Frankfort, New-York.
☞ All Plain Gilt Frames can be cleaned by simply applying a sponge and water. REGILDING DONE. sept 13 tf

New Patent Right, for manufacturing Gent's. Hats. Only $1 50 for a fine FASHIONABLE HAT! What is the use of paying $3 or $3 50 for a Hat, when you can buy a better Hat for only ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS? By my new Patent Right for manufacturing Gent's. Hats, I can fit you with as neat and pretty a Hat as you ever put upon your head, for the low price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Call and examine for yourself.
N. B.—Best quality, $2, as good as any Hats sold in this city for $4 or $5.
SMITH, No. 81 Park Row,
sept6 1yr Under Lovejoy's Hotel, a few doors from Beekman-st.

GAS! GAS!! GAS!!!

W. H. CAREY,

Manufacturer of Chandeliers, Pendants, Brackets, Pillar and Mantel Ornaments,

And every variety of Gas Fixtures, No. 6 ESSEX-MARKET, Grand-street, New-York.

Hotels, Churches, Stores, and Dwellings fitted up, and everything appertaining to the business of GAS FITTING, attended to by competent workmen, with promptness, and at satisfactory prices.

Old Chandeliers, and all kinds of Brass-Work, Bronzed, Re-Gilt and Re-Finished, in every style, and restored to its original appearance. ja31 3m

Information Wanted of John Connolly, aged 14 years, who arrived in this city in the ship Lady Franklin, on the 7th November, 1856. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, 51 North street, New-York, will be thankfully received.

Business Notices.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S FALL style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets.
Give him a call by all means. my81y

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HERRING'S,

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 185, 187 and 188 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Special Notices.

Electro-Magnetic Baths.—The Electro-Magnetic Baths having become permanently established as a remedial agent for the cure of Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Stiff and Enlarged Joints, Paralysis, Ulcers, Tic Doloreux, Neuralgia, Pain in the Limbs, &c. &c., and for the positive extraction of Mercury and other Mineral Poisons from the human system, the Messrs. Sloan & Co. take this method of informing the public that they have fitted up and opened an establishment at No. 58 Sixth Avenue, where the Baths will be constantly in operation, under the care and direction of Dr. G. H. Doyle, Homeopathic Professor of Medicine. To those unacquainted with "Electro-Magnetism" as applied to the cure of disease, reduction and extraction of mineral poisons, &c., we would say that as a means of cure for the above enumerated diseases, it has received the almost universal endorsement of the various Academies of Medicine throughout Europe and the United States, and that the reduction of Metals by a Voltaic Current, is no new science: it is the APPLICATION of the FACT to its extraction from the system for which we claim originality. In it we dismiss all theories—we leave nothing to chance—we are not led by blind experience, but we follow unerring and never failing principles.

Thousands who are now suffering from what they imagine to be Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Bones, &c., are in fact suffering from the injurious exhibition of mineral poisons taken probably many years previously. To such we are positive in our promise of a permanent and speedy cure. Females laboring under complaints incidental to their sex, will find in this remedy a means of relief at once pleasant and satisfactory. A competent lady in constant attendance for their special accommodation.

Persons afflicted in any way with sickness, debility, &c. will do well to call at the office, examine the Baths, and receive full explanation of the treatment pursued. SLOAN & CO., 58 Sixth Avenue,
Between Fourth-street and West Washington Place.

P. S.—Physicians and Families supplied with Homeopathic Medicines, Books, &c. dec6 3mos

European News.

By the arrival of the City of Baltimore, we have news from Liverpool to the 28th.

The news is four days later than previous advices, but is unimportant in a political point of view. Financially considered, it is interesting. It is reported that on the British taking Bushire, which they did after two hours bombardment, the Persians submitted to the demands of their opponent. The English papers, however, do not credit it.

Great doubt is thrown over the recent news of the burning of the factories at Canton, and later intelligence from China was anxiously looked for. Rumors of modifications in the composition of the British Cabinet continued to be promulgated. A dash of the Aberdeen party is to be introduced. Ferak Khan, the Persian Ambassador, had had an interview with Napoleon. The reply of the latter was non-committal. The Swiss affairs appear to have nearly died out.

The Emperor of Austria has granted a complete amnesty for the Lombardo-Venetian provinces. The Conferences at Constantinople respecting the Principalities has ended, and the Austrian troops were to be replaced by Turkish soldiers. The foreign journals are generally destitute of intelligence of interest. The draught of the firman for the convocation of the Moldavian and Wallachian divans ad hoc was completed on Tuesday, Jan. 13. The internal independence of the two principalities is guaranteed. The Independence Belge says that the conferences on the Neufchatel question will take place in the middle of February. The King of Sardinia has been received at Nice with great enthusiasm. The whole city was illuminated. The villa of the Empress of Russia was superbly lighted.

The Daily News says: "We learn, from good authority, that a telegraphic message from Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was received at the Board of Control on Saturday, to the effect that the Shah has accepted the terms of peace offered by England, not on account of the fall of Bushire, but on general grounds."

From the China we have the following paragraphs:

Commodore Armstrong attacked and dismantled the Barrier forts, in consequence of the Chinese wantonly firing on a man-of-war's boat under American colors.

The prices of tea had advanced; supplies were short everywhere. The silk arrivals at Shanghae were 67,000 bales; the settlements 61,000 bales. Prices 20 dols. to 25 dols. higher. Exchange 7s. Exchange at Hong Kong, 5s. 8d. to 4s. 8 3-4d., owing to advices from India.

The papers record with regret the death of Judge Baron Alderson, which took place on Tuesday afternoon. Sir Edward Alderson was born at Great Yarmouth, in the year 1787.

The ship Confederation, ashore in the Mersey, had broken up. The master, mate, steward and boy were lost.

The Madrid Gazette, of Jan. 25, publishes a decree, ordering the proceeding with the general election of the Deputies to the date of the 25th of March.

THE WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND CIRCASSIA.—According to a report received from the Circassian coast, (says the Constantinople correspondent of the London Times,) Sefer Pasha has defeated the Russians. Accounts of victories obtained by the inhabitants of the Caucasus over the Russians, must be received with extreme reserve; but a person who must be tolerably well informed of what is passing on the East coast of the Black Sea, yesterday acknowledged that since the spring of 1856, the Russians had obtained no advantage "worth mentioning" over the mountaineers. If I rightly understood my informant, such great changes are being made in the Russian military system, that no operations on a large scale will at present be undertaken against the inhabitants of the Caucasus. Positive information has reached me that the Russians are just now extremely busy "on both sides" of the Caspian, and that very many transports have been built within the last few months.

THE DIFFICULTY BETWEEN PRUSSIA AND SWITZERLAND.—Letters from Berlin confirm the reports of the desire of Prussia to negotiate directly with Switzerland. Prussia, it is said, is to communicate to France the conditions on which she is to renounce the sovereignty over Neufchatel. France will transmit them to the Federal Government, asking whether Switzerland is ready to treat on that basis with Prussia. If she is, then the renewal of diplomatic relations between the two adversaries may immediately take place.

The Royalist journal of Neufchatel has broken its silence. It declares the Federal Assembly to have acted wisely, and adds its opinion that the independence of Neufchatel is henceforward an unavoidable thing.

A correspondent at Basle writes as follows:—

"The only point which most probably will still be contested between the King of Prussia and the Federal Government, is that of the domains in Neufchatel. The Federal Government draws a line of distinction between the private property of the Prince of Neufchatel, which it is perfectly prepared to give up to the King, and the domains. The latter it considers as property of the State, and not of the King. It would appear as if this point could, better than by negotiation, or by the decision of the European powers, be decided by means of a voluntary appeal of both parties to a foreign court of law, or the legal faculty of a foreign university—say that of Paris."

AMNESTY FROM THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA.—Telegraphic dispatches from Turin and Naples, state that on Sunday, (25th,) the Emperor of Austria signed, at Milan, a decree granting a full pardon to all persons in the Lombardo-Venetian territory condemned for high treason, rebellion, or insurrection; that the prosecutions which were pending for such crimes, are ordered to be suspended, and the Special Court at Mantua to be dissolved. The city was illuminated on Sunday evening, in honor of this amnesty. A dispatch from Marseilles, of Friday's date, says that a decree has been published at Milan, by which the Emperor of Austria has annulled taxes, the collection of which was in arrear, in Lombardy, to the amount of two millions of francs.

This news was received in England with distrust.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

A new market has been opened in Spain and Portugal for British spirits. Mr. T. J. Smith's Oporto circular states that the price of brandy has risen there 600 per cent., and the total shipments to Spain and Portugal, from London alone, for the month of November, were 49,580 gallons. In Dublin a vessel is loading with Messrs. Busby's whiskey an entire cargo, probably about 30,000 proof gallons, for Bordeaux, and as there is a constant direct communication with that port, the trade is very likely to continue.

An accident, says the London Weekly Register, which, though comic enough, might easily have had a tragical ending, occurred the other day, at Madame Tusand's exhibition. A medical student, examining the guillotine in the Chamber of Horrors, took it into his head that the sort of yoke which fits down on the shoulders of the criminal to hold him in his place, would not be sufficient to confine a person who struggled. His curiosity on this point led him to watch till the place was empty, when he actually put himself in, letting down the yoke. He soon found that he was quite unable to lift it, and it at once flashed into his mind that the sharp axe which was suspended over his neck could not be firmly fixed, or it would not fall (as it does) with a touch. He was afraid to struggle, lest the shaking should bring it down and at once deposit his head in the basket of sawdust below him, into which his eyes were of necessity steadily looking. Having stayed some time in this plight, he was overjoyed to hear the approach of a visitor, whom he implored to release him. "I'm thinking," said the gentleman, (a Scotch visitor to the metropolis) to his wife, "I'm thinking he must be hired to show how the thing acts, and I think we'd better not interfere." So the luckless student was left till M. Tusand came in, and made fast the axe before releasing him. The axe has been removed and laid by the side, to prevent future accident.

Mr. S. Beale, deputy chairman of the Midland Railway Company, England, is now supplying Messrs. Scott, Russell & Co., the builders of the monster ship, with immense iron plates, to be used in her construction. The plates have been expressly rolled for the bows of the "great ship" at Milwall, and vary in size from two tons to two-and-a-half tons, the largest plate being 37 feet long by 4 feet 3 inches wide, and 1-4 inch thick. The rough plates from which these beautiful finished plates were cut out, were of course much larger. The plates which have been planed are quite free from blisters and blemishes, the edges are perfect, and altogether they are an admirable specimen of what can be effected in these days of progress by enterprise, ingenuity and skill. The difficulty of rolling these immense masses of iron was enormous. The process is this—between three and four-and-a-half tons of iron are bound together and placed in a furnace expressly constructed for the purpose, and, after the iron has been heated to a white heat, it is withdrawn and carried to the rolls, and by admirable mechanical arrangement rolled into plates.

It has been discovered by analyzation that the grape substances giving out color, taste, bouquet and flower to wine, viz: tartar, tannin, essential oil, and coloring matter, constitute only one per cent. of its composition, the remaining 99 per cent. consisting merely of sugar and water. It is this one per cent. alone which makes wine, distinguishes it from all other liquids, and bestows its different valuable qualities. It appears that the above mentioned component parts, especially that which is most precious, the essential oil, are only one-fourth absorbed by the usual process of fermentation. There is therefore left undeveloped at the bottom of the fermenting tuns or vats, seventy-five per cent. of flavor, &c., which, if saturated in a solution of refined sugar and water, will give one-third of its unexhausted properties, which is sufficient to produce wine of a better quality than that derived from the natural must. This operation may be three times repeated with the same results, and even if tried a fourth time, will yield sufficient flavor to make a small description of vinous liquid.

This discovery is due to the French chemists who, on account of defective vintage, have deemed it worthy to investigate the subject.

Thus we learn that art has triumphantly succeeded in making wine from a reserved constituent power heretofore considered as the refuse principal.

The improvement of whiskey by storing in empty sherry casks, is on the same principle.

The Kelso (English) Mail says:— A laborer, named Hogarth, while proceeding along the turnpike road, near the village of Smailholm, was set upon by twelve of these creatures. At first, he observed them emerge out of a dry stone dike, and when he was within fifty yards, they made towards him in a body. He armed himself with a "grievous crab-tree cudgel," and awaited the approach of the assailants. They came leisurely on, and when they came close to him, despite the menacing attitude he assumed, nine of their number attacked him in front, and made two or three ineffectual attempts to fasten their teeth in his trowsers, but, by the active use of his weapon, five of the nine were killed, and the other four escaped. By this time three of them had got behind him, and clung tenaciously to his legs, actually suffering themselves to be killed rather than release their hold. Of the attacking force, he succeeded in destroying eight.

A most perilous leap was taken while hunting with Mr. Roch's hounds, at Bolton Hill, in Pembrokeshire. The whipper-in, James Morgan, in taking a hedge, jumped his horse into an unfenced coalpit, 30 feet in depth, which lay unobserved on the other side of the hedge. Man and horse went down the shaft, at the bottom of which was a depth of 18 feet of water. Fortunately, the sides of the pit had been made sloping, so that before the horse was entirely submerged he gained a footing on the slope, where he maintained his hold. The rider was thrown into the water, but on rising grasped the saddle, and thus held his head above water until assistance arrived, when ropes having been procured, he was safely drawn up, and, save the shock, perfectly uninjured. The horse was next drawn out, also unhurt.

It was intended that advantage should be taken of the presence in Fermoy of so many clergymen of the diocese to make arrangements for the more active collection of a fund for the monument of the late bishop. For this purpose the committee had resolved to wait upon the clergy on Wednesday and make representations to them on the subject; but the immense number of ecclesiastics assembled each day absolutely prevented the possibility of entering on any other business than the religious ceremonies of those days. The sum realized in the town of Fermoy already amounts to over £200; and should the other parishes of the diocese give efficient aid in this praiseworthy object, no doubt such a sum will be raised as will efficiently mark the estimation in which the people of Cloyne held their late Bishop.

The Poor Law Commissioners have appointed the Rev. Mr. Rainsford, Chaplain of the Dundalk Work-house, in the room of the late Rev. Mr. Allpress. The guardians had unanimously recommended the Rev. Joseph Wright for the office.

A man named Wm. Glassy was killed in a row, while returning from the fair of Canlough to Newry, and a person named Alexander Agnew has been committed on a charge of manslaughter for the offense.

American News.

Militia of the United States.

The following is an exhibit of the Militia of the several States and Territories, taken from the latest returns that have been received at the War Department, and which have been communicated by that Department to Congress. It will be perceived by the years for which the latest returns from each State and Territory have been received, that the reports are by no means complete.

